The PREFACE.

IT is well known, that the Author of this Work hath through the whole course of his life, declin'd the pursuit of any private interest or advantage, and hath only, according to his abilities, endeavour'd to promote the honour and glory of that Nation where he had been born; and more especially of that University wherein he was educated. His early application, or as some call it, his natural propensity to Histories and Antiquities made him more fit to serve his Country in that, than in any other Study; and that part of Antiquity, which was most useful in its self, and which yet lay most neglected, became the immediate object of his care, as that which not only deserv'd, but requir'd and wanted the greatest industry.

The University of Oxford had now flourish'd for many Centuries, its Members had been great and famous; their works wanted neither value nor number, and therefore nothing seem'd more necessary for the increase of its glory, and for the true knowledge of its strength than a Register of its Heroes and an exact survey of its powers: It was requisite then, not only that the Writers of this University, and the Characters of their works shou'd be perpetuated to posterity, but that a History of all Cardinals, Archbishops, and Bishops, as well in this Nation as beyond the Seas; all of them formerly Members of this University, should at the same time and by the same hand be attempted, and carried on; and that lastly the account of any remarkable Persons, that would not fall under those heads, might be reserv'd to, and digested under the Fasti, or Annals of the University. So that upon the whole, not only the lives of the Authors, and the fate of their Writings, but the succession of all eminent Men in Oxford, the decay and growth, the rise and progress of learning, might at one view in due order of time distinctly appear. It is a wonder indeed that among all the members of that Body, who have signaliz'd their learning and industry in all professions, and almost upon all subjects; the intire glory of this Work should be left to this Author, and that no part of literature should be left wholly uncultivated in that famous Society; but the Memoires of the University it self, and the History of Learning therein. Somewhat indeed in defence of the antiquity of the place had before, by Mr. Twyne and others been successfully undertaken and performed; but it was a far more easie and less useful enquiry to look into the Original of this Society, than to record the Acts of its Members, to discover the head of this Fountain, than to trace all its Channels: Since therefore this Work seem'd for the most part new, and as yet untouch'd, it was once the Authors design to Commence with the time of K. Alfred, and from thence to have brought down the concurrent History of the University and Learning together. But afterwards when he had consider'd not only that the famous Antiquary Jo. Leland, and his followers Bale, Pitts, and Dr. Fran. Godwin, had in a great measure anticipated the former part of his design, but that the Records and Registers themselves, upon which his Relations are chiefly founded, were in those times either wholly lost, or at least dark and imperfect; He thought fit to begin with the 15th Century, and to ascend no higher than his Records would lead him. However, since a great and noble part of the History of Learning, would upon so late a date of this Work be wholly omitted, it was esteem'd requisite that a short and full relation of all Authors and Works, which before that time had been publish'd in this Island should supply that loss, and render the work it self more perfect and entire.

This Introduction the Reader may expect before the 2d. Vol. At present nothing more remains for the subject of this Preface, than to give a short account of the design of this work, of the management and language of it, and to add somewhat concerning the Author.

As to the design, it must be own'd that since an intire Collection of all passages relating to eminent Authors was intended; some circumstances have a place here which at first view may seem trivial and immaterial. It ought therefore to be consider'd, that those little accidents however mean in themselves, yet in respect of the Persons and of the works which they attend, oftentimes become considerable. In a common repertory any redundancy or superfluity of matter, however too severely blam'd by nice palats, is such a fault as is not far remov'd from an excellence. The work is fitted for all Men in all faculties, and therefore those of one profession should not be displeased, if somewhat be inserted, which however useless to them, may be chosen and admir'd by others. In all Commentaries and Journals which afford Materials for History, there ought not only to be somewhat rude and naked, which may afterwards be polish'd; somewhat rough and plain, that may be beautify'd and improv'd; but somewhat at least little, and seemingly immaterial than may upon occasion judiciously be chosen, or sometimes perhaps with no less prudence, reject'd. Such general collections are read by most Men with different designs; and therefore however easie it may be for any Man to discover an omission; it is very hard for any one Reader to pronounce one single passage in them wholly superfluous. 'Tis true indeed, that Men who after a great search and enquiry into Records, have found out somewhat that might as well have been spared, naturally choose rather to trespass on the Reader, than to pass sentence on their own discoveries; and this, if any blemish, is so common to this Author with all other famous Antiquaries, from Plutarch, and Athenæus down to Selden, and Dugdale; that his Title to that name might well be disputed if he should be without it.

2ly. The management of such a Work as this must necessarily depend as upon a search into ancient Records, so upon a Commerce with those Relations and Friends of the deceased Authors which had survived them. Those of the Ch. of Rome, to which this Author apply'd himself, have been communicative and industrious in furnishing Materials for this Work; and therefore if any thing more largely be said of the Members of that Communion than may be thought necessary, it ought to be imputed to the ready concurrence of that party towards a Work of this nature, rather than to any propensity of the Author to that Religion. The Nonconformists, who bear some share in this Work, have been as usually, so little Friends to the carrying on of a publick design, and to that free intercourse, which ought to be maintain'd between all learned Men, that very few, and those unsatisfactory relations could be obtain'd from them; and therefore a true, but no very large nor favourable account of their Writings ought to be expected from him. And lastly, as to those of the Church of England, they have generally behaved themselves so well, that they have no need to desire flattery, nor have any reason here to complain of

The PREFACE.

Calumny. It is to be hoped therefore, since this Author hath endeavoured to shew himself just and indifferent to Men of all professions; his love of impartiality will not be mistaken for want of Religion. All good Antiquaries, Men of enlarged Souls, and of an even temper; however of divers professions, have always been of the same Principle: They all equally sacrificed to Truth and Learning; and suffered not their private Opinions to put a bias on their History. And whoever will compare the Cento's of Bale, and Pits, with the excellent Works of Leland and Camden, must necessarily discern, how near an Alliance there is between Zeal and Ignorance, and between Learning and Moderation.

3. As to the Language, the Reader may expect such Words as are suitable to the character of the Work, and of the Person. It is impossible to think that men who always converse with old Authors, should not learn the dialect of their Acquaintance. An old Word is retain'd by an Antiquary with as much Religion as a Relick; and few are by him receiv'd as English, but such as have been naturaliz'd by Speneer. Language is the dress of the Thoughts as well as Cloaths of the Person; and therefore the Expressions of an Antiquary ought to be priviledg'd, as well as his Garb. Words are neither good nor bad if abstracted from Things; and therefore they, as all Ornaments, have no beauty in themselves, but receive it by accident as gracefully suited, and apply'd to the Subject. Originals are best express'd, as found, without Alteration; and it is not only a mispent, but ridiculous labour, to change the old Expressions of a Deed; and to put a new Stamp upon a Medal. Thus much hath in short been said of the Book, and somewhat that may prevent Objections may without suspicion of Vanity be added concerning the Author of it. When this Work some years since was first undertaken, he not only consulted all the Registers relating to the University, but all other Writings and Records, MS. and printed, whether in the Bodleian, Norfolk, or Cottonian Libraries, whether in the Tower, Exchequer, Paper Office, or elsewhere, that could give him any notice of these Authors, or let him into the true knowledge of their Lives, Preferments, and Writings. The Registers of the ancient Churches and Cathedrals were diligently consulted; the Wills of the deceas'd persons were at the Prerogative Office examin'd; the Windows of Churches, Epitaphs and Inscriptions, have been search'd; the Genealogy of the Authors at the Heralds Office hath been enquir'd into; and no method hath been unattempted which could contribute to a true History of these Writers, or ascertain the least date and circumstance of their Lives. This extraordinary care and unwearied industry, was undertaken without any other motive than a love to Truth, and without any other prospect, than the benefit of Posterity. The Author never enjoy'd any Preferment, nor pursu'd any; he liv'd as a Recluse from the World, so independent of it; and therefore it is not to be wonder'd if he takes such a liberty of Speech as most other Authors, out of Prudence, Cunning, or Design, have usually declin'd. It might be fit perhaps that some harsh Expressions might be allay'd; that a few severe Reflections might be softned, and that some Passages at last, which seem too hardly charg'd on men otherwise creditable, might be wholly omitted: but at the same time it is not to be denied, That Faults ought no more to be conceal'd than Virtues, and that whatever it may be in a Painter, it is no excellence in an Historian to throw a veil on Deformities.

If lastly, There should be any defect or failure; if Truth, which is often too strictly pursued, should in one single instance, or some little circumstance, be mistaken; it is at least, certainly a just Request, that in so great and tedious a Work, which oftentimes and almost every where deserves praise, any small Errors may be entitl'd to Pardon.

A farther discourse of the nature of these Books in general, and of the use of this in particular, is refer'd to the second Volume; in the mean time all judicious men must be satisfied that the History of Learning, which hath hitherto been so much wanting in England, is now at last so far advanced; and that the Materials at least of so great and so useful a Work are ready, and prepar'd.

In other Countries, particularly in France, Italy, and the Northern Nations, now above fifty years, the most famous Writers have employ'd their care in the account of Authors and Books, and have thought it more necessary to number and marshal than to increase the Forces of the Commonwealth of Learning.

In England in the mean time an Account of Learning was more defective even than our Civil History: Our Authors had been as famous as our Heroes; our Writings were as successful as our Battels; and yet the Annals of both were so imperfect, that either generally we had no representation of them at all, or such an one as traduc'd the Original. As to our Heroes indeed, Tho an universal History to the discredit of this Nation, be yet to be desired, and in all probability will be long expected, yet some independent Relations that give account of one great Action, or perhaps of one particular Reign, may with honour be remembred; but as to our Author's, after the ancient Discoveries of Boston and Leland, there hath been nothing attempted but some rude and disproportionable draughts of mean and ignorant Designers. However now at last it must be own'd, That if this Essay may not be just and compleat, yet the first Lineaments are so faithfully and exactly drawn, that the finishing strokes may without difficulty be added, and perhaps without loss expected; and that so regular a design is here presented to your view, as may encourage at least the future industry of the best Artist, if not supersede it.

ERRATA.

By the Absence of the Author from the Press, many Faults have been committed in the printing this Book; most of which, especially those that are notorious, follow.

Source and most clear Spring of good Literature and Wisdom ; from whence Religion, Civility, and Learning, have spread most plentifully through all Parts

thereof, and beyond the Seas ; hath these things following, going under her name as Author.

Epistola ad Magnates & alios ; in two Volumes in Folio.
The first written on Parchment, begins in 20. Hen. 5.
Dom. 1422. and ends in 18. Hen. 7. Dom. 1503, which is two Years and more beyond the time wherein I begin this work. This Book endorsed with the Letter F, was chiefly written by the Hand of one John Farley, the publick Scribe or Registrary of the University of Oxon.
and is at this time kept in the School-Tower, among the Books and Records of the said University. The second
Vol. which is written on Paper, begins about the latter end of the 24. Hen. 7. Dom. 1508, and is continued to 1597, and hath added to it certain Epistles of a later date. This Book endorsed with the Letters FF, was borrowed from the School-Tower by Dr. Tho. James, the first Keeper of the Bodleian Library ; who afterwards putting it into the Archives thereof, did enter it, as a Manuscript belonging thereunto, into the Bodleian Cata- logue of Books, Printed in 4to. An. 1620. The continuation of the University Epistles (mostly Penn'd by the publick Orator) are remitted into the Books of Acts of Convocation that follow FF. To pass by the Sentence or Opinion of the University of Oxon. concerning the divorce between King Henry 8. and Queen Ca- therine, dated 8. Apr. 1530, and their Sentence in order to the expelling or ejecting the Popes Authority from England dat. 24. July 1534. (both which contain but little more matter than two Programma's) I shall set down other things going under her name of a later date, as.

An answer to the humble Petition of the Ministers of England, desiring Reformation of certain Ceremonies and abuses in the Church. Oxon. 1603. and 1604. in four or five Sheets in Quarto.

Decretum damnans propositiones Neotericorum, sive Jesuitarum, sive Puritanorum, aliorum cujuscunque generis Scriptorum — dat. 6. Jun. 1622. Oxon. 1622. in one Sheet in 4to. see the full Citation of the said Decree and Propositions in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 327.

Epistola ad reverendiss. in Christo patrem D. Gul. Ar-chepiscop. Cantuar. dat. 10. Nov. 1640. It was Printed at the end of the said Archb. Letter, which he sent with divers
MSS. to the University of Oxon.

Humble Petition to the Parliament in behalf of Epis-copacy and Cathedrals. — dat. 24. Apr. 1641. Oxon. 1641.
Printed in one Sheet in 4to. as also on a broad side of a Sheet.
It was answer'd by a certain Anonymus, but very sillily.

Epistola ad ampliss. & reverendiss. D. Gul. Archepiscop. Cant.
dat. 6. Jul. 1641. It was Printed at the end of the said Archbishop's Letter, by which he resign'd his Office of Chancellor of the University of Oxon. This Epistle was published by command of the Chief Members of the said University, upon occasion of a base Libel and Forgery that was Printed by Anon. under the said title. Oxon. 1641.
in one Sheet and half.

Reasons of their present judgment concerning (1) The Solemn League and Covenant. (2) The Negative Oath, and (3) The Ordinances concerning Discipline and Worship, approved by general consent in a full Convocation, on the first of June 1647. Oxon. 1647. in five Sheets and half in 4to. These Reasons (which were for the most part drawn up by the Profound and Learned Dr. Rob. Sanderson of Linc. Coll.) were afterwards translated into several Languages and published.

Answer to the Petition, Articles of grievance, and Reasons of the City of Oxon, presented to the Committee for regulating the University of Oxford, 24. July 1649. Oxon.
1649. and 1678. 4to. This Answer was drawn up by Dr. Gerard Langbaine of Queens Coll. but published in the Name of the University of Oxon. The said Petition of the City of Oxon (the general part of which, were then Presbyterians, or at least very Factionous) was for the diminishing, and taking away, several of the Liberties and Privileges of the University.

Judgment and Decree past in the Convocation 21. July 1683. against certain pernicious Books and damnable Doctrins, destructive to the Sacred Persons of Princes, their State and Government, and of all Humane Society — Printed at the Theatre in Oxon. in Latin and English in three Sheets in Folio. 1683.

Humble Address and Recognition Presented to His Sacred Majesty James 2. King of England, &c. according to an Act of Convocation, bearing date 21. Feb. 1684. — 'Tis Printed in Latin and English; and was set before the Verses, made by several Members of the University on the said Kings coming to the Crown of Great Britain, Fol.

The Safe of shewing, that the City of Oxford is not concern'd to oppose the Confirmation of their Charters by Parliament; presented to the Honourable House of Commons, 24. Jan. 1689. Oxon. 1690. in 2 Sheets in Fol. and in two and an half in 4to. drawn up by Ja. Harrington M. A. of Christ Church.

Judicium & decretum latum in Convocatione habita Aug. 19. an. 1690. contra propositiones quasdam impias & hæreticas, exscriptas & citatas ex libello quodam infami haud ita pridem intra dictam Academiam perfide typis mandato, ac divulgato, cui tit. est, The naked Gospel. Quæ præcipua fidei nostræ mysteria in Ecclesia Catholica, ac speciatim Anglicana, semper retenta & conservata, impugnant ac labefactant. Oxon. 1690. in two Sheets in Fol. This Book called The Naked Gospel was written by Arch. Bury D. D. Rector of Exeter Coll. and by him was first made publick in the beginning (in Apr.) of the same Year: And tho it is said in the Title Page to be Printed at London, yet it was really Printed at Oxon, by virtue of his Authority, as being then Pro-Vice-Chancellor. But before Twenty Copies of it had been dispersed, the Author, by the persuasion of some of his Friends, made certain alterations for the best, as he thought, in one or more Sheets in the middle of the said Book; and thereupon several Copies so altered were exposed to sale; yet in the Month of May following, the remaining Copies of the Impression not alter'd were dispersed abroad. The said Book was publickly Burnt in the School-quadrangle, just after the said Decree had passed: Whereupon about three days after, the Author of it dispersed in Manuscript, his Apology for writing the said Book called The Naked Gospel; the beginning of which is this: The design of the Book and the occasion of it were as followeth; when the King had called a Convocation to reconcile, as it was hoped, to the Church of England the several Sects, &c. In which Apology, the Author saith, that certain Persons to him unknown, got a Copy of the said Book unaltered, and Printed it at London.

As for the several Books of Verses, which were published on various occasions, under the Name of the University of Oxon, are not to be remembered here, because the Names of all, or at least most of, the Persons that had composed Copies of Verses, have their Names set at the end of them.

2. WILLIAM BEETH, a Person Famous for his great knowledge in the Theological faculty, was Educated from his Youth among the Dominicans, commonly called Black-friers, then noted in England and elsewhere, for their Religion and Learning; and in the prime of his Years, obtained much of his Learning in the College or Convent belonging to that Order, in the South Suburb of Oxon. In his middle Age, he being then accounted by those of his Society, a Person of great Discretion and Prudence, as well as of Learning; he was Elected by them their Provincial Minister, that is the chief Governor or Master of them and their Order in England; which laudable Office he executed for some Years with great approbation. He hath written according to Anton. (a) Senensis.

Comment. sup. 4. libros sententiarum.

Tract. de unitate formarum.

Claruit 1501. Lecturæ Scholasticæ, and other things which I have not yet seen. This William Beeth was in great renown among Learned Men, especially among those of his Order, in the Reign of K. H. 7. of England, but when he died it appears not.

3. JOHN PERCEVALL discovered even in his Childhood an early affection to Learning, and when at the Age of about Twenty, he diligently applied his Muse to Philosophical Learning in the Universities of England, especially in this of Oxon; wherein he obtained a considerable competency in humane and Divine Learning. At riper Years, he, upon mature consideration, entred (b) into the most Holy Order of the Carthusians; and soon after by a severe and strict life among them, mostly by fasting and a continual and religious contemplation; his divine Soul was at length totally refin'd and fitted for the Society of the Saints in Heaven. He hath transmitted to Posterity, Compendium divini amoris. Par. 1530. in Oct. This Book was Printed elsewhere before that time.

(a) In Bibliotheca Ordinis Fratrum Prædicatorum, edit. Parisiis 1585. in octavo, p. 97.

Epistola ad solitarios; besides other things as 'tis said, but such I have not yet seen: Theodor. Petreius in his Bibliotheca (c) Cartusiana, tells us, that this John Percevall was Prior of the Carthusians at Paris, in the Year 1550, but my Author (Jo. Baleus) before quoted, mentions no such matter, only that he was a bare Carthusian; and that he was in great esteem among Men for his Piety and Learning Fifty Years before that time. The Reader is now to know that contemporary with the former, lived another John Percevall Doctor of Divinity of Oxon, and by order a Franciscan or Grey Friar; who being a Person of great note among his Brethren, or among those of his Society, was elected the Seven and Fortieth Provincial Minister of them; but what relation there was between this and the former, it appears not. This John Percevall the Franciscan died at London, and was buried in the Church of the Franciscans, now commonly called Christ-Church within Newgate; whereupon Hen. Standish D. D. (whom I shall mention elsewhere) succeeded him in the Provincialship. It is also farther to be noted, that whereas a Learned (d) Author tells us, that this John Percevall succeeded in that honourable Office, one Will. Goddard a Doctor of Divinity of Oxon, it is a great mistake, for that Will. Goddard whom he sets down to have been Provincial Minister, was only Warden or Guardian (e) of the House or College of Franciscans at London before-mentioned, (to which he was a Benefactor) who dying 26. (f) Sept. 1485. was Buried in the Chappel of the Apostles, joyning to the Church of the said House. As for the famous Dr. Will. Goddard, who was the (g) Provincial Minister of the Franciscans, he (b) died 30 Octob. 1437. and was buried in the said Church, on the right side of the Tomb of Sir John Hastings: So that I believe two, three, or more were Provincials between this last Dr. Goddard's death, and the time when Dr. John Percevall took the Provincialship upon him.

ROBERT BALE called by some Robert Bale Junior, because there was another of both his Names, a Lawyer of London, and before him in time, was born in the County of Norfolk, entred, when Young, among the Carmes or Carmelites, commonly called White-Friers, in the City of Norwich; spent some time for the sake of Study, among those of his Order, living in the North Suburb of Oxon, where he improv'd himself much in the faculty of Theology; as, I presume, he did partly at Cambridge among those of his Society there. Afterwards he became Prior of the Carmes at Burnham in his own Country, where he was had in veneration by them and others for his great love towards Learning and Learned Men. All the time that he could procure, he greedily spent in his beloved Study of Divinity, and Histories both Divine and Profane; and having to his great expence obtained a considerable Library of Books, they, at length, came after his Death to that of the Carmes at Burnham. He hath written,

Annales perbreves Ordinis Carmelitarum. The beginning of which is, Anno Mundi 3042. Helias Thesb. &c.

Historia Helia Prophetæ. The beginning of which is, Ecce ego mitto, &c.

Officium Simonis Angli. The beginning of which is, Simon pater inclytus, &c. This famous Simon was Simon Stock, the most noted and religious Brother of the Carmes that ever was; the first of all his Order that took a degree in this University, as I have told (i) you

(b) Joh. Baleus in lib. De Scriptorib. maj. Britannicæ, cent. 8. num. 51. (c) Edit. Colon. 1609 in octavo, p. 212. (d) Francisc. à Sancta clara in Supplement. Historiæ Provinciæ Angliæ, edit. Bale composed Several Sermons, which went from hand to hand, as one (k) of his Order will farther tell you, who addeth, that he giving way to fate in Fifteen hundred and three which was about the 18th. Year of K. Hen. 7. was buried in his Monastery of Burnham before-mentioned.

5. RICHARD BARDNEY was born at, or near to, Bardney in Lincolnshire; became when Young, a Monk of the Order of St. Benedict in his own Country, received his Learning in the supreme faculty among those of his Society in Oxon, and afterwards retiring to his Monastery, wrote in Verse, Vita Roberti Grostest quondam Episcopi Lincolnensis. 'Tis as yet in Manuscript, and was finished by the Author in 1503. he being then Bachelour of Divinity, and by him dedicated to Will. Smythe Bishop of Lincoln. The beginning of this Book is Lincolnensis apex presul sacrate Wilhelme, &c. Many fabulous things are inserted therein, not at all agreeable to so profound and subtile a Philosopher as Grostest was; who in his Life and Actions did very humbly (l) imitate, or at least endeavoured so to do, St. Austin Archbishop of Canterbury. The said Author Bardney tells us, that Grostest was Born at Stow in Lincolnshire, which no Author besides himself, hath in the least mentioned, and other matters of him which are false, tho some are true, and fit to be mention'd in History. Claruit 1504. What else our Author Bardney hath written, I know not as yet, nor any thing else of him; only, that he was in good esteem for some parts of Learning, especially by those of his Society, during the time that King Henry 7. lived; but when he died it appears not.

6. DONALD O-FIHELY, a Person much valued among his Country-men, for his unwearied industry in matters relating to History and Antiquity; was Born of an Antient Family in the County of Cork in Ireland: whence in his Youthful Years being sent to Oxon, improved himself much in Academical Learning; but whether he took a Degree, we have no Register that testifies it. Afterwards receding to his Native Country, he wrote in his own Language.

Claruit 1505. The Annals of Ireland — drawn down with great care and labour to his time, and by him Dedicated to his Patron, and Favourer of his Muse Florence Mac Maboun. This Book, which doth as yet, as I conceive, continue in MS, was in the Custody of one Flor. Mac Carty in 1626, as the Antiquary (m) of Ireland attesteth; who adds, that this our Author O Fihely did write the said Annals about the latter end of the last, or in the beginning of this Century, which we are now upon: So that I presume, that he was living in Fifteen hundred and five, and that he wrote, as 'tis probable, other things, but lost. In this Mans time, I find many noted Persons of Ireland to have studied in this University; who, as it seems, have either been Writers, Bishops, or Statesmen in that Kingdom; but most of their Christian Names being deficient, I cannot justly particularize them, or say that this was afterwards a Writer, or that a Bishop, &c.

7. STEPHEN HAWES, or Hawys originally descended, as it seems, from the Hawes of Hawes in the Bushes in the County of Suffolk; was instructed in all such Literature as this University could at that time afford, but whether he took a Degree, we have no Register to shew it. Afterwards in his Travels through England, Scotland, and France; visiting the receptacles of good Letters, did much advance the Foundation of Literature that he had laid in this place; so that after his return, he being esteemed a compleat Gentleman, a Master of several Languages, especially of the French, and above all, for his most excellent vein in Poetry; he was received into the Court of King Henry 7. who being a great encourager of Learning, and a judicious understander of Men, was by him made (n) at length one of the Grooms of his Chamber, and highly esteemed by him for his facetious discourse, and prodigious memory; which last did evidently appear in this, that he could repeat by heart most of our English Poets; especially Jo. Lydgate a Monk of Bury, whom he made equal in some respects, with Geoff. Chaucer. He hath transmitted to Posterity several Books in English, some of which are in Verse, and some in Prose, as,

The pastime of pleasure; or, the History of Graund Amour, and la bel Pucell, containing the knowledge of the seven Sciences, and the course of Man's Life in this World. Lond. 1555. quart. Written in English Verse, and finished by the Author 21. Henry 7. Dom. 1508. About which time it was first of all, I suppose, made publick. It is adorned with Wooden Cuts to make the Reader understand the Story the better, and Printed in an old English Character. But such is the fate of Poetry, that this Book which in the time of Henry 7. and 8. was taken into the Hands of all ingenious Men, is now thought but Worthy of a Ballad-mongers Stall. He hath also written (1) The Exemplar of Vertue. (2) Delight of the Soul. (3) Consolation of Lovers. (4) The Chrystalline Temple, &c. one or more of which were written in Latin. This Author was in great value among ingenious Men, in the latter end of Henry 7. but when he died I know not as yet. Claruit 1506.

8. WILLIAM GALEON a Norfolk Man Born, did in his Manly Years, take upon him the Habit of the Friars of the Order of St. Austin the Hermit at Lynn Regis in his own Country; Studied several Years in this University among the Brethren of that Order in their College there, proceeded (o) Doctor of Divinity at Oxon, and at length was made Provincial of his Order, that is the chief Governor of the said Brethren, living in the Province of England; he being then accounted a most eminent Person for Literature and Piety, and the prime example among those of his Society for all kind of Virtue and Learning. He hath written and left to Posterity, Lectiones in Theologia.

Disputationes Variæ.

Course of Sermons for the whole Year, Preached to the People. — Besides other things which I have not yet seen. He paid his last debt to Nature at Lynn before-mentioned in Fifteen hundred and seven, (22. and 23. of Hen 7.) and was buried in the Church there belonging to the Friars of St. Austin. Joseph. Pamphilus Bishop of Segni saith (p) that he died in 1500, Aged 90 Years, but falsely, for all Authors, except himself, say otherwise. Claruit 1507.

9. JOHN SOWLE, a Carme of London, was for some time a Student in the Sacred Faculty among those of his Order in Oxon, took one, if not both the Degrees, in the said Faculty in this University, in the Reign, as I conceive, of Henry 7. being then a very famous Preacher, and not only followed by the Secular Priests, but by many of the Religious Orders. He was a great admirer, and a Preacher up of the Doctrine of S. Paul, and endeavoured to his utmost, to frame his life according to it, and to make others do the like, and therefore much honored and valued by Dr. John Colet, the learned and religious Dean of S. Paul's Cathedral. He hath Written according to Baleus (q) these things following, Sermones ex D. Paulo.

Divisiones Thematum.

A course of Sermons for the year. — Besides other matters relating to Divinity. He departed this mortal life in Fifteen hundred and eight, which was the last year of King Henry 7. and was buried among the Carmes, — commonly called the White Friars in their Convent near Fleetstreet, in the Suburb of London, leaving then the Character behind him of a most Pious and Religious Father. Claruit 1508.

10. EDMUND DUDLEY, Son of John Dudley Esquire, Second Son of John Lord Dudley, of Dudley Castle in Staffordshire, became a Student in this University about 1478. went afterwards, as it seems, to Greys-Inn in Holborn near London, where he in a short time became so noted a Proficient in the Municipal Law; that King Henry 7. taking notice of him, did (r) for his singular prudence and faithfulness, make choice of him to be one of his Privy Council in the first year of his Reign,

Dom. 1486. Dudley being then but twenty four years of age. Soon after, he discerning the King to be of a frugal disposition, did, to gain his favour the more, project the taking advantage against such as had transgressed the Penal Laws, by exacting from them the Forfeitures according to those Statutes. In which employment he had for his assistant one Sir Richard Emson, another Lawyer, Son of a Sieve-maker of Tocester in Northamptonshire. Both which being constituted by the said King his Judices fiscales, as one (s) is pleased to stile them, (Dudley being then (t) a person that could put hateful business into good language) they became so extremely hated of all people, that they were forced many times to go guarded in the Streets. In the 19. of Henry 7. he being Speaker of the House of Commons in Parliament, should have been made Sergeant at Law on the 13. of November the same year, but (for what reason it appears not) he did petition that he might be discharged from assuming that Degree, which was accordingly done to his desire, and in the 22. of the said Kings Reign, he (u) obtained the Stewardship of the Rape of Hastings in Suffex. He hath written (w) a Book Entit.

Arbor Reipublicæ, &c. It is penned in a Juridic Stile, and is now, or at least lately was, reserved, as a choice Monument, in the Cottonian Library. Whether ever Printed, I cannot tell. At length after King Henry 7. (who favoured his actions because he brought Grift to his Mill) being dead, his Successor King Henry 8. did, for the Peoples satisfaction, issue out his special Precept for the Execution of the said Dudley, then a Prisoner in the Tower of London. Whereupon he had his Head smitten off on Tower-Hill, 28. Aug. 2. Henry 8. being the year 1510. of our Lord fifteen hundred and ten, leaving then behind him several Sons, the eldest of which was John, afterwards Duke of Northumberland, Father to Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick, and to Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester.

11. JOHN HOLTE, called by some Holtigena, was born in the County of Suffex, and from being Usher of the School joyning to the common gate of S. Mary Magdalen College, and Bachelaur of Arts, was elected Probationer of the said College in 1490. and within the compass of an year following was admitted true and perpetual Fellow thereof. Afterwards he took the Degree of Master of Arts, and carried on the profession of Pedagogy so zealous, that by his admirable way of teaching the Faculty of Grammar, many from his School were transplanted to several Colleges and Halls in this University, that were afterwards eminent in the Nation. Since which time, and that of King Henry 7. hath been a singular care of Royal Authority, and of worthy learned men to lay a solid Foundation of all kind of Learning, by producing a right Grammar Institution. For tho before the said King's time a great part of our English men had little leisure, and less care of good Arts, yet when the Houses of York and Lancaster were united by the Counsel of Dr. John Moreton, Bishop of Ely, and the times thereupon became more peaceable, our Author Holte made a Grammar, Entit.

Lac Puerorum, &c. Printed about the year 1497. and Dedicated to the said Moreton, then Archbishop of Canterbury. Which Grammar (Printed also with the Works of John Stanbridge) being the first of note, or most fit for use, that was ever Printed in England, was much used and taken into the hands of all sorts of Scholars. Afterwards the said Stanbridge, and his Scholar Robert Whittington, with others, did put forth divers Treatises of Grammar, but more especially Dr. John Colet, the learned Dean of S. Paul's Cathedral, who compiled the Eight parts of Speech, and William Lilye, the first Master of S. Paul's School, an English Syntax: whereunto Cardinal Thomas Wolsey did afterwards prefix an Epistle, and directions for teaching the eight Classes or Forms in Ipswich School. The learned Erasmus also, intreated (a) by Dr. Colet, to revise Lilye's

(s) Idem ibid. (t) Franc. Bacon Visc. S. Alban, in his History of Henry 7. Printed at London in folio 1622. p. 209. (u) In the third Tom. of the Baronage of England, p. 217. b. From which Pref. one John Twell, a School-Master in, or near, Newarke, hath furnished himself with many materials for his Preface to his Grammatica Reformata, — Lond. 1883. in octavo, but without any acknowledgment on his part.

Syntax, made a new Latin Syntax, in 1513. upon which Henry Pryme, a School-Master in a certain Monastery, and Leonard Cox of Carleon in Monmouthshire Commented; the former in 1539. and the other in 1540. But these things being spoken by the by, I shall only say that our Author Holte being esteemed the most eminent Grammarian of his time, there is no doubt but that he did Compose other things belonging to Grammar, which perhaps are now quite lost, and past recovery, as the time of his Clar. death, and place of burial is. One Holte, who was 1511. Master to Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor of England, did publish an Accedence and Grammar about the same time that Lac Puerorum was made extant. Which Holte is in the (*) Auction Catalogue of Mr. Richard Smith, sometimes Secondary of the Poultry Compter, written Nich. Holt. Qu. whether not mistaken for John.

NICHOLAS MAGWIRE, was born in Idron 12. within the Kingdom of Ireland, Educated (b) among the Oxonians, and took one or more Degrees. Afterwards returning to his Country, he was made Prebendary of Hillard, in the Diocese of Laigblin, being then, and after, accounted famous among his Country-men for his great Learning, and constant Preaching among them. In 1490. he was, by provision from the Pope, promoted to the Bishoprick of Laigblin, aged about thirty one years. Where being settled, he began to write several Books, but being untimely snatch'd away by death, finished only these following.

Chronicon Hiberniæ, (of which Thaddæus Dowling made use, when he Composed his Annales Hiberniæ) and, Vita Milonis de Rupe Episc. quondam Laigbliensis.

This our Author Magwire, died in fifteen hundred and 1512. twelve, (4. Hen. 8.) and was buried, as it seems, in his own Church of Laigblin. In his Bishoprick succeeded one Thomas Halfey Doctor of both the Laws, whom I shall remember in his proper place, among the Bishops, that have received their Education in Oxon.

MAURITIUS de PORTU, otherwise called 13. O-Fibely, who, in his time, was, for his great Learning and Virtue, called and written by many The Flower of the World, was born (c) in the County of Cork near to a celebrated Port called Baltimore in Ireland, where the ancient Seat of the O-Fibely's was placed, instructed for some time in Grammaticals and Trivials in this University, and not unlikely in other Learning (after he had taken upon him the Habit of S. Francis) in the Convent of the Brethren of that Order situated in the South Suburb of Oxon, wherein the person that he admired beyond all the World (John Duns Scotus) had spent some years in Religion and Learning, and in the Library of which place many of his Books had been Religiously preserved. From Oxon he Travelled into Italy, and settling in the University of Padova or Padua, then flourishing in Learning, made very great proficiency in Philosophy in the Monastery of the Franciscans called S. Antony, and at riper years applied himself severely to the study of Metaphysics, School-Divinity, and above all to the Doctrin of John Duns, whom he had in so great veneration, that he was in a manner belotted with his Subtilities. After he had taken the Degree of Doctor of Divinity (in which Faculty he for some time Read with great applause among the Brethren) he became known to, and much respected by, Pope Julius 2. who, for a reward of his Learning and Vertues, conferred on him the Archbishoprick of Tuam in Ireland in the year 1506. In 1512. he was present at the two first Sessions of the Council of Lateran, and in the year following, minding to return to his Native Country, he obtained a Faculty from the Pope, of granting Indulgences to all such that should retire to Tuam to hear the first Mass that he should Celebrate there: but at his arrival at Galloway, being overtaken with a deadly Disease, died before he could Celebrate it. His Works, which have been much admired, and taken into the Hands of all Catholics, are mostly these.

Enchiridion fidei. Printed in 1509.

1513. Epistolæ diversæ ad Jo. Camersium, with several other things, besides his postillizing the whole Doctrine of Duns Scotus, and his subtile Comments on his Universals, as Ant. Possevinus in his Apparatus Sacer, will farther tell you. He gave way to fate at Galloway, before he could reach to Tuam (as it is already told you) to the great reluctance of all learned Men, especially those of his own Country, and of Padua, on the eighth of the Cal. of June, in Fifteen hundred and thirteen; whereupon his body was buried in the Church of the Franciscans, commonly called the Grey Friars, at Galloway. In the See of Tuam succeeded one Thomas O-Mullaly, commonly called Laly; which Sirname occurring often in our Registers and Records, there is no doubt but that he had received some knowledge of good Letters among us.

14. HENRY BRADSHAW was born in the ancient Town of West-Chester, commonly called the City of Chester, and being much addicted to Religion and Learning, when a Youth, was received among the Benedictine Monks of S. Werbergs Monastery in the said City. Thence at riper years he was sent to Gloucester College, in the Suburb of Oxon, where after he had passed his course in Theology among the Novices of his Order, he returned to his Cell at S. Werberg, and in his elder years wrote, De antiquitate & magnificentia Urbis Cestrie.

Chronicon, &c. and translated from Latin into English, a Book which he thus entituled. The life of the glorious Virgin S. Werberg: Also many Miracles that God hath shewed for her. Lond. 1521. qu. He died in Fifteen hundred and 1513. thirteen (5. Henry 8.) and was buried in his Monastery, leaving then behind him other matters to posterity, but the subject of which they Treat, I know not.

15. JOHN HARLEY, of the Order of the Preaching or Dominican, commonly called Black Friars, did also pass his course in the supream Faculty among those of his Order in the College pertaining to them, sometimes situated and being in the South Suburb of Oxon; where making great proficiency in his Profession, was at length honored with the Degree of Doctor of Divinity, being then accounted one of the prime Theologists of his Order, not only for Learning, but for conspicuous Vertue, sanctimony of Life, and acuteness in all Subtilities, and Scholastical Disputations. He hath written according to Anton. (e) Senensis, a Brother of the said Order.

Bina Commentaria super 4. libros Sententiarum.

Tract. de Prædestinatione Dei.

- Quodlibeta varia.* The time when he left this vain and transitory life my Author Anton. Senen. tells me not, only that his name sounded high, and was in great renown for his erudition, and most refined sanctity of life, in Fifteen hundred and fifteen, which was the seventh year of King Henry 8. of England.

16. THOMAS FICH was an Irish Man born, and a Student for some time in Oxon, as certain imperfect Notes shew, but what Degree he took, I find not. Afterwards upon his return into his Country, being then, if not some years before, a Canon Regular, he became Subprior of the Cathedral Church of the Holy Trinity in Dublin, and in his elder years wrote,

(e) In bib. Ord. fratrum prædicatorum, ut sup. p. 141.

De rebus Ecclesiæ Catb. SS. Trinit. Dublin, lib. 1. It is in MS. and was sometimes in the Library of Sir James Ware, who saith it was usually called The White Book, and takes it to be the same (f) with the Obital Book of that Church, for in histime it was written, as by the Character it appears, being at this day reserved as a great rarity in the Library of Trinity College near Dublin. This person, Tho. Fich, who is supposed to have written other things, gave way to fate on the sixteenth of the Cal. of Febr. in Fifteen hundred and seventeen, which was the ninth year 1517 of King Henry 8. and was buried in the afore said Cathedral Church.

GEORGE COGLEY another Irish Man, but 17. later in time than the former, did spend some time in the study of the Civil Law among the Oxonians, and after his return to his own Country, became a Publick Notary, and Registry to the Bishops Court at Meath; where having opportunity, time, and place to peruse the Registers of that Church, wrote and commended to Posterity, Catalogus Episcoporum Midensium, MS. Sometimes in the Library of Sir James Ware, Knight. This Catalogue commences with Simon Rochfort, (or de Rupe forti) who was the first of English Men that obtained the Bishoprick of Meath, in 1194. or thereabouts, and reaches down to Hugh Ynge, who became Bishop in 1511. A Copy of this Catalogue, if not the Original, was sometimes in the hands of the famous Dr. Usher, Bishop of the said place, 1518. who communicated it to Sir James Ware, when he was composing his two Books De Script. Hibern.

JOHN COLET, the eldest Son of Sir Henry Colet, 18. sometimes twice Lord Mayor of London, (by Christiana his Chast and faithful Wife) Son of Robert Colet of Wendover in Buckinghamshire, was born in London, (in the Parish of S. Antholin as it seems) in the year 1466. was Educated in Grammaticals, partly in London or Westminster, and being fitted for greater Learning, was sent to the Habitation of the Muses, the University of Oxon, about 1483. (at which time one or more of his Sirname were of S. Mary Magdalen College) where, after he had spent seven years in Logicals and Philosophicals, was Licensed to proceed in Arts, being about that time so exquisitely Learned, that all Tullies Works were as familiar to him, as his Epistles. He was also no stranger to Plato and Plotinus, whom he not only read, but conferred and paralleled, perusing the one, as a Commentary on the other. And as for the Mathematicks, there was scarce any part thereof, wherein he was not seen above his years. Having thus obtained a most admirable competency in Learning at home, he Travelled into Foreign Countries to improve it by seeing the variety of Learning: As first into France, where at Paris he advanced himself much in Divinity, and in Italy he prosecuted his Studies therein so effectually, that there were none of his time went beyond him either in that Faculty, or for the Reading of the Antients, particularly Dionysius Areopagita, Origen, S. Cyprian, S. Ambrose, S. Hierome, S. Austin, &c. But as for Thomas Aquinas, Jo. Duns Scotus, and other Schoolmen, he seemed not to delight in. After his return from Italy, he retired again to his Mother the University of Oxon, where he publicly and freely without stipend or reward, Expounded all S. Paul's Epistles, about 1497. 98. 99. &c. in which years, Erasmus Rot. studied (perhaps our Author Colet too) in the College of S. Mary the Virgin, a Nursery for the Canon Regulars of the Order of S. Austin. Which most learned person did make this report of Colet, that there was neither Doctor, Abbat, or Master in the whole University, who frequented not, and (which was more) took Notes of his Lectures. In 1493. he was, upon the resignation of Christoph. Urswyke, admitted by prozie (being then absent) Prebendary of Botewant in the Church of York, in 1502 he became Preb. of Durmasford in the Church of Salisbury, on the resignation of Rich. Rauson, and about the year 1504. being then Doctor of Divinity, he was by King Henry 7. made Dean of S. Paul's Cathedral in the place of Rob. Sherebourne, promoted to the See of S. David. After his settlement in Pauls, he according to the blessed example of S. Paul, became a free and constant Preacher of the Gospel, by Preaching every Holyday in the Cathedral, (not customary in those times) besides his Sermons at Court, (which made him be loved of the King) and in many other Churches in the City. In his own Church he Expounded the Scriptures, not by retail but wholesale, running over sometimes a whole Epistle: which, with his Sermons elsewhere, were much frequented by Courtiers and Citizens, and more especially for this cause, that the strict discipline of his Life, did regularly correspond with the integrity of his Doctrine. In 1512. (4. Hen. 8.) he was at the charge of 4500 l. for the Founding a Free-School in the East part of S. Paul's Church-Yard for three hundred fifty and three poor Mens Children, to be taught free in the School, appointing a Master, Usher, and a Chaplain, with sufficient stipends to endure for ever, and committed the oversight of it to the Mercers of London, whom he endowed with an hundred and twenty pounds yearly for the maintenance thereof. He also at the same time gave Orders for the Scholars, whereby also the School-Masters themselves should be directed. As for the Rents, they being much increased since, more comes to the School-Master than the whole endowment. The first Master was William Lilye, the famous Grammarian, who before had privately taught Grammar elsewhere. (2.) John Retwile, 1522. (3.) Richard Jones, 1532. (4.) Thomas Freeman, 1549. (5.) Our Author Colet was accounted one of the lights of Learning of his time, and therefore entirely beloved of Erasmus, who (g) wrote his Life (which I have seen, and in some things follow) Thomas Lynacre, Sir Thomas More, Richard Paice his successor in the Deanry of S. Paul's, William Latymer, William Grocy and others. As for the things that he wrote, they are many, which being found in his Study after his death, few understood them, because written only for his own understanding, with intentions, if life had been spared, that they should have been all fairly transcribed and published. The most part follow.

Responsio ad argumenta Erasmi de tadio & pavore Christi. This is mentioned in the thirty first Book of the Epistles of Erasmus, ep. 46. The Titles of other Books written by Dr. Colet, you may see in John Bale's Book De Script. Maj. Britan. Cent. 8. nu. 63. At length our learned Author discovering the sweating Sickness to grow upon him, he retired to his Lodgings that he had built in the Monastery of the Carthusians at Sheen near to Richmond in Surrey: where spending the little remainder of his days in Devotion, surrendered up at length his last breath to him that first gave it, on the 16. of September in Fifteen 1519. hundred and nineteen. Afterwards his body was carried to London, and by the care of his old decrepid Mother, it was buried in the Cathedral Church of S. Paul, nigh to the Image of S. Wulgefort. Soon after was a comly Monument set over his Grave, near to the little one which he had set up in his life time, between the Choire and the South Isle: which Monument remaining whole and entire till 1666. was then consumed in the dreadful Conflagration that happened in the City of London. But before that time it was carefully preserved in Effigie by the industrious Pen of Mr. (since Sir) William Dugdale in his History of S. Paul's Cathedral. Printed at London in fol. 1658. In the last (b) Will and Testament of the said Dr. Colet, dated 22. Aug. and proved the 5. of October, in 1519. I find this passage — 'Item, The New Testament, and other of my making, written in Parchment, as Comments of Paul's Epistles, and Abbreviations, with many such other, I Will shall be disposed at the disposition of my Executors, &c. His body which was closed up in a leaden Coffin of six feet and two Inches long, and of three feet and two inches broad, was laid up and inclosed in the Wall, near to the place where his Monument was afterwards put. In 1680. or thereabouts, when the Wall was taken down, the said Coffin was discovered (for it laid in the said Wall about two feet and an half above the surface of the floor) whereon was a plate of Lead fastned, with an Inscription ingraven thereon, shewing the name of the person there deposited, his Fathers name, his Dignity, Obit, benefaction, &c. Some of the Royal Society, who out of curiosity went to see it, did thrust a probe or little stick into a chink of the Coffin, which bringing out some moisture with it, found it of an ironish tast, and fancied that the body felt soft and pappy like Brawn.

JOHN CONSTABLE, Son of Roger Constable 19.
 by Isabel his Wife, was born in London, Educated in Grammaticals under William Lilye, in Academics in an ancient Hostle sometimes called Byham, afterwards corruptly Bobem, Hall, opposite to Merton Coll. Church, under the tuition, as I conceive, of Mr. John Plaisted the chief Moderator thereof. About the time that he had taken the Degree of Master of Arts, which was in 1515. (7. Hen. 8.) he left the University, being then accounted an excellent Poet and Rhetorician, and had some preferment conferred upon him, but what, I know not. He hath written and published, Querela Veritatis. The beginning of which is Destinavi tibi hunc nostrum, &c. Job. Bradford, the Protestant Martyr, wrote a Book Entit. The complaint of Verity, &c. Lond. 1559. in oct. Whether in imitation of the former, I know not.

Epigrammata. Lond. 1520. qu. which Book of Epigrams I have seen in the Bodleian Library, given thereunto by that curious collector of Books, Democritus Junior. Other things, as I conceive he hath written, but of what Subject I cannot yet tell; nor can I say any more of John Constable, only this, that one of both his Names, who was Doctor of Decrees, fourth Son of Sir Rob. Constable of Flamburgh in Yorkshire Knight, and Residentiary of the Church of Lincoln, became Dean of the said Church, in the Year 1514. who dying 15. Jul. 1528. recommended his Body to be buried in the Cathedral Church of our Lady of Lincoln, near to the Corps of George Fitz-Hugh sometimes Dean thereof, who was buried in the Body of the said Church: What relation our Author Jo. Constable the Poet (who was in great renown among learned Men in Clar. Fifteen hundred and twenty) had to John Constable the 1520. Dean, I cannot yet find. In the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, lived one Henry Constable, a noted English Poet, not unfitly ranked with Sir Edw. Dyer Chancellor of the most noble Order of the Garth, a poetical Writer, and of good esteem in the said Queens time, as living in the 39 Year of her Reign. The said Henry Constable, who had spent some time among the Oxonian Muses, was a great Master of the English Tongue; and there was no Gentleman of our Nation, had a more pure, quick, and higher delivery of conceit than he; witness among all others, that Sonnet of his before the poetical Translation called The Furies, made by King James the First of England, while he was King of the Scots. He hath also several Sonnets extant, written to Sir Phil. Sidney; some of which are set before the Apology for Poetry, written by the said Knight.

20. THOMAS BRYNKNEILL, a Person of great Literature, and a most skilful interpreter of the sacred Writ, had most of his Education in Lincoln Coll. whence being taken to govern the Free-School joyning to that of S. Mary Magd. did exercise such an admirable way of teaching there, that many were by him fitted for the University. In 1507. he proceeded in Divinity, and being afterwards a commoner for some time of University Coll. became so much known to, and respected by, Cardinal Wolsey, (who if I mistake not conferr'd some dignity on him) that he was represented to the King as one of those most fit Persons in the University to encounter Mart. Luther. Whereupon in the Year 1521. he being then Reader of the Cardinals Divinity Lecture, which was by him founded in the University 3 or 4 Years before, he wrot a Learned piece, entit.

Tractatus contra doctrinam Martini Lutheri. Whether Printed I know not; sure I am, that 'tis commended for a good Book in one of our publick (f) Registers. What other Books he wrot, I cannot tell, nor when he died, or where buried.

21. WILLIAM GROCYN, a most singular light of learning in his time, received his first breath in the City of Bristol in Somersetshire, was educated in Grammaticals in Wykeham's School near Winchester, made true and perpetual fellow of New Coll. after he had served two Years of probation, in 1467, and in 1479, being then M. of A. he was presented by the Warden and Society of that House to the Rectory of Newton Longwill in Bucks. But his Residence being mostly in Oxon. the Society of Magd. Coll. made choice of him to be their Divinity Reader, about the beginning of the Reign of King Rich. 3. which King coming soon after to Oxon. and taking up his lodging in that College; he was pleased to hear our Author Grocyn, and some others of that House dispute: And being much delighted with their disputations, especially with those of Grocyn, which were in Divinity, he did most graciously (g) reward them. But Grocyn leaving his Readers place in Magd. Coll. in the beginning of the Year 1488, being then accounted excellent in the Latin and Greek Tongues according to the then knowledge of them, he did, for the farther accomplishment of himself in those critical studies, take a Journey into Italy; where by the helps of Demetrius Calchondile and Politian, he obtained his design. So that returning into his own Country, and at length to Oxon. he became (h) a Sojourner in Exeter Coll. in the Year 1491. or thereabouts, took a Degree in Divinity at it (i) seems, taught and read the Greek Tongue to the Oxonians after that way, which had not before, I suppose, been taught in their University, became a familiar Friend of, or rather Tutor to, Erasmus, and a Person in eminent renown for his learning — Recensitunc ex Italia venerat Grocynus (saith (k) Stapleton) qui primus eâ atate Græcas literas in Angliam invexerat, Oxoniique publicè professus fuerat, à cujus sodali Thoma Lynacro, (Morus) Græcas literas Oxonii didicit. In 1504. or thereabouts, he resign'd his rectory of Newton Longwill, being about that time made Master of the College of Allhallows at Maidston in Kent, yet continued mostly in Oxon. for several Years after. He hath written,

Epigrammata, with other things which are mentioned by Leland and Bale. While Dr. Colet was Dean of St. Pauls, our Author Grocyn did read in his open Lecture in that Cathedral the Book of Dionysius Areopagita, commonly called Hierarchia Ecclesiastica, (for the reading of the Holy Scripture, in the said Cathedral was not in use) and in the very first entry of his Preface, cried out with great vehemency against them whosoever they were, which either denied or stood in doubt of the Authority of that Book; in the number of whom he noted Laur. Valla, and divers other of like judgment. But afterwards the said Grocyn, when he had continued a few Weeks in his reading thereof, and had farther considered of the matter, he utterly alter'd and recanted his former sentence; protesting openly, that the said Book, in his judgment, was never written by that Author, whom we read in the Acts of the Apostles to be called Dionysius Areopagita. He the said Grocyn died at Maidstone beforementioned, in the beginning of the Year Fifteen hundred twenty and two, aged 80 or more. Whereupon his Body was Buried at the Stall-end, in the high Choir of the Coll. of Allhallows before-mentioned. Thomas Lynacre the Famous Physician was his Executor, to whom he left considerable Legacies; and William Lilye the Grammarian, who was his God-son, had a little Memorial bequeathed to him in his last Will which I have (l) seen. To, and with, this Grocyn, and other eminent Scholars of England, who were of his time, was well known, and familiar, Andreas Ammonius a Clerk of Luca in Italy, Son of Elizab. de Harena, or Arena, a grave Matron of that place; which Andrew, who was an Apostolick Prothonotary, Collector for the Pope in England, Latin Secretary to King Henry 8. and a Learned Man, did, as I have just reason to conceive, spend some time in Oxon for the sake of Study, while Grocyn, or at least Erasmus were conversant there: But being not certain of the matter, I shall only say, that Ammonius dying in Septemb. 1517. (9. Henry 8.) being then Prebendary of Fordington and Wriublington in the Church of Salisbury, (which Dignity was conferr'd upon him, on the Death of Gundefalvus Ferdinandus 17 Jul. 1513.) was Buried in the King's Chappel of the Blessed Virgin Mary and St. Stephen, situate and being within the Palace of Westminster; leaving then a considerable part of his Wealth, to his Executor Mr. Peter de Vannes an Italian, his Sisters Son, whom I shall mention elsewhere.

WILLIAM LILYE was born at Odyham in Hampshire, 22. Elected one of the Demies or Semi-commoners of St. Mary Magd. Coll. in 1486. Aged 18 Years, took, as it seems, one Degree in Arts; and then giving a farewell to the University, went for Religion sake to Jerusalem; where, after he had paid his Vows, put in at his return at the Isle of Rhodes, and making some stay there, he learned the Latin and Greek Tongues exactly: which matter hath seemed strange to some, forasmuch as Rhodes was not Rhodes in that Age, except some great Critick was casually there. Thence he went to Rome, where he heard Job. Sulpitius and Pomponius Sabinus, great Masters of Latin in those days Read and Teach. After his return he settled in London, and taught Grammar, Poetry, and Rhetorick with good success. At length Dr. John Colet Dean of St. Pauls Cathedral, made him the First Master of the School, which he had Founded in the Yard, belonging to the said Cathedral, in the Year 1512. where teaching about Ten Years, many issued thence, who were afterwards serviceable in the Church and State. He hath written many things in English and Latin, and in Verse and Prose; among which are these.

An Introduction to the Eight Parts of Speech—This is generally said to be written by Lilye; yet some there are, that stick not to tell us, that the said Introduction was written by Dr. Colet or Dav. Tolley.

The Construction of the Eight Parts of Speech, — This also goes under the Name of Lilye.

(2) Etymologia, (3) Syntaxis, and fourthly Prosodia. In which Book or Books (very many times Printed) that part in Verse, called Propria quæ Maribus, &c. and another called, As in præsentii, &c. were afterwards published by John Ritwise (Lilys's Successor in Colet's School) with an Interpretation of the words in them, about the Year 1530. (22. Hen. 8.)

Omnium nominum in regulis contentorum, tum Heteroclitorum ac Verborum, interpretatio aliqua.

All these beforementioned were published at London 1513, and afterwards in 1520, and had additions and annotations put to them by Ritwise before mentioned, Tho. Robertson, &c. Tho the rules in them were excellent in that Age; yet they have been much meliorated, and more compendiously methodized by very many since, even to these our days.

The said three Antihofficons are wittily written in an elegant Stile, and neat Verse, not only against the said Horman, but also against Rob. Whittington a Laureat Grammarian & Rhetorician: The beginning of them is Non Hormanne lateat, &c. In which Antihofficons, the said Whittington had, under the feigned name of Bossus, much provoked Lilys with scoffs and biting Verses.

Besides these, he hath written other things, as Baleus and Pisens will tell you, and hath made several translations from Greek into Latin, and from Italian into English. At length this Learned Author being infected with the Plague, died of it to the great grief of Learned Men, on the fifth of the Cal. of Mar. in Fifteen hundred twenty and two, and was buried in the North-yard, belonging to the Cath. Church of St. Paul; leaving then behind him a Son named George (begotten on the body of his Wife Agnes) whom I shall hereafter mention, and Peter a Dignitarie, as it seems, in the Church of Canterbury, Father of another Peter Lilys D. D. sometimes Fellow of Jesuss Coll. in Cambridge, afterwards a Brother of the Hospital, called the Savoy in the Strand near London, Prebendary of St. Paul's Cathedral, and of the Church of Sarum, Archdeacon of Taunton, and a Writer of certain Books, as (1) Conciones duæ, una inscripta Pax Liliana, in Act. 15. 39. Altera Columba Ecclesiæ, in John 19. 9. 10. — Lond. 1619. qu. published by his Widow Dorothy (2) Two Sermons, 1. A preparative Lilie to cure Soules, on Mark 16. 6. and the other, How to seek and find Christ on Luke 24. 5. Both Printed at Lond. in 1619. qu. published by his said Widow Dorothy, whose Daughter Mary hath Verses before, in commendation of, them. This Dr. Peter Lilys gave way to fate in the latter end of 1614 (12. Jac. 1.) and was buried in the Church belonging to the Savoy beforementioned. Will. Lilys the Grammarian had a Daughter named Dionysia, who was married to his Usher John Ritwise or Rigbtwise, afterwards Master of St. Paul's School, on the Death of his Father-in Law; and a most eminent Grammarian in his Generation. This Person by the way I must tell you, was born at Sawt in Norfolk, educated in Eaton School near Windsor, elected into Kings Coll. in Cambridge an. 1507. made the Tragedy of Dido out of Virgil; and acted the same with the Scholars of his School before Cardinal Wolsey with great applause. One Rich. Jones succeeded him in the Government of St. Paul's School, 1532. (24. Hen. 8.) in which Year Ritwise perhaps died. Afterwards his Widow Dionysia took to her second Husband James Jacob, who was one of the Masters of the said School, by whom he had a Son called Polydore Jacob. In the next Centery after the Death of our Famous Will. Lilys, appeared as a Comet to the Vulgar from Leicestershire, one of both his Names, a great pretender to Astrology and Physick, and in truth considering his Education, which was without the help of an Academy, he was eminent. He began to write, much about the time when the grand Rebellion commenc'd, wrote in favour of the Long Parliament and their proceedings, and many notorious matters against the Royal Family; which being highly resented by the generous Loyalist, he was aimed at upon His Majesties Restauration in 1660. to be brought to condign punishment: But upon the Intercession of George Wharton (to whom Lilys had been civil in the times of Usurpation) and others, he escaped, and continued in writing his Ephemerides to the time of his Death. This Person who pretended much to Prophecy (of which he hath published several Pamphlets, especially in his said Ephemerides) and had exercised the trade of Conjurat[i]on among ignorant People, died at Walton upon Thames in Surrey (where he had purchased a fair Estate, with the Moneys he had got, by imposing on the Vulgar with his Juggles) on the 9th day of June, an. 1681. Aged near 80 Years, and was buried in the middle of the Church there, towards the North Wall. Soon after, was a black Marble Stone, with an Inscription thereon, laid over his Grave by his Friend Elias Ashmole Esq. A little before his Death, he did adopt for his Son by the Name of Merlin Junior, one Will. Coley a Taylor by Trade, and a Native of Magd. Parish in the North Suburb of Oxon, and at the same time gave him the Impression of his Ephemeris, after it had been Printed for 36 Years, which Coley continues to this day. The Writings of this Lilys being too many to be here inserted, I shall only give you the canting and amusing Titles of some, as (1) Englands Prophetical Merlin, (2) English Merlin revived, &c. (3) Starry Messenger; or an interpretation of the strange Apparition of three Suns, (4) A Collection of Ancient and Modern Prophecies, &c. (5) Astrological Prediction of the occurrences in England (6) The Worlds Catastrophy (7) Monarchy and no Monarchy, &c. (8) Annu senebrosus, or the dark Year, &c. (9) Christian Astrology, &c.

JOHN STANBRIDGE another noted Grammarian 23. of his time, was born at Heyford in Northamptonshire, educated in Trivials in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted, after two Years of probation, true and perpetual Fellow of New College, in the Year 1481, left it Five Years after, and being naturally delighted in the faculty of Grammar (tho then Bac. of Arts) he was made first Usher of the Free-School joyn[ing] to Magd. Coll. (for so he occurs in the Year 1488.) and after the Death of Job. Anwykyl, chief Master thereof; in which employment, he continued, if I mistake not, to the time of his Death, and became so happy in the practice of his profession, that many Persons, who proved afterwards eminent, acknowledged to have received instruction from him. Among such Rob. Whittington was one, by whose endeavours, as also those of Stanbridge, Will. Horman, and Will. Lilys, (all Oxford Students) the Latin tongue was much refin'd and amended. This Jo. Stanbridge was a right worthy Lover of his faculty, and an indefatigable Man in teaching and writing, as it may appear by those things that he hath published, very grateful to the Muses and publick concerns. The last of which he consulted more than his own private interest; and when in his old Age, he should have withdrawn himself from his profession (which is esteem'd by the generality a drudgery) and have lived upon what he had gotten in his younger Years, he refused it, lived poor and bare to his last, yet with a juvenile and cheerful Spirit. He hath written,

Embryon relinatum, sive Vocabularium Metricum. This I have seen Printed in an old English Character, about 1522. in qu. In the title of which, is the Authors Picture (Printed from a Wooden Cut) sitting in a Chair with his Gown on, and a Hood on his Shoulders, but no Cap on his Head, only a close one, like to a Curlot. This Book was view'd and corrected in Qu. Elizabeth's time by Thomas Newton of Cheeshire, who hath an (m) Encomium upon it: Afterwards enlarged, and made to run in compleat Verse, by that noted Grammarian John Brinsley, sometimes a Schoolmaster and Minister in Great Yarmouth in Norfolk, an. 1636. I mean the same Brinsley, who married the Sister of Dr. Jos. Hall Bishop of Norwich, and wrote and published several Books of Divinity and Grammar besides translations. Stanbridge also wrote, Clar. 1522. Vulgaria. With other things which I have not yet seen. He lived beyond the Year Fifteen hundred twenty and two, but when he died, or where he was buried, (unless in Magd. Coll. Chap. or Yard belonging thereunto) I know not. One Thomas Stanbridge, his Kinsman I think, took the Degree of Master of Arts in this University an. 1518. being then a noted Schoolmaster of Banbury in Oxfordshire, who dying 1522, left several Books to the Coll. of which he had been Fellow; which, if I mistake not, was Magd. College.

24. NICHOLAS VAUX, Son of Sir Will. Vaux of Harwedon in Northamptonshire by Catherine his Wife (*) Daughter of Gregory Penystone of Curtesfel in Piemont, a Province of Italy, was born in that County (Northamptonshire) and in his juvenile Years, was sent to Oxon, where by reading Humane and Romantick, rather than Philosophical, Authors, advanced his Genie very much in Poetry and History. In his riper Years he followed the Camp, did King Hen. 7. noted service in the Battel of Stoke (near Newark) in the second Year of his Reign, and thereupon he received the Honor of Knighthood. In the 17th Year of that Kings Reign, he appeared like a Star at the Marriage of Prince Arthur, for the Gown of Purple Velvet which he then wore, was valued at a Thousand pounds, besides a Collar of SS about his Neck, which weighed Eight hundred pounds in Nobles. In the 1. Hen. 8. he was made Lieutenant of the Castle of Guifnes in Picardy, and in the 5th of that Kings Reign, he was at the Siege of Turwyn. In the 10th, he was one of the Ambassadors then sent into France, for confirming the Articles of Peace, between King Hen. 8. and the French; and in the 11th, was one of the Commissioners appointed to make preparation for that famous interview near Guifnes, between King Hen. 8. and the King of France. After which he grew into such high esteem at Court, that in the 15. Hen. 8. he was advanced (n) to the dignity of a Baron of this Realm, by the Name and Title of Nicholas Lord Vaux of Harwedon. It is reported by a certain (o) Author, that his fancy laid chiefly in the facility of his meeter, and the aptness of his descriptions, such as he takes upon him to make; namely, in sundry of his Songs, wherein he sheweth the counterfeit action very lively and pleasantly. His Book, or Books of Poetry I have not yet seen, only many of his Copies of Verses, in a Book Intit. The Paradise of dainty devises, &c. Printed at Lond. 1578. in qu. Among them I find some, which have these Titles set to them, (1) A Copy made in his extreame sickness, which is the eighth Copy in that Book. (2) His desire to exchange life, numb. 17. (3) Of sufferance cometh ease. numb. 41. (4) No pleasure without some pain. fol. 36. b. (5) A lover disdained complaineth, fol. 51. a. (6) Of a contented mind. (7) Tis before you trust. (8) He renounceth all the effects of love. (9) Be-thinking himself of his end, he writeth thus, &c. There goes a doleful ditty also under his Name beginning thus, I loath that I did love, &c. which was thought by some to be made upon his Death-bed. At length after this learned and valiant Lord had enjoyed his Honor but a very little time; he gave way to fate in May or June, in Fifteen hundred twenty and three; whereupon his Body was buried, as it seems, at Harwedon before-mention'd, (where he founded a Chantry for one Priest to sing Mass for his Soul, in the Parish Church there;) or else in the Church of the Black Friars at London.

25. THOMAS LYNACRE born, as 'tis said, (p) at Canterbury, but descended from the Lynacre's of Lynacre Hall in the Parish of Chesterfield in Derbyshire, (which may be the reason why Holinsbed, and others that follow him, say, that he was born in the Town of Derby) was chosen Fellow of Allsouls Coll. in 1484. where by his close retirement, he improved himself very much in Literature, and in few Years after, much more by his Travels into Italy, where taking, I suppose, the Degree of Doctor of Physick, became intimate with Persons famous for learning there. The chief Cities of his residence were at Rome and Florence; at the last of which places, being countenanced by Laurence Medices Duke thereof, had for his instructors Demetrius and Politian; and at Rome he became familiar with the learned Hermolaus Barbarus, who directed him very freely in his Studies. After his return into his own Country, he was incorporated Doctor of Physick in this University, read a shagling Lecture in that faculty, became Tutor to Prince Arthur, and to his Princess Catherine for the Italian Tongue, Physician to King Hen. 7. (as some say) afterwards to King Hen. 8. one of the chief Founders of the Coll. of Physicians in Knightriders-street in London, (of which he was the first President) and at length in Holy Orders, and a Priest. In 1519, Apr. 29. he was admitted (q) Chantor of the Church of York, in the place of Job. Perot, who died in Febr. going before; but Lynacre resigning that place in Nov. following, was succeeded therein by Rich. Wyatt D. D. who was admitted thereunto 13. of the same Month. At the same time our Author Lynacre had other Dignities in the Church, but at what place I cannot justly say. He was great with, and highly admired by, Sir Tho. More, (whom formerly he had taught Greek) Erasmus, Grocyn, Latimer, Tonstall, and who not. He was one of the first English Men that brought polite learning into our Nation, and it hath been justly question'd by some of the Goliaths of learning, whether he was a better Latinist or Grecian, or a better Grammarian or Physician. Sure it is that he being a general Scholar of his time, and esteemed the Honor of the Nation, was much reverenc'd by the Oxonians; especially upon reading his Medicinal Lectures among them gratis, and generally by all Persons of Honor, and others for his happy practice among them. He hath written,

The Rudiments of Grammar. Lond. in edib. Pynsonianis. Turn'd into Latin by George Buchanan a Scot — Par. 1533. and 50. in oct. Which Book hath ever since been the Cynosura for many of our best Grammarians.

De Emendatâ Structurâ Latini sermonis, libri sex. Several times Printed, as at Paris 1532. 43. 50, &c. Col. Agrip. 1555, &c. all in 8vo. recognised and amended by Jacobus Camerarius — Lipf. 1591. oct. The said 6 Books were originally made for the use of the Lady Mary the Kings Daughter, the same, I think, who was afterwards Queen, and are much commended by Jo. () Leland*. He also translated from Greek into Latin several of the works of Claud. Galen, among which were those De temperamentis & de inaequali temperie. lib. 3. Venet. 1498. Which Latin Translation, as 'tis said, speaks better than the Original. He also translated into the said Language Procli Diadochi Sphaera. Venet. 1500 fol. Dedicated to Prince Arthur by a large Epist. or Praef. dat. at Lond. 6. cal. Sept. with other things, which you may see in Baleus and Pissem. This Dr. Lynacre died 20. Octob. in Fifteen hundred twenty and four, 1524. and was buried in the Cathedral of St. Paul within the City of London, before the Rood of the North Door, between the long Form and the Wall, directly against the said Rood. Over his Grave was afterwards a comely Monument, erected at the charge of that eminent Physician and Antiquary Dr. John Cay of Cambridge; out of the Epitaph of which I am instructed in these matters concerning Lynacre, viz. 'That he was a most skilful Critick in the Greek and Latin, and an excellent Physician besides, (being Physician to King Hen. 8.) who in his Generation did many miraculous Cures, and restored several to life when help was past, and even at the very point of death. He translated Galen's works out of Greek into Latin with singular perspicuity and clearness. He also compil'd a most excellent piece for the rectifying of the frame, and module of the Latin Tongue. He gave two Lectures to the University of Oxon, and one to Cambridge. — He was a perfect hater of all indirect, or fraudulent dealings, being sincerely faithful to his Friends, and well belov'd of all ranks and degrees of Men, &c. As for the two Physick Lectures, which he gave to the University of Oxon, I have largely mentioned (r) elsewhere, and upon what account they came to be settled in Merton Coll. and how the Readers, whether Superior or Inferior, are to read in the common Hall there to any

Those that have read the Superior Lecture, who are called the Superior Readers, and have received 12 l. per an. for their pains, have been these, (1) Rob. Barons or Barnes Fellow of Mert. 26. THOMAS NIGHTINGALE, who writes himself Philomelus, was born in London, and educated, if I mistake not, under Will. Lilye, before he taught in Pauls School, by whose endeavors he became excellent for the Latin Tongue and Poetry. Afterwards being sent to this University, he made proficiency in Logicals, Philosophicals, and the Civil Law. Which last being the faculty he was noted for, was admitted Bachelaur thereof in January 1515. Hence, he retired to his Native place, where for his wit and innocent mirth he was held in admiration by his contemporaries, especially for the things he published, as

De obitu Johannis Colet Carmen.

In mortem Gulielmi Liliæ Elegia. With other matters of the like nature, which I have not yet seen. He was in great esteem among Men, in the sixteenth Year of King Hen. 8. but when he died, I know not.

27. JOHAN. de COLORIBUS, by Birth an Outlander, by Profession a Black Friar, was a Reader of Divinity in this University several Years, in the Reign of K. Hen. 8. and proceeded in Divinity 1517. Afterwards he became a favourite of Cardinal Wolsey, by whose power he was appointed one of the learned Doctors of the University to write against Luther, and in 1525. he was by him promoted to be a Member of his new erected Coll. at Oxon, but in what capacity I know not. He hath written,

Tract. contra doctrinam M. Lutheri, an. 1521; with other things which I have not yet seen, written when he was in great esteem among the Oxonians in Fifteen hundred twenty and five, (17. of Hen. 8.) and after.

28. WILLIAM de MELTON was a Yorkshire Man born, as it seems, had part of his Education among the Oxonians, and at length being fam'd for his great knowledge in Philosophy, Divinity, and for his admirable way of Preaching, became Chancellor of the Cathedral Church at York, on the resignation of William Langton D. D. in the Month of January 1495, to which Office the Prebendary of Laghton in the said Church being annex'd, he was admitted thereunto by the Name of Will. Multon 15. Jul. 1498. This Person whom some call (k) Gul. Melitona, report withal, that he was Chancellor of Paris, and by Order a Dominican, but how true it is (seeing that Baleus (l) mentions no such thing) I cannot yet discern. His writings are,

Comment. in Epist. ad Hebræos. MS. in the said Library; the beginning of which is Narrabo nomen tuum, &c.

Sermones in Evangelia.

Com. in Pentateuchum, with other things mentioned by (*) Baleus. He concluded his last day in the latter end of the Year Fifteen hundred twenty and eight, and was buried either in the Cathedral Church at York, or in the Church of Acklam (in which Town he made his Will 20. Aug. 1528.) whereupon his Chancellorship was bestowed on Hen. Trafford a Licentiat in Divinity, in Feb. the same Year.

JOHN SKELTON the eminent Poet of his time, was originally, if not nearly, descended from the Skeltons of Cumberland; and having been educated in this University, as Job. Baleus (n) attests, who styles him Oxonii Poeta laureatus, became highly renowned among Men for his Poetry and Philology. Afterwards taking holy Orders, he was made Rector of Dyse in Norfolk, where, and in the Diocess, he was esteemed more fit for the Stage, than the Pew or Pulpit. The Reader is now to know that one John Skelton was made (o) Vicar of Dultyng in the Diocess of Bath and Wells an. 1512, upon the promotion of Hugh Ynge to the See of Meath in Ireland; where having continued some Years without a degree, (as some Chancellors, Archdeacons, nay Priors, Abbats, and Deans, have so done in their respective times and places) did retire to Oxon, study there with leave from his Diocesan, and in July 1518. (10. Hen. 8.) was (p) admitted to the extraordinary reading of any Book of the Decretals, that is to the degree of Bach. of Decrees, which some call the Canon Law. The next Year I (q) find him to be made Rector of Westquamtoked in the said Diocess, by the Name and Title of John Skelton Bach. of Decrees, and in 1525. Rector (r) of Clotwortley there. But this Job. Skelton I cannot take to be the same with him that was the Poet and Rector of Dyse; who having been guilty of certain crimes, (as most Poets are) at least not agreeable to his coat, fell under the heavy censure of Rich. Nykke Bishop of Norwich his Diocesan; especially for his scoffs and ill language against the Monks and Dominicans in his Writings. In which also, reflecting on the actions of Cardinal Wolsey, he was so closely pursued by his Officers, that he was forced to take Sanctuary at Westminster, where he was kindly entertained by John Islipp the Abbat, and continued there to the time of his Death. Erasmus in an Epistle to King Hen. 8. doth stile this Poet Britannicarum Litterarum lumen & decus, and of the like opinion were many of his time; yet the generality said, that his witty discourses were biting, his laughter opprobrious and scornful, and his jokes commonly sharp and reflecting. He hath written, besides translations, 50 several things upon various Subjects, as well in Prose as Verse, among which are these.

Elynor Rummin (or Elynour of Rummyng) the famous Ale-Wife of England — This was several times Printed, and one Impression, which was the last I think, was made at London 1624. in 2 Sheets and an half in 4to. In the Title Page is the Picture of an old ill-favour'd Woman, holding in her hand a black Pot of Ale, and underneath her these Verses are written,

When Skelton wore the Laurel Crown,

My Ale put all the Ale-Wives down.

This Book is the same, I conceive, which some Authors call The tunning of Elynor Rumpkin. He hath also written,

The Peregrination of humane Life.

Solitary Sonnets.

The art of Dying well.

Epitaphs on several Kings, Princes, and Nobles — Two or more of which you may see in a Book intit. Reges, Regina, Nobiles & alii in Eccl. collegiata B. Petri Westmonast. sepulti, usque ad an. 1600. published by Will. Camden — Lond. 1600. qu. See more in Will. Baldewyn among these Writers under the Year 1564. I have seen another Book of Skelton bearing this title.

Here after followeth a little Boke called Colyn-Clout, compiled by Master Skelton Poet Laureate — Printed in an old Engl. Char. at London in 800 without date, by Abraham Veale, much about the time, as I conceive, of the Authors death. The beginning of it is,

*What can it availe
To drive forth a snayle
Or to make a Sayle, &c.*

Poetical Fancies and Satyrs. Lond. 1512. oct.

Verses on the creation of Arthur Pr. of Wales — and other things which are slightly and unsatisfactorily set down by Baleus and his follower Pissens. At length, our Poet dying in his Sanctuary, was buried in the Chancel of the Church of St. Margaret within the City of Westminster, in Fifteen hundred twenty and nine. (21. Hen 8.) Over his Grave was this Inscription soon after put. Jobannes Skeltonus Vates pierius hic situs est. Animam egit (ejicit) XXI Junii an. Dom. MDXXIX. Near to his Body was afterwards buried an old Court-Poet called Tho. Churchyard, and not in the Church Porch, as certain old Rhimes tell you, beginning thus.

*Come Alecco, and lend me thy torch,
To find a Church-yard in a Church-porch.*

I find another Job. Skelton, who lived in the time of King Hen. 4. but he was a D. of D. and a Dominican (as I (n) have elsewhere told you) and therefore I conceive it the reason why Baleus stileth (o) this Poet Dr. of Divinity, which no other Author beside himself doth. Another Job. Skelton I find, who was confirmed Abbat of Whiby in Yorkshire (upon the Death of Tho. Bolton) by the Archb. of York, 6. Nov. 1413.

30. THOMAS SPENSER Son of Leonard Spenser of the City of Norwich, having from his Youth been much addicted to learning and piety, especially the last, became afterwards a Carthusian in the Monastery of that Order at Henton in Somersetshire; whence for a time he receded to Oxon, (as several of his Order did) to improve himself, or to pass a course, in Theology. After his return he obtained so much leisure from his divine exercise, as to (p) write several matters relating to his faculty; among which were,

Comment. in Epist. D. Pauli ad Galatas.

Dialogue between Tho. Bilney, Hugh Latimer, and W. Repps. — Which Book was written partly to shew the great complaints of Bilney and Latimer two Protestants, had against the said Repps a Roman Catholick, the same Person, I presume, who became Bishop of Norwich, in 1536: As for our Author Spenser, he gave up the ghost (after he had spent most of his time in the severities belonging to his Order) in Fifteen hundred twenty and nine, and was buried in his Monastery of Henton before-mentioned, leaving behind him a most rare example of Piety.

31. ROBERT WHITYNTON or Whittington was born in the City of Lichfield, educated partly in Grammaticals under John Stanbridge in the School joining to the common gate of Magd. Coll. and afterwards made a considerable progress in Logicals and Philosophicals, but in what Coll. or Hall, it appears not. However his delight being much in the teaching of Youth, he became so excellent in that way, that it was thought, especially by those that favour'd him, that he surpassed W. Lilye. In the beginning of the Year 1513. (5. Hen. 8.) he (q) supplicated the venerable Congregation of Regents, under the name and title of Rob. Whytingdon a secular Chaplain, and a Scholar of the Art of Rhetorick, that whereas he had spent 14

Years in the study of the said Art, and 12 Years in the informing of Boys, it might be sufficient for him that he might be laureated. This supplicat being granted, he was (after he had composed 100 Verses, which were stuck up in publick places, especially on the door or doors of St. Maryes Church) very solemnly crowned, or his temples adorned, with a wreath of Lawrel, that is doctorated in the Arts of Grammar and Rhetorick 4. July the same Year. At the same time also he was admitted to the reading of any of the Logical Books of Aristotle, that is to the degree of Bach. of Arts, which was then esteemed equal with the degree of Doctor of Grammar, or Rhetorick. From that time he always wrot himself in several of his works Protovates Anglie, which was much stomach'd by Will. Horman and W. Lilye, and scorn'd by others of his profession, who knew him to be conceited, and to set an high value upon himself, more than he should have done. He was then notwithstanding esteemed by many for his great skill he had in the Greek and Latin tongues, for his lepid and jocular discourse also, but much blamed by Scholars for the biting and sharp reflections used in it, and in his Books against several noted Persons of his Age. His writings were many, of which some were against W. Lilye, Rob. Aldridge, and Will. Horman, who esteemed him a Man of great vanities, a Catalogue of some of which follow.

ROBERT SHIRWODE received his first breath in the City of Coventry, whence being translated to the University of Oxon, made a considerable progress in Logicals, but more by far in the Hebrew and Greek Languages. Thence, in his mature Years, he went to Lovaine in Brabant, where about the Year 1519. he (a) succeeded Rob. Wakfeld an English Man in the reading the Hebrew Lecture to the Academians of that place. But he reading there only for a Month, went to other Univer-

In the title of which Book he is not stiled Doctor, and therefore I presume he had that degree conferred on him after that time, but in what University, I cannot yet tell. Job. (b) Balens and his follower (c) Pisens do stile him Doctur Oxoniensis, but the truth is, in all my researches, I cannot find that he took that degree there, unless under another name. He the said Dr. Shirewood hath also various Sermons extant, as those Authors report, who also tell us that he was in high esteem among learned Men in Fifteen hundred and thirty, but when he died, or where he was buried, I am altogether as yet ignorant.

33. JOHN SKUISH a Cornish Man born, was conversant for a time among the Oxonian Mules, either in Exeter Coll. or in Hart Hall, but whether he took a degree, it appears not. However by the help of an happy Genie, accompanied with industry, prudence, and dexterity, he obtained a Name among Men, and was held in great esteem by several of the Nobility for his proficiency in various sorts of Learning. At length being received into the Family of the great Cardinal Thomas Wolfey, was by him entrusted with many matters of consequence. All which he performing with singular fidelity, was made one of his Cabinet Council, and by him promoted to places of trust. At leisure times he improved his natural Genie by the reading of Histories, as well Ancient as Modern; which at length being made easie to him by the help of a good memory composed (d) several little Books, as,

Chronicorum Epitome, in one Book.

Clar.
1530. De bello Trojano, lib. 1. and, as 'tis probable, other things in the time of Hen. 8. and before and after the said Cardinal's fall. The time when he surrendered up his last breath is yet unknown, as also the place of his Sepulture.

34. SIMON FISH, a zealous Man for the Reformation of abuses in the Church, was born in Kent, and after he had been instructed in Academical Learning, he retired to Greys Inn in Holbourn to obtain knowledge in the municipal Law. About which time one Mr. Roe or Roe, having composed a Play, wherein one part deeply reflected on Cardinal Wolfey, he undertook, when divers refused, to act it: For which being soon after forced to leave the Nation, he found out Will. Tyndale in Germany, with whom for a time he sojourned himself. In 1527, or thereabouts, he made a little Book entit.

The supplication of Beggars — The beginning of which is, Most lamentably complaineth their woful misery, &c. It containeth a great deal of bitter stuff against Bishops, Abbats, Priors, Monks, Fryers, &c. and indeed against the generality of the Clergy. In 1528, a Copy of it was sent to the Lady Anne Bulleyne; which, after perusal, she gave it to the King, who did not dislike it, and soon after were divers Copies scattered in London streets, which was complained of by the Cardinal to the said King. Afterwards the Cardinal being out of favor, the Author Fish was sent for home, and graciously countenanced by the King for what he had done. About which time he translated from Dutch into English, The summe of the Scriptures, which was also published and well approved. At length being overtaken by the Pest, died of it in Fifteen hundred thirty and one, and was buried in the Church of St. Dunstan (in the West). Afterwards James Baynham, Son of Sir Alex. Baynham of Glostershire Knight, Married his Widow; which James being a zealous Protestant, suffered death soon after in the Flamines, as you may see in the Acts and Mon. of the Church, written by Jo. Fox.

35. JOHN BATMANSON, a Person most noted while living, for his great Piety and Learning, did, after he had been instructed in Sophistry, enter into the most holy Order of the Carthusians, abiding in the House commonly called the Charter-house near to London. In his elder Years he became the Head or Prior of that House, and about that time, or rather before, was conversant in the Theological faculty with us, but whether he took a degree therein, (tho supplicate he did to oppose in Divinity) it appears not. This Person being intimate with Dr. Edw. Lee, afterwards Archbishop of Tork, did, at his intreaty, write,

Of the contempt of the World.

De Christo duodeni, a Homily. — Other things he hath written which Jo. (e) Balens and Theod. (f) Petreus do mention; the last of which saith that he died 16. Nov. in Fifteen hundred thirty and one, and that he was buried in the Chappel belonging to the Charter-house. John Houghton Prior of Beauvale in Nottinghamshire, sometimes a Carthusian of the said House, was elected Prior in his place, and about 4 Years after suffered death by hanging for denying the Kings Supremacy.

RICHARD KEDERMYSER, a Worcestershire Man born, taking his Sirname, as I conceive, from a Mercat Town so called in that County, was at 15 Years of Age received into the Monastery of Benedictines at Winchcombe in Glostershire, and at 19 sent to Gloster Coll. in the N. W. suburb of Oxon. to obtain Theological and other Learning, (in which College was an apartment belonging to the said Monastery, called Winchcombe Lodging) where spending three Years and an half, was sent for home, at which time being about 22 Years of Age; he was by the favour of his Patron and fautor of his Studies John Twynnyng Lord Abbat, and by the Decree of the Chapter, of the said Monastery of Winchcombe, made Scholar or Pastor thereof. In the 3. of Hen. 7. Dom. 1487. he was elected Lord Abbat on the Death of the said Twynnyng, and how he made it flourish like to a little University, you may see elsewhere (g). In the Year 1500, being then D. D. he travelled to Rome, where tarrying more than a Year, did improve himself much in learning and experience. Afterwards he became a frequent Preacher, and a great Man in the Court of King Hen. 8. In the seventh Year of that King, Dom. 1515. he Preached a Sermon at Paul's cross, while the Parliament sate, in maintenance of the exemption of the Clergy from temporal Judges: At which time were great agitations between the Clergy and Seculars concerning divers ecclesiastical liberties: whereupon (h) arising a great dispute between those Parties, one Dr. Hen. Standish Guardian of the Convent of the Franciscans in London, did, in an Assembly of Bishops, Judges, and others, maintain the contrary. Soon after there was a grand Committee of Bishops and Judges in the House of the Black-Fryers in London assembled, to discuss that matter; which being ended, Articles were exhibited against the said Standish for being a promoter of all evils. Many other things may be said of our Author Kedermysier, as they were noted by himself in his Life, written in the History or Catalogue of the Abbats of Winchcombe; (which History I shall anon mention) but that Book being burnt, and when I saw it, I did not in the least dream that I should write these Athena Oxonienses, they are therefore here omitted. The Books that he wrote are these.

Tractatus contra doctrinam M. Lutheri. Finished in the Year 1521. See in Hist. & Ant. Univ. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 247, and lib. 2. p. 35. a. wherein is mention made of his Book De venis, which, I presume, is the same with that against Luther. I have also seen a register sometime belonging to Winchcombe Abbey, which was totally composed by our Author, an. 1523. containing first,

The beginning of the Preface to which is, Quoniam antiqua testimonia de primis nostri Winchelcombenfis canonicis institutionibus, &c. Which Preface, with part of the History, you may see in the first Vol. of Monasticon Anglicanum. p. 188. And secondly,

Catalogus, vel Historia Abbatum Monast. de Winchcomb in com. Glouc. This Cat. or History commences from one German, who was appointed Abbat of Winchcombe by S. Oswald Bishop of Worcester, in the 7 Year of K. Edgar, an. Dom. 988. and reaches down to the Author Rich. Kedermyser. In the said Register also (which contains these matters) lib. 1. fol. xi. is set down at large the story of the Life of St. Patrick, and of the antiquity of Glastenbury Abbey, which you may see in Monast. Anglie. vol. 1. p. 11. Altera Renovatio privilegiorum, chartarum, ac aliorum munimentorum Monasterii de Winchcomb, &c. This Register of Winchcombe, (in which these things are) containing at least 4 Books, or Parts, came after the dissolution of the Abbey there, into obscure hands. At length it being produced by an ordinary Farmer at an Assize held at Gloucester, for the proof of some matter then in question, at which Sir Will. Adorton Lord of the site of Winchcombe Abbey was present; he, by some device got it out of the Farmers hands, as belonging more properly to him, and kept it sometimes in his House at Kidlington in Oxfordshire, and sometimes in his Lodgings at Serjeants Inn in Fleetstreet London. But so it was, that the said Sir William, (who was one of the Justices of the Kings Bench) being in his Norfolk Circuit at what time the dreadful conflagration of London hapned (which was Sept. 2. 3. &c. 1666.) the said Book, with other of his goods, and the Inn it self was totally consumed to ashes. Whether there be any other Copy left, I am not certain: sure it is, that Dr. Sam. Fell of Ch. Ch. in Oxon. had a Copy of it (written either in Vellum or Parchment) about 1630, as by some notes taken thence (as then remaining in his custody) which I have seen, doth manifestly appear; but from whence he had it, or to whom it did afterwards return (for I think he borrowed it) I know not. Sir Will. Moreton also shew'd to me in his House at Kidlington several extracts made from that Copy which was sometimes in his hands, written by one of his Clerks, but, in many material things, false. Which extracts, I presume, are in the hands of his Son Sir James Moreton. As for our learned and curious Author Rich. Kedermyser, he gave way to fate, to the great reluctancy of all that knew the virtue and piety of the Man, in Fifteen hundred thirty and one, or thereabouts; and was buried in his own Church of Winchcombe Abbey: On which Church, he had before done great cost, and inclosed (i) the Abbey it self towards the Town with a main stone Wall, ex quadrato saxo.

1531. 37. RICHARD PAICE Pace or Pacey, so many ways I find him written, was one of the lights of learning in his time, and therefore commended (k) by Erasmus, (who among several things that he saith of him is, that he was utrinque literatura callentissimus) and all other Heroes of learning in that Age. When he was a Boy he became a manu Minister (as he himself (l) saith) to Tho. Langton Bishop of Winchester, and was trained up at School, with others, at his charge: Which Bishop also perceiving him to profit in Musick above his Years (for those under his patronage did learn, if capable, that faculty also) did often express to his Attendants about him, that seeing he did overcome Musick easily, his Genie therefore was born to greater Studies. In short time after, he sent him to Padua in Italy (which was then most flourishing in literature) to obtain, or rather advance himself in, good letters, and allowed him an yearly Pension to defray his Charges. While he was conversant with the Muses there, he was much instructed in his Studies by Cusbb. Tomstall, and Will. Latymer, whom he calls his Præceptores; and whether he took a Degree there, I find not. After his return into England, he retired to Oxon (where, as I conceive, he had studied for some time before he travelled) and settled for a time, as 'tis supposed, in Queens

Coll. (of which his Patron T. Langton had been Provost) and soon after was received into the service of Dr. (afterward Cardinal) Christopher Bainbridge, who succeeded his said Patron in that Provostship; as I have elsewhere (m) told you. From the service of the said Cardinal, he was received into the Royal Court, where his parts being soon discovered, and his accomplishments made known to the King, was by him made Secretary of State, and employed in matters of high concern. In the beginning of 1514, he was admitted Probendary of Bugsborge in the Church of York, in the place of Thom. Wolsey, consecrated Bishop of Linc. and on the 20. of May the same Year, he was made Archdeacon of Dorset, upon the resignation of Dr. Rob. Langton sometimes of Queens Coll. in this University. Afterwards he was sent in one or more Embassies by the King, which he performed with very great honor to himself and the English Nation. In 1519, he became Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral within the City of London, on the Death of Dr. Job. Colet, and about that time Dean of Exeter; but whether he was ever Dean of Salisbury it appeareth not. 'Tis true that Edward Lord Herbert of Cherbury doth say in the Life and Reign of King Hen. 8. (n) under the Year 1526. that Pet. Vannes then Archdeacon of Worcester, was not long before that time made co-adjutor to Rich. Pace Dean of Salisbury, being then thought commonly distracted and out of his Wits. But how that can be, I cannot find, for (1) it doth evidently appear from the Registers of that Church, that one Raymond Pade had that Deanery conferr'd upon him 19. Jan. 1522. (2) That in the said Registers no mention at all is made of R. Pace as Dean, and thirdly, that Pet. Vannes beforementioned became Dean of the said Church by virtue of the Kings Letters, on 3. Feb. 1529. in the place, as 'tis supposed, of the said Pade, at which time R. Pace had been dead 7 Years. In 1521, he being made Prebendary of Combe and Harnham in the said Church of Sarum, he shewed himself (*) serviceable to the University of Oxon; the Members of which, would then have had him to adorn their Lyceum with a degree, if certain customs belonging thereunto did not hinder him. Afterwards our Author Paice, who was then esteemed by all ripe in wit, learning, and eloquence, and very expert in Foreign Languages, was sent in the Kings Affairs Ambassador to Venice: which function there he so discharged, that it is hard to say, whether he procured more commendation or admiration among the Venetians, both for dexterity of his wit, and especially for the singular promptness in the Italian tongue, wherein he seemed nothing inferior, neither to Pet. Vannes here in England, the Kings Secretary for the Italian tongue, nor yet to any other, which were the best for that tongue in all Venice. For opinion and fame of learning he was so generally accepted, not only here in England with Lynacre, Grocin, Sir Tho. More and others, but also known and reported abroad in such manner, that in the great Volume of Erasmus his Epistles, he wrot almost to none so many, as he wrot to this our Author Paice. It must be now noted, that while he continued at Venice he grew much out of favour with Cardinal Wolsey, first for shewing his readiness to assist Charles Duke of Bourbon with Money, while the said Cardinal (who had little or no affection for that Duke) did under hand keep back a vast sum of Money, which K. Hen. 8. had sent to the said Duke to carry on his War near Pavia, against Francis 1. K. of France, and secondly for his negligence in advancing the said Cardinals designs to succeed in the Papacy P. Adrian the 6. who died 1523. I say for these two reasons especially, he was so much inflamed against Paice, that he forthwith took such causes, that for the space almost of two Years, he had neither writing from the King or Council how he should proceed in his Affairs at Venice, nor any allowance for his diet, notwithstanding he had sent Letters for the same to England very often. Upon this, and especially upon some private intimation from his Friends at home, he took such an inward thought and conceit that his wits began to fail him. It is (n) reported that the Venetian Ambassador residing in London repaired to the Cardinal, and desired to know of him, whether he would command any thing to the English Ambassador at Venice: Whereupon he made answer Paceus decipit Regem. Which words coming to Paice's knowledge, so deeply pierc'd his stomach, that he in a manner fell quite besides himself. Soon after his frensie, and the reason thereof, being made known to the King, he was forthwith sent for home, and by the Kings command he was so carefully attended by his Physicians, that in short time he came to his wits again, and began to study the Hebrew Language with Rob. Wakfeld. About that time the Cardinal being absent, Paice's Friends found such means, that he was brought to the King then residing at Richmond, where they had private discourse for two hours or more, not without great rejoycing to His Majesty, to see him so well amended in his senses. Afterwards the Cardinal hearing what had passed, and suspecting that he had disclosed somewhat to the King, which he would not have known, as also doubting the King would take Paice into favour again, began in short time after to quarrel, and to pick up matters to lay to Paice's charge; whereas he should have rather cleared himself of those things, which Paice laid unto him before the King, and then to have proceeded accordingly. But so it was, that when the King had willed the Cardinal to purge himself of those things, which Paice had rightly charged him withal, he sitting in judgment with the Duke of Norfolk, and other States of the Realm, not as a Defendant, but as a Judge in his own cause, did so bear out himself, and weighed down Paice, that he was forthwith commanded to the Tower of London as Prisoner; where he continuing for the space of two Years or thereabouts, was at length by the Kings command discharged. While he was in his disconsolate condition, he was so deeply sensible of his case, that he was more distracted in his wits than before, and so continued to his dying day, tho now and then, which was rarely, he would discourse very rationally. Some time before his Death, he resign'd up his Deaneries, viz. that of St. Paul, and that of Exeter, in the first of which succeeded, if I am not mistaken, Dr. Rich. Sampson, who was afterwards B. of Lichfield and Coventry, and in the other Reginald Pole. The Books which this our eminent Author hath written and translated are many, some of which, not all, follow.

De fructu qui ex doctrina percipitur liber. Basil. 1517. qu. dedicated to Dr. Jo. Coles Dean of Pauls. It was written by the Author at Constance, while he remained Ambassador in Helvetia. But therein inveighing much (as 'tis observed by (o) some) against drunkenness, as a great obstacle to the obtaining of knowledge, the Drunkards of Constance were so sensible of it, that they made a sharp answer to his Book, apologizing for themselves, and their customs in drinking.

In the writing of this piece, which is printed in quarto, he was assisted by Rob. Wakfeld.

Exemplum literarum ad Regem Hen. 8. an. 1526. See in the said Wakfelds Book entit. Syntagma de Hebraeorum codicum incorruptione. He also wrot a Book against the unlawfulness of the Kings Marriage with Catherine, the Wife of his Brother Prince Arthur, in 1527. in which Book he was also assisted by Wakfeld. Other things are mention'd by Baleus and Pitsens very tritely, and with little satisfaction to the Reader, (as they do all or most of the titles of Books belonging to the Writers, that they set down in their respective works) but such I have not yet seen. He hath also made several translations, among which is that from English into Latin of the Sermon of John Fisher B. of Rochester, which he Preached at London, on that day when the Writings of Martin Luther were publicly burnt, on Feb. 15. 26. — Printed at Cambr. in Feb. 1521. qu. Before which is a large Epistle to the Reader, written by one Nich. Wilson of the University of Cambridge. He also made a translation from Greek into Latin of Plutarch's work De commodo ex inimicis capiendis; dedicated to Card. Bainbridge. At length this most excellent Person, who was admirably well vers'd in the Greek and Hebrew Tongues, in all kind of polite literature, and in civil Affairs, retiring to Stepney near London for healths sake, concluded his last day there, to the great reluctancy of all learned Men, in Fifteen hundred thirty and two, being then scarce 50 Years of Age: Whereupon his body was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, near to the great Altar, and had soon after an Epitaph put over his Grave, consisting of 12 Verses, which for brevity sake, I shall now pass by, as also that admirable and just encomium (p) which Jo. Leland his Friend made on his return from Venice. I find one John Pace, who, from Eaton School, was elected Scholar of Kings Coll. in Cambridge. 1529. or thereabouts, went away Fellow, became Jester to K. Hen. 8. for a time, and afterwards to the Duke of Norfolk, but what relation he had to Rich. Paice our learned Author, who, if I mistake not, was born at, or near, Winchester, I know not.

38. THOMAS LUPSET Son of Will. Lupset Citizen and Goldsmith of London, by Alice his Wife, was born in London, particularly in the Parish of St. Mildrid in Breadstreet, (where the Father lived when Thomas was born, but lived in his last days, and died in 1522, in the Parish of St. Vedastus in Cheep) taken into the care and protection of Dr. Job. Colet, and educated in Grammar learning under Will. Lilye; which is the reason why the said Doctor calls him in his last Will, his Scholar. But whether from W. Lilyes School he went to this University, or to that of Cambridge, is doubtful. Dr. Jo. Cay the (r) Antiquary doth tell you that he was educated in Pembroke Hall there, (tho Bale and Pits are silent in it) but what his Authority is for that report, he tells us not. Howsoever it is, sure I am, and shall be, till I am convinc'd to the contrary, that he took the Degree of Bac. of Arts at Paris, and soon after coming into England, he fixed in the University of Oxon, particularly in Corp. Chr. Coll. about the Year 1519, and soon after he succeeded Jo. Clement in the Rhetorick Lecture of Card. Wolsey. To which Cardinal, the University having had occasion to write, make this mention of our Author Lupset in an (u) Epistle dated 7. Id. May, 1521. — Nam immortalis beneficii loco accepimus, quod benignissima tua beneficentia in communem rei literariae usum dignata sit Lupsetum ad nos remittere, quem etsi semper habuimus charissimum, nunc tamen quia à tua maiestate tam amanter commendatum, multis artius amplectimur. Illud autem supra quam credi potest nos omnes exbileraverit, quod prudentissima tua auctoritas ex omnium animis abstulerit scrupulos quibus anxie alligabimur ordinariis lectionibus, quas jam prorsus extraordinarias utinam tua prudentia vel penitus ab omni ordine abigeret, vel in meliorem redigeret, &c. Sir Tho. More also in an Epist. to Erasmus, doth make (s) honourable mention of him, and his reading in both the Tongues at Oxon. But Lupset's desire being bent to proceed in Arts, he supplicated (n) the venerable Regents met in Congregation 2. June 1521. that whereas he had spent four Years in Study at Paris and in Oxon, it might be sufficient for him that he might be admitted to proceed in the faculty of Arts. Which supplication of his being granted, he was licensed to proceed on the 19. of the same Month, and on the 9. July following, he did really stand in the Act then celebrated. Afterwards he became famous in this University, and other places of Literature, (especially after he had performed the Office of Secretary to Rich. Paice, when he was Ambassador to the Venetian) and by his conversation with eminent Men, did make great progress in Sciences. He hath written,

(o) Baleus & Pitsens, &c.

A Treatise teaching how to dye well. — These three little Books were printed at London, 1546. and 1560. in 8vo. He hath also translated into English, (1) St. Chrysostomes Sermon (or Homely) teaching that no Man is hurt but by himself. (2) Sermon of St. Cyprian of the mortality of Man. (3) Picus Earl of Mirandula his rules of a godly life. (4) The gathered Councils of Isidore. Which four translations were printed at Lond. 1560. in 8vo. He hath also written,

Lee* (Archb. of York) were written in behalf of Erasmus, (between whom and the said Lee were learned bickerings) and are printed in a Book entit. Epistolæ aliquot eruditum virorum, ex quibus perspicuum, quanta sit Edwardi Lei virulentia. Basil. 1520. qu. Decemb. in Fifteen hundred thirty and two, aged 36 or thereabouts, (having two Years before been admitted Prebendary of Roscombe in the Church of Salisbury, on the Death of John Fox Archdeacon of Winchester) and was buried in the Church of St. Alphagbe or Elphagbe within Cripplegate in London. (which Church was translated afterwards, to the Church now called St. Alphagbe by Sion Coll.) Over his Grave, tho there be no memory of him by Inscription, yet Job. Leland celebrates him in his Encomia, Trophæa, &c. Near to his Grave was the body of Alice Lupset his Widow, buried in 1545.

Bourcier* Knight, Lord Berners of Hertfordshire, the fourth Son of William Earl of Ewe, by Anne his Wife, Daughter of Tho. de Wodestock Duke of Glocester, the sixth Son of K. Edw. 3. was instructed in several sorts of learning in this University in the latter end of K. Edw. 4.; in whose Reign and before, were the Sons of divers of the English Nobility, educated in Academical literature in Balliol Coll. wherein, as 'tis probable, this our Author was instructed also. After he had left the University, he travelled into divers Countries, and returned a Master of several Languages and a compleat Gentleman. But that which made him first known to the World, was his valour shew'd in quelling the fury of the Rebels in Cornwall and Devon, under the conduct of Michael Joseph a Blacksmith, about 1495, whereby he greatly gained the favor of K. Hen. 7. In the 6. Hen. 8. he was made (*) Chancellor of the Kings Exchequer for life, and about that time attended the Lady Mary, (the Kings Sister) into France, in order to her Marriage with K. Lewis 12. Afterwards being made Lieutenant of Calais, and the Marches adjoining, in France, spent most of his time there, and wrot,

Of the duties of the Inhabitants of Calais.

He also translated into English (1) The life of Sir Arthur an Armoric Knight (2) The famous exploits of Hugh of Bordeaux. (3) The castle of Love, a Romance: And besides something of Marc. Aur. Ant. must not be forgotten that noted translation of his, which he performed at the command of K. Hen. 8. viz. The Chronicles of France and England, composed originally in the French Tongue by Sir Job. Frofard Canon and Treasurer of Chinay, Clerk and Servant to K. Edw. 3. as also to Queen Philippa. These Chronicles have been more than once, if I mistake not, printed in English, in an English Letter, in fol. This worthy Lord Sir Job. Bourcier died (a) at Calais beforemention'd 1533. 16. March in Fifteen hundred thirty and two, aged 63 or thereabouts. Whereupon his body was buried in the Parish Church of our Lady there; where was, if not still, a comely Mon. over his Grave.

ram in the said County) and educated in Kings Coll. in Cambridge till he was Bachelaur of Arts. Afterwards being incited to go to Oxon for preferment, was for his towardly parts made one of the junior Canons of Cardinal Wolsey's College, and soon after, viz. in Dec. 1525. he was with other Cantabrigians incorporated in the same degree of Bachelaur. But before that time falling into the acquaintance of Will. Tyndale a zealous Lutheran, they conferred together privately about the abuses in Religion: So that in short time after he being by him converted to his opinion, Fryth made a publick profession of it. Whereupon being seized and examined by the Commissary of the University, he was imprisoned within the limits of the said College. At length being freed thence, in 1528, or thereabouts, he went beyond the Seas, where improving himself much in his religious opinions, returned into England about two Years after, leaving his Wife behind. But then again finding few Friends there that favoured his opinions, he wandred to and fro; and in fine, was taken for a Vagabond at Reading in Berks. set in the Stocks, and endured misery for want of relief. At that time his condition being made known to Leonard Cox the Schoolmaster of that Town, who presently understood the merits of the Person by his discourse, procured his releasment, refreshed his hungry stomach, and gave him money. Afterwards he went to London, where endeavouring to gain Profelytes, he was by the care of Sir Tho. More Lord Chancellor, seized and sent Prisoner to the Tower, where he had several disputes with Sir Tho. and others. At length being examined by the Bishops sitting in St. Pauls Cath. who perswaded him to recant his opinions but in vain, they condemned him to be burnt. So that being delivered to the L. Mayor and Sheriffs, was committed to Newgate, where he remained in the Dungeon till he was conveyed thence to be burnt. His works are,

JOHN ROPER born in Berks. in the Dioc. of Salisbury, was first a Semicommoner or Demy of Magd. Coll. and afterwards being M. of A. was admitted perpetual Fellow of that House, in 1483. When he was some Years standing in that degree, he was made Reader of Philosophy, and when Bach. of Divinity, Reader of the Sentences, or Divinity, in the said College. In 1502, he was confirmed Margaret Professor by the Foundrels of that Lecture, was afterwards Vicar of St. Maries Church in Oxon, Principal of Salisbury, and George Hall in that Parish,

Parish, Doctor of Divinity, Canon of the Coll. founded by K. Hen. 8. (now Ch. Ch.) in Oxon, to which he was admitted 1532, and Rector of Witney Church in Oxfordshire. This Person who was esteemed one of the eminent Theologists of this University, was appointed by the King in 1521. to write, 1534. Tract. contra Doctrinam Mart. Lutheri. Which, whether ever printed, I know not. He was a zealous Enemy against the Kings divorce from Queen Catherine, in the Year 1530, but did not dare to write openly, or publish any thing against it, tho Preach he did. This learned Person died in the Month of May, in Fifteen hundred thirty and four, and was, as I conceive, buried in Magd. Coll. Chappel.

42. JOHN ALLEN had his first Academical Education in this University, whence going to Cambridge, was there made M. of Arts, as 'tis said, tho I rather think Bach. of the Laws. Afterwards he was sent to the Pope at Rome, by Dr. Warham Archb. of Canterbury, about certain matters relating to the Church, where remaining about 9 Years, was in that time created Doctor of the Laws, either there, or in an University in Italy. After his return he became Chaplain to Cardinal Wolsey, who knew him, as I conceive, while he was in Oxon, was Judge of his Court as he was Legat à latere, (but in that Office he was thought to be a perjurd and wicked Person) and assisted him in visiting first, and afterwards in that great matter of dissolving, 40 little Monasteries at least, for the erection of his Coll. at Oxon, and that at Ipswich. In the latter end of the Year 1525, he was incorporated LL. Dr. of this University, on the 13. March 1528. he was consecrated Archb. of Dublin, and about that time was made Chancellor of Ireland. He hath Written, Epistola de Pallii significatione activa & passiva. Penn'd by him when he received the Pall to be Archbishop.

1534. De consuetudinibus ac statutis in iudiciis causis observandis. Besides other things concerning the Church. At length being taken in a time of rebellion by Tho. Fitz-Gerald or Gerald, eldest Son to the Earl of Kildare, was by his command most cruelly (b) murder'd, by being brain'd like an Ox, at Tartaine in Ireland, 28. Jul. in Fifteen hundred thirty and four, aged 58. The whole story of which, several of the Irish Chronicles will tell you. See more among the Bishops under the Year 1534.

43. WILLIAM HORMAN was born within the City of Salisbury, educated in Grammar learning in Wykeham's School near Winchester, made true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. in 1477. which place he resigning in 1485, (being then M. of A.) he became Schoolmaster and Fellow of Eaton Coll. near Windsor, and at length Vice-provost of the same College. In which place spending many Years in a pleasant retirement, became one of the most general Scholars of his time, as may appear by the diffusiveness of his Learning, and Books written in all faculties. All the Academical Education that he received was in the University of Oxon, where he also took the Degrees in Divinity: So that whereas Job. (c) Baleus and Jo. (d) Pitscus say that he was of Kings Coll. in Cambridge, is false, being led, I presume, into that error, from one Godfrey Harman a Cantabrigian; who, from being a Junior Canon of Cardinal Coll. in Oxon, was made Fellow of Eaton Coll. beforemention'd, where he died and was buried in 1533. As for our Author Will. Horman he hath written many things, of which I can only give you an account of some, as they follow.

Antibossicon ad Gul. Liliu. Lond. 1521. qu.

Apologeticon contra Rob. Whittingtoni Protovatis Anglie incivilem indoctamque criminationem. Lond. 1521. qu. part. 2. Before the said two Books is printed from a Wooden Cut the Picture of a Bear baited by six Dogs, and at the end is some of Whittington's poetry taken in pieces by Horman, and by him severely answer'd.

Vulgaria puerorum, &c. They are elegant sentences written in English and Latin, and dedicated to Will. Atwater Bishop of Lincoln.

Elegia in mort. Gul. Lili.

Anatomia membrorum hominis. In one Book.

Anatomia corporis humani. In two Books. The titles of the rest you may see in Jo. (e) Baleus; and therefore, I can say no more of our Author Horman, than this, that he paid his last debt to nature on the 12. Apr. in Fifteen hundred thirty and five, and was buried in the Chappel of Eaton Coll. beforemention'd. Over his Grave are certain Verses engraven on a brass plate, the two first of which run thus.

Hæc Hormannus humo requiescit amice viator,

Pene annos numerant lustra vicena suos.

The rest you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 135.

44. THOMAS MORE one of the greatest prodigies of Wit and Learning that this Nation ever before his time produced, Son of Sir Job. More Knight, one of the Justices of the Kings Bench, was born in Milk-street within the City of London, an. 1480. trained up in Grammar learning in St. Anthones School there, and afterwards received into the Family of Card. Job. Moreton Archb. of Canterbury, merely for the towardliness of his Person, and the great hopes that the pregnancy of his parts then promised. About the Year 1497. 'tis said by some late Authors (f) that that worthy Cardinal did send him to Canterbury College in Oxon, to obtain Academical Learning, but upon what grounds they report so, it appears not. Miles Windore (whom I shall mention among these Writers under the Year 1624.) who came to the University of Oxon, in the time of Queen Mary, doth (g) tell us more than once that he had his Chamber, and studied in the Hall of St. Mary the Virgin, and constant tradition doth say the like, and 'twas never reported to the contrary, before those two Authors here cited (Tho. More and J. H.) published their respective Books. What continuance Sir Tho. made in Oxon, or whether he took a Degree, it appears not, neither can we find means to resolve us, because the University Registers of that Age are deficient. However, this is certain, that at what time our Author studied in this University, Grocynus read publicly the Greek Tongue there; whom, he constantly hearing, became a great proficient in that Language, and other sorts of Learning by the helps of Lynacre his Tutor; then, if I mistake not, Fellow of Allsouls Coll. From Oxon he removed to an Inn of Chancery at London called New Inn, where continuing for a time according to the manner and custom of those that intended to make a proficiency in the municipal Laws, translated himself to Lincolns Inn, where easily conquering those Studies, was at length called to the Bar. Afterwards growing into great favour with K. Hen. 8. who highly valued him for his Learning, Wisdom, Experience, and extraordinary gifts of nature that he was endowed with, conferr'd these honors and employments successively upon him, viz. the Mastership of the Requests, the intrusting him in several Embassies, the honor of Knighthood, the Treasureship of the Exchequer, Chancellorship of the Duchy of Lancaster, the Embassage to the Emperor and French King, and at length upon the removal of Cardinal Wolsey, had the great Seal delivered to him 25. Oct. 21. Hen. 8. and then also declared High Chancellor of England; in which last office no Person ever before did carry himself more uprightly, or with greater liking to the generality of People, than he. On the 16. May 24. Hen. 8. he delivered up the great Seal to the King at his Mannour House called York-place near Westminster, in the presence of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, upon the foresight of some evil matters that were like to come to pass, and on the 20. of the same Month the said Seal was delivered by the King, in his Mannour of Pleasaunce, otherwise called East-Greenwyche to Sir Thomas Audley Knight. After this, Sir Thomas retired to his House (h) at Chelsey near

London,

London, where continuing for a time in the enjoyment of his Muse, not without severe devotion, was at length, for not acknowledging the King's Supremacy over the Church of England, committed Prisoner to the Tower of London; where remaining several Months very close, to the endangering of his health, his Daughter Margaret, Wife of William Roper of Tenham and Eltham in Kent, wrote a Letter to Thomas Cromwell chief Secretary of State, (the contents of which I have (i) seen) intreating him to be good to her Father in Prison, kept so close that his health is utterly decayed. Another also I have seen from Dame Alice More his Wife to the aforesaid Cromwell, beseeching him to be good to her poor old Husband, whose close keeping destroys his body. Also to be good to her and hers, considering their necessity — 'For my good Master (saith she) as I would be saved before our Lord, I am driven to that point, that I am fain to make sale of certain employments and old stuff to find Mr. More, and me, and my poor household with, &c. with other like matters written by that whining Woman, which I shall now for brevity omit, and only at present tell the Reader that no Man was more patient, pious, and severe in the course of his life than he. He was also very meek, humble, charitable, and a despiser of the things of this World, and nothing was wanting in him to make a compleat Christian. His parts were great and profound, his skill in Divinity, municipal Laws, the Latin and Greek Languages, in Poësie, Mathematicks and what not, was excellent and without compare. All which endowments made him not only beloved of Kings and Nobles, but of the lights of Learning of his time, as Erasmus, Colet, Tonsil B. of Durham, Fisher B. of Rochester, Grocyn, Lynacre, Lilye, Paice, Elyot, Lupset, Leland, &c. most of which, especially Foreign Writers, have celebrated his Memory in their respective Works, and all ingenious Scholars at this time bear a great respect to his Name and Lucubrations. He hath written in English,

A merry jest how a Sergeant would learn to play a Fryer. — Written in Verse.

Verles on a hanging of a painted Cloth in his Fathers Houle. — Containing 9 Pagiants, and Verles in each.

Lamentation on the Death of Elizabeth Wife of King Hen. 7. An. 1503.

Verles on the Book of Fortune.

These four foregoing, being written in his Youth, are not numbred among his Works.

History of K. Rich. 3. — This, which was never quite finished, is the same, I presume, that is intituled The tragical History of K. Rich. 3. printed under Sir Thom. More's Name at London 1651. in 8vo. His Great Grandson (k) saith, that he did not only write elegantly the Life of Rich. 3. in English, (which is abroad in print tho corrupted and vitiated) but in Latin also, not yet printed.

Memorare novissima.

Dialogue concerning Heresies and matters of Religion.

Supplication of Souls, made against the supplication of Beggars. — This is sometimes called The supplication of Purgatory, written against that of Beggars, made by Sim. Fish of Greys Inn Gent.

Letter to his Lady his Wife.

Certain Letters written by him, after he had given over the Office of Lord Chancellor.

Certain Letters written by him while he was Prisoner in the Tower. — All which treatises were collected and printed in one Vol. at London, an. 1557. fol. Among them are,

A godly instruction — written in Lat.

His Epitaph — In Lat. See the Copy of it in Job. Weevers Book intituled, Ancient funeral Monuments. p. 522, 523, and in the beginning of Maur. Channy or Chawney his Historia aliquot nostri seculi martyrum. printed 1550. in qu. He hath also translated into English (1) The life of Job. Picus Earl of Mirandula. (2) An exposition of a part of the passion of Christ.

His Latin Works, besides those two little things before-mentioned are these.

De optimo respub. statu, deque nova insula Utopia, libellus aureus, &c. Basil. 1518. there again 1563, both in qu. and at Oxon 1663. in oct. Translated into English, with notes added to it in the Margin, by Ralph Robinson of C. C. C. — Lond. 1557. oct. Published also at the same place 1639. in oct. by one Bernard Alsop, who dedicates it to Cressacre More of More-place in Northmimes in Hertfordshire Esq. one of the posterity, and next in blood to our Author Sir Tho. More. The said Utopia also was published in Italian, at Venice 1548.

Epistola ad Acad. Oxon. an. 1519. Ox. 1633. qu. See in Tho. James under the Year 1638.

History of the pitiful life, and unfortunate death of Edward 5. and the then Duke of York his Brother. Lond. 1651. oct. This last being in English, and published the last of all his Works; I do therefore put it here. At length this our worthy Author being brought to his trial in Westminster-hall, was there for Treason (for denying the King's Supremacy) condemned to be hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd. But that Sentence being mitigated by the K. he only lost his Head on Tower-hill 6. July, in Fifteen hundred thirty and five. Soon after his Body was buried in the Chappel belonging to the Tower called St. Peter ad Vincula, by the care of his Daughter Margaret, to which place, as 'tis said, she afterwards removed the Body of John Fisher B. of Rochester, who being beheaded for the same matter on 22. June going before, was buried in the Church-yard of Allhallows Barkin. But More's Body continuing not long in that Chappel, was by the said Margaret removed to Chelsey Church near London, and there deposited on the South side of the Choire or Chancel. Over it is a large Epitaph made by himself, after he had given up his Chancellorship, which is printed in several Books and by several Authors. As for his head, it was set upon a pole on London-bridge, where abiding about 14 days, was then privily bought by the said Margaret, and by her for a time carefully preserved in a leaden Box, but afterwards with great devotion, 'twas put into a Vault (the burying place of the Ropers) under a Chappel joyning to St. Dunstons Church in Camerbury, where it doth yet remain, standing in the said Box on the Coffin of Margaret his Daughter buried there. Much more, as 'tis probable, I could say of his Death and Burial, could I see a Book intit. Expositio fidelis de morte Thomæ Mori. Printed in 8vo. in the Year 1536. but the Book is very scarce, and I could never see no more of it than the bare title. One More of Hertfordshire (descended from him) had one of his Chaps, and was by him among other rarities carefully preserved till the Rebellion broke out in 1642. Jasper and Ellis Heywood, Jesuits, Sons of Job. Heywood the noted Poet in the time of Hen. 8. had one of the teeth of the said Sir Tho. More, bat but they being loth to part with their right to each other, the tooth (i) fell asunder and divided of it self. The said Sir Thomas had issue by his first Wife Jane, the Daughter of John Cowls of Cowls Hall in Essex three Daughters, and one Son named John, who being little better than an Ideot, (as 'tis said) took to Wife in his Fathers life time Anne, Daughter and sole Heir of Edward Cressacre of Baronburgh in Yorkshire, by whom he had issue (1) Thomas, (right Heir of his Father and Grandfather) who had 13 Children, of which Five were Sons. The four eldest lived in voluntary contempt, and loathed the World, before the World fawned on them. The first was Thomas, born anew, and baptized on that day of the Year (6. July) on which Sir Thomas suffered death. This Thomas having the Estate come to him, married, (*) and had several Children, but being a most zealous Catholick, and constantly affected to the French Nation and Crown, did at his own cost and charge, with unwearied industry, assemble all the English Persons of note that were then in and about Rome to supplicate his Holiness for a dispatch of a contract between the K. of England and Henrietta Maria of France an. 1623. which being done, the said Thomas, who was the Mouth or Speaker for the said English Persons, died 11. April (according to the accompt followed at Rome) an. 1625. aged 59. and was buried in the middle almost of the Church of St. Lewis in Rome, leaving then behind him the life of his Gr. Grandfather Sir Tho. More's, incomparably well written, published (at London I think) in 4to, about 1627 and dedicated to Henrietta Maria beforementioned. Over the said Tho. Mores Grave, was soon after laid a monumental Stone at the charge of the English Clergy at Rome, and an Epitaph engraven thereon, a Copy of which was sent to me by I know not whom, (as several things of that nature are, from other places) running thus. D. O. M. S. Thomæ Moro dioc. Ebor. Anglo, magni illius Thomæ Mori Angliæ Cancellarii & Martyris pronepoti atq; hæredi, viro probitate & pietate insigni; qui, raro admodum, apud Britannos exemplo, in fratrem natu minorem, amplum transcripsit patrimonium, & presbyter Romæ factus, inde fuisse sedis Apostolicæ in patriam profectus, plusculos annos, strenuam fidei propagandæ navavit operam: postea cleri Anglicani negotia septem annos Romæ, & 5 in Hispaniâ P. P. Paulo 5to, & Gregorio 15 summa cum integritate & industria suisque sumptibus procuravit. Tandem de subrogando Angliæ Episcopo ad Urbanum 8 missus negotio feliciter confecto laborum mercedem recepturus, ex hac vita migravit, XI. Apr. An. 1625. æt. suæ 59. Clerus Anglicanus moerens P. The second Son of the said Job. More (Son of Sir Thomas) was Augustine, who dyed unmarried. The third was Thomas the second, or Thomas junior, born at Chelsey 8. Aug. 23. Hen. 8. who, when he came to mans Estate, (m) degenerated from the Catholick Religion, and lived and died a professed Minister, leaving Issue several Children, of whom the eldest Cressacre More (who was born at Baronburgh in Yorkshire 3. July 1572.) lived afterwards (n) in no commendable fashion. The fourth was Edward, (o) born after Sir Thomas his death, and having not his blessing as Thomas (the first) and Augustin had, degenerated from the Catholick Religion. The fifth was Bartholomew, who died young of the Plague in London. The Pictures of most of these Mores, mention'd here by me, viz. of Sir Job. More the Father, and his Lady, Sir Thomas the Son, and his Lady, John the Grandson, Margaret, Elizabeth, and Cicely, the Grand Daughters, &c. were most admirably well depicted by the curious hand of Hans Holbin, well known to, and acquainted with, Sir Thomas More. Which piece, being an original, remaineth to this day (1689) in the House of the Lembals at Besfills-Lee near to Abendon in Berks. Round which is an Inscription, shewing the names and matches of those that are there depicted, but now scarce legible. To conclude, if any curious Person is desirous to know more of this noted Author Sir Tho. More; who hath been, and yet is, wonderfully celebrated throughout the learned World, let him consult (1) His life (p) written by Will. Roper before-mention'd. (2) Dr. Tho. Stapleton his Book (q) entit. De tribus Thomis, mostly as to this Sir Tho. More, taken from that written by Roper. (3) His life written by Thom. More before-mention'd, much of which is taken from the former two. (4) His life (r) written by J. H. (Hoddesdon I think) collected from Stapleton and More, especially the last, which was, and is scarce to be had. (5) A Book written by Maur. Channey or Channey, sometimes a Carthusian near London, intit. Historia aliquot nostri sæculi, &c. which Book, and its Author, I shall mention elsewhere. (6) His life intit. The mirror of virtue in worldly greatness. Paris 1616. in oct. (7) A MS. of his life (whether a Copy of that MS. written by Roper I know not) in the Library of the Free School at Colchester. The Reader is now to know that Will. Roper before-mentioned who married Margaret More, was born in Kent, and educated for a time in one of the Universities. Afterwards he succeeded his Father John Roper in the Office of Prothonotary of the Kings Bench; which, after he had kept and faithfully performed 34 Years, he resign'd it to his Son Thom. Roper. The said William was very bountiful both at home and abroad; merciful, meek, and a Staff to such that were poor, oppressed, and imprison'd. At length after he had lived a Widower 33 Years, and 82 in this vain World, he submitted to fate 4. Januar. 1577. Whereupon his body was buried next to that of Margaret his Wife, in a Vault under a Chapel joining to the Chancel belonging to the Church of St. Dunstan in Canterbury. The life of Sir Tho. More before-mentioned, written by this Will. Roper, I have several times perused, the beginning of which is, Forasmuch as Sir Tho. More Knight, &c.

HENRY STANDISH descended from a right Ancient Family of his Name in Lancashire, became, when young, a Franciscan or Greyfriar, but in what convent, I know not as yet, studied for some time in the convent of his Order at Oxon, and partly at Cambridge, proceeded D. of D. of this University, as a certain Register (a) belonging to his Order tells us, made Guardian of the Franciscan convent in London, Provincial of his Order, and in 1519. being nominated Bishop of St. Asaph, received consecration thereunto in the conventual Church of the Franciscans at Oxon before-mention'd, on the eleventh of July the same Year. In 1526, he, with Sir John Baker were sent Ambassadors to Denmark, and in 1530, he was one of the Bishops that assisted and directed Qu. Catherine in the sute concerning her divorce from K. Hen. 8. He was esteemed a learned Man of his time, and a most zealous favourer and assertor of the Catholick Religion; for which, had he lived longer, he would have suffer'd much. He hath written, Several Sermons preached to the People.

Treatise against Erasmus his translation of the New Testament. — With other things, as 'tis probable. He gave up the Ghost at London, in the beginning of August in Fifteen hundred thirty and five: Whereupon his body was buried in the Church of the Franciscans, commonly called Greyfriars in the said City, now known by the name of Christ-Church. Over his Grave was soon after a Tomb erected with the 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. which he bequeathed for that purpose. He gave (b) 40 l. to pave the Choir of the Cath. of St. Asaph, and for other necessities; five marks to the Franciscans of Oxon to be prayed for; ten marks also for the reparation of their Church, and for the building of an Isle joining to the said Church forty pounds. For exhibition of Scholars in Oxon forty pounds, besides legacies to Ralph Standish Lord of Standish in Lancashire his near Kinsman, to Agnes Worthington his Sister, and Will. Standish his natural Brother. See more of this H. Standish in Rich. Kedermyster, under the Year 1531.

JOHN KYNTON was by rule or order a Minorite or Greyfriar, and being a Man of parts, and noted for his proficiency in Divinity, the Society of Magd. Coll. made choice of him to be their Reader of that faculty within their House. Which Office he performing with great honour for several Years, the Doctors and Bach. of Div. of the University, elected him Margaret Professor in the place of Job. Roper, being then D. of D. and a Person of great note in the University. He wrot at the command of the King, an. 1521.

Tract. contra doctrinam Mart. Lutheri. Whether this, or any thing else that he did write, were ever printed, I know not. He died in Fifteen hundred thirty and five, and was, as I conceive, buried in the Chappel of Durham, now Trinitie, College in Oxon. for on a little Grave-stone there, yet remaining, is written this. Obiit Johannes Kynton Frater minor, sacre Theologie professor, 20. Januar. 1535.

47. WILLIAM TYNDALE, otherwise called Hitchins, was born on the borders of Wales, brought up from a Child in Grammar, Logick, and Philosophy in this University, particularly for the most part in St. Mary Magdalens Hall; where, having sucked in the Doctrine of Luther, read it privately to certain Students, and to some of the Junior Fellows of Magd. Coll. adjoining. Whether he took a Degree, either by the name of Tyndale or Hitchins, it doth not appear in our Registers, and whether he was one of the Junior Canons of Cardinal Wolfey's Coll. as some think, there is no ground or footstep left to persuade us to it. From Oxon he went to Cambridge, where being well ripened in Gods word, he was entertained by one Sir Job. Welch a Knight of Glocestershire, and by him made Tutor to his Children. While he continued there, he shewed himself so much a friend to Luther, and foe to the Pope, before several Abbats, Doctors, and other Men of the Clergy living in the neighbourhood, that he was forced merely for the security of his Person to leave that place. So that journeying to London, he endeavoured to get into the Family of Cuthb. Tonstall Bishop thereof; but being frustrated of his design, he was desirous for the good of his Country to translate the New Testament into English, but finding no place to do it in England, he left his native Country and went into Germany, where setting on the work, he finished it in the Year 1527, which was the first translation of it made into English. Afterwards going on with the Old Test. He finished the five Books of Moses with sundry prologues before every one of them, besides other treatises written there. Which being sent into England, did, as esteemed by the then Clergy thereof, prove very mischievous to the whole Nation: Inasmuch, that the King was forced to put out a Proclamation, prohibiting the buying and reading the said translation or translations. Afterwards the King and Council, finding that he would do much harm if not removed out of the way, they sent to the Emperors Attorney at Bruxels to have him seized: Whereupon our Author who was then at Antwerp, being snap'd by two Catchpoles, appointed by one Hen. Philipps an English Man, sent thither on purpose to find him out, was, after examination, sent to Prison in the Castle of Filford 18 Miles distant from Antwerp, where continuing for some time, did at length suffer death, (notwithstanding great intercessions were made for him by the English Merchants abiding in that Country) as I shall tell you anon. He hath written,

Prologue shewing the use of the Scripture.

Two Letters to Joh. Fryth Prisoner in the Tower. All which were printed in one Vol. in fol. 1573. He is also supposed to be Author of,

The Supper of the Lord, after the true meaning of the 6th of John, and the eleventh of the 1. of Cor. And incidently in the exposition of the Supper is confuted, the Letter of Sir Tho. More against Jo. Fryth — Written Apr. 5. an. 1533. This Person Will. Tyndale was first strangled by the hands of the common Hangman, and then burnt near to Filford Castle before-mentioned, in Fifteen hundred thirty and six. See his Story at large in 1536. Job. Fox his Book of Acts and Monuments of the Church, &c. and in Rob. Persons his answer thereunto in The third part of a Treatise intit. of three conversions of England, &c. DESIDERIUS ERASMUS ROTERODAMUS, a 48. great and wonderful light of Learning, and therefore invited and drawn by Kings and Princes into Germany, Italy, England, and other Regions of Europe, was born at Rotterdam in Holland 28. of Oct. 1467. This Person tho educated in all kind of Learning beyond the Seas, yet he must have a place in these Athenae, because he had studied in this University, particularly in St. Maries Coll. a place for Canon Regulars of the Order of St. Austin (whose great Gate is almost opposite to that of New Inn) in the Years 1497. 98, and part, if not all of 1499. and as some think in the Year 1518 or 19. when Card. Wolfey founded his Lectures in this University, at which time Erasmus read (c) certain Lectures in the publick refectory of Corp. Ch. Coll. The reason of his continuance and studying here, I have told (d) you elsewhere, and therefore all that I shall now say of him is, that his works are printed in 9 Volumes, in which are his dissertation De radio & pavore Christi, and certain Epistles, which he wrote in the said Coll. of St. Mary, and that dying at Basil in Germany, on the 12 of July in Fifteen hundred thirty and six, was buried in the Cathedral Church there: Soon after was a conspicuous Monument, with an Inscription, put over his Grave, the contents of which, I shall now for brevity sake omit. His life is twice, or more, written in Latin, tho not so well as it should be, and once or more in English, which is the reason that I have spoken but briefly of him in this place.

JOHN RASTALL was a Londoner born, and educated 49. for a time in Grammaticals and Philosophicals in this University. Afterwards returning to his native place, he set up the Trade of Printing, being then esteemed a profession fit for any Scholar or ingenious Man. This Person being noted for his Piety and Learning, became intimate with Sir Tho. More, whose Sister Elizabeth he took to Wife, and by dayly conference with that most learned Knight, he improved his knowledge in various sorts of Learning, besides what knowledge he before had gotten in the Mathematicks. He was a zealous Man for the Catholick cause, and a great hater of the proceedings of King Hen. 8. as to his divorce, and for his ejecting the Popes power from the Nation. His Writings are,

Natura naturata. 'Tis a large and ingenious Comedy containing a description of three parts of the World, viz. Asia, Africa, and Europe, adorn'd with Figures and Cuts.

This Job. Rastall died at London, in Fifteen hundred thirty and six, leaving behind him Issue Will. Rastall before-mentioned, and John Rastall a Justice of Peace, who had Issue a Daughter named Elizabeth, the Wife of Rob. Lougher L. L. D. Chancellor of the Dioc. of Exeter.

50. JOHN RYCKS being much addicted in his Youth to Piety and Learning was entred into the Order of the Minorites or Grey friers, and among them in Oxon he did spend some time in good Letters. At length in his last days, (being then esteemed a placid old Man) when he saw the Pope and his Religion begin to decline in England, he became a zealous Protestant, and wrot in the English Tongue,

The image of divine Love.

- Against the blasphemies of the Papists. — And translated into English, Prognosticon of Otto of Brunfeld, which he dedicated to Thomas Cromwell. Other things he wrot as my (†) Author saith, who adds that he died at London in Fifteen hundred thirty and six, which was the eight and twentieth Year of K. Hen. 8.

51. FRANCIS BYGOD a Yorkshire Man born, spent some time among the Oxonian Muses, but whether he took a Degree, it doth not appear. Afterwards he received the honour of Knighthood from the King, and wrot,

A Treatise concerning impropriations of Benefices — The Epistle before which, dedicated to K. Hen. 8. is printed (or reprinted) at the latter end of Sir Hen. Spelman's Larger work of Tithes, by the care of Jerem. Stephens, an. 1647. The said Treatise seems to have been written after the breach which K. Hen. 8. made with the Pope, his Marriage with Anna Bolein, and the Birth of Q. Elizabeth, as 'tis conjectured by circumstances. The Author's purpose was chiefly bent against the Monasteries, who had unjustly gotten very many Parsonages into their possession, as it had been complained of long before his time, especially by Dr. Tho. (*) Gascoigne a Yorkshire Man born. The said Bygod translated also certain Latin Books into English, which I have not yet seen. At length being found very active in the commotions in Yorkshire called The holy pilgrimage, an. 1536, (at which time he with his party endeavoured to surpris Hull) was thereupon apprehended, imprison'd, and at length executed at Tyburn near to London, with other Knights and Esquires, in the Month of June in Fifteen hundred thirty and seven, which was the nine and twentieth Year of K. Hen. 8.

52. ROBERT WAKFELD, a Northern Man born, and the greatest Linguist of his time, was as he saith, (a) ex fidelibus natus fidelis, ex Christianis Christianus, and afterwards being fitted for the University, he was sent to Cambridge, where he took one or more degrees in Arts. But his desire being solely bent to improve his natural Genie in the Tongues, he went to travel, and in short time attained to a very considerable knowledge in the Greek, Hebrew, Chaldaic, and Syriac Tongues. About that time he read and taught the said Tongues at Tubing in Germany, at Paris, and in 1519, I find (b) him to be Hebr. Professor at Lovaine in Brabant, in the place of one Matthew Adrian: But continuing there only 4 Months, he returned into England, where being made known to the King by his great friend and admirer Rich. Paice Dean of St. Pauls, he was made one of his Chaplains, took the Degree of Bach. of Divinity, was beloved of many, and patroniz'd in his studies by Thom. Bulleyn Earl of Wilts. When the unlawfulness of Matrimony between the King and Catherine of Spayne, Widow of his Brother Prince Arthur was called into question, he began to defend the Queens cause, and therefore gained the love of many, but being afterwards courted by fair promises to change his mind, and the rather because of his great skill in the Tongues and Divinity, and therefore able to say more than another Man, he came over to the Kings Party, whereby he gained the hatred of many. I have seen (c) a Letter written by him to the King, dated from Sion in Middlesex, 1527. wherein he tells him, that he will defend his cause or question in all the Universities in Christendome, &c. and afterwards tells him, that, 'if the People should know that he, who began to defend the Queens cause, not knowing that she was carnally known of Pr. Arthur his Brother, should now write against it, surely he should be stoned of them to death, or else have such a slander and obloquy raised upon him, that he would rather dye a thousand times than suffer it, &c. Afterwards upon the intreaty of the University of Oxon made to the King, Wakfeld was sent thither about 1530. and at his first coming he made a publick Speech in the Hall of the Coll. of K. Hen. 8. (since called Ch. Church) before the University, and afterwards read publickly the Hebrew Lecture there, as his Brother Tho. Wakfeld did at Cambridge by the Kings Authority, beginning to read there in 1540. In 1532, he was made by the King the twelfth or junior Canon of his College at Oxon, founded on the site of that of the Cardinal, and in the same Year, he was incorporated B. of Divinity. So that continuing there some Years after, and instructing many in the Tongues, I have therefore put him among the Oxford Writers. In 1536, when he saw the King make havock of Religious Houses, he carefully preserved divers Books of Greek and Hebrew, especially those in the Library of Ramsay abbey, which were partly composed by Laur. Holbeach a Monk of that place, in the Reign of Hen. 4. among which was his Hebrew Dictionary. As for the works of Wakfeld they are mostly these that follow.

Epistola ad D. Tb. Bulleyn comitem Wilts. Job. Fisherum Ep. Ross. Rich. Paceum, &c. Besides other things mentioned (c) elsewhere, which I have not yet seen. He died at London on the eighth day of Octob. in Fifteen hundred thirty and seven, leaving Thomas his Brother his Heir, but where he was buried I cannot yet tell. Jo. Leland in one (d) of his Books gives him the name of Polypus, noting thereby, by way of contumely, that he was a crafty man for craftily conveying away the Hebrew Dictionary before-mention'd. Rich. Paice Dean of Pauls, in a Letter (e) to K. H. 8. dat. at Sion 1527. saith that Rob. Wakfeld is a Person of excellent learning as well in Divinity, as in wonderful knowledge of many and divers Languages. The University of Oxon in an (f) Epistle to the said King, doth also say, that besides his various accomplishments, he gives place to none for his admirable knowledge in the Hebrew, Syriac and Arabick Tongues.

JOHN CLAYMOND, who used to write himself Eucharistia servus, because he frequently received the blessed Sacrament, and in the latter part of his life took it every day, was the Son of Job. Claymond and Alice his Wife, sufficient Inhabitants of Frampton in Lincolnshire, in which Town this our Author Job. Claymond received his first breath. From thence, when he was a Boy, he was sent to Oxon, where, after he had compleated his Grammar learning in the School near to Magd. Coll. great Gate, (being then within, and not without, the said Gate,) he was made Demie first, and in 1488, perpetual Fellow of that College. About that time entring into holy Orders, and becoming famous for his great learning, piety, and gravity, was constituted President of the said College, about 1504, took the Degree of Bach. of Divinity three Years after, and within three more after that time, sup-plicated the venerable Congregation of Regents, that he might be licensed to proceed in that faculty, but whether he was admitted it appears not. About that time several Dignities, and Ecclesiastical Benefices (a) were bestowed on him, among which were the Rectory of West-mong-ton in Somersetshire, (which he obtained by the resignation of the Honourable Rich. Grey, from Richard the Abbat, and the Convent of Glastenbury in the Month of July 1506.) the Prebendship of Whitchurch in the Cathedral Church of Wells, (to which belongs the Church of Beningar in Somersetshire) and the vicaridge of the Collegiate Church of Norton in the Dioc. of Durham, which he resign'd in 1518, reserving to himself an yearly pension from it of 20 Marks, to be paid by the Abbat and Convent of Selby (of the Order of St. Bennet) in Yorkshire. At length upon the desire of Rich. Fox Bishop of Winchester, he left his Presidentship of Magd. Coll. and was by him made President of that of C. C. when founded by him, an. 1516. Which place being of less value than the former, the said Bishop did in recompence, give him the rich Rectory of Clyve (called by some Bishops Clyve) in Glocestershire, which he kept to his dying day. He was a Person of great gravity, of most exact example in his life and conversation, very charitable and devout, and had nothing wanting in him to compleat a Theologist. And as he was esteemed a learned Divine by some, so a better Philosopher by others, as it appears by his Book intit.

A Treatise of repentance — This is in MS. written with his own hand, in 4 sheets in fol. which I have in my Library of MSS. The beginning of it is, It is the property and condition of every wise Man, &c. At length arriving to a good old Age, paid his last debt to nature, 19. 1537. Nov. in Fifteen hundred thirty and seven, and was buried in the choir of C. C. Coll. under that very place where the Rectors of the choir sing the Psalm, intit. Venite exultemus. Over his Grave was soon after a Marble stone laid, with an Inscription thereon, provided and made by himself, with void spaces left for the day and year when he died, to be filled up by his Executor, or Overseer of his Will, but were never performed. The Copy of the Inscription, you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 244. b. his Character and Encomium in Jo. () Leland*, and his benefactions to *Magdalen, Corp. 54. JOHN HELYAR a Hampshire Man born, was admitted Probationer Fellow of Corpus Ch. Coll. 1. June 1522. and Bach. of Arts in Jul. 1524. But instead of having that degree compleated by Determination in the Lent following in the publick Schools, he had the Degree of M. of A. conferr'd upon him, being then taken into the patronage of the magnificent and generous Cardinal Tho. Wolsey, who held him in high value for his extraordinary sufficiencies in the Lat. Greek and Hebrew Tongues. In all which, especially in Poetry, and Humanity, he was so well vers'd, that he exceeded most, if not all Persons of his time. Whether the said Cardinal did afterwards promote him to a Canonry or Readers place in his new Coll. at Oxon, I know not. Sure I am that after his fall, our Author supplicated to be admitted to the reading of the sentences, and about the same time wrot, JOHN FOREST or Forrest, whose surname had, several Years before he was born, lived within the City of Oxon, (but whether of his Family I cannot yet tell) was from his Childhood educated in Piety and Learning. Afterwards when he attained to the 17th Year of his Age, he took upon him the habit of St. Francis at Greenwich in Kent as it seems, and at about 26 Years of Age, was instructed in Theological Studies for a time, among the Brethren of that Order living without Watergate in the South Suburb of Oxon. What Degrees he took here, it appears not; yet sure I am that in order for the taking of the Degree of Bach. of Div. he supplicated the Ven. Regents that he might be admitted to oppose in that faculty, but whether he was admitted, it appears not, and so consequently that he was not Bachelaur, much less Doctor, as some report, unless in another University beyond the Seas, for at Cambridge he had not that Degree conferr'd upon him, if the Tables at the end of Antiquitates Britannicæ are right. Afterwards he was taken into the Service of Queen Catherine the Consort of King Hen. 8. whose love being great towards virtue and learning, she made him her Confessor. About that time he was constituted the one and fortieth Provincial Minister of his Order, as an eminent (d) Brother thereof, doth really suppose from certain Writings relating to the quarrels between the Order and Card. Wolsey. Which Provincialship had before been enjoyed by Steph. Baron Confessor to K. Hen. 8. and sometimes a frequent Preacher in the University of Cambridge. Soon after, when that good Queen was to be divorced from the said King, this our Author Forest shew'd himself a zealous Enemy against it, and in few Years after, when the King was intent to eject the Pope and his power from England, he, out of a passionate zeal which he had for the Catholick Religion, did in secret confession declare to many of the King's Subjects, that the King was not Supreme Head of the Church, whereas before he had been sworn to the said Supremacy. These matters coming to the knowledge of the King's Council, he was examined by certain Persons appointed by them, to whom he made answer, that he took the Oath with his outward man, but his inward man never consented thereunto. Afterwards, being further accused of divers heretical Opinions, (as they were then called) he submitted himself to the punishment of the Church: So that his abjuration being sent to him to be read, he utterly refused it. Whereupon his confinement in the Prison called Newgate, being made more close, these Verses were wrot on him by a Protestant.

Forest the Fryer that obstinate Lier,

That willfully will be dead,

Incontinently, the Gospel doth denye,

The King to be Supreme Heade.

About the same time he took a great deal of pains in writing a Book (whether in English or Latin I know not) intit. by Latin Writers,

De autoritate Ecclesiæ & Pontificis Maximi. The beginning of which is this, Nemo sibi sumat honorem, nisi fuerit vocatus a Deo tanquam Aaron, &c. In which Book he inveighed (e) much against the pride and impiety of the King, because that without any call he did not scruple to intitle himself, The Head of the Church of England, and to take upon him that, which he was not capable of, whereas if he had thought himself a true Member of the Cath. Church, he should have given God thanks that he was so, and to have rested therein without endeavouring to tear it to pieces, &c. The contents of this Book (which was ready for the Press, but whether ever printed in England I cannot tell) coming to the knowledge of certain inquisitors, and at length to the Kings ear, he was forthwith condemned to dye, and having some days allowed him to make his peace with God and all Men, he wrot,

Several Letters. — Some of which I have seen printed in Latin, as first, His Answer to the Letter which Qu. Catherine sent to him. (2.) An answer to the Letter written to him by Elizab. Hammon Maid (of honour) to the said Queen. (3.) Answer to the Letter of Tho. Abell, who was executed two Years after for denying the King's Supremacy, with several others, which he wrot to comfort the afflicted Catholicks. At length being drawn upon a Sledge from his Prison to Smithfield, where a pair of Gallows was set up to receive him, he was hanged thereon by the middle and arm-pits quick; and under the Gallows a Fire being made, he was burnt, and utterly consumed to ashes, 22. May in Fifteen hundred thirty and eight, aged 60, and in the 43 Year of his professed and religious estate. At the time he was to suffer, and before he went up the Ladder, Hugh Latymer B. of Worcester did from a Pulpit set up there, near to the Gallows, Preach a Sermon purposely to move him to repentance, but all availed nothing. He had then several discourses with that Bishop, which were verbatim taken by some of the Brethren of his order. In conclusion Latymer asked him what state he would die in. Whereupon Forest with a loud voice answered (f) if an Angel should come down from heaven to teach him any other Doctrine than he had received, and believed from his Youth, he would not now believe him; and that if his body should be cut joint after joint, or member after member, burnt, hanged, or what pain soever might be done to his body, he would never turn from his old profession, &c. and added, that seven years past, he (Latymer) durst not have made such a Sermon for his life. This being said, he was conducted from the place where he stood, which was erected above the People, to the Gallows and there suffered.

36. ANTHONY FITZHERBERT whose great Learning in the Wisdom of the Law, both the judicial Court of Pleas, wherein he sat Justice a long time, and also those exact Books of our Common Law by him exquisitely penn'd and publish'd, do sufficiently Witness, was born of, (being the Son of Ralph Fitzherbert, Esq.) and descended from, a right Ancient Family living at Norbury in Derbyshire, laid a Foundation of Learning in this University, on which he built a firm structure in after times, but in what House here, or in what Inn of Court afterwards, it appears not. Sure it is that having made a most fruitful progress in his Studies, he was constituted Serjeant at Law 18. Nov. 2. Hen. 8. Dom. 1510, one of the Kings Serjeants six Years after, (being about that time made a Knight) and in 1522. one of the Justices of the Common-pleas, and not of the Kings-bench, as one (g) doth falsely report. In which place, carrying himself with great prudence, justice, and knowledge, became at length the Oracle of the Law, and was admired by all for his profundity in it. His works are,

The Book of Husbandry very profitable and necessary for all Persons — Printed in the Reign of Queen Mary, and in the beginning of Queen Eliz. This Book I have seen more than once, under Anth. Fitzherberts name, yet there are not wanting some who say 'twas penn'd by his Brother Job. Fitzherbert. This famous Lawyer Ant. Fitzherbert, who had been an enemy to Card. Wolsey, paid his last debt to nature in the Summer time (before August) in Fifteen hundred thirty and eight, (30. Hen. 8.) whereupon his body was buried in the Church of Norbury before-mention'd. Soon after was a blew Marble-stone laid over his Grave, with an Inscription thereon, which is now remaining. His name and posterity are yet, as I conceive, living at Norbury, Tiffington and Somersal in Derbyshire, and elsewhere.

JOHN HILSEY or Hildesley (was of the same Family with those of Beneham in Berks. and they originally of the Hildesleys of Hildesley in the same County) who being much addicted from his Childhood to Learning and Religion, nothing was wanting in his sufficient Parents to advance them. Whereupon falling under the tuition of a Dominican, or Preaching, or Black, Friar, was entred in his manly Years among the Brethren of that Order at Bristol, and thence for a time was removed to the House of the Dominicans in the S. Suburb of Oxon, purposely to initiate him in the supreme faculty, and in some smattering of Philosophical Learning. In the Month of May 1527, he supplicated to be admitted to the reading of the sentences, but whether he was admitted it does not appear (through neglect) in the publick Register, and in Nov. 1532. he by the name and title of Pater Johannes Hylsey de ordine predicatorum & Bac. SS. Theol. supplicated to proceed in Divinity: Which being granted, he was admitted, but did not stand in the Act following to compleat that Degree. So that how it comes to pass, that a certain (b) Author of note should say, that he was Doctor of Divinity of Cambridge, I cannot perceive, seeing that his name doth not occur in the Catalogue of the Doctors of all faculties, who proceeded at Cambridge from 1500 to 1571. Printed at the end of the first Edition of Antiquitates Britannicæ Ecclesiæ. This Doctor Hilsey being elected Bishop of Rochester after the decollation of John Fisher, had restitution (i) made to him of the temporalities of that See, 4. Oct. 27. Hen. 8. Dom. 1535, where being settled he wrot,

A Manual of Prayers (or Primer) with the Epistles and Gospels. — Which Book being dedicated to Thomas Lord Cromwell, was at his command published at Lond. 1539. in 8. He also wrot, De veri corporis esu in Sacramento. Ded. also to the said Cromwell. Of which Book and its Author, see in a piece of Lat. Poetry intit. Diacosio-Martyrion (k), written by Job. White Warden of the College near Winchester, afterwards successively B. of Linc. and Winchester. As for our Author Dr. Hilsey, I know not yet to the contrary, but that he hath written other things, having always been accounted a Learned Man, but what the titles of them are, I cannot tell; nor do I know any thing else of him, only that he dying towards the latter end of the Year Fifteen hundred thirty and eight, was, I presume, buried in the Cathedral of Rochester. In the said See succeeded Nicholas Heath, as I shall tell you elsewhere among the Bishops.

JOHN MAJOR was born at Haddington, within the Province of Lothbaine in Scotland, and trained up from his Youth in the Study of good Letters. For some time he heard Philosophy taught in the Universities of England, and in Cambridge by his own (a) confession he studied for three Months space in Christ's College, but upon what account he continued there no longer, he tell us not. In a certain note (b) under the hand-writing of our Antiquary Brian Twyne, it doth appear that he was conversant among the Oxonian Muses for a time, but in what House, unless in the Abbey of Osney, whose melodious ring of Bells he doth familiarly (c) commend, I cannot tell. After he had satisfied himself with the curiosities of both the Universities, he retired to that of Paris, settled in the College of Montacute, passed his course there, became Doctor of the Arts, and of the holy Writ, a most Scholastical Doctor of the Sorbon, and in Scholastical Divinity, Philosophy and Sophistry, equal with any of his time. His works are,

Liber fallaciarum, part. 2. Par. 1516. fol. The matter of this Book, which by certain Authors is called Sophisticalia Parisiensia, and by others his Opera Logicalia, was read and discussed in publick in the Coll. of Montacute before-mention'd.

In quantum sententiarum quæstiones utilissimæ, Par. 1516. and 19. fol. dedicated to Gavin Douglas Bishop of Dunkeld and Rob. Cockbourne B. of Ross.

Comment. in Mattheum. When printed I know not.

De auctoritate concilii supra Pontificem Maximum. Par. 1518. Excerpted from his comments on Matthew, and was reprinted in the first part of Job. Gerson's works at Paris 1606. fol.

In primum sententiarum. Par. 1519. fol. Dedicated to George Hepburne Abbat of Arbroth, and of the Privy Council to the King of Scots.

Historia Majoris Britanniae, tam Angliæ quam Scotiæ, lib. 6. Par. 1521. qu. Written in a Sorbonick and barbarous stile, yet very truly and with great liberty of spirit, not sparing the Usurpation of Rome, and taxing in divers places (d) the laziness and superfluity of the Clergy.

In quatuor Evangelia expositiones luculentæ, & disquisitiones & disputationes contra Hereticos plurimæ. Par. 1529. fol. He hath also written Placita Theologica, and Sermones per an. which I have not seen, and hath translated Will. Caxton's Chronicle, but whether into the Scotch or English Language I know not. At length after, or about, the Year 1530. he retired into his own Country, and professed Theology in the Coll. of S. Salvator at S. Andrews, whereof he was made Provost, and died there being of good Age, but when, I cannot yet find. George Buchanan was his Scholar and bestoweth (e) on him this Character, in studio Theologia, magnum nomen me puero habuit, yet in his Epigrams (f) he speaks slightly of him and his works. Besides this Job. Major I find two of both his names, one was Author of In Psalmos Davidis Regis & Prophetæ, paraphrasis heroica versibus expressa. Witeberg. 1574. oct. and another who was a Licentiat in Grammar of this University. an. 1452, but whether he hath written any thing in his faculty I know not.

59. HENRY PARKER Son of Sir Will. Parker Knight, (living sometimes at Halingbery morley in the Diocess of London) by Alice his Wife Daugh. of Will. Lovell Esq; by Alienour his Wife Daugh. and Heir of Rob. Lord Morley, was with several other Nobles of his time, educated in most kinds of Literature in this University. Afterwards retiring to his Estate in Northamptonshire, became so much in favour with K. Hen. 8. that he had (n) summons to Parliament in the 21. Year of that King's Reign, by the title of Lord Morley, and in the 22. of the said Reign, Dom. 1530. being one of the Peers at that time sitting in Parliament, subscribed that Declaration then sent to P. Clement 7. whereby intimation was given to his Holiness, that unless he would comply with K. Henry, in the cause of his divorce from Qu. Catherine, the farther acknowledgment of his Supremacy in this Realm would be in danger; and in the 25. of the said King was judgment given on his behalf for taking place before the Lord Dacres of Gilfland. His younger Years were adorned with all kind of superficial Learning, especially with Drammatick Poetry, and his elder with that which was divine, and therefore worthily characterized (o) to be vir literis clarus, ac genere nobilitate conspicuus. His writings have been, Several Comedies and Tragedies.

Declaration of the Psalm 94. Deus ultionum Dominus. London. 1539. oct.

Lives of Sectaries. — With other things which I have not yet seen. He was living an Ancient Man, and in esteem among the Nobility in the latter end of Henry 8. The Reader is now to know that there was another Hen. Parker, who wrote a Book intit. Dives & pauper. A compendious treatise (an exposition) upon the ten Commandments. London. 1496. fol. There again in 1538, and 1586. oct. Which Henry being a Carne of Dowcaster in Yorkshire, and D. of D. of Cambridge, in the time of Ed. 4. must not be taken to be the same with the former.

EDWARD POWELL was born of British blood within the Principality of Wales, educated in Grammaticals, Logicals, and Philosophicals in Oxon, and was afterwards, if I mistake not, Fellow of Oriel Coll. for one of both his names occurs Fellow of that House in 1495. After he had taken the Degrees in Arts, he gave himself solely up to Divinity and in that faculty he became a noted Disputant. On the 2. of Nov. 1501. he was admitted to the rectory of Bledon in the Dioc. of Wells on the death of Mr. Mich. Clyffe, and afterwards took the Degrees in Divinity. In 1508. he, by the favour of Bdm. Audley B. of Sarum, was collated to the Prebendship of Bedmyster and Radclyve, having a little before been admitted Preb. of Lyme and Halfstock, in the said Church. This E. Powell was the Person, who for his great learning and undaunted courage, was entertained as an Advocate by Qu. Catherine, when K. Hen. 8. sought cause for a divorce from her; and the same, who before had shewed himself very zealous in disputing and writing against M. Luther, his Disciples, and Doctrine, for which the University of Oxon did not only congratulate (p) him for his pains, but also in an Epistle (q) to the said Bishop Audley they thus honorably speak of him — res ea Oxoniensium quorundam ingenii discutienda permittitur, inter quos eximius ille Edoardus Powell, Theologiae candidatus, tunc Sarisburiensis Ecclesiæ (ut vocant) Canonicus, connumeratus est. Is enim ex quo res primum in Literarium certamen venit, tam assiduus semper fuit, tantum opera ac diligentia impendit, tam denique eruditè adversus eas hereses invehit, ut ex suis immensis laboribus, vigilantissimisque studiis nostra Academiæ nonnihil attribui laudis facile auguramur, &c. Farther also when the University wrote to K. Hen. 8. to certify him of certain Doctors of Divinity of their own Body, that had lately written each of them a Book against M. Luther, they make this especial mention (r) of our Author Powell and his Book — Editionem tamen Doctoris Powell, tanquam præcipuam, & lucidam quandam gemmam visum est nobis seligere; is siquidem ut est vir summa gravitate & eruditione, præter immensos labores, frequentiaque ejus itinera, tantam in hac re exhibuit vigilantiam, ut nisi eum eximia efferemus laude, videamur plane injurii aut potius inhumani. Hanc suam editionem in duos potissimum digestit libellos, quorum prior de summo extat pontifice Eucharistiæq; Sacramento. Posterior de reliquis sex Sacramentis. Hunc tunc celsitudini sic commendamus virum, ut quavis eum babeas perquam gratum, babeas (quæsumus) nostrâ tamen commendatione gratiam, &c. As for the title of the said Book it runs thus.

Propugnaculum summi sacerdotii Evangelici ac septenariis sacramentorum, adversus Mart. Lutherum fratrem fumosum & Wiclefistum insignem. lib. 3. London. 1523. qu. Another Book of his making is intit.

Tract. de non dissolvendo Henrici Regis cum Catherine matrimonio. lib. 1. and other matters, as 'tis probable, but such I have not yet seen. At length for his denial of the King's Supremacy over the Church of England (whereby he displeased him far more, than before he pleas'd him by writing against Luther) he was committed to Prison, and having received sentence to dye, was on the 30. July in Fifteen hundred and forty, hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd in Smithfield near London, with Tbo. Abel whom I am about to name, and Rich. Fotherston, guilty of the same crime. This Dr. Edw. Powell (s) bestow'd at least 30 l. about the time when he was licens'd to proceed, for the making of a double roof with painting, gilded knots, and lead for the Congregation house, which is now the upper room in St. Maries Church-yard, joining on the North side to the Chancel of St. Maries Church 22. Hen. 7. Dom. 1538.

61. THOMAS ABEL or Able took the Degrees in Arts, that of Master being completed 1516, but what Degrees in Divinity I cannot find. He was afterwards a Servant to Qu. Catherine the Confort of K. Hen. 8. and is said by a certain (†) Author to be vir longe doctissimus, qui Regina aliquando in Muscorum tactu & unguis, operam suam navaret. In 1529. and 30, he shewed himself a zealous Advocate against the divorce of the said Queen, and a passionate enemy against the unlawful doings of the King. At which time he wrot, Tract. de non dissolvendo Henrici & Catherine matrimonio.

In 1534, he by the name of Tho. Able Priest, was attainted of Misprision, for taking part with, and being active in the matter of, Elizabeth Barton the holy Maid of Kent. Afterwards denying the King's Supremacy over the Church, was hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd in 1540. Smithfield, 30. Jul. in Fifteen hundred and forty, having before, as 'tis thought, written other things, but lost. I find another Tho. Able, who hath written against the Gangrana of Tho. Edwards, but he being a hundred Years later than the former, (for he lived in 1646.) he must not be taken to be the same Person.

62. CHRISTOPHER SEINTGERMAN called by some Senyarmayn or Seyngerman, Son of Sir Hen. Seintgerman Knight, by Anne his Wife, Daughter of Tho. Tindale Esq; was born, as I conceive, in Warwickshire, particularly at Sbilton near to the City of Coventry, in the Chappel or Church of which place, his Father and Mother (*) received Sepulture. In his juvenile Years he was educated in Grammatical and Philosophical Learning among the Oxonians, from whom, by the advice of his Parents, he was taken away and sent to the Inner Temple, where, by the benefit of his Academical Learning, certain instructors in the municipal Laws, and by his forward Genie, and industry, he became a Barrester and a Counsellor of note, being then esteemed eminent not only in the Common, but also in the Civil, Law; by which afterwards, he obtained immortal fame among the Citizens of London. Besides this his profound knowledge, he was admirably well read in Philosophy, and the liberal Sciences, which made his company desired by Scholars and Clergy. He lived always a single Man, was an adorer of Chastity and chaste Men, and shew'd himself generous in his profession to those that stood in need of it, for very seldom or never did he take a fee. What he got, and what he could spare out of his paternal estate, he expended in purchasing Books. So that several Years before he died, his Library exceeded any one or two, that belonged to a Person or Persons of his profession. Every night after his business was past, he read a Chapter in the Bible to those that belonged to him, and the Substance thereof he expounded to them. By the doing of which, and his interposing himself in matters relating to Religion and the Clergy, some R. Catholicks have thought that he halted in his Opinion, that is, that he was inclined to the way of Hereticks. His Writings are many, partly written in Latin and partly in English, the titles of some of which are these.

Dialogus de fundamentis Legum Angliæ & de conscientia. Lond. 1528. 1598. 1604. 1613, &c. oct. This is the Book which is commonly called Doctor and Student, being a Dialogue between a Doctor of Div. and a Student in the common Laws of England. With the edition of the said Book 1528. I have seen this Book following bound with several Copies of it. Principia sive maxima Legum Angliæ, à Gallico illo (ut fertur) sermone collecta, & sic in Latinum translata, non solum generosis studentibus, verum etiam terrarum dominis & possessoribus summe necessaria. — Printed by Rich. Laut 24. Dec. 38. Hen. 8. Dom. 1546. in oct. Whether this Book, which is printed in an English Character as the Dialogue is, was compiled by Seintgerman I know not: certain I am, that the English Copy of Dialogus, &c. called, Doctor and Student, &c. Printed at Lond. in oct. an. 1604. contains two Books of Dialogues, the first of which hath 32 Chapters (whereas the Latin impression of 1528, and 1604. contains but 24, and the second 55 Chapters. Among other things that the said Seintgerman hath written are,

Of the power of the Clergy according to the Law.
Treatise shewing that the Clergy cannot make Laws.
Treatise of the Church and the meaning thereof.
Treatise of the Sacraments thereof.
Apologie written to Sir Tho. More.

Dialogue concerning the power which belongs to the Clergy, and the power which belongs to the People. — With several other things which are (†) mention'd in another place. At length this worthy Person dying in Sept. (the 28 day saith Baleus (‡) who falsely adds 1539.) in Fifteen hundred and forty, was buried, not far from the 1540: Grave of Tho. Lupset, in the Church of St. Albage within Cripplegate, in the City of London. Which Church was afterwards translated to that Church now called St. Albage near Sion College. In the last will (*) and Testament of the said Seintgerman, dated 10. July, 32. Hen. 8. Dom. 1540, and proved 30. May 1541. it appears that he was not only a Benefactor to the Church of Sbilton before-mention'd, but also to that at Laleford (Lawford) in Warwickshire, and to the Church at Cathorp in Leicestershire, at which Towns, 'tis probable, he had Lands and Inheritances.

JOHN PALSGRAVE was born in London, and educated in Grammar learning there, studied Logic and Philosophy at Cambridge till he was Bach. of Arts. Afterwards he went to Paris, where spending several Years also in Philosophical and other learning, took the Degree of Master of the said faculty, and became so excellent in the French tongue, that he was thought fit to be Tutor to the Daughter of K. Hen. 7. called the Lady Mary, when she was about to be married to Lewis the 12. K. of France. But that King dying soon after, the said Palsgrave came with her into England, taught the French Language to divers of our young Nobility, and became well benefited. In 1531. he settled in Oxon for a time, and the next Year being incorporated Master of the faculty of Arts, was in few days after admitted to the reading of the Sentences, that is to the Degree of Bach. of Divinity, he being then Chaplain to K. Hen. 8. and esteemed the first Author of our Nation, or of the French Men, that had reduced the French tongue under certain rules, and the first in that kind of exercise that did begin to labour, as it plainly appears by his most laborious piece intit.

L'esclaircissement de la Language Francois. Lond. 1530. in three Books in a thick fol. Before which the Author hath a large Introduction in English; after which follows, (1) A table of Substantives. (2) A table of Adjectives. (3) The Pronoun. (4) The Numerals, &c. I never yet saw but one Copy of this Book, which being fill'd with Marginal Notes (by whom I know not) in a scribbling hand, was bought by the learned Selden, and in his Library at Oxon. I perus'd it. The said Job. Palsgrave hath also written Several Epistles, and published a translation of a Book intit. Ecpbrastes Anglica in comadiam Acolasti. Or, the Comedy of Acolastus translated into our English tongue, after such a manner as Children are taught in the Grammar School; first word by word as the Latin lyeth, and afterwards according to the sense and meaning of the Latin sentences, &c. Lond. 1540. in qu. The said Comedy was made by one Will. Fullonius Hagensis, an. 1529, and was living when it was put into English by Palsgrave, who was in great 1540: renown among Men for his Learning, in Fifteen hundred and forty, which was the two and thirtieth Year of King Hen. 8.

LEONARD COX, second Son of Laurence Cox (by Elizab. his Wife Daugh. of — Willey) Son of Job. Cox of Monmouth, was born in Monmouthshire, educated in Cambridge till he was Bach. of Arts, went to Oxon in 1528. where making some stay for the sake of study, was incorporated in the same Degree in the Year following, and intending to make a longer stay, he supplicated for the Degree of Master of Arts, but whether admitted it appears not. About the same time he was a Schoolmaster at Reading in Berks. and was there in much esteem when Job. Fryth the Martyr was taken for a Vagabond, and set in the Stocks; to whom, for his learning and nothing else, he shewed singular courtesies, as I have already told you in John Fryth. Afterwards he travelled into (†) Tho. Bouchier in Hist. Eccles. de Martyrio Frat. Ord. Minorum Divi Francisci — Ingolf. 1583. in 12. part. 2. fol. 42. b. (*) In Offic. Prætor. cant. in reg. Alinger Qu. 29.

France, Germany, Poland, and Hungary, taught there the Tongues, and became more eminent in Foreign Countries than at home; which Job. Leland the Antiquarian-Poet seems to intimate in these Verses (u) written to him.

*Inclita Sarmatica Cracovia gloria gentis, Virtutes novit, Coxe diserte tuas.
Novit & eloquii Phœnix utriusque Melancthon,
Quam te Phœbus amet, pieriusq; chorus.
Præga tuas cecinit, cecinitque Lutetia Laudes,
Urbs ergo doctos officiosa viros.
Talia cum constant, &c.*

In the Year 1540. (32. Hen. 8.) I find that he was living at Carleon in his native Country, where I think he taught School, and the same Year to publish, Commentaries on Will. Lily's construction of the eight parts of Speech. — Besides which, he had before in the said Year, translated from Greek into Latin, Marcus Eremita de Lege & Spiritu, and from Lat. into English, The paraphrase of St. Paul's Epistle to Titus, written by Erasmus Roterod. with whom he was well (w) acquainted. Baleus tells (x) us that the said Cox was from his Youth instructed in all liberal arts, that he was a Grammarian, Rhetorician, Poet, Divine, and a Preacher of God's word. Also that he had written against those, who in his time wrot of Justification by works, and that he was in high esteem among learned Men in Fifteen hundred and forty. All which works, besides Verses of divers kinds, and Epistles, were by him written before the end of that Year; as also Latin Verses occasionally set before Books that were published, particularly before John Palsgrave's Lesclarcissement, an. 1530. He was living in the Reign of Ed. 6. but when, or where, he died, I cannot yet tell. He left behind him a Son named Francis Cox, who proceeded D. of D. as a Member of New Coll. in the Year 1594, and he a Son named William, who was a Divine of Chichester in Sussex.

65. THOMAS WYATT the delight of the Muses and of Mankind, Son of Henr. Wyatt of Allington Castle in Kent Knight and Banneret, by Anne his Wife Daughter of Job. Skinner of Surrey, was born of an ancient and gentile Family in the said County of Kent, sent to Cambridge to be initiated in Academical Learning, transplanted thence to Oxon purposely to advance himself in knowledge by the hearing of the Cardinals Lectures, then lately settled there; but whether he took a Degree with us, or at Cambridge, I find not as yet. Afterwards he being sent to travel, he return'd an accomplish'd Gentleman, and was esteemed by all those that knew him to be a Person adorn'd with the endowments as well of body and mind, as of fortune. By the dayly and unwearied practice of the two former, while he was in his travels, and after his return, he became not only well skill'd in military matters, but also in several Arts and Tongues: And as esteemed strong and valiant in body, so powerful in mind and counsel. At length he with Hen. Howard or Howard Earl of Surrey, (who also had travel'd into Italy, and there tasted the sweet and stately measures and style of the Italian Poesie) being esteemed to be the first refiners of the English Tongue, Wyatt was introduced into the Court, was beloved of K. Hen. 8. who honored him with the Degree of Knighthood, and sent him in several Embassies beyond the Seas, which he very prudently performed with great trust to the honor of his Master. But that which is here to be in a special manner marked, was his admirable skill in Poetry, which in his first Years of reason he expressed in several amorous Songs and Poems: With which, as also his witty jests, the King himself being in an high manner delighted, they were so much admired by the Men of that, and the next Age, (tho I presume they are now lost) that some have not stuck to report, that as Mecenas, Ovid, Tibullus, &c. have been among the Latins most famous for Elegie; So Sir Tho. Wyatt the elder, Henry Howard Earl of Surrey, Sir Franc. Brian of the Privy Chamber to K. Hen. 8. (and a Traveller in 1528) Sir Phil. Sydney, George Gascoigne Esq; &c. have among the English been most passionate to bemoan the perplexities of Love. For his translation also of David's Psalms into English meter, and other of his Poetry, Leland the Antiquarian-Poet (a) forbears not to compare him to Dant and Petrarch thus.

Bellum suo merito, &c. translated by another hand as followeth.

*Let Florence fair her Dantes justly boast,
And royal Rome her Petrarchs numbred feet;
In English Wyatt both of them doth coast
In whom all grateful eloquence doth meet.*

In his younger Years, as I have told you before, he composed.

Several Songs and Poems — Many of which are in the (b) Songs and Sonnets of Hen. Howard Earl of Surrey, Son of that victorious Prince, the Duke of Norfolk, and Father of that learned Howard (sometimes his most lively Image) Henry Earl of Northampton. Which incomparable Earl of Surrey (who entirely loved our Author Sir Tho. Wyatt) hath among other things translated Virgil's Aeneids; the first and second Book whereof, he hath admirably rendred almost line for line. Sir Tho. Wyatt also in his elder Years translated into English meter, (1) The penitential Psalms, in one Book. (2) The whole Psalter of David: in praise of which last, is an Encomium in the Songs (c) and Sonnets of the Earl of Surrey before-mention'd. At length our Author Wyatt being sent by the King towards Falmouth in Cornwall, to conduct Montmorantius firnamed a Courriers thence to London, (for he came from Spain in an Embassie) did, by endeavouring and labouring to please the King, rather than to consult his own health, make more halt than good speed: For by too much riding (which was not necessarily requir'd) in a very hot season, he fell into a violent Fever. Whereupon putting in at a Mercate Town call'd Shirebourn in Dorsetshire, was within few days after cut off from among the living in the 38 Year of his Age to the great reluctancy of the King, Kingdom, his Friends, and all that knew the great worth and virtues of the Person. He was buried in the great Church there, in Summer time, in Fifteen hundred forty and one, and the next Year was a little Book of Verses, published on his death by his great admirer John Leland, entit. Nenia. Before the first page of which, is Sir Thomas's face, with a long curl'd beard (like to a Man of 80 Years of Age) printed from a wooden cut, engrav'd from his face, which was painted by a Dutchman commonly call'd Hans Holbin. At the same time was an Epitaph made on him by the (d) Earl of Surrey, as it seems, another also by Sir Tho. (e) Chaloner in long and short Verses, and a third, which was a large one in Prose, by his entire Friend Sir Job. Mason (Chancellor of this University 1553.) a Copy of which I have seen, and in some things do follow it in my afore-said discourse. This Sir Tho. Wyatt left behind him a Son of both his names, begotten on the body of his Wife Elizabeth, Daughter of Thom. Brook Lord Cobham, who being a Commotioner in the Reign of Qu. Mary, lost his Head, and left issue by Jane his Wife Daughter and Co-heir of Will. Hawte of Bourn Kt. a Son named Geor. Wyatt of Boxley in Kent Esq; restored 13. Elizab. I find another Tho. Wyatt to have been a Student in Cambridge 1587, in which Year he had a Copy of Verses put into Academia Cantabrigiensis Lacrymæ, tumulo D. Philippi Sydneii sacratæ. Published by Alex. Nevill.

66. RICHARD TURPIN was descended from an ancient Family of his name living at Knaptoft in Leicestershire (extracted from that of the Turpins of Whitchebster in Northumberland) and educated for a time in Grammatical and Academical Learning in this University. Whence being taken before he was honored with a Degree, spent afterwards his chief time in Military Affairs at Calice in France, under King Hen. 8. He hath written,

A Chronicle — containing matters only of his time; 1541. and dying at Calice before mention'd in Fifteen hundred forty and one (33. Hen. 8.) was buried in the Church of St. Nicholas there, leaving then behind him the Character of a Worth Gentleman.

67. RICHARD WHYTFORDE, who in his Writings styles himself the Wretch of Sion was educated for a time among the Oxonians, but whether he took a Degree, we have no record that shews it. Afterwards he was received into the Family of Rich. Foxe Bishop of Winchester, and by him was made his Chaplain about the latter end of Hen. 7. at which time he became acquainted with Sir Tho. More, then a Young Man, between whom was great amity. Afterwards Whytforde being minded to leave the World and all hopes of preferment, entred himself a Monk of the Order of St. Brigit in the Monastery called Sion near to Brentford in Middlesex. About which time being known to Scholars for his divine learning (for in Philosophy he was but little vers'd) and most sincere holiness, he became acquainted with that great light of learning Erasmus, who sometimes mentions him in his Epistles, and advises him thus, Cura ut valeas teq; tua Philosophia oblectes, &c. But such was his ill fortune, that he lived to see himself turn'd out of his Cell, and the Cell it self converted to a profane use. Whereupon one Will. Mountjoy descended of a noble race, received him into his Family, and made him his Confessor, which is all that I know of him at present, only that he wrot and translated these things following.

Work of preparation unto the Communion, and also for Housholders to govern their Families. Lond. in oct. When printed I know not; for the Copy that I saw was imperfect.

A Boke called the Pye or Tonne of the life of perfection. A work of the three Vows of Religion, contrary to the great Hereticks the Lutherans. Lond. 1532. qu. The reason of the title is this. The Author compares the life of perfection to precious Wine kept in a Pye or Tonne, made as it were of three plain boards, viz. the three Vows of Obedience, wilful poverty and chastity; which are bound together, as with hoops, by their rules, as of St. Austine, Benedict, Francis, Basil. Which hoops are knit, as with wykers, with the holy ceremonies of Religion, contained in the Statutes, Constitutions, Injunctions, and Customs of every Monastery. This allegory he seems to prosecute throughout the whole work. His main aim is to commend and defend the religious Orders, and those three monastick Vows, against the objections of the Lutherans.

Treatise of patience. Also a work of divers impediments and lets of perfection. Lond. 1541. qu.

The Martirloge after the use of the Church of Salisbury, and as it is read in Sion, with additions. Lond. in qu.

Solitary Meditations.

Psalter of Jesus — Printed several times in Engl. and French. He also translated from Latin into English. (1) St. Austine's rule. Lond. 1525. qu. to which also he put notes. This was done before by another hand, but being not well understood by the Nuns of Sion, they desired him to do it better, which he accordingly did, and dedicated it to them. (2) St. Bonaventure his lessons entitled Alphabetum Religiosorum. Lond. 1532. qu. with other things, as 'tis probable. The Reader is now to know that there was another Richard Whytforde, a wealthy Clerk, possessed of Lands in Hope, Hopedale, and Whytforde in Flintshire; as also of Lands in Farnworth and Widdows in Lancashire, who in his last days entring himself a Brother into the Monastery of Sion before-mention'd, died and was buried there 3. Hen. 8. Dom. 1511. But this R. Whytforde, who seems to have been born in Flintshire, was no writer, only Unkle to Rich. Whytforde before-mention'd; who upon his Unkles account, and because of his benefaction to Sion, was entred a Brother there, being originally, as I suppose, of Whytforde in Flintshire.

68. JOHN SHEPREVE or Shepery was born in, or near to, the (f) Parish of Radley, about a mile or two distant from Abendon in Berks; admitted Probationer-Fellow of Corpus Ch. Coll. in the Year 1528. aged 19 or thereabouts, took the Degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1533, about which time he was Greek Reader in the said College, and afterwards Hebrew Professor of the University, in the place of Rob. Wakfeld, (f) His Surname and Family did live at Sugworth in the Parish of Radley in the time of Qu. Elizab. and before.

about 1538. Three Years after, he did, with leave from the chief Members of the University, begin to expound in the publick Schools the Book of Genesis in the Hebrew Language, and would have gone forward with the Books that follow, had not death prevented him. He was one of the skilfullest Linguists (his Age being considered) that ever was in Oxon before his time, and was thought to surpass Origen in Memory. So excellent a Poet also he was, that his equal scarce could be found, it having been an ordinary matter with him to compose 100 very good Verses every day at vacant hours, some of which are extant. Several Authors have celebrated his Memory in their respective Books of Poems, particularly John Leland in his (g) Encomia illustrium & eruditorum in Anglia virorum, &c. and in his (h) Cygnia Cantio; in the last of which he styles him Decus utrinque linguae: Also Dr. Job. White in his (i) Diacosio-Martyrion, who entitles him trium Linguarum peritissimus, and others. Among the Books that he hath written, these only I have seen, viz.

Summa & synopsis Novi Testamenti distictis ducentis sexaginta comprehensa. First of all published by John Parkhurst at Strasburgh about 1556. in oct. with some of his Serious Epigrams at the end, taken from his Ludicra or Epigram. Juvenilia, which I shall hereafter mention under him the said Parkhurst. Afterwards the said Summa & synopsis were printed at Lond. 1560. and at Oxon. 1586. in oct. which last edition was reviewed and corrected by Dr. Laur. Humphrey. They are also printed, if I mistake not, in a Book called Gemma Fabri. Lond. 1598. and were by the Author composed to no other end but to assist the memories of Novices and Candidates in Divinity.

Hyppolitus Ovidiana Phædra respondens. Before which, our Author hath a Preface to the Epistle of Hyppolitus to Phædra, contained in about 350 long and short Verses, written to one Mr. Guade a pious Priest and Chaplain to K. Hen. 8. This Preface with the Book it self, all in the like Verse, was published at Oxon. about 1584. in oct. by George Esberidge a Physician, sometimes Pupil to the said Job. Shepery.

Vita & Epicedion Johannis Claymonds Præsidis Coll. Corp. Cbr. MS. in C.C.C. Library: The beginning of which is, Tristia quisquis ades, &c. written in long and short Verses. He also translated from Greek into Latin several Books, as Euripides his Hecuba, and Seneca's Hercules furens, something of Basil, &c. besides compositions in Poetry and Prose, which after the Author's death came into the hands of George Esberidge before-mention'd; who promised in the Year 1584. to make them publick, but what hindered him, unless death, I know not. As for our Author Shepery he gave way to fate (k) at Agmundesham commonly called Amerham in Bucks. in the Month of July in Fifteen hundred forty and two, and was buried, I presume, in the Church there. Soon after, his death being known in Oxon, divers ingenious and learned Men made Verses to his memory in Greek and Latin, and caused them to be stuck up on St. Mary's Church doors, to be read by the Academians as they passed by. Some Persons, whether for the sake of his memory, or for Poetry I know not, got copies of them very greedily, and gathered all they could get, to the end that with the help of Esberidge they might be published. At length being put into the hands of Herman Evans a Stationer, for that purpose, he kept them till he could get more to be added to them, but what hindered their birth I know not.

69. WILLIAM THYNNE, otherwise Botevill, was, as it seems, a Solopian born, and educated among the Oxonians for a time. Afterwards retiring to the Court, became through several petite employments, chief Clerk of the Kitchen to K. Hen. 8. and is stiled by Erasmus (l) Thynnus Aulicus. This Person who was poetically given from his Youth, did make a search after all the works of Jeffery Chaucer the Prince of our English Poets, many of which were then in MS. At length having collected all the ancient Copies of that Author, he took great pains to correct and amend them. Which being so done, he put notes and explanations on, and printed them altogether in one Volume in Folio, (not in double columns as they have been since) and dedicated them to K. Hen. 8. 1542. an. 1542, having been partly and imperfectly done several Years before by Will. Caxton. Afterwards Job. Stow the Chronologer did correct, increase and publish, them with divers ample notes collected out of several records and monuments. All which he delivering to his Friend Tho. Speght a Cantabrigian, he drew them into good form and method, mixed them with his own, and published them 1597. See more in Franc. Thynne, under the Year 1611, who was, as it seems, descended from him. Whether this Will. Thynne, whom I have mentioned before, be the same with Will. Thynne Esq; one of the Clerks of the Green-Cloth, and master of the Household of K. Hen. 8. (the same Will. Thynne, I mean, who died 10. Aug. 1546. and was buried in the Church of Allhallows Barkin in London) I am yet to learn. I find another Will. Thynne Esq; Brother to Sir John Thynne Knight, who after he had travell'd through most parts of Europe, return'd an accomplish'd Gentleman, and in the 1. Edw. 6. Dom. 1547. went into Scotland under the command of Edward Duke of Somerset, (to which Duke, his Brother Sir John, was Secretary) where as an Eques catafractus (that is a Chevalier arm'd cap a pee) he performed excellent service in the Battel at Muscelborough against the Scots. This Person I take to be the same, to whom K. Hen. 8. by his Letters Pat. dat. 8. May 38. of his Reign, Dom. 1546. gave the office of general Receiver of two Counties in the Marches of Wales, commonly call'd The Earl of Marches Lands. At length when the infirmities of Age came upon him, he gave himself solely up to devotion, and was a daily Auditor of divine service in the Abbey Church at Westminster. He surrendred up his Soul to him that gave it, 14. March 1584, and was buried in the said Church opposite to the door leading into the Cloister. Over his Grave was soon after erected a Monument of Alabaster, and 100 Years after, was another stately Monument erected near to it Westward, for one descended from Sir Job. Thynne beforemention'd, namely for Tho. Thynne of Langleat in Wilts. Esq; sometimes a Gent. Com. of Ch. Ch. who was barbarously murder'd in the Pall-mall by a German, Sweed, and Pole, on Sunday in the Evening 12. Feb. 1681. For whom was a large inscription made, to be engraved on the said Monument, but for certain passages therein, reflecting on Justice and I know not what, was not suffer'd to be put thereon.

70. JOHN HOKER was first Demie or Semicommoner, afterwards Fellow of St. Mary Magd. College, and in 1535. Master of Arts, being then accounted excellently well read in Greek and Latin Authors, a good Rhetorician and Poet, and much commended for his facete fancy. Leland is pleas'd to mention him in one of his works, and to stile (m) him, not without desert, Nitor artium bonarum. He hath written,

Piscator, or, the Fisher caught, a Comedy.

An Introduction to Rhetorick.

Poema de vero crucifixo.

- Clar. Epigrammata varia, and other things, which I have not yet seen. He was living in Magd. Coll. in Fifteen hundred forty and three, (being then Bach. of Divinity of three Years standing) as it appears in the Bursars accounts of that Houle. I presume he died shortly after, and not in 1541, as Bale and Pitts do tell you.

71. EDWARD LEE Son of Rich. Lee of Lee-magna in Kent Esq; Son of Sir Rich. Lee Knight, sometimes twice Lord Mayor of the City of London, was born in Kent, particularly (as I suppose) at Lee before-mentioned, sent to St. Mary Magd. Coll. about 1499, and took, as 'tis said, one Degree in Arts, but whether true, I cannot justly affirm, because the Register of that time and other writings, are imperfect. In the Year 1523, one Ed. Lee was admitted Bachelaur of Arts, but him I take to be too late for this Edw. Lee, whom we are further to mention. Afterwards he went to Cambridge, as one (n) reports, being probably driven hence by Pests that frequently then hap'ned in Oxon. Yet the Reader is to know, that he is not reckoned among the Archbishops and Bishops, which have been educated in that University, by Dr. Matthew Parker, in his Catalogue of them, at the end of his Cat. of Chancellors, Proctors, &c. thereof, in his Edition of Antiquitates Britannicae, &c. Printed an. 1573. Howsoever it is, I shall not dispute it, only say, that afterwards he was made Chaplain to K. Hen. 8. and his Almoner, being then a violent Antagonist of Erasmus, but whether greater in Learning than he, or his equal, was then doubtful; yet there be not wanting some that say, that tho he was a learned Man, yet he was not a fit match for that polite Person. Not long after, the K. employed him in several Embassies, particularly in that to the Emperor with Sir Franc. Poinz, and in another with the Lord Morley, and Sir Will. Hufsey into Germany to Don Ferdinando Duke of Austria, with the Order of the Garter, an. 1523, and a third with Stokesley B. of London, and Thom. Earl of Wilts. to the Pope at Bononie, about the intricate matter of Marriage with Qu. Catherine, an. 1529. In which Year, in the beginning of Febr. he became Chancellor of the Church of Salisbury by the resignation of Thom. Winter, and was succeeded in that dignity by Edw. Farmer, in Decemb. 1531. After his return from the last Embassie, he was made Archbishop of York an. 1531. was incorporated D. of D. of this University in the latter end of October (which Degree he had received in a transmarine University, while he was an Embassador, by actual creation) and on the 5. of Dec. following, in the same Year, he had (o) restitution made to him of the temporalities belonging to that See. He was a great Divine, and very well seen in all kind of Learning, famous as well for his Wisdom as virtue, and holiness of life, a continual Preacher of the Gospel, a Man very liberal to the poor, and exceedingly beloved of all sorts of Men, who greatly mis'd and bemoan'd the want of him, when dead. He hath written, Epistola Apologetica, quæ respondet D. Erasmi Epistolas. There the same Year. In which Year also (1520.) was published a Book in qu. at Basil entit. Epistolæ aliquot eruditiorum virorum, ex quibus perspicuum sit Edwardi Lei virulentia. They were written to shew the great anger and spleen, that the said Lee bore against Erasmus and some of his Writings, mostly by Sir Tho. More, Tho. Lupset, Rich. Paice, Ulricus Huttenus Esq; and Jo. Sapidus.

Epistolæ Sexcentæ.

Epicedia clarorum virorum, besides other things which I have not yet seen. This Dr. Lee Archb. of York died 13. Sept. in Fifteen hundred forty and four, aged 62. and 1544. was buried in the middle of the South Isle, above the Choir of the Cath. Church there. Over his Grave, as there is a little Inscription to continue his memory at that place, so in the Windows of the Founders Chamber at Magd. College (over the great Gate leading into the quadrangle) are these two Verses set up under his Arms (impaled by those of the See of York) by Dr. Lawr. Humphrey, an. 1566.

Unus erat Leyus velut inter sydera Phæbus,

Sic vixit socios temporis ipse sui.

In the said Windows, Dr. Humphrey caus'd to be put up the Arms of all such Bishops that had been educated in Magd. Coll. even to his time, an. 1566. I have seen several Letters written by this Dr. Lee to K. H. 8. and in one he wonders, that the Popes Supremacy should be a cause for Martyrdom, and that Fisher Bishop of Rochester should dye in defence of it, when in other matters of faith, and errors against the same, he hath dissembled, and hath not been content with such as have written against them for the favor he bare to the Party, in whose Books they are found, &c.

72. JOHAN. LUDOVIC. VIVES was born at Valencia in Spain, educated in Grammar learning there, but in Logic at Paris, at which time all good Arts were banished thence, and the Students totally bent on Sophistical Cavils. Soon after being taken off from those vain babblings, he applied himself to the Study of Humanity, and became (his Age consider'd) noted for it. Afterwards he went to the University of Lovaine, where he seriously applied himself to Lat. and Gr. learning, and sought out all ways to be acquainted with polite and learned Men, being then, by that time, so polite himself, that in detestation of his former errors in following vain sophistry, he wrote a Book Contra Pseudo-Dialecticos. At riper Years he applied himself to the study of the Civil Law and of Divinity, and to the searching of the Writings of all the learned Doctors of the Church by the advice of Des. Erasmus, who had a particular respect for him for mending and correcting some of his Writings, and collecting his Adagies. On the 4. July 1517. he was made (being then at Lovaine) one of the first Fellows of Corp. Chr. Coll. in Oxon. by the Founder thereof. By which time his fame being spread over England, and the more for this reason that Catherine of Spain, the first Wife of K. Hen. 8. had a peculiar respect for him, and cherished his Muse, he was invited into England by Cardinal Wolsey (as it seems) in the Year 1523, and coming to Oxon in Aug. or Sept. did (p) read the said Cardinals lecture of Humanity in the Hall of the said College, and that (as 'tis said) of the Civil Law before the Members of the University. Farther also to add grace and honor to him, it pleased K. Hen. 8. Qu. Catherine, and the prime Persons of their Courts to be (as (q) some report) his Auditors about the latter end of the aforesaid Year, he having been solemnly incorporated Doctor of the Civil Law before, as he had stood in another University. While he remained here he wrote his Books De ratione studii puerilis, and De consultatione, and became so much admired by the Academians, for his great learning and eloquence, (and the more for this reason, that their studies were then wholly bent towards Humanity) that they revived the Degrees of Grammar, Rhetorick, and Poetry, which had been before much neglected. Afterwards he retired to Bruges in Flanders from whence he came, where, about that time he took to him a Wife, but the next Year, viz. in March 1524, he was at Oxon again, as it appears from an Epistle to K. Hen. 8. dated then thence, at which time, if I mistake not, he continued his Lectures either in Humanity or the Civil Law, and was constituted Tutor for the Latin tongue to the Young Lady Mary Dau. of King Hen. 8. His Writings are many, being mostly printed in two Tomes at Basil 1555, but least I should break the Method that I have hitherto followed, I shall make a recital of some.

De anima & vita. lib. 3. At Bruges, 1538. With many other things, which for brevity sake I shall now omit. He also translated into Latin, Isocrates his Nicocles, dedicated to Card. Wolsey, by his Epist. dat. at Oxon 15. Dec. 1523, with other translations which I also shall omit. As to the time of this worthy Authors death, many Writers differ, and the just day or year is yet uncertain. Anton. Possevin saith he died at Bruges in Flanders 1536, or thereabouts, having left off writing in 1535. Ludovic. Guicciard in his description of Bruges reports it, an. 1540. Thuanus who saith he was a Professor at Lovaine, tells us that he died there 1541, and Joh. Whyte in his Diacosio-Martyrion printed 1553, would have it at Bruxels 1545. Which last Author being before all the former in time, and perhaps may know, or remember Vives, ought therefore to be believed before the rest. But these matters notwithstanding being uncertain, I shall venture to put his death under Fifteen hundred forty and four, which being at Bruges, was buried in the Church of St. Donatus there. See more of him in a Book intit. Bibliotheca Hispanica. Printed at Rome in two Tomes in fol. 1672. Tom. 1. p. 552, 553, &c. Both which Tomes were written by Nicholaus Antonius Hispanensis, J. C. Kt. of the Order of St. James.

73. ROBERT SHYNGLETON descended from a good Family of his name living in Lancashire, was always esteemed an ingenious Man while he resided in the University, but whether he was honored with a Degree, it appears not. Afterwards being a Priest and a Requent Preacher, he took occasion to reflect on the times, and certain Persons, in his Sermons. For which being called to an account and committed, was forced, with two other Persons, to make his Palinode before a Convention of certain Bishops at London, an. 1543. (35.H. 8.) His works are these.

Treatise { Of the seven Churches.

{ Of the Holy Ghost.

Comment on, or explanation of, certain Prophecies-- The two first were formerly, (perhaps still) in the King's Library at Westminster. The last giving high offence, as containing many treasonable matters, and most severe reflections, the Author was (*) hanged for it at London in Fifteen hundred forty and four. Anton. Possevin styles (†) him a Martyr for the Rom. Cath. Cause, and Joh. Piseus omits (‡) him as being an Heretick, or at least for the honorable mention made of him by Jo. Bale.

74. WILLIAM LATYMER became Fellow of Allsouls Coll. in 1489, whence, after he had spent some Years in Logicals and Philosophicals, he travelled into Italy, and settling at Padoua for a time, did much advance his learning, especially in the Greek tongue. After his return, he was incorporated M. of A. as it seems, became most eminent, and was worthily numbered among the lights of learning in his time by Jo. Leland, as I have elsewhere (r) told you. About the beginning of Hen. 8. he was Master or Tutor to Reynold Pole (afterwards Cardinal, and Archb. of Canterbury) by whose endeavours he had some preferment in the Church confer'd upon him. He was learned in all sacred and profane Letters, and, as Erasmus saith, was verè Theologus integritate vitæ conspicuus. 'Tis said also that he hath written several things, but what they are except,

Epistolæ ad Erasmus; I know not. However he with Lynacre and Grocyn did undertake the translation of all Aristotles works into Latin, but the latter being taken away by death before they were half finished, Latymer de-

He died very aged at his Rectory of Seynburg near to Camden in Glocestershire, (which he kept with that of Wotton under Edge, and a Prebendship in the Church of Salisbury) about the Month of Sept. in Fifteen hundred forty and five, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, dedicated to St. Nicholas. Over his Grave was a Marble-stone soon after laid, with a large Inscription on a brass plate, fastned thereunto, which hath been long since taken away and defaced. I have seen a Copy (1) of his Will, whereby he gave (with certain conditions) all his Greek and Lat. Books to Allsouls, and Corp. Cbr. Coll. in Oxon, yet whether they received them it appears not. I find one Will. Latymer D. D. to have been Dean of Peterborough (in the place of Job. Boxhall ejected, an. 1560) and Archdeacon of Westminster, who dying in the Summer time (after 29. July) 1583, was buried in the Chaire of the Cath. Ch. of Peterborough beneath the Pulpit; but of what kin he was to the former I know not. He was succeeded in the said Deanery by Rich. Fletcher D. D. of Bennet Coll. in Cambridge, afterwards B. of London.

75. THOMAS SOLME, called by some Sulmo, Sowlman, and Solimont, was born in the Isle of Gernsey, educated for a time in this University, and was afterwards Secretary of the French tongue to King Hen. 8. This Person who was much conversant in English History, wrot, 1545. Select antiquities relating to Britain. — And dying in fifteen (1) hundred forty and five, was buried in the Monastery of the Carmes or Carmelites at London, leaving behind him the Character (u) of a learned Man. I find one Tbo. Solme to be Author of a Treatise entit. The Lords Flaile; being an exposition on the commandments. Printed at Basil in oct. but when, (unless in the time of Qu. Mary) the beginning or end of the Book shews not. One Tbo. Somus a Preacher in the time of Ed. 6. hath English Verses at the end of Will. Turners Book entit. A preservative or Triacle, printed in oct. an. 1551. Whether these two last be one and the same Person I know not; nor can I be positive in it, whether Tbo. Solme Author of the Lords Flaile, be the same with Thom. Solme the Historian.

76. THOMAS LANKET or Lanquet, whose place of nativity, or Hall or Coll. wherein he studied, being yet uncertain, I shall only say that he being a studious Young Man and curious searcher into ancient History, laid the Foundation of a great work, I mean a Chronicle consisting of two parts, reaching from the beginning of the World to the time of our Saviour, and was proceeding with a third part, but death preventing the compleating thereof, Thom. Cooper of Magd. Coll. finished and entituled it,

Lanquets Chronicle — See more in Tbo. Cooper under the Year 1594. Lanquet also wrot, 1545. Treatise of the Conquest of Bulloigne — When, or where printed I know not, nor any thing else of the Author, only that he (w) died at London in Fifteen hundred forty and Five; which was the seven and thirtieth Year of K. H. 8. but in what Church or Yard he was buried, I cannot tell.

77. THOMAS ELYOT was born (as 'tis said) of a Knightly Family in Suffolk, and educated (x) in Academical learning in the Hall of St. Mary the Virgin, where he obtained a considerable proficiency in Logick and Philosophy. The Year when he first began to salute the Muses, it cannot, through the deficiency of record, be well known, unless it should be about the Year 1514, for four Years after, an. 1518, I find (y) one Tbo. Elyot to be admitted ad lecturam alicujus libri facultatis artium Logices Aristotelis, which is the admission to the Degree of Bach. of Arts, and in the time of Lent the same Year, he did compleat that Degree by Determination in School-street. It doth also (z) appear that the said Tbo. Elyot was in the beginning of Aug. an. 1524. admitted ad lecturam alicujus libri Institutionem, that is to the Degree of Bach. of the Civil Law. Now if we could find, that Sir Tbo. Elyot was about 50 Years of Age when he died, then we may certainly conclude that Elyot the Bach. of Arts and of the Civil Law, might be the same with him, otherwise we cannot well do it. After he had left the University, he travelled beyond the Seas, and upon his return was introduced into the Court: Whereupon being made known to the King, (a lover of Scholars) who found him to be a Person of good parts, conferr'd on him the honor of Knighthood, and employed him in certain Embassies beyond the Seas, particularly to the Emperor Charles the 5th. at what time his great Friend and Crony Sir Tbo. More was beheaded. He was a very good Grammarian, Grecian, Poet, Philosopher, Physician, and what not to compleat a Gentleman. He was admired by, and beloved of, Scholars, and his memory was celebrated by them in their respective works, particularly by (*) Leland his contemporary. The truth is, his Learning in all kind of knowledge, brought much honor to all the Gentry and Nobility of England. He hath transmitted to posterity,

This worthy Knight (who was a servant to the King) was buried in the Church of Carleton in Cambridgeshire (of which County he had been Sheriff) 25. March in Fifteen hundred forty and six, and had soon after a Monument put over his Grave. Besides several Mannors that he had in Cambridgeshire, he had one or more in Hampshire. 1546.

78. JOHN LONGLAND received his first breath in a Mercat Town called Henley in Oxfordshire, was first made a Semicommoner or Demie, and afterwards Fellow, of Magdalen College: About which time being Master of Arts and in Orders, he addicted himself very severely to study and devotion, and became famous for his exemplary life and conversation. In 1505, he was made Principal of Magd. Hall, in 1510 (2. Hen. 8.) he was admitted to the reading of the sentences, and in the Year after he proceeded in Divinity. In Decemb. an. 1514, he succeeded Dr. Will. Atwater in the Deanery of Salisbury, and in 1519, he was made Canon of Windfore: At which time he being in great favour with the King for his excellent way of Preaching, he did not only make him his Confessor, but also, upon the death of Atwater, Bishop of Lincoln, and about that time Lord Almoner. To the same See therefore he being consecrated 5. May 1521 had restitution (a) made to him of the temporalities belonging thereunto 26. June following. In 1528. or thereabouts, he was the first Man of account that mention'd a divorce to the King, to be between him and his Qu. Catherine; for which afterwards, when it was known, he was much blamed, and the more, because he took all occasions to forward, and not in the least to contradict, it. he was elected Chancellor of the University of Oxon, which office he keeping to his dying day, shew'd himself a special Friend thereunto in maintaining its privileges, and in exhibiting (as he had done before) to the wants of certain Scholars, and in solely maintaining others. I have seen divers Epistles written to him from the venerable House of Regents and Non-Regents, wherein they, in an high manner, do proclaim his Religion and Doctrin, and do not stick to compare (b) him to Joseph the Patriarch. His writings are these.

Declamatio (five concio) coram reverendiss. in Ch. patribus. Domino, D. Thomâ Rom. Ecclesiæ Presbytero Cardinali, Ebor. Archiep. &c. & Laurentio Cardinali, sedis Apost. de latere quoque Legato, principio visitationis Ordinis S. Benedicti apud Westmonasterium initæ, 10. Jan. 1519. in Gen. 18. Descendam & videbo, &c.

Concio habita coram celeberrimo conventu, tum Archiepiscoporum, cum Episcoporum, cateraque multitudinis in occidentalis cænobii (Westminster) Sanctuario, 27 Nov. 1527. in Psal. 101. Tu exurgens Domine misereberis Sion.

These three Latin Sermons before-mentioned, were printed at London in fol. by Rich. Pynson the King's Printer, and dedicated by the Author of them to Dr. Warham Archbishop of Canterbury.

Quinq; sermones sextis Quadragesimæ feriis, habiti coram R. Hen. 8. an. 1517. Prima in Ezech. 18. Anima quæ peccaverit, ipsa morietur. Reliquæ in Matth. 21. Regnum Dei dabitur genti facienti fructus ejus. — Printed by Rich. Pynson before-mention'd, and by their Author dedicated to Rich. Kedermyster Abbat of Winchcomb. All the said Sermons are in one Volume in fol. but not said when printed.

Expositio concionalis Psalmi sexti: an. 1518.

Expositio conc. 2di. Psalmi penitentialis, coram Regia Majestate. an. 1519. This is Psalm 31.

Conciones expositivæ in tertium Psalmum penitent. coram R. Maj. an. 1520. This is Psalm 37.

Conciones expos. in 50 Psal. penitent. coram Rege; an. 1521, & 1522.

All which Expositions and Sermons, were, except the first, printed at London in fol. by Rob. Redman 1532. But the Reader is to note, that all the Latin Sermons and Expositions that I have mention'd under this Author Longland, having been all or most preached in the English tongue, were translated into Lat. by Thom. Key of Allsouls Coll. as I shall tell you when I come to him.

Sermon before the King on Good Friday, on Heb. 13. 10. 11. 12. 13. Lond. 1538. qu. A Copy of which, or at least part, you may see in J. Fox's Book of the Acts and Mon. of the Church, &c. This Dr. Longland departed this mortal life on the 7. of May in Fifteen hundred forty and seven: Whereupon his body being opened, his bowels were taken out and buried in the Church of Wooburne in Bedfordshire, (where he died) his heart in the Cathedral of Lincolne, under the blessed Sacrament of the high Altar, and his body in the Chappel of Eaton Coll. near Windsor, of which probably he had been Fellow. Over his Grave was a Marble-stone soon after laid, with an Inscription thereon, a Copy of which is printed in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 193. b. 194 a. In the Cath. Church at Lincolne, near to the South door, (but somewhat Westward) was a fair Tomb of Marble, in the form of an Altar, built in an arch in the Wall for the said B Longland. On the Freeze above the same, is this Inscription, Longa terra mensura ejus, Dominus dedit. On the South side thereof is a beautiful Chappel, wherein hath been a Chantry for the said Bishop, as some think. He gave divers Books to Magd. Coll. Library, some to that of Oriel, and others to the Students of Durham (now Trinity) Coll. in Oxon. He gave also the second Bell at Wooburne of fine mettall silver found, which was always afterwards called Bishop Longlands Bell. He built an Alms house at the place of his nativity (Henley) Southward of the Chancel, but for how many poor People, or with what revenue he endowed it, (having been originally large) I know not. Sure I am that now seven Persons live therein, and have weekly but six pence a piece for their allowance, and is govern'd by the Corporation there.

(b) In reg. Epist. FF. ep. 93. 145. &c.

ARTHUR KELTON seems to have been born of a gentle Family in Shropshire, though said to be a Welsh Man; and, after he had made a considerable progress in Arts, applied his mind mostly to the reading of the Histories of Britain, wherein he much excelled in his riper Years. But being withal very poetically given, he must forsooth write and publish his Lucubrations in verse; whereby for rhyme sake, many material matters, and the due timing of them, are omitted, and so consequently rejected by Historians and Antiquaries, as his

Chronicle of the Brutes. Lond. 1547 in oct. Printed in an old English Character. The Preface of which, being also written in Verse, is by the Author directed to K. Ed. 6. At the end of the said Chronicle is,

A Genealogy of the Brutes— This is drawn from Ofiris the first King of Egypt down to K. Ed. 6. of England, and contains but about 32 Generations, which shews that the Author was ignorant in Genealogies. He hath also written another Book of Poetry in praise of the Welsh Men, dedicated to Sir Will. Herbert, but this I have not yet seen, nor other (if any) of his things in Prose. He was living at Shrewsbury in the time of King Ed. 6. and, for ought I know to the contrary died also, and was buried, there.

ANDREW BORDE, who writes himself Andreas Perforatus, was born, as it seems, at Pevensey commonly called Pensay in Suffex, and not unlikely educated in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, brought up at Oxford, (as (c) he saith) but in what house, unless in Hart-Hall I know not. Before he had taken a Degree, he entred himself a Brother of the Carthusian Order at, or near to, London; where continuing till he was wearied out with the severity of that Order, he left it, and for a time applied his Muse to the Study of Physick in this University. Soon after, having a rambling head, and an unconstant mind, he travelled through most parts of Europe (thorough and round about Christendom, and out of Christendom, as he (d) saith) and into some parts of Africa. At length upon his return, he settled at Winchester, where he practised his faculty, and was much celebrated for his good success therein. In 1541. and 42, I find him living at Mountpelier in France, at which time, I presume, he took the Degree of Doctor of Physick, and soon after being incorporated in the same Degree at Oxon, lived for a time at Pevensey in Suffex, and afterwards at his beloved City of Winchester; where, as at other places, it was his custom to drink water three days in a week, to wear constantly a shirt of hair, and every night to hang his shroud and socking or burial-sheet at his beds feet, according as he had done, as I conceive, while he was a Carthusian. He always professed Celibacy, and did zealously write against such Monks, Priests, and Friars, that violated their Vow by Marriage, as many did when their respective Houses were dissolv'd by King Hen. 8. But that matter being irksome to many in those days, was the reason, I think, why a Calvinistical (e) Bishop, (who was then, as it seems, married,) fell foul upon him by reporting (f) openly that under colour of virginity and strictness of life, he kept three Whores at once in his Chamber at Winchester, to serve not only himself, but also to help the Virgin Priests, &c. about 1547. How true this is I cannot say, (though the matter as the Bishop reports, was examined before several Justices of Peace) because the Book here quoted, contains a great deal of passion, and but little better language, than that of Foul-mouth'd Bale, not only against him (And. Borde) but also against Dr. Job. Storie, Dr. Th. Martin, &c. The first of whom, he saith, kept a Wench called Magd. Bowyer living in Grandpoole in the Suburbs of Oxon, and the other, another call'd Alice Lambe, living at the Christopher Inn in the said City. But letting these matters pass, (notwithstanding I have read elsewhere, that the said three Whores, as the Bishop calls them, were only Patients, that occasionally recurred to his house) I cannot otherwise but say, that our Author Borde, was esteem'd a noted Poet, a witty and ingenious Person, and an excellent Physician of his time; and that he is reported by some to have been, not only Physician to K. Hen. 8.

but also a Member of the College of Physicians at London, to whom he dedicated his Breviary of Health. He hath written,

A Booke of the introduction of knowledge, the which doth teach a Man to speak part of all manner of Languages, and to know the usage and fashion of all manner of Counties, and for to know the most part of all manner of coins of money. Lond. 1542. qu. Dedicated to the Lady Mary Daughter of K. Hen. 8. by an Epist. dat. at Mountpelier 3. May 1542. This Book is partly written in Verse, and partly in Prose, contain'd in 39 Chapters; every one of which hath in its beginning the Picture of a Man, sometimes two or three, Printed from a wooden cut. Before the first Chapter, which treateth of the natural disposition of an English Man, is the picture of a naked Man with a piece of cloath lying on his right arm, and a pair of Scissers in his left hand, with a Copy of Verses Printed under him, the two first of which are these,

I am an English Man, and naked I stand here, Musing in my mind, what rayment I shall wear.

Before the seventh Chapter is the picture of our Author Borde standing in a Pew, with a Canopy over it, having a Gown on, with sleeves a little wider than an ordinary coat, a Laurel on his Head, and a Book before him on a desk, with this title of the said Chapter under him. The VII. Chapter sheweth how the author of this Booke had dwelt in Scotland, and other Ilands, and did go thorow and round about Christendom and out of Christendom, declaring the properties of all the Regions, Countries, and Provinces the which he did travel thorow. He hath also written,

The Breviary of health, wherein are remedies for all manner of sicknesses and diseases, which may be in Man or Woman, expressing the obscure terms of Greek, Lat. Barbary and English, concerning Physick and Chirurgery. Lond. 1547. 48. 57. 87. &c. in qu. in four Books. Dietary of health. Lond. 1576. oct. Sec. Edition.

The merry tales of the mad Men of Gotham — Printed at London in the time of K. Hen. 8. in whose Reign and after, it was accounted a Book full of wit and mirth by Scholars and Gentlemen. Afterwards, being often printed, is now sold only on the stalls of Ballad-singers.

A right pleasant and merry history of the Mylner of Abington, with his Wife and his fair Daughter, and of two poor Scholars of Cambridge — Pr. at Lond. by Rich. Jones in qu. Andr. Bords name is not to it, but the Copy of the Book which I saw, did belong to Th. Newton of Cheshire, whom I shall hereafter mention, and by him 'tis written in the title that Dr. Borde was the Author. He hath also written a Book of Prognosticks, another of Urines, and a third of Every Region, Country, and Province, which shews the Miles, Leagues, distance from City to City, and from Town to Town, with the noted things in the said Cities and Towns. This last, the Author lent to Thom. Cromwell of Bishops-Walsbam near to Winchester, written fairly with his own hand, but he afterwards being taken up with State-affairs, and matters of high concern, lost the Book to the great grief of the Author, otherwise he would have published it. At length after many rambles to and fro in this World, he was made (g) Prisoner in the close wards of the Fleet in London, (the reason why, I cannot justly say) where dying in the Month of Apr. in Fifteen hundred forty and nine, was buried, as I conceive, in the Church or Yard of St. Bride, otherwise St. Bridget, for in that Parish is the Prison called the Fleet situated. In his Will (h) dated the eleventh of Apr. an. 1549. and proved the 25. of the same Month and in the same Year, he did constitute one Ric. Matbew, (without the addition of Nephew, Kinsman, or natural Son) his Heir, left him his two tenements in the Sooke in the Town of Lynne in Norfolk, his tenements with appurtenances which he had by the death of his Brother, in Pevensy, and his House and Chattels in and near Winchester. Job. Bale in the very ill Language that he gives of Dr. Borde, saith (*) that the Brothelhouse which he kept for his Brother-Virgins being discovered, took physical poison to hasten his death, which was, as he saith, (but false) in 1548. This is the language of one who had been a Bishop in Ireland.

WILLIAM HUGH a Yorkshire Man (†) born, was 81. educated in Logick and Philosophy in C. Chr. Coll. but whether in the condition of a Chorister, Clerk, or Chaplain, I know not. In the Year 1543, he took the Degree of M. of Arts, being about that time compell'd to bestow in a manner all his time in teaching Young Scholars. Afterwards he was favour'd in his studies by the Lady Denny living at Court, to whom, I suppose, he was Chaplain. He hath written,

The troubled Mans Medicine, wherein we may learn patiently to suffer all kind of adversity. In two parts. Lond. 1567. oct. the 2. or 3. edit. He also translated into English, a Book intit. by him thus. A Booke of Bertram the Priest intreating of the body and blood of Christ, written to Charles the Great 700 Years ago. Lond. 1548. oct. This Book was reviewed and corrected by Tho. Wilcocks a Minister in Lond. printed at Lond. 1582. oct. published again with some alterations, refinements, and corrections from the errors of the former translation, with an addition of Two short discourses against purgatory and invocation of Saints. By S. D. — Lond. 1680. oct. To which is prefix'd the large Preface of Sir Humph. Lynd. and a dedicatory epistle of S. D. to Sir S. B. But these translations being esteemed by many not to be well done, Will. Hopkins Bac. of Div. and Prebendary of Worcester (sometimes of Trin. Coll. in Oxon) made and published another the same Year. See more in Humph. Lynd under the Year 1636. Our Author Hugh hath written, and translated, as 'tis said, other things, but such I have not yet seen, nor know I any thing more of him, than this, that he died by a rupture of a vein in Corpus Chr. Coll. before (i) the Feast of St. Michael in Fifteen hundred forty and nine. So that I presume he was buried in the Chappel or Cloyster belonging to the said House, if the Author saith true that he died therein.

THOMAS STERNHOLD was in all likelihood (k) 82. born in Hampshire, but whether educated in Wykeham's School near Winchester, is as yet doubtful. Sure it is, that he having spent some time in this University, left it without the honor of a Degree, and retiring to the Court of K. Hen. 8. was made Groome of the Robes to him, and when that King died he left him in his Will 100 Marks. Afterwards he continued in that office under K. Ed. 6. at which time he was in some esteem in the Royal Court for his grave vein in Poetry, and other trivial Learning. But being a most zealous Reformer; and a very strict liver, he became so scandaliz'd at the amorous and obscene Songs used in the Court, that he forsooth turn'd into English meeter 51 of Davids Psalms, and caused musical notes to be set to them, thinking thereby that the Courtiers would sing them instead of their sonnets, but did not, only some few excepted. However the Poetry and Musick being admirable, and the best that was made and composed in those times, they were thought fit afterwards to be sung in all Parochial Churches, as they do yet continue. All those Psalmes which he put into rhyme, have the Letters T. S. set before, to distinguish them from others. What other Poetry, or what Prose this our Poet Sternhold hath composed, and left behind, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he died in London or Westminster, in Fifteen hundred 1549. forty and nine. By his last Will and (l) Testament dat. 22. Aug. and proved 12. of Sept. an. 1549, wherein he is stiled Groome of the Kings Majesties Robes, it appears that he died seized of Lands in Slacksted in Hampshire, of the Farmes of Conynger, Willersley, and Holgreaves in the same County, and of Lands in the Parish of Bodmin and elsewhere in Cornwall. Contemporary with Sternhold was Job. Hopkyns, who is stiled to be (m) Britanicarum Poetarum sui temporis non infimus, as indeed by the generality living in the Reign of Ed. 6. he was so, if not more, esteemed. He turn'd into Meeter 58 of David's Psalms, which are to this day sung in Churches; and in all editions of the said Psalms, his (which he translated) hath set before them the two Letters J. H. Whether this Poet, who was living in the 3. and 4. of Phil. and Mary, Dom. 1556, and after, was of this University of Oxon, I dare not yet affirm. However the Reader is to know that one Joh. Hopkyns was admitted Bach. of Arts thereof 36. Hen. 8. Dom. 1544. which he compleated the same Year by Determination. I find also one Joh. Hopkyns of Waldingfeild in Suffolk Clerk, who dying in Octob. 1570, was buried in the Church-yard there, leaving then behind him a Son to be brought (n) up in learning. Besides these two, I find others to have had hands in making the said Psalms to run in meeter, as (1) Will. Whittingham afterwards the unworthy Dean of Durham, whom I shall hereafter mention; and (2) Tho. Norton of Sharpenhaule or Sharpenhoe in Bedfordshire a forward and busie Calvinist in the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth's Reign, who then was accounted eminent for his Poetry and making of Tragedies, as I shall tell you in Tho. Sakvile under the Year 1608. This T. Norton, who seems to have been a Barrester, made 27 of the said Psalms of David to run in rhyme, but whether he was educated in this University, is to me as yet uncertain. As for other works of his that are published, which are now in a manner lost, are these (1) An Epistle to the Queens poor deceived Subjects of the North Country, drawn into Rebellion by the Earls of Northumberland and Westmorland. Lond. 1569. oct. (2) A warning against the dangerous practices of the Papists, &c. (3) A Bull granted by the Pope to Dr. Harding, &c. and others, by reconciliation, and assailing of English Papists to undermine faith and allegiance to the Queen; with a true declaration of the intention, &c. (4) A disclosing of the great Bull, and certain calves that be bath gotten, and especially the monster Bull that roared at my Lord Bishops gate. (5) An addition declaratory to the Bulls, with a searching of the maze. All which five pieces, were printed at Lond. in oct. an. 1569. He also translated from Lat. into English. (1) Epistle to Edw. Duke of Somerset. Lond. 1550. oct. written by Pet. Martyr. (2) Institutions of Christian Religion. Lond. 1587. qu. written by Jo. Calvin. (3) The larger Catechisme. Lond. 1571. qu. written by Alex. Nowell, besides other things which I have not yet seen.

83. JOHN HERON a Kentish Man born, near of kin to Sir Jo. Heron Kt. Master of the Jewel-house to K. Hen. 8. and of the same Family with those of Barmyng in Kent, was elected Fellow of Allsouls Coll. in 1538, took the Degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1544; at which time he was in great esteem for his singular skill in the Latin Tongue, for in that Language Baleus tells (o) us, that he wrot several things, which he had not seen, and had translated others from the English into the Latin Tongue; one of which was Explicatio petitoria adversus expilatores plebis; written originally by Rob. Crowley, as I shall tell you when I come to him. I find one Joh. Heron of Chiselmurst in Kent to have been tampering much with Necromancy, to the great affrightment of his Neighbors. Whereupon being complained of to the higher Powers, he was bound in a (p) Bond of an 100 Marks an. 1540, not to practice again Necromancy, Astronomy, Calculations, and other experiments, &c. Whether this Jo. Heron be the same with the former, I know not. Sure I am that this Heron the Conjuror was not unknown to Joh. Waller and Will. Cobbie two young Fellows of Kings Coll. in Cambridge, who studied and were conversant in the Black art, in the Reign of Ed. 6.

84. RICHARD SHERREY or Sbirrie became a Demie or Semi-commoner of Magd. Coll. about the Year 1522, took the Degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1531. About which time he was either Usher or Master of the School joyning to the said College; but whether ever Fellow thereof, I find not. He was a Person elegantly learned, as (*) Bale saith, and hath written,

A Treatise of Schemes and Tropes. Lond. 1550. (oct.) gathered out of the best Grammarians and Orators. He hath also translated from Lat. into English. (1) A declaration shewing that Children should from their Infancy be gently brought up in learning. Lond. 1550. (oct.) (2) Homilies on the sixth of St. John. Lond. 1550. in oct. JOHN GRIFFIN or Griffith a Welsh Man born, and 85. a Monk of the Order of Cistercians in the Monastery of Hales Owen in Worcestershire, was educated among those of his Order in the College of St. Bernard in the North Suburb of Oxon, but what degree he took I cannot yet find. Several of both his names, and of his time have taken Degrees in the Canon Law and Divinity, but which of them is this that I am now upon, I cannot say. He is reported to have been a pious and learned Man, but being unacquainted with the dealings of the World had like to have been drawn over to the Reformed Religion, but was in due time (m) fastned in his faith again to the great joy of the Rom. Catholics, who held him to be a most excellent Preacher, whether in the Lat. or English tongue. He hath published, Conciones astuales.

Conciones byemales. With other things which I have Clar. not yet seen. As for the time of his death and place of 1550. burial, I cannot yet find, he having been several Years thrust out of his Monastery at the dissolution of Religious Houses. He was living in the Reign of K. Ed. 6. and perhaps in that of Qu. Mary.

NICHOLAS KRACH, or Karche, or Chrach, 86. Kratcher, or Kratzer, (so many ways I find him written) was born at Munichen in Bavaria, and educated in the Universities of Colen and Wytttenberg till he was Bach. of Arts: Afterwards coming into England, and at length to the knowledge of Fox Bishop of Winchester, was made by him Fellow of his College called Corpus Christi, and admitted thereunto on the fourth of July 1517. About that time he reading Astronomy in the University by the command of K. Hen. 8. was soon after made by Cardinal Wolsey his Mathematick Reader when he first settled his Lectures there. In Feb. 1522. he was incorporated Bach. of Arts, as he had stood at Colen and Wytttenberg, and in the same Month was licensed to proceed in Arts; which Degree he compleated in an Act celebrated 23. March following, being then esteemed — ita (n) bonus & probus, ut majore quam Mathematicorum fortuna sit dignus, & ita sue Artis peritus, ut solus isthic artifex habere debeat. He wrot at the desire of Will. Tyler one of the Grooms of K. Hen. 8. his Bedchamber.

Canones Horopti. MS. This Book which is dedicated to K. Hen. 8. is in Corp. Chr. Coll. Library; and no doubt there is, but that other Copies of it are in other places.

De Compositione Horologeorum. MS. in the said Library. This is generally said to be his, as the Annotation at the end, may in part prove it. He made the old Dial, which is at this day in C. C. C. Garden, and that standing on a Pillar in St. Maries South Church-yard in the High Street of the City of Oxon. On which, soon after, was hung up the Universities condemnation of the Doctrin of Luther. This famous Mathematician of his time, was living in the Year 1550. (4. Ed. 6.) and after his death, 1550. (which I think soon followed) many of his Books came into the hands of that eminent Mathematician Dr. John Dee, and some into those of Dr. Rich. Forster a noted Physician, and Mathematician also. See more of this Nich. Kratzer, in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 247. b. lib. 2. p. 35. b.

DAVID CLAPHAM the eldest Son and Heir of 87. Joh. Claph. and he the fourth Son of Tho. Claph. of Beameley in Yorkshire Esq; was born, as I conceive, in that County, and after he had spent some time in Trivials, did solely addict his mind to the study of the Civil Law, but whether he took a Degree in that faculty it doth not appear. Afterwards he retired to Doctors Commons, became a noted Proctor in the Arches, and for his ingenuity and good natural parts was beloved of Sir Will. Cecill Secretary of State to K. Ed. 6. and other noted Men of that time — præter Legis peritiam, in qua plurimum excellabat (as one (o) who knew him well tells us) in diversis scientiis eruditus fuit. He hath translated from Latin into English. (1) A Treatise of Nobility. (2) The excellency of Women-kind. Both Printed at Lond. 1542. in oct. and written originally by Corn. Agrippa. (3) The praise of Matrimony. Lond. in oct. written by the said Agrippa and Erasmus. What other things he hath translated, or what he hath written I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that, after by his endeavors he had obtained a considerable Estate, he concluded his last day in his House near to Doff. Com. on the 14 of July in Fifteen hundred fifty and one. Whereupon his body was buried in the then now Church of St. Faith under part of the Cath. Church of St. Paul within the City of London, leaving behind him several Children which he had by Joan his Wife; the eldest of which was Thomas, whose posterity did lately remain at Helpston in Northamptonshire.

88. ANTHONY COPE (*) Son of Will. Cope or Coope of Banbury in Oxfordshire Esq; sometimes Cofferer to K. Hen. 7. by Joan his second Wife, Daughter and Heir of John Spencer of Hodnell (in Warwickshire) was educated in this University, but in what Coll. unless in Oriel, wherein studied several of his Surname in the time of K. Hen. 8. and K. Ed. 6. I know not. Afterwards he went into France, Germany, Italy, and elsewhere; in which places visiting the Universities, and joyning his company to the most learned Men of them, became an accomplished Gentleman, wrot several things beyond the Seas, as well as at home, as it appears from certain Authors, and from an Epigram made in his praise by Job. Bapt. Mantuan. Among them is only this (o) known to Authors.

Godly meditations on 20 select Psalms, necessary for them that desire to have the dark words of the Prophet declared. Also for those that delight in the contemplation of the spiritual meaning of them. Lond. 1547. qu. The twenty Psalms that the meditations are on, are the 1. 6. 12. 13. 23. 32. 49. 51. 73. 84. 90. 102. 103. 104. 116. 121. 130. 138. 139. 146. Afterwards he received the honor of Knighthood, and dying in Summer time in Fifteen hundred fifty and one, was buried in the Chancel of the Parish Church of Hanwell near to Banbury in Oxfordshire, leaving then behind him a Son named Edward. As for Will. Cope or Coope Cofferer to K. Hen. 7. before-mentioned, he purchased an Estate in, and near to, Banbury, and dying 7. Apr. 1513. was buried in the Church at Banbury. I find one Michael Cope to have been a zealous Calvinist at Geneva and other places, a frequent Preacher in the French Tongue and Author in the French Language of (1) A faithful and familiar exposition on Ecclesiastes, an. 1557. Which edition being amended and corrected, was published again at Geneva, 1563. in qu. (2) A godly and learned exposition upon the Proverbs of Solomon. When this last was first Printed, I know not. Sure 'tis, that being translated into English by one Marcelline Outred for the benefit of his Country-men, was Printed at London in 1580. in a thick qu. Whether this Mich. Cope was of the same Family with that of Sir Anthony's before-mentioned, or was educated in Oxon. I cannot yet tell.

89. JOHN REDMAN or Redmayne, descended from those of his name in Yorkshire, was near allied to Cuthb. Tonstall Bishop of Durham, by whose counsel and advice he became conversant from his Childhood in the Study of Learning. At the first Foundation of Corp. Ch. Coll. he was a Student (p) there for some time under the care and government of Mr. J. Claymond the first President: Thence he went to Paris, where he improved his Studies till he was 21 Years of Age. Afterwards returning to his native Country of England, he settled in St. Johns Coll. in Cambridge, where by his and Job. Cheek's example of excellency in learning, of godliness in living, of diligence in studying, of counsel in exhorting by good order in all things, were bred up so many learned Men in that one Coll. as 'twas thought by (*) one, the whole University of Lorraine in many Years was never able to afford.

In 1537, he commenced Doctor of Divinity, and about that time was made Orator of that University, and afterwards the first Master or Head of Trinity Coll. and a Dignitary in the Church. But that which is most observable, is that when he came first to that University, being then very well vers'd in the Greek and Lat. tongues, and adorn'd with knowledge by the diligent reading of Cicero, it so fell out, that Job. Cheek and Tho. Smyth (being at that time young Men, but afterwards Knights) were stirred up with a kind of emulation of his parts, and the honor that was daily done unto him. Whereupon being very desirous to follow that which he had gained, and then did profess and teach; they threw aside their sordid barbarisms, and applied themselves to the Eloquence of Plato, Aristotle, and Cicero. The truth is, by Redman's profound knowledge in the Tongues, Humanity and Divinity, he obtained many admirers, and thereby gained Profelytes to the great advantage of the refinement of the Gr. and Lat. Tongues in the University of Cambridge. He hath written,

Opus de justificatione. Antw. 1555. qu.

Hymnus in quo peccator justificationem quaerens, rudi imagine describitur. Printed with the former work.

The complaint of Grace; containing in it much godly learning, and verity of matter. Lond. 1556. in oct. published by Tho. Smith Servant to Qu. Mary. This, I suppose, is the same Book with that which Bale and Pitts intitle De gratia, lib. 1. translated into English by Job. Young of Cambridge. This Dr. Redman also took pains in compiling the first edition of the Liturgie, or Common-prayer, in the Year 1549. and dying in the College of Westminster (of which he was Prebendary) was buried in the North Isle of the Abby-Church there dedicated to St. Peter, about the latter end of Nov. in Fifteen hundred fifty and one, aged 52. See more of him in Leland's (q) Encomia, and in the Epistles (r) of Roger Ascham his sometimes friend and crony, as also in Job. Fox his Book of Acts and Monuments of the Church, &c. where you'll find (s) his conference or communication had with Rich. Wilks, 2. Nov. 1551 the Doctor being then sick at Westminster; and another conference with Mr. Alex. Nowell then Schoolmaster in Westminster and certain others, with notes of his censure and judgment touching certain points of Christ's Religion; which was made when the Doctor laid on his Death-bed. Whether this John Redmayne was Archdeacon of Taunton, and Preb. of Mylverton in the Church of Wells, in the time of Ed. 6. I cannot justly say, because he died in 1551, and that those Dignities were not fill'd up till May 1554. when then John Fitz-James was collated to them per mortem Johannis Redmayne See more in the Fasti, an. 1508. 1524. and 1543.

DAVID TOLLEY or Talley called by Leland the Antiquary Tavelegus, and by himself Taulaus, was born at a Mercate Town call'd Kingsbridge in Devonshire, became a Student of this University about 1517. (9. H. 8.) took the Degrees of Arts, as a Member of the Hall of St. Mary the Virgin, that of Master being compleated 1527. About that time he applyed his Genie to the faculty of Medicine, took the Degree of Bachelaur, and in 1534. and before, he was dispens'd with by the venerable Regents to proceed in the said faculty; but whether he was admitted or proceeded, it doth not appear. Sure I am, that he was then noted to be very able for the practice therein in this University, accounted also a good Latinist and Grecian, and to be a Person (*) praeclari ingenii, atque optimarum artium cognitione locupletus. He hath written, Progymnasmatum Grammaticae Graecae. Written for the use of Prince Ed. and to him dedicated by the Author, with an Epistle before it beginning thus, Octavus jam agitur annus, &c.

Grammaticae Regiae.

Themata Homerica. With other matters pertaining to Grammar. In 1547. or thereabouts, I find this David Tolley to be made one of the senior Students of Ch. Ch. by the name of David Towle, (being then 41 Years of Age) after K. Hen. 8. had settled the Cathedral there; at which time and before, he taught Grammar to young Students of this University. When he died I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that his name occurs among the senior Students that were Theologists of that house, in the Years 1551. and 52. Job. Bale in his Manuscript (†) De Scriptoribus Anglicis styles this Dav. Tolley, Anglie Papistarum Malleus, being probably then (temp. Ed. 6.) so accounted, but in his Printed Book published at Basil 1559, he mentioneth no such matter, which makes me think that Tolley conform'd in the time of Qu. Mary, if he was then living.

91. JOHN MORWEN or Morenus as he writes himself, was a Devonian born, admitted Scholar of Corp. Chr. Coll. 23. Feb. 1535. and afterwards Fellow, and Master of Arts. About which time entering into holy Orders, he became noted soon after for his profoundness in Divinity, and his great knowledge in the Greek tongue, being in the latter end of King Hen. 8. Reader thereof in his College, and a private instructor of John Fewell, though afterwards a hater of his Opinions. In 1551, he was admitted Bach. of Divin. and about the same time studied Physick, as having no good wishes for reformation, which tended to the ruin, (as he thought) of the Church. He is styled by a learned (*) Author, not of his opinion, to be homo Græcè doctus, sed idem Græcorum more leviculus & bibaculus, &c. Afterwards he was patronized in his studies by Will. Roper Esq; whose Daughter, by Margaret his Wife, (Daughter of Sir Thomas More) he instructed in the Latin and Greek tongues. He hath written several things, but whether extant, I know not. Among them are,

Epistola ad D. Will. Roperum.

Epitaphia diversa.

- Opuscula Græcæ & Latine.* Written with his own hand, and said (†) to be (tho I cannot yet in all my searches find them) in the Bodleian Library. He also translated into English several of the Greek and Latin Orations, made by the said Daughter of Will. Roper, as by his Epistles it appears. What became of this Job. Morwen when 1551. Qu. Elizabeth came to the Crown (if he lived to that time) I cannot tell, unless he was received into the Family of the said Roper a great lover of learning, and a reliever and comforter of distressed Catholics.

92. JOHN LELAND or Layland, that singular light and ornament of Great Britain, was born in London, but in what Parish, or Year, it appears not, howbeit the day of his Birth, he himself is pleased to tell (s) us. In his younger Years being depriv'd of his relations, he was taken into the protection of one Tho. Myles a great favourer of learning, who not only exhibited to his wants, but also took care to have him instructed in Grammar, and other juvenile learning, under the famous Will. Lilye. From his School he was sent to Cambridge, where, as he himself saith, he received the first seeds of Academical Learning in Christ's College, and from thence, as in another place he tells us, he went to Oxon, but to what College or Hall therein, he adds not. Howbeit by sure tradition from Thom. Key of Allsouls College to Thom. Allen of Glocest. Hall, it appears that he spent several Years in study in the said Coll. of Allsouls, which is also noted by Will. Burton the Antiquary of Leicestershire in the Collorary of some part of Leland's Life before the first tome of his Collections. After he had spent some time there, he journeyed to Paris, where he profited himself much by the reading and learning of Budæus, Faber, Paulus Emilius, and Ruellus. Returning thence he entred into Holy Orders, became Chaplain to K. Hen. 8. and Rector of Poppeling (sometimes written Popering and Pepling) in the Marches of Calais. Afterwards he became Library-keeper to that King, and had a Commission from him under the broad Seal, an. reg. 25. Dom. 1533. whereby he was empowered to make a search after England's Antiquities, and peruse the Libraries of all Cathedrals, Abbies, Priors, Colleges, &c. as also all places wherein Records, Writings, and secrets of Antiquity were reposed. Whereupon, in few Years after, obtaining a special (t) dispensation 12. Jul. 28. Hen. 8. to keep a Curate at Poppeling, and make his residence in England, or elsewhere at his own liberty, he spent more than six Years in rambling to and fro in this Nation, and in making researches into the bowels of antiquity, undertaking so immense a task, that the very thoughts of completing it, did, as 'tis said, distract him. At the time of the dissolution of Monasteries, he saw with very great pity what havock was made of ancient Monuments of learning, and if no remedy should be taken, they would all perish. Whereupon, for prevention sake, he wrote a Letter (u) to Cromwell the prime Secretary, dat. 16. July, wherein he intreats him to give him aid and assistance in bringing to light many ancient Authors, and in sending them to the King's Library; who, he knew well, had no little esteem for them, and adds that — it would be a great profit to Students, and honour to this Realm; whereas now the Germans perceiving our deriduousness and negligence, do send daily young Scholars hither, that spoilish them, and cutteth them out of Libraries, returning home and putting them abroad as Monuments of their own Country, &c. On the 3. of Apr. 33. Hen. 8. Dom. 1542. he was (w) presented to the Rectory of Hafely near to, and in the County of Oxon; and in the beginning of the said Month 1543, the King (x) gave to him by the name of Job. Leland Scholar, and the King's Chaplain a Canonry or Prebendship of Kings College (now Ch. Ch.) in Oxon; and about that time the Prebendship of East-Knoll and W. Knoll near to Salisbury in Wiltshire; but the Canonry of Ch. Ch. he lost in 1545, upon the surrender of that College to the King, and in lieu thereof had no pension allow'd him as other Canons had, but preferment elsewhere. At length having made a grand collection of antiquities, he retired to his habitation in the Parish of St. Michael in le Querne in London, where spending about six Years more in composing such Books that he had promised to the King, did at length (upon a foresight that he was not able to perform his promise, or as the Roman Catholics say, that he had degenerated from the ancient Religion) fall distracted and lost his sense, being but a little before esteemed a Person of a clear judgment and of great insight to discern between substantial and superficial learning. This his distemper being made known to the King and his Council, His Majesty by Letters Patent (y) dat. 21. March 5. Ed. 6. Dom. 1550. did grant the custody of him by the name of John Layland Junior, of St. Michaels Parish in le Querne, London, Clerk, to his Brother John Layland senior, and for his maintenance to receive the profits of Hafely, Poppling, E. Knoll, and W. Knoll before-mentioned. He was esteemed by the generality of Scholars of his time an excellent Orator and Poet, learned in the Greek, Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, British, Saxon, Welsh, and Scottish Tongues, a most diligent searcher into antiquity, and a favourer and lover of all those that bent their minds that way. His enemies, or such that cared not for him, as Pol. Virgil, Dr. Jo. Cay, &c. did use to say that he was a vain glorious Person, and that he promised more than ever he was able to perform, and others, that his Poetical wit made him so conceited, that it was the chief reason of his frensie. He hath written, Principum ac illustrium aliquot & eruditorum in Angliâ virorum, Encomia, Trophæa, Genethliaca, & Epitaphia, &c. Lond. 1589. qu. Published by Tho. Newton of Cheshire.

These are all the Books composed by him, that are published. Those that he left behind him in MS. are these following:

Collectaneorum volumen primum. Collections from various Authors, viz. from Chronologies, ancient Charters, Leiger-Books, Histories, Annals, publick and private Writings, &c. — Written with Leland's own hand (mostly in Latin) in folio, containing 913 pages, and all collected from MSS. and nothing from Authors that were then Printed. There are in this Book many needless additions and illustrations put in by Will. Burton of Lindley, whom I shall anon mention, who hath written some part of the life of Leland before, and has made a useful index to it.

Collect. vol. 2. Collections from various Authors in MS. viz. Chronologies, Annals, &c. in fol. containing 382. pages.

Collect. vol. 3. Containing the Catalogues of MSS. in the Libraries of several religious Houses, Cathedrals, Colleges, &c. Collections also from Monkish Authors concerning the foundations, restaurations, &c. of religious places, and other matters of considerable moment. In p. 117, is part of an Itinerary through Devonshire, and p. 127, &c. is something of Kent. In p. 149, &c. is something of Herefordshire, and p. 204, of Lincolnshire. Afterwards follow the meaning and original of words from several old Dictionaries. This vol. contains in writing under Leland's hand 287 pages in fol. and hath at the end his New-years-gift to K. Hen. 8.

Collect. vol. 4. Containing the lives and characters of most of the eminent Writers of England; written in Latin with Leland's own hand, an. 1546. and containeth 354 pages in fol. One or more Copies of this Book, are in private hands.

An Itinerary throughout most parts of England. — In five volumes in qu. This Iter was began about 38. H. 8. Dom. 1538, and the volumes were written with his own hand; but by the negligence of those, who have had the custody of them, after the Authors death, most of them have taken wet and are not legible. About the Year 1631. Will. Burton before-mentioned caused all the said five volumes to be transcribed into one folio; which, with the originals, were, by him soon after, given to the publick Library of Oxon.

Collections concerning English Families and their originals, of relations of matters of antiquity from divers Persons, of Towns and religious Houses, (which he accidentally found in record, or by tradition) of Rivers in several Counties, and also collections from various MSS. &c. — All which, are contained in two quartoes under Leland's hand writing, and go under the names of the sixth and seventh volumes of his Itineraries, and stand and are mix'd with the other five, in the Archives of the publick Library.

Collectiones ex antiquissimis authoribus desumptæ, quæ ad Britanniam spectant. MS. in Cotton's Library under Julius C. 6.

Codrus sive liber contra Polydorum Virgilium de erroribus in scriptis suis. MS. An exemplar of which I have seen.

Nenia in mort. Hen. Duddelegi (Dudley) Equitis. MS. in qu.

Bononia Gallo-Mastix, in laudem victoris feliciss. Hen. 8. Anglici, Francici, Scottici, &c. MS. in qu. With other things, which you may see in Baleus and Pisens. All which MSS. and collections, with many other matters of moment, were, after Leland's death, taken (by command from Ed. 6.) into the custody of Sir John Cheek Tutor to the said King; who not long after gave the four tomes or vol. of his collections before-mentioned to Humph. Purefoy Esq; (afterwards of the Privy Council to Queen Elizabeth in the North parts of England) whose Son Tho. Purefoy of Barwell in Leicestershire, giving them to Will. Burton of Lyndley in the same County, in the Year 1612, came many Years after by his gift (when he had made use of them in compiling his Description of Leicestershire) to the Bodleian or pub. Library at Oxon, together with the Itinerary in five (with the other two) quartoes, where they yet (in the Archives of that Library) remain. As for some other of his Collections, they came after the death of Sir John Cheek into the hands of Will. Lord Pagit, and Sir Will. Cecyll, but to whom, from them, I find not. Perhaps among the said Collect. were those that came afterwards into Sir Rob. Cotton's hands, and the Itinerary into those of Will. Burton before-mentioned. However it is, sure I am, that several eminent Antiquaries have made use of them, especially Job. Bale in his second edition of British Writers, but not in the same words that Leland wrot. For as he delivered things impartially and in smooth language, so Bale quite contrary, and full (*) of scurrilities. Camden also, though now and then he doth mention his Author Leland, yet he made (†) considerable use of his Collections in the composing of his Britannia. Sir Will. Dugdale hath perused them several times, and made great use of them in his Antiquities of Warwickshire, and in his volumes called, The Baronage of England, but withal quotes him honestly for every thing that he hath taken from them. To conclude, this great Antiquary J. Leland dying on the 18 day of April in Fifteen hundred fifty and two, was buried in the Church 1552. of St. Michaels in le Querne, in London. Which Church having been situated near to the old cross in West-cheap, and not far from the East part of St. Paul's Cathedral, was totally burnt down in the grand conflagration, an. 1666. So that soon after its Parish being united to another, the foundation of the said Church was level'd, and pitched with Stones, as the rest of the street adjoining was; and at the East-end where stood the Altar, or thereabouts, was erected a Conduit of stone to serve the inhabitants of the neighbourhood with water.

JOHN CLERKE, who is reported by a learned (a) 93. Author to be descended from famous and noble lineage, was educated in Grammaticals, Logicals, and Philosophicals among the Oxonians for a time, but in what House, I cannot as yet tell. Afterwards he travell'd into several Countries, fell into the company and acquaintance of Rich. Paice, (mention'd under the Year 1532.) studied together in Italy, and contracted between them such a faithful and constant friendship, that the like could not be read in any Author. All things were in a manner common between them, and what was by either read or observed, was forthwith communicated to each others great advantage. After his return to his native Country, he was highly esteemed for his accomplishments, especially for his exact knowledge in the Latin, French, and Italian, Tongues: Whereupon being taken into the service of Thomas the great and mighty Duke of Norfolk, was by him made his Secretary, (a place of credit and considerable profit) and introduced into the acquaintance of most of the Nobility that frequented the Court. He hath transmitted to posterity, Opusculum plano divinum de mortuorum resurrectione & extremo judicio, in quatuor linguis succinctè conscriptum (viz. Lat. Angl. Ital. Gall.) — Lond. 1545. and 47. in qu.

Declaration of certain Articles, with a recital of the capital errors against the same. Lond. 1546. in oct.

Meditations on death.

De Italica } declinatione verborum.
De Gallica }

He hath also translated from French into English, A treatise of Nobility, with other things written and translated, which I have not yet seen. At length being clap'd up Prisoner within the Tower of London (whether for matters of Religion, or any other thing I know not) did to avoid publick shame, (as 'tis thought) hang himself in his Chamber with his girdle, on the tenth of May in Fifteen hundred fifty and two; leaving this character behind him by a Calvinistical (‡) Author, that he was an open Enemy to the Gospel and all godly Preachers. The Reader is to note that several of both his names occur in records, as first Job. Clerke a Berkshire Man born, who became Fellow of Magd. Coll. 1482. (2) Job. Clerke, of the same Coll. as it seems, who proceeded M. of A. 1516. (3) Job. Clerke a Cambridge Man, afterwards Bishop of B. and Wells, whom I shall elsewhere mention. (4) Job. Clerke, who was originally of Cambridge, afterwards of Cardinal College in Oxon, and incorporated M. of A. 1525, but ejected the said Coll. soon after for Lutherisme. (5) Job. Clarke a Benedictine Monk, incorporated Bach. of Divinity 13. July 1538, as he before had stood at Cambridge, proceeded in that faculty at Oxon within few days after, and stood in an Aët to compleat that Degree 19. of the same Month in the said Year. But of all the said Job. Clerks, not one, as I conceive is Job. Clerke the writer, except you'll say the second.

94. ALEXANDER de BARKLAY, who seems to have been born at, or near, a Town so called in Somersetshire, was for a time educated in this University; particularly, as it seems, in Oriel Coll. of which his great Patron and Favourer of his studies, Tbo. Cornish Bishop of Tyne was then Provost. Afterwards he travel'd beyond the Seas, and at his return became, by the said Bishops endeavours (to whom he was Chaplain) one of the Priests of the College of St. Mary at Otery in Devonshire, founded by Job. Grandison B. of Exeter. But his Patron dying soon after, he entred into the Order of St. Benedict or into that of St. Francis (as one, (†) who gives him an ill report because he lived and died a single Man, tells us) but at what place I know not. Sure 'tis that living to see his Monastery dissolv'd, he being about that time Doctor of Divinity, became Vicar of Much Badew in Essex, and in 1546 Vicar of the Church of St. Mathew the Apostle at Wokey in Somersetshire on the death of Mr. Rich. Eryngton, which I think was all the preferment that he had to the time of his death. In his younger days he was esteemed a good Poet and Orator, as several specimens of his composition in those faculties shewed, but when Years came on, he spent his time mostly in pious matters and in reading the Histories of Saints. His works are,

The figure of our Mother Holy Church, oppressed by the French King — Printed at London by Rich. Pynson in qu.

The miseries, or miserable lives of Courtiers — Besides his answer to Job. Skelton the Poet and other things, which I have not yet seen. He translated from Lat. into English, The lives of St. Margaret, St. Catherine, St. Esbeldreda, St. George, &c. Several things also of Jo. Bapt. Fiera Mantuan, and other matters as Baleus (b) tells you. But above all must not be forgotten his translation out of Latin, French, and Dutch into the English Language, a Book intit. The Ship of Fools, an. 1508. Printed at London by Pich. Pynson, 1509. fol. and dedicated by the translator to the said Tbo. Cornish B. of Tyne and Suffragan Bishop of Wells. This translation is adorned with great variety of Pictures printed from wooden cuts, which could not be but very delightful to the Reader in those days. The original Author of that Book was one Sebastian Brantius, much famed in his time for his excellent works. As for his translator Dr. Barklay who also translated from French into English The Castle of Labour, lived to be an aged Man, and dying at a Mercat Town called Croyden in Surrey before the 10. of June (for on that day his (c) will was prov'd) in Fifteen hundred fifty and two, was buried in the Church there, leaving then behind him among 1552. some the character of a good Scholar.

95. EDWARD SEYMOURE, Son of Sir Job. Seymoure of Wolfhall in Wils. Knight, was educated in trivials, and partly in quadrivials for some time in this University, and whether he afterwards studied in Cambridge (of which he was Chancellour in the Reign of Edw. 6.) I cannot say. If so, 'tis very strange that one that had conversed with the Muses of both Universities, should be so unlearned (as one (*) who was an enemy to his memory reports) that he could scarce write or read. Afterwards K. Hen. 8. marrying his Sister Jane, he ascended to, and obtained great, honours and places in the Realm of England, as all Histories will tell you. While he was Lord Protector, there went under his name, Epistola Exhortatoria ad pacem, missa ad nobilitatem ac plebem, universumque populum regni Scotiae. Lond. 1548. qu.

In which Year also came out his Expedition into Scotland, written by another hand. After he was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London for divers miscarriages in his Government, he made very great shew of sanctity, and seemed not to omit any opportunity, whereby he might employ his time religiously, as it well appears by a Book that he then wrot entitled,

A spiritual and most precious Pearl, teaching all Men to love and embrace the cross as a most sweet and necessary thing, &c. Lond. 1550. oct. At that time, before, and after, he was much courted by John Calvin and Peter Martyr, as being the chief Person that carried on the reformation. The former wrot to him the said Protector, An Epistle of godly consolation, 22. Oct. 1549. Writ before the time and knowledge of his trouble. Which Epistle being delivered to him in the time of his trouble, was translated by him from French into English. — Printed at Lond. 1550. oct. The other (P. Martyr) wrot an Epistle to him about the same time in the Lat. tongue; which being much pleasing to him, was by his desire translated into English by that noted Zealot Thom. Norton. — Printed 1550. in oct. From which Epistles it doth plainly appear what great respects they (Calvin and Martyr) and their Parties had for him, and what solemn wishes and prayers they continually sent forth for his welfare and blessed proceedings in the Reformation then in hand. This great Person, who was also Duke of Somerset, died on Tower-hill near London, by the stroke of the ax, 22. January, in Fifteen hundred fifty and two, which was the sixth Year 1552. of K. Ed. 6. but where he was buried, I cannot yet tell.

NICHOLAS UDALL whom Leland (d) styles Odo-vallus, was born in Hampshire, and descended from those of his name, living sometimes at Wykeham in the said County, was admitted Scholar of Corp. Ch. Coll. in June 1520. aged 15 or more, Probationer Fellow in Sept. 1524. being then Bach. of Arts, and two Years after supplicated for the Degree of Master, but took it not at that time, being, as 'tis probable, denied, because he was much addicted to the opinions of Luther. Afterwards he obtained the Mastership of Eaton School near Windfor, and proceeded in Arts 1534, but in 1541 had like to have lost that place as being suspected to be conscious to a robbery committed by two Scholars of his School, who having stole images, plate, and other matters belonging to the College of Eaton, were with Udall examined (e) by His Majesties Council, in the beginning of March that Year. What became of the matter I know not; sure 'tis, that our Author Udall was made Canon of Windfor, in the beginning of Edw. 6. and is styled by a certain (f) Author to be Elegantissimus omnium bonarum literarum magister & earum felicissimus interpres. He hath written,

Flowers for Latin speaking, selected and gathered out of Terence, and the same translated into English, together with the exposition, &c. newly corrected — When this was first Printed I cannot tell. That Edit. which I have seen, was Printed at Lond. 1568. in oct. Which Book being esteemed good in its time, and very useful for young Scholars Job. (g) Leland and Tbo. (h) Newton wrot Verses in commendation of it, not only set before the Book, but Printed in their respective Encomia's, &c.

Comedies, Epistles, and divers Verses. — He also translated into English at the request of Qu. Cath. Parr (1) Paraphrase on the Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. Lond. in qu. and (3ly.) The Tragedy of Popery, and other things, as Bale will tell you. When Clar. this our Author Udall died, I know not, nor any thing 1552. else of him, only that his Memory is celebrated by polite Verses, written by Job. (i) Leland, Job. (k) Parkhurst, and Tbo. (l) Newton of Chestire, to which I refer to the Udall be the same with him that was the Writer, the Reader is to judge.

97. RALPH RADCLIFF was born of, and descended from, an ancient Family of his name in Cheshire, received part of his Academical Education in this University, particularly, as I conceive, in Brasenose Coll. about the time of its first foundation, but whether he took a Degree it appears not. The genie of this Person being strangely addicted to the instruction of Youth, he obtained part of the Carme's House at Huchin or Hitchen in Hertfordshire, an. 1538. being about that time dissolved, wherein he not only opened a School, but framed out a lower room into a Stage for his Scholars to act Latin and English Comedies, to the end that they might be emboldened for speaking and pronuntiation. Which practice being used by them several Years, his School was in great renown, he grew rich and was had in much veneration in the neighbourhood. He had many Tragedies, Comedies, Epistles, Orations, &c. laying by him in the time of K. Ed. 6. which, as he would often tell his Friends, he would never publish till they had remained by him 9 Years: And whether they were ever published, I cannot yet learn. The titles of some of his labours were these.

Dives and Lazarus, a Comedy.
Patient Grefeld, Com.
Friendship of Titus and Gifippus, Com.
Chaucers Melibie, Com.
Job's afflictions, Trag.
Delivery of Susanna from the Elders.
The burning of Sodom.
Pugna nominis & verbi.
De puerorum institutione.
Epistola ad Tyrones.
Epigrammata, &c.

Clar. 1553. seen in (n) Baleus, who further tells us, that he was in great renown at Huchin in Fifteen hundred fifty and three, He lived several Years after, died and was buried there, but when, I cannot yet learn. One or more of his descendants, (for he was married and had issue) were Knights, particularly Sir Edw. Radcliff of Hitchen, living in the time of K. James I.

98. JOHN RHESE or ap Rife, or Prife, or Prifens, so many ways I find him written by Authors, was born of a gentile and ancient Family in Wales, but in what County, is yet uncertain, or in what House in Oxon educated, unless in the ancient hostle called Broadgates (now Pembroke Coll.) wherein several of both his names and time have studied. Among them was John Prife Bac. of the Civil Law, who in the Year 1530. supplicated for the Degree of Bac. of Can. Law, and two Years after John ap Rice a secular Chaplain, was admitted to the same Degree, which probably may be the same with Job. Price Bac. of the Civil Law. Farther also I find, that in 1523. one John Prife of Allsouls Coll. was admitted Bac. of the Civil Law, and that he died 1554. And in 1534. occurs another Job. Price (of Broadgates Hall I think) who was admitted Bac. of the Civil Law without any title added to it, which perhaps may be the Author, that I am further to mention; who being encouraged in his studies by William Earl of Pembroke, made great advances therein, especially as to the Histories and Antiquities of his own Country. In 1546. March 2. he, with many others, received the honor of Knighthood from the hands of Edward Lord Protector of England. About which time our Author observing the great and manifold errors, which were made by Pol. Virgil in his Historie Anglica Libri 27, wherein many things redounded to the dishonor of the British Nation, he thereupon published, Fides Historie Britannicae.

Defensio Regis Arthuri. And wrote about the Year 1553. (1. Mar.) a Book intit.
Historie Britannicae defensio. But the Author dying before he could have it published, was at length, in the Year 1573. put out in qu. under the name of Job. Prifens, by his Son Rich. Prife D. D. He the said Sir John did also write,

A description of Cambria, now called Wales. — Augmented and made perfect by Humph. Lloyd, and set before the History of Cambria: which was translated into English by the said Lloyd, and augmented, corrected, and published by Dav. Powell, an. 1584. The said Description of Cambria was Printed again at Oxon. 1663. in two sheets and an half in qu. under the title of A description of Wales, but it doth so much differ in words from the former, that many Readers are apt to take it for another thing.

Tractatus de Eucharistia. This I have not yet seen, only a bare mention of it by Baleus (o). Nor do I know any thing else of the Author, only that he died in Qu. Maries days. But where, or the particular Day, Month, or Year, when, I know not.

99. WILLIAM THOMAS, a Welsh Man born, or at least of Welsh extract, was educated in all kind of learning fit for a Gentleman, but what Degree he took I know not. One of both his names was admitted Bach. of the Canon Law, in the beginning of Dec. 1529. but whether the same, I dare not yet affirm. In 1544. he was constrained by some misfortune to abandon the place of his nativity, and in Feb. 1546. when the news of the death of King Hen. 8. came into Italy, he was at Bologna la Grassa, where being in the company of several Gentlemen, he entred into discourse in defence of the said King, whose honor there had been wrongfully touched. Which discourse he afterwards drew up by way of Dialogue, directing it to Pietro Aretino the well known Tuscan Poet, as famous for his Satyrical wit, as infamous for his life and death. Afterwards, if not before, he lived at Padua, where he gathered many materials for his Italian Dictionary and Grammar, and in 1549. I meet with him returned to London, where he wrote his short, but methodical History of Italy. About that time his name being highly fam'd for his travels through France and Italy, his knowledge in several of the modern tongues, and in other sorts of learning, he was made Clerk of the Council to K. Ed. 6. but upon his death, falling into the displeasure of Qu. Mary, and so consequently depriv'd of his place, and all hopes of other employment in the Court, he thereupon designed her murder, (one saith (p) that the design was against Steph. Gardiner Bishop of Winchester) for which he was sent Prisoner to the Tower of London, on the 20. Feb. 1553. in the company of Will. Winter, and Sir Nich. Throckmorton committed to that place also. On the 26. of the same Month, being much conscious to himself that he should suffer a shameful death, he endeavour'd to make away with himself, by thrusting a knife into his body under his paps, but the wound did not prove mortal. On the 9. of May 1554. he was arraigned and condemned at the Guild hall in Lond. and on the 18. of the same Month, he was drawn from the Tower to Tyburn; where after he had made a Speech in defence of himself, he told the company that he died for his Country. He was a Man of a hot fiery spirit, had suck'd in damnable principles, by his frequent conversation with Christoph. Goodman, that violent enemy to the rule of Women, and one of more misguided zeal, than true Religion and Wisdom. This Will. Thomas hath written,

The History of Italy; a Book exceeding profitable to be read, because it intreateth of the estate of many and divers Common-wealths, how they have been, and now be governed, Lond. 1561. qu. Dedic. to John Earl of Warwick, by an Epistle dated 20. Sept. 1549.

Le peregrynne — written at Bologna la Grassa. 'Tis a MS. in Bod. Lib. qu. D. 23. Th. fol. 71. The beginning of it is, Constrained by misfortune to abandon the place of my nativity, &c. In the title page are these Verses.

He that dyeth with honor, lyveth for ever.
And the defamed dead, recovereth never.

This Book called Le peregrynne is about to be translated into Lat. with a design to be remitted in the third Tome of Fasciculus, collected by Edw. Brown of Christ's College in Cambridge.

Common place of state — Written for the use of King Ed. 6. wherein 'tis discoursed whether it be expedient to vary with the time; with some others writings, which I once saw in the Cottonian Library under Vespasians head D. 18. The title of this Book with other matters relating to Will. Thomas, I did formerly communicate to H. Foulis when he was gathering materials for an History of the Romish treasons, not dreaming then that I should afterwards make use of them, as I have done now. I am verily persuaded, that there are in being other Books of this W. Thomas, either publick, or in MS. in private hands, which time, may hereafter produce. So that now I shall only say, that he suffer'd death at Tybourne before-mentioned by hanging, drawing, and quartering, 18. May in Fifteen hundred fifty and four, leaving then behind him the character by some, of a Person of good parts. What became of his quarters I know not.

100. THOMAS SWINERTON was descended from an ancient Family of his name living in Staffordshire, but whether born in that County, I cannot tell, and educated partly in Cambridge, but mostly in Oxon in all good arts, and in the tongues. Afterwards taking holy Orders, he began to see the light of the Gospel, while Sir Tho. More was Lord Chancellour of England, in whose time many Hereticks, as they were then called, were imprison'd and brought into trouble. Whereupon being resolved, to gain what Profelytes he could to his Religion, he changed his name to Joh. Roberts, and under that name, he not only taught God's word in several places, chiefly at Ipswyck in Suffolk, and Sandwyck in Kent, but also published and translated several things, as,

The Plots of Papists — entituled by a certain (*) Author De Papiculorum susurris. And translated into English The History of the life of Hildebrand called Gregory the 7. written in Latin by Beuo a Cardinal, and also The life of Hen 4. Emperour of Rome and Almaine. Which Henry was imprison'd and deposed by the said Pope. Both these translations were Printed in oct. and much valued in the time when they were made extant. When Qu. Mary came to the Crown, and Religion thereupon altered, our Author Thom. Swinerton fled beyond the Seas, but being overtaken with a certain distemper at Emden in East Frisland in Fifteen hundred fifty and four, died, and was there buried the same Year, to the great reluctancy of all those exiles that were there and in those parts.

101. JOHN HOPER or Hooper, noted to posterity for his manful and painful suffering of death for the Protestant Cause, received his first breath in Somersetshire, and his Academical Education in Oxon, but in what House there, unless in that of Merton, I cannot yet tell. He had an Uncle or near Kinsman of both his names, who was born in the Dioc. of Wells, made Master-Fellow of that House in the Year 1513, and this Joh. Hoper, whom we are further to mention, being sent to the University the Year following, might probably be put under his tuition in the said Coll. or at least in St. Albans Hall, of which he was then (notwithstanding Fellow of Merton Coll.) Principal. But these matters remaining yet uncertain, I shall proceed to what is extant on record. In the latter end therefore of 1518. he was admitted Bach. of Arts, which was the highest Degree he took in this University, and about the same time compleated it by Determination. What became of him afterwards I cannot justly say. Howbeit there is not wanting an Author (g) who reports that he was of the number of Cistercians, commonly called White Monks, and had so continued for some Years. Which report, I presume is true, because in all my searches, I cannot find him a Curat, Vicar, or Parson. But so it was that he being weary of that Order, he left it, and repairing to Oxon, was, as the R. Catholicks say, infected with Lutherisme by Books brought from Germany; and in short time became a thorow-pac'd Protestant, if not worse as they further add. In the Year 1539 or thereabouts, at which time the Statute of six articles came forth, he left what he had, and got himself into the service of Sir John Arundel a very Catholick Knight, (afterwards put to death with the Protetor, by the Duke of Northumberland in K. Edwards days) and was his Chaplain and Steward of his House. But being discovered by him to be a Protestant, he was forced to leave that harbour, and to go into France: where staying for some time in dislike of many matters there, he returned into England, and lived with a Gentleman called Seintlow. But at length his living with him being known, he was sought after to be apprehended. Whereupon he put on a Mariners habit, made himself Master of a Boat and went into Ireland, and from thence took a larger journey into Zuitzerland, where he became acquainted with Bullinger, Scholar and Successor of Zuinglius's Chair, first at Basill, and afterward at Zurich, where also (r) by his Council and Doctrine, he married a Wife, which was a Burgundian, and applyed very studiously the Hebrew tongue. When K. Ed. 6. came to the Crown, he returned soon after into England, and settling for a time in London, Preached to the People there very frequently, and sometimes against pluralities. In 1549. he became an accuser of Bishop Bonner, when he was to be deprived of his Bishoprick, which made him fare the worse when Qu. Mary came to the Crown. In 1550. he, by the help of his former Master Sir Joh. Arundel, who could do all at that time with the Earl of Warwick, (afterwards Duke of Northumberland) was nominated and elected Bishop of Glocester, but when he should come to be consecrated or invested by Dr. Cranmer Archb. of Canterbury, and Rydley B. of London, (who maligned him for his worse than Calvinistical Principles) they would not do it, except he would conform himself in all points to them, both in apparel and opinions, but he obstinately refusing a Rochet, was thereupon (*) confin'd to custody. At length by the Earl of Warwick's intercession to Cranmer, and the King's Letters to dispense with those matters and ceremonies (which J. Fox usually calls trifles and superstitions) he was consecrated Bishop of the said See, 8. March 1550. At which time (as 'tis said) Hoper, after much hanging off, did take (s) the Oath of Supremacy, and afterwards when he Preached at Court, he did once for formality sake appear in a Shymar, with a white linnen rochet under it, but much ashamed at the strangeness thereof, as Fox saith. Being settled in the See of Glocester, which was looked upon as a poor pittance for so great a Clerk, who had suffered so much for the Cause, the Earl of Warwick got for him another Bishoprick much better than the former, called Worcester; of which place being (t) declared Bishop, 20. May 6. Ed. 6. Dom. 1552. (the Bishop thereof N. Heath being then a Prisoner in the Fleet) had liberty then given to him to keep it in Commendam with Glocester. While he was Bishop he Preached often, visited his Diocesses, kept good hospitality for the poorer sort of People, and was beloved by many. But when Qu. Mary began to Reign, which was in July 1553, he was perswaded up to London, in the latter end of August, and on the first of Sept. following, was committed Prisoner to the Fleet; where remaining some Months, was at length examined several times, and required to recant his opinions. But standing constant and resolute to them, was condemned first to be burnt, in Januar. 1554, and then in Feb. following was degraded. The next day he was conducted towards Glocester, where being arrived, he suffered death soon after with great courage. He was a Person of good parts, well vers'd in the Greek and Hebrew tongues, a tolerable Philosopher, but a better Theologist, had not his Principles been too rigid and dissenting from the English Church, as appointed by King Edw. 6. His Writings are mostly these.

At length he suffered death in the flames near to the College of Priests in the City of Gloucester, on Saturday the ninth of Febr. in Fifteen hundred fifty and four, (1. and 2. of Philip and Mary) being then near sixty Years of Age, and much lamented by those that pretended to Reformation.

102. EDWARD WOTTON, Son of Rich. Wotton superior Beadle of Divinity of this University of Oxon, by Margaret his Wife, was born within the City of Oxon. particularly, as I conceive, in the Parish of St. Mary the Virgin, wherein his Father lived and had Houses in Cat-street. After he had been educated in the Grammar School joining to Magd. Coll. he was first made Semicommoner or Demie of that House, and after he had taken the Degree of Bach. of Arts (which was 1513.) he was, as I conceive, made Fellow. At length upon the desire of John Claymond, and Rob. Morwent, who knew the singular virtues and learning of the Person, he left that Coll. and by the favour of that most worthy Person Bishop Fox, Founder of that of Corp. Christi, was made socius compar thereof, with leave to travel into Italy for three Years, an. 1520. So that after he had read the Greek Lecture there for some time, he journeyed into Italy, studied Physick, and took the Degree of Doctor in that faculty at Padua. After his return he was settled Greek Reader of his Coll. was incorporated in the same Degree in the latter end of 1525, was made Physician to K. Hen. 8. and not only became famous for his happy practice in that faculty in these parts, and afterwards in London (for he was one of the College of Physicians there) but also for his great knowledge in Philosophy and things natural. He hath transmitted to posterity, was buried by him, and both had a stone, with an inscription thereon, laid over their Graves. But that part of it which remained an 100 Years after, was totally consumed in the grand conflagration of London, an. 1666. (3) That he is much celebrated by the Antiquarian Poet John Leland (a) under the name of Eduardus Ododunus. (4) That among the Children he left behind him, (for he had a numerous issue) Brian Wotton LL. Bach. and Fellow of New Coll. was one, who bequeathed his Body to be buried in the yard belonging to St. Albans Church before-mentioned. Another was called Hen. Wotton, first a Student of Ch. Ch. and afterwards Proctor of the University, Greek Reader and Fellow of Corp. Chr. Coll. who proceeding in the faculty of Physick an. 1567. became afterwards famous for the practice thereof.

De differentiis Animalium, lib. 10. Par. 1552. fol. By the publishing of which he obtained a famous name among learned Men, especially with Mich. Neander, who (†) saith that no Author hath written of Animals more learned and elegant than Wottonus. See more in Thom. Mouffet under the Year 1590. What other things the said Wotton hath published, I know not, nor anything else of him, or his, only (1) That he dying 5. Octob. in Fifteen hundred fifty and five, in the climacterical Year of his Age, (63) was buried in St. Albans Church in Woodstreet, in the City of London (2) That Catherine his Widow dying 4. Dec. 1558.

NICHOLAS RYDLEY was born of an ancient and 103. gentile Family at Wilsmondswyke in Northumberland, educated in Grammatical Learning at Newcastle upon Tyne, in Academical at Cambridge, till he was Bach. of Arts. Afterwards going to Oxon, he was (b) elected into one of Walt. Skyrlaw's Fellowship of University Coll. 13. Apr. 1521. Which place he keeping but a little while (and therefore the Members of that House can hardly lay claim to him) he returned to Cambridge, where he became D. of D. and Master of Pembroke Hall. Afterwards he was made Chaplain to K. Ed. 6. and at length through Rocheſter (the temporalities of which See were (c) restored to him 27. Sept. 1547.) became Bishop of London 1549. He was a Person small in stature, but great in learning, and profoundly read in Divinity — quo viro (as (d) one who knew him saith) nihil integrum, & omnibus egregiis dotibus ornatum Anglia nostra multis bisce retro sæculis habuit, &c. Among several things that he wrote, were these.

Treatise concerning images, not to be set up, nor worshipped, in Churches. — Written in the time of K. Ed. 6.

Brief declaration of the Lords Supper — Printed 1555. and 1586. oct. Written by him while he was a Prisoner in Oxon. It was translated into Lat. by Will. Whittingham, bearing this title: Affertio de cena Dominica. Genev. 1556. Answered by another Book entit. Confutatio Catholica Nich. Rydley de Eucharistia. Par. 1556. qu. Written by Alban Langdale D. D. of St. John's College in Cambridge.

Certain godly and comfortable conferences between him and Mr. Hugh Latymer, during the time of their imprisonment. Lond. 1555. 56. and 74. in oct.

A friendly farewell, written during his imprisonment at Oxford, unto all his true Lovers, a little before his death. Lond. 1559. oct.

A piteous lamentation of the miserable state of the Church of England, in the time of the late revolt from the Gospel. Lond. in oct.

A comparison between the comfortable Doctrine of the Gospel and the traditions of Popish Religion. — Print. with the former.

An account of a disputation at Oxford, an. 1554. Oxon. 1688. qu. Written in Latin, and published from the Original MS. by Gilb. Ironside D. D. Warden of Wadham Coll. and then Vicechanc. of the Univ. of Oxon.

Treatise of the blessed Sacrament — The beginning of which is Many things confound the real memory, &c. published with the former, by the aforeſaid Person, from an original MS. to which he added, A Letter written by Mr. Jo. Bradford the Martyr, never before Printed.

Letter of reconciliation written to Bishop Hooper. Lond. 1689. qu. published by Sam. Johnson, Author of the Short account of the life of Julian the Apostate. Lond. 1682. oct. He the said Dr. Rydley had a hand also in the compiling of the Common Prayer-Book, now in use among us, has also disputations, arguings, communications, and conferences about matters of Religion, in the Book of Acts and Monuments of the Church, written by John Fox. In which Book under the Years 1554. and 55. you may see a full account of his sufferings, and afterwards of his burning near to Balliol College in Oxon. on the 16. of Oct. in Fifteen hundred fifty and five, which was the second and third Years of K. Philip and Qu. Mary. 1555.

104. JOHN PHILPOT, Son of Sir Pet. Philpot Knight of the Bath, and twice Sheriff of Hampshire, was born at Compton in that County, educated in Grammaticals in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. in the Year 1534, had a Civilian's place there, and took (as 'tis said) the Degree of Bach. of the Lawes, but whether in this University, it appears not in the registers thereof. However, he was then esteemed a good Civilian, and admirably well skill'd in the Greek and Hebrew tongues. In 1541, his Fellowship became void because of absence, being then (I presume) in his travels in Italy. After his return, retiring to Winchester, he read Lectures in the Cathedral there on the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans: Which, tho they were done gratis, were not acceptable to the Catholick Clergy or Citizens of that place. In the time of Edw. 6. he became Archdeacon of Winchester in the place of one Will. Bolen, who succeeded Rich. Pates upon his resignation an. 1529. In 1553, he let drop certain passages in a convocation of the Clergy favouring of Heresie, as 'twas then (temp. Maria) accounted. Whereupon being imprison'd, he was after an Year and a half confinement, examined in points of faith by the Bishop of London, and his assistants; who finding him obstinate in his opinions, and past all recantation, was by them condemn'd to be burn'd. He hath written,

De proprietate Linguarum. lib. 1.

An apology for spitting upon an Arrian, with an invective against the Arrians; and an admonition to all that be faithful in Christ to beware of them, and of other late sprung Heresies.—Printed at London in 3 Sheets in oct. at the end of The examinations of John Philpot, &c. which examinations were afterwards remitted by John Fox into the Book of Aids and Mon. of the Church, &c. but not the Apology.

Supplication to K. Philip and Qu. Mary.

Letters to the Lady Vane.

Letters to the Christian congregation.

Exhortation to his Sister.

Oration.—The beginning of which is, 'Tis a lamentable thing to behold at this present in England the faithless departing, &c. This is in MS. in Bodly's Library qu. D. 23. Tb. bound with John Bradford's (the Martyr) Treatise of predestination, with an answer to certain enormities calumniously gathered of one to slander Gods truth. MS. The said Job. Philpot hath also translated into English. (1) Calvins Homilies. (2) Crisostome against Heresies; with other things which I have not yet seen. He suffered death in Smithfield by burning, on the 18. Decemb. in Fifteen hundred fifty and five. See his story in Job. Fox before mentioned, under the Year 1555. and Rob. Parsons his answer to it in The third part of a treatise intit. of three conversions of England, &c. Printed 1604. chap. 16. p. 286. 287, &c. and elsewhere. In the Archdeaconry of Winchester, succeeded Mr. Philpot one Steph. Cheston LL. Bach. Prebendary of the same place, who dying 1571. Dr. Job. Ebdens Preb. of the said Church of Winton also succeeded.

105. ROBERT ALDRICH, or Aldrichus as some call him, was born at Burnham in Bucks. educated in Grammar learning in Eaton School, elected Scholar of Kings Coll. in Cambridge in the Year 1507, where he took the Degrees in Arts, and about that time was stiled by Erasmus in a certain Epistle, blanda eloquentia juvenis. Afterwards he became Proctor of the said University, Schoolmaster of Eaton, Fellow of the College there, and at length Provost. In 1529, he retired to Oxon, where he was incorporated Bach. of Div. as he had stood at Cambridge, and soon after performing his exercise for the Degree of Doctor in that faculty, he was licensed to proceed in April 1530. Which Degree being compleated by standing in the Act, which was shortly after celebrated, is the reason why I put him in these Athenæ Oxon. About the same time he was made Archdeacon of Colchester, and in 1534. May 7. he was installed Canon of Windsor, and in the same Year constituted Registrary of the most noble order of the Garter. In 1537, Jul. 18. he was (†) consecrated Bishop of Carlisle, in the place of Job. Kyte deceased, from which time to that of his death, though there were many changes in the Church and State, yet he ran through all, and so consequently complied with them. His works are many, but all that I have seen, are only these.

Epistola ad Gal. Hormannum. — The beginning of which is Suscipies Hormanne tue, &c. 'Tis written in Lat. Verse, and is remitted into the Book called Antibossicon, mention'd in Will. Horman among these Writers, under the Year 1535.

Epigrammata varia, And certain matters against Rob. Whittington. He gave way to fate at Horncastle in Lincolnshire (where was then an house belonging to the Bishop of Carlisle) on the fifth day of March, in Fifteen hundred 1553. fifty and five, and was, as I suppose, buried there. John Leland the Antiquarian Poet was his familiar acquaintance, and therefore having had experience of his most admirable parts and learning, did, not without just desert, commend them to posterity in his Encomia (*) Trophæa, &c. illustrum aliquot & eruditorum in Anglia virorum, &c. to which I refer the Reader.

JOHN PROCTOR, a Somersetshire Man born, was 106. elected Scholar of Corpus Christi Coll. in Jan. 1536, and when Bach. of Arts, Fellow of Allsouls, with Job. Watson, who was afterwards Bishop of Winchester. This Person who was Master of Arts in 1544, I take to be the same John Proctor that was soon after School-Master of Tunbridge in Kent, who wrote and published,

The Fall of the late Arrian, Lond. 1549. oct.

History of Wyats Rebellion, and Conference with the degenerate and seditious, for the search and cause of their great disorder. Lond. 1554. 55. tw. In the beginning of the first Vol. of Rap. Holinsheds Chronicle, are the names of such 1555. Authors from whence he chiefly compiled that Chron. and among them is William Proctor's Book called the History of Wyat's Rebellion. Which should have been Job. Proctor.

JOHN STANDISH was born of, and descended 107. from, an ancient and gentile family of his name living in Lancashire, and at about 17 Years of Age, in 1524, he was by the care of his Uncle Dr. Henry Standish Bishop of St. Asaph sent to Brasenose College, where making great proficiency in Logick, was elected Scholar of that of Corp. Chr. in Januar. 1528. partly by the endeavours made in his behalf of one Mr. Edw. Standish Fellow of Brasenose (who was either his Brother or Uncle) and partly by the said Doctor. After he was settled in that Coll. he went through the usual classes of Logick and Philosophy with unwearied industry, became a most noted Disputant, took the Degrees in Arts, holy Orders, and drudging much in the faculty of Divinity, proceeded Doctor therein, an. 1542. at which time he was one of the Fellows of Whyttingdon Coll. in London; and having a Chamber in Brasenose, took Commons there when he receded to the University for conversation sake with Men and Books. In the time of K. Edw. 6. he seemed to be a zealous Reformer, was then, if not before, made Rector of Wygan in his own Country, and took to him a Wife, who lived not long with him, for when Qu. Mary came to the Crown they were separated. In 1550. Aug. 2. he was installed the second Canon of the eighth Canonry of the Church of Worcester in the place of Rog. Stanford deceased. When Qu. Mary ruled the Scepter, he wheeled about, and seeing what great mischief was like to follow upon the translation of the Bible into the English tongue in the time of K. Ed. 6. and before, bestirred himself so much about it, that he found means to have the matter proposed in Parliament, in the beginning of Queen Mary, that all such Bibles that were in the English tongue should be prohibited and burn'd. This being very displeasing to many, he was hated of them, and therefore one (e) after his usual manner calls him Morio and Scurra, and another (f) as foul-mouth'd as he, Dr. Inkpot and a blenking Coxcomb, who married against his conscience, (as he saith) more fit to make a riding fool, than Chaplain for a King. — This being the language of two zealous reformers, incited one (g) of another opinion, who was after them in time, to characterize our Author Standish to be Vir doctus, pietate, fide, & divina gloria zelo conspicuus. His works are,

A little treatise against the protestation of Rob. Barnes at the time of his death. Lond. 1540. oct. Which R. Barnes was burn'd in Smithfield 3. Jul. 32. Hen. 8. Dom. 1540. Soori after came out a confutation of the said little treatise, in oct.

Treatise of the Union of the Church. Lond. 1556. Written to Card. Pole.

1556. Treatise against the translation of the Bible in the vulgar Language — with other things, as 'tis probable, which I have not yet seen. He paid his last debt to nature about the beginning of the Year Fifteen hundred fifty and six, but whether buried at Worcester or Wygan, I know not. In his Canonry succeeded one Leonard Pollard Bach. of Div. and Chaplain to Dr. Pates Bishop of Worcester, who having written Five Sermons, were, after they had been revised by Dr. Bonner B. of Lond. printed there 1556 in qu. This Pollard who was not of the University of Oxon, that I can find, died about the beginning of March the same Year, (1556) having enjoyed his Canonry but few Months. Of the same Family of Standish, I find another very active Person of his time named Rich. Standish LL. D. and Parson of Standish in Lancashire, (but his education had been in Cambridge,) who dying at London in his Lodging in, or near to, Pater-noster-row, in the Winter time 1552, was, as 'tis probable, buried in the Church of St. Faith under the Cathedral of St. Paul.

108. JOHN BYRDE received his first breath within the City of Coventrie, descended, if I mistake not, from the ancient Family of his name in Cheeshire, educated in Theologicals in the House or Coll. of the Carmes (he being one of that order) in the University of Oxon. where making considerable proficiency in his studies, was admitted to oppose in Divinity in the publick School of that faculty, in the beginning of May 1510, and in June following was admitted to the reading of the Sentences. In 1513, he proceeded in the said faculty, and three Years after was made Provincial of his Order throughout England. But he enjoying that office only three Years, was succeeded therein by one Rob. Lesbury, who keeping it till 1522, Byrde came in again and continued Provincial till the dissolution of Monasteries. When the Pope was like to lose his Power in England, he became a zealous Preacher for the King's Supremacy; for which, being rewarded with a Bishoprick in Ireland, as Baleus saith, (who calls it (b) Episcopatus Penricensis, tho Waræus remembers no such place) was translated thence to Bangor an. 1539, The temporalities of which See, he (i) received by the title of the King's Chaplain only, without that of Episc. Penricensis, on the 9. Sept. the same Year. In 1541, he was translated to Chester, made the first Bishop thereof, and paid his obedience to the Archb. of York 13. Apr. 1542, where he continued till the Reign of Qu. Mary. He wrote and published, Lectures on St. Paul.

De fide justificante. lib. 1.

1556. Learned homelies — With an Epicede on one Edmund in Prose. At length when Queen Mary came to the Crown, he was (notwithstanding he complied with that time) deprived of his Bishoprick for being married, and living at Chester with his Wife, till Fifteen hundred fifty and six, then died but in an obscure condition. Whereupon his Body was buried in the Cathedral Church there. In the said See succeeded Dr. George Coates, as I shall tell you when I come to speak of the Bishops, under the Year 1555.

109. RICHARD MORYSINE or Morison was born in Oxfordshire as 'tis (k) reported; spent several Years in this University in Logicals and Philosophicals, took a Degree in Arts, afterwards travelled, and making great improvement in the Latin and Greek tongues, became an accomplish'd Gentleman, and well known among the great Men of his time. In 1537, Jul. 17. he being newly return'd from Padoua, was made Prebendary of Yarmminster secunda in the Church of Salisbury, on the promotion of Reginald Pole: Which Dignity he keeping till 1539. Hen. Cole of New Coll. succeeded. At length being commended for a Person of worth and parts to K. Hen 8. was by him sent Ambassador to the Emperor Charles the 5. as he was (l) afterwards by K. Ed. 6. In whose Reign being a Person zealous for reformation, was by him appointed one of the number of such that were to reform this University of Oxon, an. 1549. At which time he shew'd himself a great friend to, and a Protector of, Pet. Martyr, when he encountered the Triumviri in a solemn disputation in the Divinity School. Afterwards having the honor of Knighthood conferr'd upon him, being then esteemed a great learned Man, he went into Italy, and in his return died in Germany, as I shall anon tell you. His works are partly these.

Apomaxis calumniarum convitiatorumque, quibus Johan. Co-clæus homo Theologus, exiguus artium professor, &c. Henrici 8. nomen obscurare, rerum gestarum gloriam sedare, nuper edita, non tam ad regem, quam in regis invidiam, epistola stultit. Lond. 1537. qu. Dedicated to Tho. Cromwell Secretary of State.

An exhortation to stir all English Men to the defence of their Country. Lond. 1539. oct.

Invective against the great and detestable vice, treason, &c. Lond. 1539. oct.

Comfortable consolation for the birth of Prince Edward, rather than sorrow for the death of Qu. Jane. — with other things which Baleus (m) mentions. He also wrote several Verses, which were sent by him to the Oxonians: Of which, and his published Books, (much esteemed by K. Hen. 8.) John Leland hath exercis'd his Muse in his Encomia. The said Sir Rich. Morysine hath also translated into English. (1) The Epist. of Job. Sturmius to the Cardinals and Bishops that were chosen by the Bishop of Rome to search out the abuses of the Church. Lond. 1538. oct. (2) The Symboles of Lud. Vives, much about the same time; with other matters which I have not yet seen. He gave way to fate at Strasburgh (being then there in voluntary exile for the Protestant Religion which he professed) on the 17. March, in Fifteen hundred fifty and six, but whether buried there, I know not. He left behind him a Son named Charles, begotten on the body of his Wife Dame Bridget, and a natural Son named Marcellus Morysine, besides two Daughters, begotten on the body of one, or more Concubines. Job. Hales a noted Scholar of that time (to whom he gave his Books) was one of his Executors, as having always been an entire friend to him. Bernardine Ochine also, with his Wife and Children, did taste sufficiently of his liberality: The same Bernard, I mean, who was Author of the Dialogue of the unjust usurped primacy of the Bishop of Rome, translated from Latin by John Poner, (afterwards B. of Winchester) Lond. 1549. qu. The said Sir R. Morysine had a fair (n) estate, most of which was obtained by his own endeavours, as the Mannour of Whitesbury or Whitchbury with all its appurtenances in Wilt. and Hampshire, the Mannour of East-Chinnock in Somersetshire, the Mannour of Cashobury in Hertfordshire (where he had began to build a stately House,) &c. All which descended to his Posterity.

110. JOHN HUNTINGTON was educated for some time in good arts, but whether he took a Degree here, it appears not, only that while he continued in this University he was noted among his contemporaries for a tolerable Poet. His works are,

Epitaphium Ricardi Pacæi. car. 1. The beginning of which is, Nascitur omnis homo, &c.

Humana vitæ deploratio. car. 1. The beginning is, Nunc ubi magnanimi, &c.

The Genealogie of Heresies.

De lapsu philosophiæ, besides several Sermons. In 1553. Decemb. 3. he was brought before her Majesties Council, for composing a rhyme against Dr. Stokes and the Sacrament, but making a recantation, and an humble submission for what he had done, with a promise to amend, as well in Doctrin, (for he was a godly Preacher) as in way of living, was suffer'd to depart. Afterwards he left the Nation, and lived mostly in Germany with Job. Bale, who 1556. calls him his beloved Son in Christ.

111. RICHARD TRACY, Son of Will. Son of Hen. Tracy, was born of, and descended from, an ancient and gentle Family living at Todyngton in Glocestershire, (the body of which William was taken out of the grave, and burn'd in the time of Hen. 8. for a Will that he made, then favouring of Heresie) was conversant among the Muses for a time, took a Degree in Arts, and became noted for his pregnant parts. Afterwards his learning being much improved in his elder years by reading and experience, he became noted for it, an enemy to the Roman Church, and a zealous Reformer, as it may partly appear by his Writings, the titles of which follow.

Of the preparation to the cross and to death, and of the comfort under the cross and death; in two Books. Lond. 1540. in oct. Dedic. to Thom. Lord Cromwell. Which Book, wrap'd up in canvas, being found in the belly of a Cod, when brought from Lin-Regis in Norfolk to Cambridge Mercat to be sold on Midsummer Eve 1626, it was reprinted soon after, (as 'tis said) under the name of Job. Frythe.

The profe and declaration of this proposition, Faith only justifieth—Not said when or where Printed. 'Tis in oct. and ded. to K. Hen. 8.

Treatise of the errors and blindness of the Popish Clergy.

Declaration of the Sacrament. Lond. 1548 oct.

- Confutation of the articles of Papisme.—With other things, as 'tis probable, which I have not yet seen, only know that some of them were prohibited to be read by the Proclamation of K. Hen. 8. The Author was living in an absconded condition in Fifteen hundred fifty and six, (which was the 3. and 4. of Philip and Marie) and perhaps was in being several years after.

112. JOHN GWYNNETH was a Welsh Man born, and tho of very poor parentage, yet of most excellent natural parts, and exceeding apt to embrace any kind of juvenile learning. But so it was, that he having little or nothing to maintain him in his studies at Oxon, he was exhibited to by an Ecclesiastical Mecenas, who well knew that his abilities were such, that in future time he might be an Ornament to the Cath. Church by writing against the Hereticks, as they were then called. The younger years of this Gwynneth were adorned with all kind of polite literature, and his elder, with the reading of the Scriptures, and conversation with Books, written by, and against the Lutherans and Zwinglians. At length perceiving full well what ground their Doctrine had gotten, he wrote, Declaration of the state, wherein Hereticks do lead their lives. Lond. in qu.

Detection of that part of Fryths Book which he termeth His foundation. Lond. 1554. oct. Printed also, if I mistake not, before that time.

Against Joh. Fryth, on the Sacrament of the Altar. Lond. 1557. qu. Printed also, I think before that time.

- Declaration of the notable victory given of God to Qu. Mary, shewed in the Church of Luton (o) 22. July in the first Year of her Reign. Lond. (1554) oct. with other things, as 'tis probable, which I have not yet seen. This Job. Gwynneth, I take to be the same with Jo. Gwynneth a Secular Priest, who for his great proficiency, and works performed, in the faculty of Musick, had the Degree of Doctor of the said faculty conferr'd upon him by the Members of this University, an. 1531. See more in the Fasts under that Year.

113. WILLIAM PYE, a Suffolk Man born, was elected Fellow of Oriel Coll. in 1529, and after he had continued in the Degree of Master some years, he studied Physick, became thrice Proctor of the University, and, as it seems, D. of B. On the 7. of Oct. 1545. he became Archdeacon of Berkshire, upon the resignation of Dr. Jo. Crayford, and in the Reign of Ed. 6. a pretender to reformation; but when Qu. Mary succeeded, he changed his mind, was in the beginning of her Reign, not only made Dean of Chichester, in the place, if I mistake not, of Bartelm. Traheron, but also (p) Prebendary of Lytton in the Church of Wells, upon the deprivation of Will. Wrythiosley, and Rector of Cbedsey in Somersetshire, on the deprivation also of

Mr. Nich. Mason. All that I have seen of his labours, are only these following.

Oratio coram patribus & clero habita, &c. in Oct. 1553. Lond. 1553. in tw.

Disputation with Archb. Cranmer and B. Latymer at Oxon — part of which you may see in the Book of Acts and Mon. by Job. Fox, under the Year 1554. When this learned Person and celebrated Preacher died, unless in Fifteen hundred fifty and seven, I know not, nor any thing else, only an Epigram written upon him by a Poet (*) of his time and acquaintance, which shall serve for his Epitaph.

Cum pia vita fiet, pia cum decessusque popellum, Fure videre mihi nomine, reque pius.

In his Archdeaconry succeeded Tho. Whyte LL. D. of New Coll. 24 Sept. 1557, but who in his Deanery, I cannot justly tell.

WILLIAM PERYN of the same Family, as I conceive, with those of Brockton in Sbroppshire, who (*) are descended from a gentle Family of that name in Derbyshire, did spend some time, when he was young, among the Brethren of the Order of St. Dominick, commonly called Black Fryers in their Coll. at Oxon, of which Order he was a most zealous member. Afterwards retiring to the House of that Order in London, lived there, and became a violent Preacher against such that were called Hereticks, especially about the time when K. Hen. 8. renounced the Popes power in England; for which his zeal, he was forced to leave the Nation for some Years. In the beginning of 1543, he supplicated to be admitted to the reading of the Sentences; whose desire being granted, as it seems, he was about that time admitted Bach. of Divinity. In the Reign of Ed. 6. he either absconded, or retired beyond the Seas, but when Qu. Mary came to rule the Scepter, he appeared openly, was then (if not happily before) made Prior of the Black Fryers of Great St. Bartelmew in Smithfield so I find it mention'd, where he lived in great repute during her Reign. He hath written and published,

Three godly and most learned Sermons of the most honorable and blessed Sacrament of the Altar, Preached in the Hospital of S. Anthony in London, on Hoc est corpus meum, &c. Lond. 1546. 48. oct. dedic. to his special good Lord and Master Edm. Bonner B. of London.

Spiritual exercises and Goostly meditations, and a near way to come to perfection and life contemplative, &c. Lond. 1557, and at Caen in Normandie 1598. oct. dedicated by the Author to the devout and religious Sisters Catherine Palmer of the Order of St. Briget in Dermount, and to Dorothy Clement of the Order of St. Clare in Louayne. He published also a Book in defence, and for the frequent celebrating, of the Mals; but that I have not yet seen. At length when Qu. Elizabeth came to the Crown (at which time he is said to be living) he was put to more trouble, and not unlikely did retire beyond the Sea again.

ROBERT RECORD received his first breath among the Cambrians, but in what County I cannot in all my searches find, notwithstanding he was descended from a gentle Family. About 1525, he first saluted the Oxonian Muses, and in 1531, he was elected Fellow of Allsouls Coll. being then Bach. of Arts, but whether he took the Magisterial Degree in that faculty, the publick Registers shew not. Sure I am that making Physick his Profession, he went to Cambridge, where he was honored with the Degree of Doctor in that faculty, an. 1545. and honored of all that knew him for his great knowledge in several Arts and Sciences. 'Tis said that while he was of Allsouls Coll. and afterwards when he retired from Cambr. to this University, he publicly taught Arithmetick, and the grounds of Mathematicks, with the art of true accompting. All which he rendred so clear and obvious to capacities, that none ever did the like before him in the memory of Man. The truth is, he was endowed with rare knowledge in Arithmetical and Geometrical proportions touching the statute of coynage, and the standard thereof; and for natural Philolophy, Astrology, Cosmography, &c. and other polite and unusual learning of that time, most Authors give him great commendations. He hath written, (o) In Bedfordshire. (p) Reg. Gilb. Bourne Ep. B. & Will. (quod in cap. 20. Ap. 1551) sub an. 1554.

(*) Ut in Offic. Armorum, G. 5. fol. 103. (*) Job. Parkurst in Ludicris sive Epigram. — Lond. 1573. p. 93.

The grounds of Arts, teaching the perfect work and practice in Arithmetick in whole numbers and in fractions. — When this was first published I know not: Sure it is, that this Book coming into the hands of the famous Mathematician Dr. John Dee, he did correct and augment it. Afterwards it was augmented (1) By John Mellis a School-master. — Lond. 1590. oct. (2) By Rob. Norton. (3) By Rob. Hartwell practitioner in Mathematicks in London, and (4) by R. C. &c. All which augmentations or additions were printed together at Lond. in a thick oct. an. 1623. He also published the second part of Arithmetick intituled

The Whetstone of witte, containing the extraction of roots, the cockick practice, with the rules of equation and works of surde numbers. Lond. 1557. qu. &c.

The path way to knowledge, containing the first Principles of Geometry, as they may be most aptly applied unto practice, both for the use of instruments Geometrical, and Astronomical, and also for projection of platts in every kind. Lond. 1551. qu.

The castle of knowledge, containing the explication of the Sphere, both celestial and material, and divers other things incident thereunto, &c. Lond. 1556. fol. and 1596. qu.

1558. The urinall of physick, of the judiciall of Urines — Repr. at Lond. 1582. &c. oct. Many other things he hath written as Baleus and Pisens will tell you, as (1) Of the Eucharist. (2) Of auricular confession. (3) The image of a true Common-wealth. (4) Of Anatomie; with several other, but such I have not yet seen, and therefore cannot give you the true titles, or time when they (if ever) were printed. All that I can say of him more, is, that he concluded his last day in the Prison called the Kings-bench (being there I presume, detained for debt) in the beginning of the Year Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, but where he was buried, unless in the Church or Yard of St. George in Southwark, (wherein, I conceive the said Prison then was situated) I know not.

116. RICHARD CROKE, or Crocus as he writes himself, was a Londoner born, admitted Scholar of Kings Coll. in Cambridge 4. Apr. 1506. went thence, during the time of his Scholarship, to Oxon, was a Scholar or Student in the Greek tongue under famous Will. Grocyn, and other Oxford Men; in which Language excelling, he went beyond the Seas, and became publick Reader thereof at Lipsick in Germany, being the first of all, as 'tis said, that taught the Greek tongue there. Afterwards, having first spent some time in other places, he was invited home, and by recommendations made to the King of his great sufficiencies in the Greek and Latin tongue, and in Oratory, he became great in favour with him and most of the Nobility that were learned. Afterwards upon the intreaties of Jo. Fisher B. of Rochester he returned to Cambridge, where he was made Orator about 1522, and Greek Professor next after Erasmus. So that in time, by his diligent teaching and instructing, the knowledge of the Greek tongue, or the true and genuine Greek was there, with much ado, planted. In 1524, he commenced D. of D. at Cambridge, being then, or about that time, Tutor to the Duke of Richmond, and beneficed, if not dignified in the Church. Afterwards, he was employed by the King to go to several places in Italy, especially to the University of Padua, to agitate about the matter of the unlawfulness of the Kings Marriage with his Brothers Widow. After his return, the University of Oxford (as a certain (*) Writer tells you) by great means and favourable friends and fair promises of large allowance, invited him thither to be their Reader. The time when he came to Oxon, was in the beginning of 1532, in which Year K. Hen. 8. by his Charter dated 18. Jul. did convert Cardinal Wolsey's College into that of King's Coll. or that founded by King Hen. 8. In which Year he was not only incorporated D. of D. as he had stood at Cambridge, but was made the third Canon of the twelve of the said foundation, but whether he was a Reader I cannot in all my searches find. In the latter end of the same Year the new Dean Dr. Jo. Hygden died, and thereupon the Canons wrot to Tho. Cromwell Secretary of State, that he would interceed with the King that Dr. Croke might succeed him, but for what reason it was, that he was put aside, I cannot justly say. Sure I am, that Dr. Croke continued Canon of the said College, till it was about to be converted into a Cathedral, an. 1545, and then having an yearly pension of six and twenty pounds thirteen shillings and four pence, allowed to him in recompence of his Canonry, he retired to Exeter Coll. where he lived in the condition of a Sojournour many years, and was not at all made a Canon of the Cathedral founded by K. H. 8. He hath written, Oratio de Græcarum disciplinarum laudibus. Dedicated to Nicholas Bishop of Ely by an Epist. before it dated cal. Jul. 1519. 'Tis Printed in qu. but where, or when, I cannot tell.

Oratio qua Cantabrigienses est hortatus, ne Græcarum literarum desertores essent. Printed with the former oration. Before, and at the end of the said two Orations, Gill. Duchet hath an Epistle in praise of Croke and his learning.

Introductiones ad linguam Græcam.

Elementa Gram. Græcæ.

De verborum constructione, besides translations made from Greek into Latin from Theod. Gaza and Elysus Calentinus. As for those things he wrot against Leland while he continued in Oxon as a certain Author tells us, are no more, as I suppose, than scoffs in Verse, or repartees made on him for changing his Religion, and thereupon dyed distracted, whereas Dr. Croke made no change, as 'tis said, but dyed in that Faith, which he in the beginning had received, in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight. A 1558. Copy of his last Will and Testament (†) which I have seen, dated 21. Aug. and proved 29. of the same Month, an. 1558. I find that he was Parson of Long Buckby in Northamptonshire, but cannot find the Church or Yard wherein he would have his body to be buried, only that he died in London, leaving behind him a Brother named Rob. Croke of Water-Horton in Warwickshire.

JOHN ROBYNS a Staffordshire Man born, became a 117.

Student in this University, an. 1516, or thereabouts, was elected Fellow of Allsouls Coll. 1520. and afterwards took the Degrees in Arts and holy Orders. But such was his vigorous genie, that by the force thereof being conducted to the pleasant studies of Mathematicks and Astrology, he made so great a progress in them, that he became the ablest Person in his time for those studies, not excepted his friend Record, whose learning was more general. At length taking the Degree of Bach. of Divinity in 1531, he was the Year following made by K. Hen. 8. (to whom he was Chaplain) one of the Canons of his College in Oxon, and in Decemb. 1543 Canon of Windsore, (upon the death of Dr. Rich. Rawson, who was also Archdeacon of Essex) and in fine Chaplain to Qu. Mary, who had him in great veneration for his learning. Among several things that he hath written relating to Astrology, I find these following.

De culminatione fixarum stellarum, &c.

De ortu & occasu stellarum fixarum, &c.

Annotationes Astrologicae, &c. lib. 3.

Annotationes de Edwardo VI.

Tractatus de prognosticatione per Ecclipsin. All which Books, that are in MS. were sometimes in the choice Library of Mr. Tho. Allen of Glocester Hall. After his death, they coming into the hands of Sir Ken. Digby, were by him given to the Bodleian Library, where they yet remain. 'Tis said also, that he the said Robyns hath written a Book intit. De portentosis cometis, but such a thing I have not yet seen, nor do I know any thing else of the Author, only that paying his last debt to nature 25. Aug. in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, was buried in the Chappel 1558. of St. George at Windsore. Over his Grave was soon after a Marble-stone laid, with a large inscription thereon, part of which you may read in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 178. b.

WILLIAM STAUNFORD Son of Will. Staunford of 118. London Mercer, (*) (by Margaret his Wife, Daugh. and Heir of — Gedney of London) Son of Rob. Staunford of Rowley in Staffordshire, was born in the County of Middlesex 22. Aug. 1509. (1. Hen. 8.) received so much literature among the Oxonians that enabled him sooner than another Person to conquer the rudiments of the municipal Law in Greys-Inn near London. In the 36. of Hen. 8. he was elected Autumn Reader of that House, but did not read because of the pestilence then in those parts, yet in the Lent following he did perform that office with great credit and honor. In the 5. Ed. 6. he was Double-Reader of that Inn in the time of Lent, and the next Year was called by writ to be Serjeant at Law. In 1553, (1^o Maria) he was made the Queens Serjeant, and the next Year was not only constituted one of the Justices of the Common-pleas (some say of the Common-bench) but also dubb'd a Knight, being then in high esteem for his great abilities in his profession, especially for the Books that he about that time compos'd, taken then, especially in after Ages, into the hands of the most learned in the Law, which have ever since made him famous among them and others. The titles are,

Pleas of the Crown, divided into several titles and common places. Lond. 1557. qu. &c. In some impressions, they are divided into two Volumes.

1558. Exposition of the King's Prerogative, collected out of the abridgment of Anth. Fitzherbert, and other old Writers of the Laws of England. Lond. 1567. 68. &c. qu. Besides other Books which have not been yet Printed. This noted Lawyer, who was a zealous R. Cath. departed this mortal life on the 28. Aug. in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight. Whereupon his body was buried in the Church of Hadley in Middlesex. I have seen a Copy of his (a) Will, wherein he styles himself one of the Justices of the Common-pleas under the King and Queen, and desires that his Body may be buried in the Parish Church of Islyngdon, Hadley or Houndsworth. His posterity remaineth in Staffordshire, Warwickshire, and elsewhere, to this day.

119. ROBERT TALBOT was very much esteemed in his time, and after, for his singular knowledge in the antiquities of England, and for his care in preserving and collecting antient Books and Monuments decayed by time. His cronie John Leland is full (b) of his praises; and not a little are Job. (c) Baleus, Job. (d) Cajus, Abr. (e) Ortelius, Camden and others; the last of which styles (f) him Vir antiquitatis bene peritus, & in hac Angliæ parte (meaning in the Icenis, i.e. Norfolk, Suffolk, &c.) versatissimus. He the said Talbot was born at Thorpe in Northamptonshire, but whether at Thorpe Mandevill or Thorpe Longa, I know not, and seems to be of the same Family with the Talbots of Grafton. He was educated in Grammaticals in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, in Logicals and Philosophicals in New Coll. of which he became Fellow (after he had served two Years of probation) an. 1523. and left it 5 Years after, being then only Bach. of Arts, supplicated for the Degree of Master 1529, but not admitted, as I can find in the Register of that time. However, that he was written Master and Doctor afterwards, it doth manifestly appear in various writings, so that I presume he took those Degrees elsewhere. On the 23. Jun. 1541 he was admitted to a Prebendship in the Church of Wells, called Wedmer secunda, and on the 9. Apr. 1. Ed. 6. Dom. 1547. the Dean and Chapter of Norwiche did by their Letters Pat. confer a Prebendship, or office of Treasurer of their Church on him, void by the death of one Will. Herydams. On the 27. Aug. 5. and 6. of Phil. and Mary, Dom. 1558. he gave to John Harpesfeld Dean, and to the said Chapter of the Cath. of Norwiche three Acres of Land in Lakenham, and soon after died, as I shall tell you afterwards. But that which is chiefly to be noted is, that during his abode at Norwiche, he wrote a Book thus intit.

Roberti Talboti Annotationes in eam partem Itinerarii Antonini quæ ad Britanniam pertinent. The beginning of which is, Itinera hic sunt in Britannia numero xv. &c. It endeth at the word Luguvallu, at the end of the fifth Itinerary, and goeth no farther. Which Book the learned Camden in his Britannia, and Will. Burton in his Commentary on Antoninus his Itinerary, and others, did much use. It is not Printed, but remains in MS. in obscure places: And for ought I know there are but three Copies of it in being, viz. one in the Library of Bennet Coll. in Cambridge, another in that of Sir Job. Cotton at Westminster (which, if I mistake not, did sometimes belong to Mr. Tho. Allen of Glouc. Hall, got out of his hands by Rich. James of C. C. C. for the said Library) and a third in Bodley's Vatican. Our Author Talbot hath also written a Book called,

Aurum ex stercore, vel de Enigmaticis & propheticis. MS. collected from old Books of verses and rimes, that have been long since lost. The beginning of which is, Certe non est rarum, &c. In this Book are verses called Magistrates, every one of which was worth an ordinary Groat. Mr. Allen before-mention'd, had a Copy of, valued, it much and would often repeat verses thence at times of refection, but where that Copy is now, I know not. Sure I am, that one written in qu. in the archives of C. C. C. bound with the observations from humanity Authors made by John Twyne, was given thereunto by Brian his Grandson. Our Author Talbot hath also made choice Collections

1558. De Chartis quibusdam Regum Britannorum. MS. in the Library of Bennet Coll. in Cambridge. What else he hath written I know not, nor any thing more of him, only that he took his last farewell of this World a little after the 27. Aug. in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, and was buried in the Cathedral Church there, as I have been instructed from the researches of Mr. (afterwards Dr.) Hump. Prideaux Prebendary of that Church, made from several Registers and Charters belonging thereunto. By Rob. Talbot's (g) Will dated 20. Aug. 1558, which is almost three Months before Qu. Mary died, he left the best and rarest of his MSS. to New Coll. in Oxon. Which MSS. did then lye at Thorpe and Cranesley; and maintenance also for an Anniversary to be kept at Thorpe for himself, Father, Mother, his Brother Job, and for his Uncle Sir Rich. Whitrys. Which Anniversary was to be performed for the present by Sir Christopher his Priest at Thorpe before-mention'd. But this last, I presume, was never performed. The Reader is to know, now I am got into the name of Talbot, that after Rob. Talbot's time lived one Tho. Talbot commonly called Limping Talbot, from a lameness in one of his legs, Son of John Talbot of Salebury in Lancashire Esq; (who died 30. Aug. 1551.) which Thomas being promoted to the Clerkship of the Records in the Tower of London, did at length, by the help of a good memory, become a most excellent Genealogist, and a Man of singular skill in our antiquities. Camden in his Britannia (h) doth acknowledg his help in the succession of the Earls of each County since the Norman conquest, and Tho. Abingdon the sometimes Antiquary of Worcestershire, in his MS. History of the Bishops of Worcester saith thus of him, — But these first (meaning the first Bishops of Worcester) I had out of the Collections of an excellent Antiquary Mr. Thomas Talbot, who gathered the same out of a Leiger of the Priory of Worcester, which I think is now perished. He left choice Collections behind him, some of which coming into the hands of Sir Rob. Cotton, he put them into his (i) Library as choice Monuments, and being bound in one Volume in fol. are thus intit. by a (k) late hand. Analecta quamplurima diversi generis, viz. ex quibusdam chronicis, cartis, aliisque authenticis registris. Epitaphia, Genealogia & alia ad rem historiam spectantia, besides several Collections of Antiquities in Yorkshire. I have seen also in the Sheldonian (l) Library, now reposed in the Herald's Office, divers of his Collections, viz. among them is a thin fol. intit. Escaetorum inquisitiones de tempore Reg. Ed. 4. &c. Now whether this Tho. Talbot, who was living, an. 1580, and for ought that I know, was living ten Years after, was of kin to Robert before-mentioned, I know not, nor can I safely believe that he is the same Thomas Talbot, who was admitted Bach. of Arts of Oxon. in July 1533. I find another Tho. Talbot to have been born in the said County of Lancashire, and entred into the Society of Jesus an. 1598. aged 26. who, after he had wrote several Books, died in 1652, but this Person was not, as I can yet learn, originally bred among us.

HENRY Lord STAFFORD the only Son of Edward Duke of Bucks. (attainted, and executed for treason in 1521.) was one of the most accomplished Persons of his time, and tho not the inheritor of his Fathers honours, yet he was a Man of great virtue, learning, and piety. In his younger years he received his education in both the Universities, especially in that of Cambridge, to which his Father had been a benefactor; where by the care of good Tutors he attained to a considerable knowledge in the Latin tongue; and in that language he wrote several things, as 'tis said, as well in verse as prose, but such I have not yet seen. He translated into English a Book intit. De vera differentia regie potestatis & ecclesiasticæ, & quæ sit ipsa veritas ac virtus utriusq; &c. Written by Edward Fox Bishop of Hereford. This translation was printed in oct. but when, it appears not in the Book. He also translated Erasmus his Two Epistles, wherein is declared the brainsick headiness of the Lutherans, &c. Lond. 1553. oct. and other things which I have not yet seen. This noble Lord gave way to fate (*) in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, but where buried I cannot yet tell, nor in what County born, unless in Staffordshire, wherein he was possessor of many Lands.

- 5121 ROBERT BROKE or Brook Son of Thom. Broke of Claverley in Shropshire, by Margaret his Wife, Daughter of Hugh Grosvenor of Farnot in the said County, was born, as I conceive, at Claverley, laid a foundation of Literature at Oxon; which was a great advantage to him when he studied the municipal Laws in the Middle Temple, where he became the compleatest Lawyer of his time. In 1542, he was elected Autumn or Summer Reader of that House, and in the latter end of the Year (in Lent) 1550, he was elected Double-Reader. In 1552, he was by writ called to be Serjeant at Law, and in 1553, being the first Year of Qu. Mary, he was made Lord Chief Justice of the Common pleas (and not of the Common-bench as some say) and about that time received the honor of Knighthood from that Queen: In whose Reign, and after, he was held in high value for his profound knowledge in the Law, and for his just and upright dealing in all matters relating to the profession thereof. He hath written, An abridgment, containing an abstract of the Year --- Bookes till the time of Qu. Marie. Lond. 1573. fol. 76, 86, &c. qu.

Certain cases adjudged in the time of K. Hen. 8. Ed. 6. and Qu. Marie, from 6. Hen. 8. to the 4. of Qu. Marie. Lond. 1578. 1604. 25. &c. in oct. The original title of this Book is in French Ascuns novel cases, &c.

1558. Reading on the Statute of limitations 32. H.8. c.2. Lond. 1647. oct. Printed I think before that time. This Sir Rob. Broke, who was a zealous Cathol. died, as it seems, in Aug. or Sept. in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, but where buried I cannot yet tell. In his Will (m) proved 12. Oct. the same Yeat, he several times remembers the Church and Poor of Putney near London. I find another of both his names, who is written Esquire, Serjeant at Law and Recorder of London, under whose name was published, Reading upon the statute of Magna Charta, chap. 16. Lond. 1641. qu. before which time the Author was dead. Whether the same with Rob. Brook of Brasenose, who was admitted Master of Arts 1584. I think not. As for Sir Rob. Broke the Judge, he obtained a fair estate by his endeavours, which he left to his posterity, remaining at Madeley in Shropshire, and at one or two places in Suffolk.

122. PAUL BUSH was born of honest and sufficient Parents, became a Student in this University about the Year 1513, and five years after took the Degree of Bach. of Arts, being then numbred among the celebrated Poets of the University. Afterwards he applied his mind to the supreme faculty, entred into the Order of the Bonhom's, studied among the Fryers of the Order of St. Austin (now Wadham Coll.) in the North suburb of Oxon, and at length became Provincial of his Order, that is of Bonhom's. This Person being noted in his time for his great learning in Divinity and Physick, was by K. Hen. 8. made the first Bishop of Bristol, after he had placed an Episcopal See there, an. 1542, and by the name and title of Paulus Bush capellanus Regis & S. Theologie Baccalaureus had restitution (r) made to him of the Temporalities belonging to that See, 16. June in the same Year. But he taking to him a Wife (whom one (r) calls a Concubine) in the days of K. Ed. 6. was deprived of his Bishoprick by Qu. Mary, an. 1553, whereupon he spent the remaining part of his days at Bristol. He hath written several things in Divinity and Medicine, as well in verse as prose; of which number these are some.

Treatise of salves and curing remedies, — besides Poems of divers kinds, which I have not yet seen. At length taking his last farewell of this World on the eleventh of Octob. in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, aged 68 years, 1558. was buried on the North side of the choir (near to the entrance leading into the North Isle) of the Cath. Church at Bristol. Over his grave was soon after erected a low altar tomb, and on it was fastned his statue in his Episcopal Robes lying on his back. On the 4 corners of the Tomb, were erected four small Pillars, bearing a Canopy; about which is this written. Hic jacet D. Paulus Bush primus hujus Ecclesiæ Episcopus, qui obiit undec. die Octob. an. Dom. 1558. ætatisque suæ 68. cujus animæ propitiatur Christum. About the tomb, beneath the statue, are certain verses engraven on three sides thereof, (the fourth joyning to the Wall) some of which follow.

A patre Bush dictus, Paulum baptisma vocavit,

This Monument was erected near to the stone, under which his sometimes Wife called Edyth Ashley was buried, who died 8. Oct. 1553.

ROBERT WARDE, a native of the Dioc. of Dur. 123. ham, was elected Probationer-Fellow of Merton College in 1536, he being then Masters standing or more, and three years after proceeded in Arts. About that time he became a shagling Lecturer in Philosophy before the University in the publick Schools, a profound Disputant in Philosophical matters, and homo semper nimium Metaphysicus, as one (o) doth deservedly stile him. He was the chief man that disputed with Bishop Rydley in the Divinity School, an. 1554. as I have elsewhere told (*) you. And Job. Fox who hath a full relation (p) of the said disputation, saith of this our Author thus. 'Mr. Ward amplified so largely his words, and so high he climbed into the Heavens with Duns his Ladder, and not with the Scriptures, that it is to be marvelled how he could come down again without falling, &c. But what Fox hath ironically said concerning this matter, is fully answered by one (q) of Wards perwasion. As for the works that this our Author hath written, I never saw any, and therefore cannot give you the titles, only say with our old, and later, Catalogue or Register of Fellows of Merton Coll. that he wrote, Dialectica & Philosophica quedam, &c. --- Job. Fox before mention'd hath published,

His disputation with B. Nich. Rydley in the Divinity-School at Oxon. — Which you may see in the Book of Acts and Mon. of the Church, under the Year 1554. A little before Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown, Mr. Warde (who seems to have been then Bach. of Div.) travelled to Rome, where paying his last debt to nature on the 14. Oct. in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, was there buried; but in what Church or Chappel I know not. Whereupon the report of it coming to Oxon his exequies were celebrated (r) by the Society of Merton College 17. Novemb. following, according to our account. Of the same Family (tho remote) was Will. Warde, alias Walker, alias Slaugbter, Son of Mr. Rob. Warde of the County of Cumberland, who having spent 7 years in studying the Arts in Brasnose Coll. travelled into Spain with one Mr. Dutton a R. Cath. and there became one of his opinion. Afterwards he returned into England to settle his concerns, went beyond Sea again, and upon a Commission received, he returned into his own Country a second time to convert Persons to his profession; but being taken after he had been a Priest 24 years, was imprison'd in Newgate. Soon after being tried for his life, he was executed at Tybourne on Munday 26. July 1641.

124. JOHN HOLYMAN, a most stout Champion of his time in his Preachings and Writings against the Lutherans, was born at Codyngton near to Hadenham in Buckinghamshire, educated in Wykeham's School near Winchester, made perpetual Fellow of New Coll. in 1512, took a Degree in the Canon Law, afterwards that of M. of A. left the Coll. about 1526. being then Bach. of Divinity and beneficed. But being desirous of the conversation of learned Men and Books, entred (†) himself in the condition of a Sojournour in Exeter Coll. where he continued for some time. At length he became a Monk of St. Maries Abbey at Reading in Berks. and in 1530 proceeded in Divinity, at which time Hugh Abbat of the said Monastery, wrot to the University an (‡) Epistle, wherein our Author is thus characterized — Dominus Holymanus, non visâ minus quam eruditione Theologus insignis, Londini nuper è suggesto Paulino cencionatus est: tam frequenti hominum conventu, tantâ admiratione, tam magnâ apud omnes gratiâ, ut jamdudum nemo, qui christum sincere prædicat, majorem ab illo populo, vel laudem vel amorem consequutus est, &c. The said Epistle was written, as I have (*) elsewhere told you, in the Year 1530. to the end that the University would be pleased to dispense with him from Preaching at Oxon for the Degree of D. of Divinity, and that instead thereof he might Preach at London, upon pretence that the City was much polluted with Luther's Doctrine. In 1535, he was ejected from his Abbey, because of the dissolution thereof for a profane use, and lived afterwards partly at Hanborough near to Woodstock in Oxfordshire (of which place he seems to have been Rector) and partly in Exeter Coll. In 1554, he was promoted to the See of Bristol, upon the deprivation of Paul Bush the first Bishop thereof; the Temporalities of which See being given (||) to him 28. Nov. the same Year, fate there to the time of his death in good repute. He hath written,

Tract. contra doctrinam M. Lutheri.

Defensio matrimonii Regine Catherine cum Rege Henrico octavo, lib. 1. with other things which I have not yet seen. This Person who was a most zealous Catholick, gave way to fate either in, or near to, Oxon, much about the time, when his Predecessor P. Bush died, and was according to his will, as I presume, buried in the Chancel of the Church of Hanborough before-mentioned, in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight. Mr. Alexand. Belsire sometimes Fellow of New College, afterwards the first President of that of St. John Bapt. who was his great Friend and Overseer of his last Will, was buried near to him, in 1567, being, while living, seldom from him. The said Bishop Holyman in his last (a) Will and Testament dated 4. June 1558, and proved 16. Feb. following, did give to the College near to Winchester the works of St. Augustine, St. Jerome, St. Cyprian, St. Cecill, Tertullian, Ireneus, &c. Which afterwards were chained in the Library there.

125. RICHARD TURNER, a Staffordshire Man born, was educated in Magd. College; of which house he became afterwards Fellow, and esteemed in the University, especially by the reformed party, a right godly and learned Man, and a good Preacher. Afterwards he belonged to the Church at Windsore, where he helped Jo. Merbeck in making the Concordance of the Bible. But when Qu. Mary came to the Crown he fled beyond Seas, and settling at Basil in Germany, was a frequent Preacher among the English exiles, for whose sake he composed,

An Exposition on the Epistle of {Ephefians.
St. Paul to the {Hebrews.

Expos. on the Gen. Epist. of St. James. — These expositions which were read at Basil, were fit for the Press in 1558, but whether they were ever afterwards Printed, I know not. In the said Year, Baleus tells (b) us, that he was living at Basil, and Joh. Fox doth further (c) inform us that he died in Exile. So I presume, that he concluded his last day between the beginning of Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, and the Month of Novemb. the 1558. same year; in which Month Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown of England, and soon after the exiles return'd to their Country.

126. REYNOLD POLE whose piety, learning, and integrity of life did make him more illustrious than the splendor of his royal blood, was a younger Son of Sir Ric. Pole Knight of the Garter (Cousin german to K. Hen. 7.) by Margaret his Wife, Daughter of George Duke of Clarence, younger Brother to K. Ed. 4. The birth of this most noble Person, was, as a learned (u) Author reports, at Stoverton Castle in Staffordshire, or as another (w) who was a Foreigner tells us, (but false, as I presume) at London in the Month of March 1500. His education in Grammatical learning was partly in the Carmes House (commonly called White Friars) in the North suburb of Oxon, and his Academical in the Coll. of St. Mary Magdalen, where continuing for some time, he was admitted to the reading of any of the Logical Books of Aristotle, that is to the Degree of Bach. of Arts, an. 1515. In which year he supplicated the venerable Congregation of Regents, that he might wear panni pretiosi and pellure pretiosæ, and be admitted to enter into the Library. How long he tarried in that Coll. after he had taken his Degree, or whether he took the Degree of Master of Arts, or a Degree in any other faculty, it appears not in our Registers. In the Year 1517. March 19. he was made Prebendary of Roscombe in the Church of Salisbury, in 1519. Apr. 10. Preb. of Tatminster secunda in the said Church, and on the 14. of Feb. 1523, he was admitted Fellow of Corp. Chr. College by command from the founder: Which place, I presume, he never enjoyed, being then absent, if not happily Dean of Winbourne Minster in Dorsetshire, from whence he was promoted to be Dean of Exeter. Afterwards, his life being chiefly spent in Italy, he became by the favour of the Pope, Cardinal of St. Nereus and Achilleus, afterwards of St. Mary in Cosmedin, and at length of St. Prisca, was employed also by him in several Embassies to the French King, and to the Emperor, and lastly after the said Popes death (Paul 3.) he was in the Conclave of Cardinals chose twice by them to succeed him, an. 1549. But he, upon some account, refusing both the elections, craved license to depart unto a certain Monastery in the Territory of Verona, there to spend the remainder of his days. To which place afterwards retiring, he exercis'd himself for some years, in great devotion and retiredness. At length the news of K. Edw. death being brought to him, and that Qu. Mary had obtained the Crown, he procured of P. Julius 3. license to be sent his Legat into England, to reconcile that Nation to the Romish See, and the rather for this cause, that being (x) not in holy orders, (tho a Cardinal) he might be in a capacity (being one of the three that were named) to marry the Queen. Soon after coming into England (the Queen being then married) he was elected Chancellor of this University, and was made Archb. of Canterbury in the place of Crammer; to which he was consecrated 22. March 1555. (being about that time (y) invested with the Temporalities of that See) and kept it to his dying day. He was a Person of great learning, eloquence and judgment, of singular piety, charity, and exemplary life, as several Writers tell us, who add also, that he was an excellent Canonist, and well read in the Laws of ec-

A Treatise of Justification. Lov. 1569. qu. in two Books. This was found among the Writings of Card. Pole, remaining in the custody of Mr. Hen. Pynning, Chamberlain and receiver general to the said Cardinal, then lately deceased at Lovaine. With it were Printed and bound certain translations touching the said matter of justification, viz. (1) The sixth Session of the generall Council of Trent, which is of justification, with the Canons of the same Session. (2) A Treatise of St. Augustin that famous Doctor, by him intit. Of faith and works, &c.—Which translations were made by the Cardinal, who late several times in the said Council. (3) A Sermon of St. Chrysostome, of praying unto God. (4) A Sermon of St. Basil of Fasting. (5) Certain Sermons of St. Leo the great, of the same argument. (6) A notable Sermon of St. Cyprian of Almshouses. He also (Card. Pole) had been several years gathering and obtaining from divers learned Persons, the various readings, emendations, castigations, &c. of Cicero's works, with intentions to have published a compleat Copy of them, but death seizing on him unexpectedly, that good work was stopp'd, and what are become of the papers of corrections, I know not. This great Person who was in an high manner venerated by all Men (tho extremely hated by K. Hen 8.) yielded to nature 18. Nov. early in the morning, (being the very next day that Qu. Mary died) in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, aged 58. years: Whereupon his body being carried to Canterbury in the latter end of Decemb. following, was buried with solemnity in the Cathedral there, within the Chappel of St. Thomas the Martyr, being as yet (1689.) the last Archb. of that See that hath been there buried. See more of him in his life written in the Italian tongue by Ludov. Bacatellus sometimes Domestick to this great Cardinal, and afterwards advanced to the Archbishoprick of Rhaguse for his rare piety and learning; translated into Latin by Andr. Dudithus Sbordellatus Episc. Tininiensis—Ven. 1563. qu. Who afterwards left his Religion and became a Protestant and Socinian.

127. HUGH WESTON was a Leycestershire Man born, entered a Student in Balliol Coll. about 1526, took the Degree of Bach. of Arts 1530, about which time being chole Fellow of Lincoln Coll. (I mean into one of those Fellowships founded by Edw. Darby) he proceeded in his Faculty, studied Physick, and was afterwards one of the Professors of the University. In 1538, he was elected Rector of the said College, was admitted the year after to the reading of the sentences, and in 1540. he proceeded in Divinity. About which time he was made Margaret Professor, Archdeacon of Colchester, and Rector of Cliff in Kent. In the first of Qu. Mary he had the Deanery of Westminster bestowed on him, in the place of Dr. Ric. Cox, was made prolocutor of the convocation of the whole Clergy of the Diocels of Canterbury; where in speaking and acting he behaved himself with great commendation. The same year being forced to leave the said Deanery to make room for Dr. Job. Fekenham the former Abbat of Westminster and the Monks, had that of Windfore bestowed upon him, an. 1556. But being taken in adultery (as some say) was deprived of the said Deanery by Card. Pole

Archb. of Canterbury, in 1557. Whereupon looking on himself as much abused, did appeal to an higher Power. So that being about to take a journey to Rome to complain to his holiness, was seized, and clapt up Prisoner within the Tower of London, where as I conceive he died. Jo. Leland (a) gives him the character of a noted Preacher and Orator of his time, and seems to intimate that he had written several Books. Jo. Bale, who speaks well of few Men, saith (b) that he had been sore bitten with a Winchester gosse, and was not as yet (1554) healed thereof: And tells us of his old familiar Mary Huckvale of Oxford and of his provider Goodwife Person, and Chrysian Thompson the Widow, and I know not what. Another (c) equal with Bale in scurrilities, saith that Hugh Weston is a drunken burnt-tail man, a bawdy beast, a lecherous locust, a companion with curtezans of Coleman bedge—more meet to be coupled with his old play-fellow and pack-horse Goodwife Hugfaile at Oxon, at the tayle of a Cart, than to be revered and reputed a Mayden Preist in good Queen Maries Court. But to let pass this brutish language, more fit to be spoken at Billingsgate than by a Person that made Divinity his delight, I must tell you that there goes under this Dr. Weston's name, Oratio coram patribus & clero habita 16. Oct. 1553. The beginning of which is Cum Demosthenes totum Gracie lumen, &c. Lond. 1553. oct.

Disputations with Cranmer, Ridley and Latimer in the Divinity School at Oxon. an. 1554.—At which time he was Moderator in the disputations of several Doctors had with them, as you may see at large in Job. Fox his Book of Acts and Monuments of the Church, &c. wherein are also several conferences, and discourses of the said H. Weston had with other Persons. At length he giving way to fate within the Tower of London, (as it seems) in the Month of Decemb. in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, 1558. was buried before the image of the Crucifix, in the middle of the Church belonging to the Hospital of the Sacrey, situated in the Strand near to London. In his will dat. 26. Nov. 1558, made within the Tower of London, he bestowed most of his wealth on pious and publick uses, took a great deal of care about the ceremony to be performed at his burial, and for the praying for his Soul by several Persons in several places, as moneys for a Dirige and Mass to be performed (1) By the Master and Fellows of Balliol Coll. (2) By the Rector and Fellows of Lincoln Coll. (3) By the Chapl. or Priest of the University of Oxon. (4) By the Priest at Islip near Oxon. of which perhaps he had been Rector (5) By the Priest of Burton Noverry in Leycestershire, at which place (if I mistake not) he had received his first breath, because his Brethren lived there, &c. with many other things therein, which not only shew'd him to be a zealous Catholick, but also a Person of a publick spirit.

WILLIAM FORREST was related to John Forrest before-mentioned, but where born, I cannot justly say, 128. spent several years in study among the Oxonians, and was there a Student when the question was discussed among the Doctors and Masters concerning the divorce of King Hen. 8. from his Royal Consort Qu. Catherine in 1530, as in the life of the said Queen (which I shall anon mention) appeareth. He was a Priest, and had preferment in the Church, was well skill'd in Musick and Poetry, had a collection of the choicest compositions in Musick that were then in use: Which coming after his death into the hands of Dr. Heather founder of the Musical Praxis in this University, he gave them to the publick School thereof, where they yet continue, and are kept only as matters of antiquity. Among them are the compositions of Job. Taverner of Boston, sometimes Organist of Cardinal Coll. in Oxon; of Job. Merbeck Org. of Windfore, Rob. Fairfax a Doctor of Musick of Cambridge, Dr. Christ. Tye, Job. Sheppard, John Norman, &c. All the Books that our Author Forrest hath composed (which have as yet come to my view) were written in English Poetry, such as was commonly used in the Reigns of Hen. 8. and Ed. 6. The titles of which follow.

(a) In Principum ac illustr. aliquot virorum, &c. Economis, p. 86. & in Cynda Caus. edit. Lond. 1638. p. 22. (b) In his Declaration of Edm. Bonners articles—Lond. 1561. fol. 69. (c) Mich. Wood a Printer, in his epist. to the Reader before Steph. Garsiners Oration de vera obedientia, pr. at Roan, 1553.

A true and most notable History of a right noble and famous Lady, produced in Spayne, entituled the second Gryfield, practised not long out of this tyme, in much part tragedious, as delectable both to hearers and readers. — This is a MS. containing the life of Queen Catherine, the first Wife of K. Hen. 8. and is by the Author dedicated to Qu. Mary, he being then Chaplain to her. 'Tis a broad thin Folio, written very fairly on Vellam, and seems to be the very same (it being now my proper Book) that the Author presented to the said Queen. There be many things in it, that are very zealously written against the Hereticks of those times, as he calls them, which plainly shews him to be entirely devoted to the Church of Rome. And tho there be no great streins in it, yet the historical part of it is good, (if not too much partiality therein) and I have discovered from the said Book, many things relating to the Affairs of Oxon, acted during the time of the said divorce, which I could never see elsewhere. The beginning of the prologue to Qu. Mary is this, As nature hath no inclination, &c. and of the work it self, Writers have many endeavoured their pains, &c. Throughout the whole History, the Author makes use of the name of Gryfield the second for Qu. Catherine, and the name of Walter for K. Hen. 8. At the end of it (contained in 20 Chapters) is this written, 'Here endeth the Historye of Gryfild the seconde, dulle meanyng Qu. Catharine, Mother to our most dread Sovereigne Lady Qu. Mary, fynysched the 25. day of June, the Yeare of owre Lorde. 1558. by the symple and unlearned Syr Wylliam Forrest Preeiste, propria manus. — At the end of the said Historie, is written in verse also,

An Oration consolatory to Queen Mary — 'Tis contained in six leaves, and hath this beginning, Among much inward profound perpending, &c. This Book richly bound in laced Sattin, hath on every brask boss at each corner, this sentence embossed in an English Character, Ave Maria, Gratia plena. Our Author Forrest hath also written in old English verse,

The tragedious Troubles of the most chaste and innocent Joseph, Son to the holy Patriarch Jacob — MS. in two vol. in fol. dedicated to Thom. Howard Duke of Norfolk, written curiously on Vellam, and sometime in the Library of Job. Theyer of Coopershill near to the City of Gloucester, Gent. Which, with the rest of the MSS belonging to that person, coming by sale into the hands of Rob. Scot of London, Bookseller, he sold them for the use of the Kings Library at S. James. Robert Earl of Alesbury had a Copie of the said History of Joseph, but whether it was the very same that belonged to Mr. Theyer, I cannot justly say. He had also these following MSS written by the said Will. Forrest, viz.

Poems upon several Occasions — MS. fol.

Certain meditations and Prayers necessary of a Christian — MS. fol. in prose and verse.

Treatise of Hereticks and their properties.

Of faith, works, and justification.

Glas of charity on the seven penitential Psalmes.

Consolation against temptation.

Of Pennance.

Against desperation of the last judgment.

A Mirrour of Christianity.

That Hereticks are not to be disputed withal.

Several Tracts in defence of the Articles of the Church of Rome.

What other Books he hath written, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he was in great esteem among the Rom. Catholicks in Fifteen hundred fifty and eight, which was part of the last Year of Queen Mary, and part of the first of Qu. Elizabeth.

129. JOHN FEILD a Londoner born, was, as it seems, educated in this University, because I find several of both his names and of his time to have taken one degree or more therein, and one John Feild to have supplicated for a degree in Arts in the month of July 1519. Afterwards leaving the University, he went to another, as 'tis probable, and at length retiring to his native place wrote and published, Ephemeris pro an. 1557. To which is prefixed a Learned Epistle written by Dr. Jo. Dee.

Ephemerides trium annorum, an. 1558, 59. & 60, &c.

ex Erasmi Reinboldi tabulis accuratissime ad meridianum Civitatis Londinensis, supputatæ. Lond. 1558. Octob. 28. in qu.

Canon Ascensionum obliquarum cujusvis stellæ non excedentis 8 gradus Latitudinis confectus. Printed with the Ephemerides.

Tabula stellarum fixarum insigniorum, quæ & ortus, occasus, ac utriusque cæte meditationes earum ad oculum patebant, &c. Printed with the said Ephemerides also. What else he hath published I find not, nor any thing memorable of him besides, only that he was much in renown for his learning in the Reigne of Q. Mary, and beginning of Queen Elizabeth. I find another John Field or Feld, Clar. who was a Citizen of London, a zealous Protestant and a great enemy to Sir Thomas More, John Fisher Bishop of Rochester, and John Rastal; who having published certain matters, is numbred among the English writers by John Bale, (*) who tells us that he died at London, an. 1546. See another John Field under the year 1587.

JOHN PLOUGH Son of Christopher Plough of the Borough of Nottingham, and Nephew to John Plough Rector of St. Peters Church in the said Town, was born there, spent several years in obtaining Academical learning in this University, supplicated in the latter end of 1543. for the degree of Bach. of the Civil-Law, but whether he was ever admitted it appears not. At that time, if I mistake not, he was Rector of the said Church, the advouson of which for one turne, his Uncle bought for him of Thomas Hobson the Prior, and Convent, of Lenton, before the year 1538, for in that year the Uncle died. Afterwards our Author John Plough became a zealous Minister of Gods word in the time of King Edward VI. but flying beyond the Sea in Queen Maries Reigne, wrote one or more of the Books following at Basil, where he mostly resided.

An Apology for the Protestants — Written in answer to a Book against the English Protestants that was pen'd and published by one Miles Hogeard of London Ho-lier, the first Trader or Mechanick that appeared in Print for the Catholick cause, I mean one that had not received any Monastical or Academical breeding. Beside our Author Plough, wrote against him one William Keth an Exile at Frankford in the Reigne of Queen Mary, and Robert Crowley. The said Plough also wrote, Treatise against the mitred men in the Popish Kingdom.

The sound of the doleful Trumpet — When or where, either of these three was printed, I cannot tell, for I have not yet seen them. He was living at Basil in great esteem among the Exil'd Protestants in the latter end of Queen Mary, and whether he lived to return when Queen Elizabeth succeeded, I cannot yet find.

GEORGE LILYE Son of William Lilye the famous Grammarian, whom I have before mention'd, was born, as I conceive, near to S. Pauls Cathedral within the City of London, educated for a time, as it seems, in Magdalen Coll. which house was seldom or never without a Lilye (understand me not that it bears Three Lilyes for its Arms) from the first foundation thereof to the latter end of Queen Elizabeth. After he had left the University without a degree, he travelled to Rome, where he was received with all humanity into the protection of Cardinal Pole, and became noted there for his singular parts in various sorts of Learning. Some time after his return he was made Canon of S. Pauls Cathedral, and afterwards Prebendary of Canterbury; which last dignity, he had, I suppose, by the gift of the said Cardinal when he was Archbishop of that place. While he was Canon of S. Paul he set up a Monument to the memory of his learned Father, in the Inscription of which, this George is stiled Canon of that Church. His writings are, Anglorum Regum Chronices Epitome. Ven. 1548. Francof. 1565. qu. Bas. 1577. &c.

Lancastrii & Eboracensis de regno contentiones.

which I have not yet seen. At length taking his last farewell of this world in the beginning of the year, fifteen hundred fifty and nine, (which was the first year of Queen Elizabeth) was buried, as I suppose, near the body of his Father.

132. CUTHBERT TONSTALL a singular ornament to his native Country, and a person (notwithstanding the baseness of his birth, being begotten (a) by one Tonstall, upon a Daughter of the Commers, as Leland saith) of great learning and judgment, received his first breath at Hatchford in Richmonshire, in the year 1476. or thereabouts, became a Student in the University of Oxon. about 1491, particularly, as some (b) will have it, in Balliol College, and whether he took a degree, or degrees, we have no Register of that time to shew it. Afterwards, as 'tis farther added, he was forc'd to leave Oxon. because of a Plague that hapned in his time, and went to Cambridge, but making no long stay there, he travelled to the University of Padua in Italy, then most flourishing in Literature; where he became noted to all ingenious men for his forward and pregnant parts. After his return, being then, as it seems, Doctor of the Lawes, but not of Cambridge, he had divers dignities and places of trust confer'd upon him successively: Among which I find the Archdeaconry of Chester to be one, a Prebendship in the Church of York another, the Vicarship General to Dr. Warham Archbishop of Canterbury a third. Afterwards he was Master of the Rolles, keeper of the Privy Seal; was employed in one or more Embassies, made Dean of Salisbury in the place of Dr. Job. Longland, in the Month of June 1521, and at length Bishop of London, to which See he was consecrated 19. Octob. 1522. Whereupon his Deanery was bestowed on one Reymund Pade, in January following. Two years after, he, with Sir Rich. Wingfield Knight of the Garter and Chancellour of the Duchy of Lanc. were sent Embassadors into Spayne, and in 1530. he was translated to Durham. From which See being ejected for his Religion in the time of K. Ed. 6. was restored by Queen Mary in the beginning of her Reign, but thrust out thence again in 1559. when Qu. Elizabeth was settled in her Throne. He was a Man passing well seen in all kind of more polished literature, a Person very rare and admirable, and in whom, no Man in his time did reprehend any thing, but his Religion, except foul-mouth'd Bale, who calls him (d) Melancholicus & Saturninus somnator atque excogitator omnium malorum, and another (e) as bad as he, who run's upon the same strain — a still dreaming Saturn — a plotter of mischief, and I know not what. There was scarce any kind of good literature, in which he was not excellent. He was a very good Grecian and Ebrician, an eloquent Rhetorician, a skilful Mathematician, a noted Civilian and Canonist, and a profound Divine. But that which maketh for his greatest commendation, is, that Erasmus was his friend, and he a fast friend to Erasmus, in an Epistle to whom from Sir Thom. More, I find this character of Tonstall, that As there was no Man more adorned with knowledge and good literature, no Man more severe and of greater integrity for his life and manners; so there was no Man a more sweet and pleasant companion, with whom a Man would rather choose to converse. He hath written and published,

De arte supputandi, lib. 4. Lond. 1522. qu. dedic. to Sir Tho. More. Afterwards it was printed at several places beyond the Seas. I find honorable mention of it in the Preface of Sim. Gryneus to Euclid in Greek, with the Scholia of Theon on it. Which Book was published by the said Gryneus and dedicated to Tonstall.

His and the Letter of Joh. Stokesley B. of Lond. to Cardinal Reginald Pole. Lond. 1560. and 79. qu. The beginning is, For the good will we have born to you, &c. It shews the Bishop of Rome to have no special superiority over other Bishops. He hath also made two thousand faults and noted many corruptions in William Tyndales translation of the New Testament, and hath written several Epistles to Budew, and a Book against the Supremacy of the Bishop of Rome, as Bale saith; which, as I conceive, is his Letter to Card. Pole before-mentioned. But that, or his faults on Tyndale, or Epistles, I have not yet seen. At length being deprived of his Bishoprick of Durham (as I have before told you) about Midlomer, in 1559. was then, as 'tis said, committed to free custody at Lambeth with Matthew Archb. of Canterbury, but how that can be, seeing that the said Matthew was not consecrated Archbishop till 17. Dec. 1559. I cannot yet perceive. With him also, 'tis farther said, that he continued four Months, and that dying on the 18. of Nov. in Fifteen hundred fifty and nine (which was a full month before Dr. Matthew Parker was consecrated) was buried at the charges of the said Matthew in the Chancel of the Parochial Church of Lambeth in Surrey. Over his grave was a fair Marble stone soon after laid, with an Epitaph engraven thereon, made by Dr. Walter Haddon an admirer of his learning and virtues. Job. Leland who calls him Dunofallus hath bestow'd a collation (not without desert) upon him, as also upon his Friend Budew before-mention'd, which you may see in his Encomia, Trophaea, &c. p. 45.

133. JOHN BEKINS AU; a younger Son of Job. Bekinsau an inhabitant of Hampshire, but a native of Bekinsau in Lancashire, where his name was ancient and gentle, received his first breath at Broadchalks in Wilts. and his Grammatical education in Wykeham's School near Winchester. At which place being made soon ripe for the University, was sent to New Coll. where after he had served two Years of probation, was admitted perpetual Fellow, in 1520. In 1526. he compleated the degree of M. of A. being that year about to take a journey beyond the Seas for the sake of study, as one of the University registers informs me; at which time he was esteemed in his Coll. a most admirable Grecian. But whether he did then, or after, perform his journey, it doth not farther appear there. Sure I am that I find it entred upon (†) record that John Beconsau second Son of John Beconsau of Hartley-Wespeil in Hampshire, (born at Beconsau in Lancashire) was Reader of the Greek Lecture at Paris, and afterwards came over and died at Sherburne in Hampshire. In 1538. John Bekinsau left his Fellowship of New Coll. because he had then taken a Wife, but what preferment or employment he had afterwards, I know not. At that time he was acquainted with, and had in veneration by, the most learned Men of the Nation, among whom was John Leland the famous Antiquary and Historian, who in his (‡) Poetry doth speak several things to his honor, of his being bred in Oxon, and of his studying at Paris, with several other things, which shew him to have been a great Scholar. In 1546. when he saw that the Pope's power was quite exterminated, he wrote a Book entit.

De supremo & absoluto Regis imperio. Lond. 1546. oct. Printed also in the first vol. of Monarchia S. Romani imperii, &c. by Melchior Goldast. Hemensfeldius. — Franc. 1621. fol. The Author Bekinsau did dedicate it to K. Hen. 8. with whom, as also with K. Ed. 6. he was in some value; but when Qu. Mary came to the Crown, and endeavoured to alter all what her Father and Brother had done, as to the reformation of the Church; then did he wheel about, change his mind, and became a zealous Person for the Church of Rome, and a hater of Protestants. After Queen Elizabeth was settled in the Throne, he retired to an obscure Town called Sherbourne in Hampshire, where 1559. giving way to fate in great discontent, was buried in the Church of that place 20. Decemb. in Fifteen hundred fifty and nine, aged about 63 years, leaving then behind him this character among the R. Catholicks, that As he was a learned Man, so might he have been promoted according to his deserts, had his principles been constant.

134. ALBAYN HYLL was a Britaine born, as (f) one that knew him tell us, partly educated in this, and partly in another University, (beyond the Sea, as it seems) where applying his studies to the faculty of Physick he proceeded Doctor, and became famous for it at London, not only for the Theoretic but practick part, and much beloved and admired by all learned Men, especially by Dr. John Cay and Dr. Job. Fryer two eminent Physicians of Cambridge. One (g) that lived in his time styles him Medicus nobilissimus atque optimus, & in omni literarum genere maxime versatus, and tells us, that he wrot several things on Galen, which are printed, and by others cited. This is all that I know of this learned Person, only that he died 26 Dec. 1559. in Fifteen hundred fifty and nine, and that he was buried not far from the grave of his friend and contemporary Dr. Edw. Wotton in the Church of St. Alban situated in Woodstreet in London; in which Parish he had lived many years in great respect, and was esteemed one of the chief Parishioners. Alice his Widow, who died on the last day of May 1580. was buried by him, and both had a substantial Grave-stone, with an inscription on it, laid over them, but that of it which was left part in 1666. was utterly consumed in the grand conflagration of London.

135. NICHOLAS BRIGHAM Esquire, was born, if I mistake not, at, or near to, Carversham in Oxfordshire, (where his elder Brother Thom. Brigham had lands of inheritance, and died there 6. Ed. 6. but descended from those of Brigham in Yorks.) received his Academical education in this University, particularly, as I conceive, in Hart Hall, wherein I find several of his Surname (without Christian names before them) to have studied in the time of Hen. 8. but whether he took a Degree, it doth not appear in our registers that are somewhat imperfect in the latter end of that King's Reign. When he continued in the University, and afterwards in one of the Inns of Court, he exercised his muse much in Poetry, and took great delight in the works of Jeffry Chaucer: For whose memory he had so great a respect, that he removed his bones into the South cross Isle or transept of St. Peters Church in Westminster, in the Year 1556. Which being so done, he erected a comely Monument over them, with Chaucers Effigies, and an Epitaph in Prose and Verse; which to this day remains against the East Wall of the said Isle. At riper years our Author Brigham addicted himself much to the study of the municipal Law, became noted for it, and without doubt had not death snatched him untimely away, he would have communicated some Specimen of that faculty to the World. His genie also was much inclin'd to English History, in which faculty he published a Book, which some (h) entitle,

De venationibus rerum memorabilium. It contains the discovery or finding out of several memories of eminent Men of, and things done in, England. Which being perused by John Bale, he hath cull'd out many things thence for his purpose, and quotes it when he hath occasion to mention several eminent Writers. See in his Book De Scriptorib. Maj. Britan. cent. 10. nu. 72. cent. 11. num. 6. 42. 52. 95. &c. and in cent. 12. nu. 24. 79. 82. 95. &c.

Memoires by way of Diarie, in 12 Books. — And wrot also in his youth.

Miscellaneous Poems. — with other things which I have not seen, being, as I suppose, irrecoverable and quite lost. This ingenious and curious Person, who was admirably well vers'd in Histories and Antiquities, yeilded up his last breath to the great regret of all those that knew his worth, within the City of Westminster in the month of Dec. in Fifteen hundred fifty and nine, (which was the second year of Queen Elizabeth) but where buried, unless near to the bones of Chaucer, I cannot tell.

JOHN WHYTE Brother to Sir Job. Whyte L. Mayor 136. of London an. 1563. Son of Rob. Whyte of Farnham in Surrey, Son of Job. Whyte of the same place; Son of Thom. Whyte of Parvyle in Hampshire, was born at Farnham before-mentioned, educated in Grammar learning in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. in 1527, took the Degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in an Act celebrated 23 March 1534. left his Fellowship in 1534. being about that time Master of the said School, in the place of Rich. Tuckiner. Afterwards he was made Warden of the College near to Winchester, was elected Bishop of Lincoln upon the deprivation of Dr. Job. Tayler; the Temporalities of which were (i) restored to him 2. May 1554, he being then Bach. of Divinity. In the beginning of Octob. 1555. he was incorporated Doctor of his faculty, and soon after, upon the death of Dr. St. Gardiner he was translated to Winchester, the Temporalities of which, were also restored (k) to him, 30. May 1557. Of some of which gradual rises Dr. Christoph. Johnson one of his successors in the Mastership of Winchester School, made this distick.

Me puero custos, Ludi paulo ante Magister

Vitus, & hinc demum præsul in urbe fuit.

He was a Man of an austere life, and much more mortified to the World than Step. Gardiner his Predecessor. He was eminent also for piety and learning, was an eloquent Orator, a solid Divine, a nervous Preacher, & poetica facultate, ut tempora ferebant, tolerabilis, as Camden (l) tells us. His fame and actions did well answer his name, and so did all Men say, how contrary soever to him in Religion, only for one black Sermon that he made, he gave offence, yet for the colour, it may be said he kept decorum, because it was a funeral Sermon of a great Queen by birth and marriage, I mean Qu. Mary. The offence taken against him was this. His (m) Text was out of Eccles. 4. 2. Laudavi mortuos magis quam viventes, & feliciter utroque judicavi qui nec dum damnatus est. And speaking of Qu. Mary her high parentage, her bountiful disposition, her great gravity, her rare devotion, (praying so much, as, he affirmed, that her knees were hard with kneeling) her justice and clemency in restoring noble houses to her own private loss and hindrance, and lastly her grievous and patient death, he fell into such an unfeigned weeping, that for a long space he could not speak. Then recovering himself, he said she had left a Sister to succeed her, a Lady of great worth also, whom, they were now bound to obey; for saith he, melior est canis vivus leone mortuo, and I hope so shall Reign well and prosperously over us, but I must say still with my Text Laudavi mortuos magis quam viventes, for certain it is Maria optimam partem elegit. Afterwards Qu. Elizabeth taking just indignation, and, partly for his Sermon, and partly for that he was a zealous Man for the R. Catholick cause, and an enemy to the reformers of Religion, commit him to custody; and for threatening (as 'tis said) to excommunicate her, (as Watson Bishop of Lincoln did) was deprived of his Bishoprick, for which he paid yearly 1000 l. to Cardinal Pole to keep up his state and dignity. His works are,

Diacoso Martyrion, i. e. ducentorum virorum testimonia, de veritate corporis, & sanguinis Christi in Eucharistia, ante triennium, adversus Petr. Martyrem, ex professo conscriptum, sed nunc primum in lucem editum. Lond. 1553. qu. in Lat. versè.

Epistola Petro Martyri. This is printed with the former Book, and treateth mostly of Martyrs disputation at Oxon. in K. Edwards days, and is in vindication of Dr. Rich. Smith, who disputed with, and baffled, him.

You'll find also several of his discourses in the Acts and Mon. of the Church, &c. published by Job. Fox, and also his discourse with Bishop Rydley at Oxon 30. his anathadversions on that discourse in The third part of a treatise intit. Of three conversions of England, &c. Printed 1604. Chap. 14. p. 209. At length our Author Jo. Whyte being deprived of his Bishoprick in June 1559. he retired to his Sisters house at Southwambrorow in Hampshire, where spending the little remainder of his days in great sanctity and recluseness, gave way to fate on the eleventh day of January following. Whereupon his body was soon after carried to Winchester, and buried in the Cathedral there according to his will, which partly runs thus — 'My desire is to be buried in that my Cathedral of Winchester, ut in novissima die resurgam cum patribus & filiis quorum fidem teneo, &c. While he was Warden of the Coll. near Winchester, and dream'd not in the least to be removed thence to a Bishoprick, he provided a Tomb-stone for himself to be laid on the ground in the Chappel belonging to the said Coll. with intentions to be buried under it, by the care of his Heir and Executor, whensoever it should please God to call him out of this transitory life, and caused to be engraven twenty long and short verses of his own composition, under his picture, engraven on a bras plate, and fastned to the said stone. The two first are these.

Hic tegor hic post fata Whitus propono jacere

Scriptor Johannis carminis ipse mei.

But being afterwards contrary to all expectation promoted successively to two Bishopricks by Qu. Mary, his mind was altered, as I have before told you. He gave to Wykeham's Coll. near Winchester his Miter and Crosier staff, a silver tankard gilt, a balon and eure of silver, a Turkey-carpet and other choice goods; and some years before his death he was a Benefactor to New Coll. as you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univers. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 131. b.

137. JAMES BROKES another most zealous Bishop for the Rom. Catholick cause, was born in Hampshire in the Month of May 1512, admitted Scholar of Corp. Cbr. Coll. 1528, and Fellow in Jan. 1531, being then Bach. of Arts. Afterwards proceeding in his faculty, he applyed his studies to Divinity, took the degrees in that faculty, that of Doctor being compleated 1546. The next Year he was made Master of Balliol Coll. and at length by Qu. Mary Bishop of Glocester; to which See being elected after the deprivation of Job. Hoper, had restitution (n) made to him of the Temporalities belonging thereunto, 8. May 1554, and in the Year following he was delegated by the Pope for the examining and trying of Cranmer, Rydley and Latimer, when they stood up for, and were ready to dye in defence of, the Protestant Religion. He was a Person very learned in the time he lived, an eloquent Preacher, and a zealous maintainer of the R. C. Religion, as well in his Sermons as Writings: Some of which are published, as,

Sermon at Pauls Crosse in the first Year of Qu. Mary, on Matth. 9. 18. Lond. 1553. 54 oct.

Oration in S. Maries Church in Oxon. 12. March 1555, to Thom. Cranmer Archbishop of Canterbury — The beginning is, My Lord, at this present we are come to you as commissioners, &c.

Oration in closing up the examination of Th. Cranmer Archbishop of Cant. — The beg. is, Mr. Cranmer (I cannot otherwise, considering your obstinacy) I am right sorry, &c. These two Orations are printed by John Fox in his Book of Acts and Monuments of the Church, &c. (wherein you'll find some of his discourses with Rydley) after they had been published by themselves. What else is extant under his name, I know not, nor any thing of him besides, only that he dying in the beginning of Feb. (about Candlemas) 1562. in Fifteen hundred fifty and nine (which was the second year of Qu. Elizabeth) was buried in a stone Coffin in his Cathedral Church at Glocester, but hath no memory over his Grave.

138. ROGER EDGEWORTH another zealot, and a frequent Preacher against Protestants, called in his time Hereticks, was born at Holt castle within the Marches of Wales, became a student in Oxon about 1503, took a degree in Arts in 1507, and the Year after was elected Fellow of Oriel College, to which place he was a benefactor at the time of his death. Afterwards, proceeding in the said faculty, he took holy orders, and became a noted Preacher in the University and elsewhere. In 1519, he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, and afterwards became very well dignified, as Canon of Salisbury, Wells and Bristow, (being then D. of D) Residentiary of the Cathedral of Wells, and Chancellour of the same Church. The last of which dignities was (p) conferr'd on him 30. Apr. 1554 upon the deprivation of Job. Tayler alias Cardmaker. Besides all these he was Vicar also of St. Cuthberts Church in Wells, to which he was admitted, 3. Oct. 1543, upon the death of Job. Southwode LL. D. When King Hen. 8. had extirpated the Popes power, he seemed to be very moderate, and also in the Reign of K. Ed. 6. but when Qu. Mary succeeded, he shew'd himself a most zealous Person for the Roman Catholick Religion, and a great enemy to Luther and Reformers. His works are,

Sermons fruitful, godly and learned. Lond. 1557. qu. containing (1) A declaration of the seven gifts of the holy ghost. (2) A Homely of the articles of Christian Faith. (3) Homely of Ceremonies and of mans Laws. (4) A perfect exposition of St. Peters first Epistle in XX treatises or Sermons. What other things he hath published I cannot yet find, neither should I have known any thing of the said Fruitful Sermons, had I not accidentally seen them in that choice collection of Books in Balliol Coll. Library, given thereunto by the no less curious, than learned Sir Thom. Wendy Knight of the Bath, sometimes Gentleman-commoner of the said House. This Dr. Edgeworth took his last farewell of this World in the beginning of the Year Fifteen hundred and sixty, and was directly buried before the choir door in the Cathedral Church at Wells: 1560. Whereupon Dr. Gilbert Bourne Bishop of that place, did present or collate to the said Chancellourship of the Church of Wells, one Gilbert Bournford Bachelaur of Divinity, on the second day of April in the same Year.

THOMAS PHAYER was born in Wales, particularly, as it seems, in Pembroke-shire, had his Academical education among the Oxonians, whom, after some years, he left, and retired to the Inns of Court, (Lincolns Inn as I conceive) where at length he attained to a considerable knowledge in the municipal Laws. Afterwards, being a Person of a mutable mind, he eagerly addicted his Muse to the study of Medicine, took the Degrees in that faculty in this University, that of Doctor being compleated in an Act celebrated 21. Mar. 1555. at which time he was much famed among the Academians for his sufficiencies in the Art of Poetry, which afterwards were made publick. He hath committed to posterity these Books following of his writing and translation.

Of the nature of Writts. — Whether the same with that written by the great Lawyer Ambr. Fitzherbert, who lived before Phayers time, I know not.

Exemplars of common places for the writing of several sorts of Instruments — It is the same which we now call A Book of precedents. I have a MS. lying by me written on parchment in the time of H. 6. or Ed. 4. containing Copies of all matters to be used by Lawyers, but who the compiler of it was, I cannot tell. In the beginning of it, is written in a pretty ancient character, George Hardley.

A goodly bryefe treatise of the pestylence, with the causes, signs and cures of the same. Lond. 1544. and 46. oct.

Declaration of the veynes of mans body, and to what dyseases and infirmities the opening of every one of them doe serve. — This is printed with the former Book, an. 1544. &c.

A Book of children — And this also, which treats of the grief and diseases of Children.

Remedies, or prescriptions of Physick for the Body. — Published by Hen. Holland, 1603. whom I shall mention at the end of Hen. Holland, under the Year 1615. He also translated from French into English, The regiment of Life. Lond. 1544. and 46. oct. and from Lat. into English, Nine Books of Virgils Aeneidos. The three first of which were by him finished in the Forest of Kilgarran in Pembroke-shire, in the Year 1555. The fourth at the same place, an. 1556. The fifth in 1557, being ended 3. May, just after the translator had undergone a great danger at Caermarden. The sixth and seventh were also finished by him in the same Year and in the same place. The eighth, there also in Kilgarran forest, an. 1558. The ninth was ended 3. Apr. 1560. The tenth was begun by him in the said Year, but died, as it seems, before he could go through it. Afterwards a young Physician named Tho. Twyne meeting with the aforesaid translations in MS. he finished the said tenth Aneid, 23. May, an. 1573. Which being done he translated the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth Aneidos, and published them altogether, an. 1584. as I shall tell you elsewhere: As for Dr. Phaer he ended his days at Kilgarran before-mentioned, after the 12. of Aug. (on which day his last will (q) and testament was dated) 1560. in Fifteen hundred and sixty, and was buried in the Parish Church of that place. Over his grave was a Marble-stone soon after laid, with an Epitaph engraven thereon, made and devised by his good friend Mr. George Ferrers of Lincolns-Inn, but what the contents of it are, I know not, nor of any other Epitaph made for him, only (r) that by Sir Thom. Chaloner a most noted Latine Poet of his time, who having been well acquainted with the Doctor, doth in a pathetical manner highly commend him for his learning and great skill in Physick. He the said Doctor left behind him a Widow named Anne, and two Daughters, Eleanor the Wife of Gruffith ap Eynon, and Mary.

140. THOMAS ROBERTSON was a Yorkshire Man born, (either at, or near, Wakefield) was originally, I think, of Queens, afterwards Demie or Semicommoner of Magdalen, College. Master of the School joyning to it in the place of Job. Stanbridge, Master of Arts 1525, at which time he was a great Oppugner (s) and Vilifier of the Questionists in the Univerfity, and at length Fellow of the said House. In 1539, he being about that time Treasurer of the Church of Salisbury in the place of Dr. Rich. Sampson, supplicated the venerab. congreg. of the Regents to be admitted to the reading of the Sentences, being then esteemed Flos & decus Oxonii, but whether he was admitted it appears not; and in 1540, he, by the favour of Longland Bishop of Lincolne, was made Archdeacon of Leycester in the place of Will. More Suffragan Bishop of Colchester deceased, in which dignity being installed 5. March the same Year, enjoyed it to 1560. as I shall anon tell you. In 1546. Jun. 3. he was instituted Vicar of Wakefield before-mention'd, on the death of Dr. Tho. Knolles, by the presentation thereunto of Job. Chambre M. D. Dean, and the convent, of the Kings Chappel of the Virgin Mary and St. Stephen within the Pallace of Westminster. Whereupon in the beginning of 1548. he gave up the Treasurership of Salisbury, in which Dignity Thom. Stevens succeeded, 28. May the same Year. He the said Robertson was an exact Grammarian and Humanitian, and went, as 'twas thought, beyond his two Predecessors in Magd. College School, in the education of Youth. In 1532, he Printed a Comment on the rules which Will. Lilye wrote in verse, and added thereunto Quæ Genus, and the verifying rules, dedicating it to Bishop Longland before mention'd, with reference to Henley School, which, some think, was founded, or at least enlarged, by Longland. From whose pains (I mean of Robertson) and also the variety of other mens labours in Grammar, of whom Job. Stanbridge, Rob. Whittington, Job. Colet and Lilye were of the number, sprang a great diversity in the course of teaching; which King Hen. 8. intending to reform, caused sundry learned Men (of whom Dr. Rich. Cox Tutor to K. Ed. 6. is supposed to be one) to reduce the former attempts in this kind into one body of Grammar, which they jointly did in 1545, being that now in use, and first authorized by K. Hen. 8. Howbeit soon after it was thought too prolix, for in the Reign of Ed. 6. John Fox of Magd. Coll. did set forth Tables of Grammar, subscribed in Print by eight Lords of the Privy Council; which Tables were quickly laid aside, as being far more too short, than K. Hen. 8. his Grammar was too long. Since which time many learned Men in England, and far more abroad, have spent much profitable study in this Art and the method thereof, as we well know. In the 3. of Ed. 6. Dom. 1549. he the said Thom. Robertson was one of the number appointed by the K. and his Council to compile and frame the Liturgy of the Church, which we now call the Common-Prayers, and in the Year 1557. Jul. 23. he had the Deanery of Durham confer'd on him by the Queen, being then void upon the promotion of Dr. Tho. Wasfon to the See of Lincoln, (who had been instituted in the said Deanery by Tonstall Bishop of Durham 18. Nov. 1553. upon the deprivation of Dr. Rob. Horne) at which time being greatly in respect for his piety and learning, the Queen would have had him taken a Bishoprick, but he modestly refused it. His works are,

Compendium sive de arte versificandi, cum annotationibus additis. All which Books were printed together at Basil 1532. qu. What other things he hath published I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he was forced first to leave the Deanery of Durham to make room for Dr. Horne, about the latter end of 1559, (who being soon after made Bishop of Winchester, Robertson might, if he would have taken the Oath of Supremacy, have come in again, but he refused it, whereupon Ralph Skynner of Oxon succeeded) and secondly to resign his Archdeaconry of Leycester, to prevent ejection: so that the said Dignity lying void for some time, Rich. Barber LL. D. was installed therein 24. Dec. 1560. What afterwards became of Tho. Robertson, or where, or when, he died, let others seek, for I am totally ignorant. John Parkhurst B. of Norwich, sometimes his Scholar, hath an Epigram on him in praise of his learning, which may serve instead of his Epitaph, if you think fit.

WILLIAM CHEADSEY, a Somersetshire Man born, 141. was admitted Scholar of Corp. Chr. Coll. 16. March 1528. aged 18. or thereabouts, Probationer-Fellow 13. Oct. 1531 and two years after compleat Fellow. In 1534, he proceeded in Arts, and in 1542, he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, being about that time Chaplain to Dr. Bonner B. of London; who having a special respect for his learning, and zeal for the R. Catholick Religion, he made him not only Archdeacon of Middlesex, but Prebendary of St. Pauls Cathedral. In 1546 he proceeded in Divinity, having about that time subscribed to the 34 Articles, and three years after did learnedly dispute with Pet. Martyr in the Divinity School. From which time (an. 1549) he seemed so moderate in his Religion in the remaining part of the Reign of K. Ed. 6. that the Protestants took him to be one of their number. In the beginning of Qu. Mary he was made Canon of Windsore, shewed himself a zealous Man against the Professors of Protestancy, and in 1557, had a Canonry of Ch. Ch. in Oxon confer'd on him after the death of James Curthopp. In 1558, he was elected President of Corp. Ch. Coll. and on the 15. Sept. in the same Year he was admitted thereunto, but removed from it the next Year by the Commissioners sent by Qu. Elizabeth to visit the Univerfity. About that time he was appointed one of the number of the R. Catholick Divines to repair to London, to dispute with those of the Protestant Party, when the said Queen was setting on foot a Reformation in the Church of England. He was by the Protestants accounted a very mutable and unconstant Man in his Religion, but by the Rom. Catholicks not, but rather a great stickler for their Religion and the chief prop in his time in the Univerfity for the cause, as it appeared not only in his opposition of P. Martyr but of the three Bishops that were burnt in Oxon. He was a learned Man, a deep Divine, an excellent Disputant, and a characterised by John Leland (t) to be resonæ Scholæ columna. His works are, more in the Acts and Monuments of the Church, &c. written by Jo. Fox, wherein you'll find several of his discourses with, and examination of, Protestant Martyrs. At length he was deprived of most, if not all, of his spiritualities, and committed a Prisoner to the Fleet in London; where, as 'tis supposed by some, he died soon after. However in my searches into obscure (*) Writings, I find that one John Joanes a Priest, living at, or near, Thame in Oxfordshire, did by his last Will dated 27. of Aug. and proved the 16. of Oct. following, an. 1574, bequeath to Mr. Dr. Chessey twenty shillings. By which it appears, that he was then living, but where, I find not, nor when he died.

142. BARTHOLMEW TRAHERON commonly called Trabern, was born in Cornwall, or at least originally descended from an ancient Family of his name living in that County, educated in Logicals and Philosophicals for the most part with us, either in Exeter Coll. or Hart hall, where he attained to some eminence in the Lat. and Greek Tongues. But being desirous to improve himself in greater matters, and to see the fashions of the World, he travelled into Germany, and thence into Italy, where he was an auditor and an admirer of many famous Men: By whose excellent Lectures, and his indefatigable industry, he became a compleat Person and much respected by Scholars. Afterwards he returned into his own Country, entered into holy Orders and was made Library keeper to K. Ed. 6. who, finding him to be a Person of Merit, conferr'd (u) the Deanery of Chichester on him, about 1551. But when Qu. Mary came to the Crown he left his preferments, and as a voluntary exile went into Germany, where accompanying other English Exiles, that had fled thence for Religion sake, continued there till the death of Qu. Mary, and then returning, was restored to what he had lost, and without doubt was rewarded with more. While he was beyond the Sea, he exercised himself much in writing matters in verse and prose, in both which he wrot several things with great happiness, especially those to his Brother Thomas to embrace the true Doctrine of Jesus Christ, that is to leave the R. Catholick Church, turn Protestant and come over to him. Among many things that he wrot, were,

Traheron* was, if I mistake not, living.

143. HENRY PENDLETON, a zealous man for the R. Cath. Cause, was born in Lancashire, became a Student in Braunose Coll. about the year 1538; took the Degrees in Arts, and afterwards those in Divinity in the Reign of K. Ed. 6. he being then beneficed and dignified in the Church. In the Reign of Qu. Marie he shew'd himself so grand a Zealot for the Cause then professed in several Sermons by him preached, that when in one by him delivered at Pauls Cross, (which was very sharp against the Hereticks, as they were then called) a Gun was discharged at, but miss'd, him. Under his Name were these things following printed.

Protestants,
an. 1555.

The Contents or part of which Communic. and Disput. you may see in the book of Acts and Mon. of the Church, &c. and also Pendleton's Arguings with Bartlet Green, and certain Protestant Martyrs. Other things he hath written, which I have not yet seen, and was always accounted a learned Doctor of his time, and so endeared to the Cath. Religion, that he made a solemn Protestation in Qu. Mary's Reign, that he would see the innermost drop of his Griefe molten away, and the last gobbet of his Flesh consumed to Ashes before he would forsake God and his truth. He lived after Qu. Elizabeth came to the Crown, and was imprisoned for a time, but when, or where he died, I know not.

PETER MARTYR who is to have a place in these 144. Asbenæ, was born (w) in the great and rich City of Florence in Italy, in Sept. (on the Nativity of the Virgin Marie) an. 1500, educated in several sorts of Learning in that City by the great care of his Father Steph. Vermilius, became a Canon regular of the Order of S. Austin at 16 years of age in the Coll. at Fiesoli, more than a mile distant from Florence. After he had spent three years there, he was sent to Padua to enlarge his Learning, that University then being in a flourishing Condition, and settling in the Monastery of St. John de Verdera of the same Order of S. Austin, spent almost 8 years in philosophical Studies, and all other Arts, especially in the Greek Tongue and Poets; which at length he conquered. At 26 years of age he began to preach, and the first time he performed that Office was in the Church of St. Afra in Brescia, and afterwards frequently in the most famous Cities of Italy. However, all the time that he could obtain from his Function was spent in sacred Learning, Philosophy, and in obtaining the Hebrew Tongue. At length being cried up for a celebrated Scholar, he was made Abbat of Spoleto in the Duchy of L'Ombria in Italy, where he continued three years. Thence he was translated to Naples, and there became Abbat of the Monastery of his Order called St. Peter ad aram, being of greater profit and a far more pleasant place than Spoleto. After he had been settled there for some time, he began to see the verity of the Gospel, especially after he had read some of the Works of Bucer and Zwinglius. Three years being spent there also, he fell into a dangerous Sickness, but the strength of Nature overcoming it, he was advised by his Physicians to take better Air than what Naples afforded. To that end therefore, that he might with convenience be absent from his Cure, the Fathers chose him General Visitor of their Order, that is of the Order of S. Austin, and soon after was elected Prior of S. Fridian within the City of Luca, which is a place of great dignity, having Episcopal Jurisdiction in the middle part of the said City. Being settled at that place, he instituted a most admirable way of Studies for the younger sort at Luca: but at length his Opinions, as to Heresie (then so called) being discovered, snares were laid for him, so that being not in a capacity to speak his mind, he, by the advice of certain Friends, committed the best part of his Library to the Custody of one of them, gave another part to the Coll. and forthwith left Luca, and went to Pisa; whence he wrote Letters to Card. Pole shewing the Reasons of his Departure. Afterwards he went into Schweitzerlandt, and fixed for some time at Zurich. Thence to Strasburgh, where for about five years he read and taught sacred Letters; in which time he took to Wife (he being near 50 years of Age) one Cath. Dampmartin, causing thereupon his Enemies to say that he left his Order and Monastic Vows purposely for the sake of a Woman. Which Wife, after she had lived with him about 8 years, died at Oxon, as I shall anon tell you. In 1547 he was invited into England by Edward Lord Protector and Dr. Cranmer Archb. of Canterbury, to the end that his Assistance might be used to carry on a Reformation in the Church. In the Month of Dec. the same year, he, with Bernardine Ochine, another Italian, arrived in England, and retiring to Lambeth were kindly received by Archb. Cranmer, and entertained there for some time. About the latter end of the same year, in Feb. or beginning of March, Martyr went to Oxon, was incorporated Doctor of Div. as he had stood at Padua, and tho addicted more to the Zwinglian than to the Lutheran Doctrines in point of the Sacrament, was in the beginning of the year following appointed by the King to read a public Lecture to the Academians in the Divinity School, and for his reward to have an Annuity of 40 Marks. What followed, and how he and his Adversaries behav'd themselves thereupon, I have largely told (x) you elsewhere. In the same year (1548) upon the receding from the University of Dr. Rich. Smyth the Kings Professor of Divinity, that Lecture, with the profits belonging thereunto, was confer'd by the King on Martyr, and in the year following, being much troubled with the R. Catholics (as in all the year before) he disputed publicly with three of the most eminent of them, as I have also told (y) you in the same place. In the year 1550 he had a Canonrie of Ch. Ch. bestowed upon him by the King, on the death of Mr. Will. Haynes, whereupon being installed 10 January the same year, entered into his Lodgings belonging to him, then joyning on the North side to Ch. Ch. great Gate leading into Fishstreet. With him also settled his beloved Wife Catherine, as the Wife of Dr. Rich. Cox did about the same time with him in the Deans Lodgings, being the first Women, as 'twas observ'd, that resided in any Coll. or Hall in Oxon. By whose Example, it was not only permitted that any Canon beside, might marry if he please, but also a Head of a Coll. or Hall, whereby other Women or idle Husbands were tolerated (if the said Head allowed it) to serve in them. Which act (beside their permitting of bawling Children to come among them) was looked upon as such a damnable matter by the R. Catholics and others too, that they actually stiled them Concubines, and the Lodgings that entertained them and their Children Stews and Cony-buries. While Martyr continued in the said Lodgings (whose Windows were next to Fishstreet) he continually, especially in the night time, received very opprobrious Language from the R. Catholics, as well Scholars as Laicks, and often had his Windows broken. So that his Studies and Sleep being often disturb'd, he changed his Lodgings, which were those belonging to the Canons of the first Canonry, for those in the Cloyster, which belonged to those of the second, being formerly the very same which belonged to the Prior of S. Frideswyde: in which being settled, he spent the remaining part of his Abode in Oxon in Peace. However, for the severer enjoyment of his Thoughts and Studies, he erected a Fabrick of Stone in his Garden, situated on the East side of his Lodgings, wherein he partly composed his Commentary on the first Ep. to the Corinthians, and certain Epistles to learned men, which were afterwards printed. This Fabrick, which contained two Stories, stood till the latter end of March 1684, at which time they were plucked down by that Canon that was Owner of the Lodgings to which the Garden and Fabrick appertained. About that time Martyr's Wife dying, she was buried in the Cathral Church, near to the place where S. Frideswydes Reliques had been reposed; but four years after, or thereabouts, her body was taken up, thrown out of the Church with scorn, and buried in a Dunghil; but when Qu. Elizabeth came to the Crown, the body was taken up again and reburied, as I have elsewhere (a) at large told you. After the death of K. Edward 6. and Religion alter'd when his Sister Mary was settled in the Throne, Pet. Martyr left Oxon, went to London and so to Lambeth: and obtaining his safe Conduct from the Qu. he left England and went to Strasburgh from whence he came, where he taught Philosophy and Divinity for some time. Thence he travell'd to Zurich an. 1556. where he met with Job. Juell and several exil'd Divines of England, and took to his second Wife one Catherine Merenda. While he continued there, Maximilian Celsus an exil'd Count, and the chief Minister of the Italian Church at Geneva died; whereupon being invited to take his place upon him, refused it for several Reasons. When Qu. Mary died, Queen Elizabeth invited him to return into England, and there to accept of what Preferment he pleas'd; but he fearing another mutation, he modestly refused it. To pass by several other matters not now fit to be related, I shall give you the Titles of some of his Works, as they follow.

Physick, it appears not. Afterwards he being noted for his extraordinary success in curing Diseases, was very much resorted to by great, as well as ordinary, People, especially by those of the reform'd Party, he being one himself, and a great Enemy to the R. Cath. Bishops; in spite and envy to whom, he wrot,

A History of the Treasons of the Bishops from the Norman Conquest to his time. — Whether this was printed, I know not, because had it been so, there's no doubt but inveterate Prynne would have found it, to gain matter thence, when he compos'd his Book of the same Subject. He also wrot,

An Herball.

Treatise against unskilful Alchymists.

Treat. of curing common Diseases.

Of the Ceremonies used by Popes. — besides other things, and had laid the Foundation of a little Book to shew the Various States that Britanie hath been in, which he divided into five Parts; but whether he compleated it, is uncertain. He lived after Qu. Eliz. came to the Crown, being then in his middle Age, but when he died it appears not. 'Tis said, that because divers Persons had meddled with the applying of dark Prophecies, purposely to advance the Fame and Glory of Charles then Emperour, so one Tho. Gibson did endeavour to do the like to promote the Glory of Hen. 8. of England; which Th. Gibson we are to understand to be the same with Th. Gibson before mention'd.

^{146.} PETER de SOTHO, or Soto, was born in a certain City in Spaine called Cordova, became, when young, a Dominican in the House or Coll. of that Order dedicated to St. Stephen, within the famous University of Salamanca, where prosecuting his natural Genie with unwearied industry in the Faculty of Divinity, became a Doctor thereof, and a most eminent ornament to his Order. Afterwards his fame being spread in the Royal Court, he became Confessor to the King of Spaine, and at length to Charles the Emperour of the Romans, with whom going into Germany, he shew'd himself in many respects very serviceable against such that were call'd Hereticks there. At length Philip K. of Spaine marrying with Mary Qu. of England, he was one of those noted Divines that came with him, having then obtained Eminency among the Learned for his Books written against John Brentius, accounted among the R. Catholics a Person very well vers'd in matters of controversie. Afterwards he, with Joh. de Villa Garcia, and one or more, being sent to the University of Oxon by publick authority to read, preach, and teach there, to the end that they might undo and invalidate all what Pet. Martyr and others had done in the Reign of King Ed. 6. he accordingly went, preached often, read Lectures on St. Thomas, whose works had been with scorn cast out from all, or most, Libraries in this University in the time of Ed. 6. and was ready upon all turns and occasions to instruct and resolve doubts, nay and for some time did read the publick Hebrew Lecture to the Academicians, while Mr. Bruerne the Reg. Professor was absent. In a word there was nothing wanting on his part, and tho he had no Canonry of Ch. Ch. or Headship bestowed on him, yet he had a considerable revenue allow'd him out of the Kings Exchequer. His works are, Institutiones Christianae. Aug. 1548. Antw. 1557. in 16^o divided into 3 Books.

Adversus Joh. Brentium. Antw. 1552. in 16^o.

Defensio Catholica confessionis, & Scholiorum circa confessionem illustriss. Ducis Wirtembergensis nomine editam, adversus prolegomena Brentii. Antw. 1557.

^{1563.} De sacerdotum institutione. libri 3. With other things, as 'tis probable, which I have not yet seen. After the death of Qu. Mary, he return'd with K. Philip into Spain, and thence went, according to command, to the great Council or Synod held in the City of Trent, called commonly among Forreigners Trento, sometimes a part of Italy, but since of Germany, where by too much agitation and concernment, he contracted a disease, which brought him to his grave in that City, in the Month of Apr. in Fifteen hundred sixty and three. About three days before his death, and some time before, the Synod began to be troubled among themselves for a small cause, and did give much matter of discourse. Which coming to the knowledge of Sotbo, he thereupon did dictate and subscribe a Letter to be sent to the Pope; in which, by way of confession, he declared his opinion concerning the points controverted in Council, and did particularly exhort his Holiness to consent, that residence and the institution of Bishops might be declared to be de jure divino. The Letter was sent to the Pope, and Frier Ludov. Soto his companion, kept a Copy of it; who thinking to honor the memory of his Friend, began to (*) spread it, which caused offence in some, and curiosity in others, to get a Copy of it, when called in. I find one Frater Petrus a Soto Major, who wrot a Book entit. Prima secundae Divi Thomae, quam quarto nomas Junii interpretandum suscepit, an. 1563. The beginning of which is, Quaestio prima, quae est de ultimo fine hujus vitae in communi, &c. But this Peter who was Author of the said Book (which is in MS. in Bodley's Library) must not be taken to be the same with the former Peter, whom I have at large mention'd, because, as 'tis before told you in the title, the said Peter began to write the said Book on the fourth of the nones of June 1563, which was some Weeks after the death of Pet. de Soto.

^{147.} RICHARD SMYTH the greatest pillar for the Roman Catholick cause in his time, was born in Worcestershire, admitted Probationer-Fellow of Merton Coll. in the beginning of the Year 1527, Master of Arts 1530, and the Year after was (on the resignation of Rob. Taylor Fellow of the said Coll.) unanimously chosen the publick Scribe or Registry of the University. Afterwards he became Rector of Cuxham in Oxfordshire for a time, Principal of St. Albans hall, Divinity Reader of Magd. College, the Kings Professor of Divinity in the said University and Doctor of that faculty. But being forced to leave his Professorship in the Reign of K. Edw. 6. to make room for P. Martyr, he went to Louvaine in Brabant, where being received (c) with solemnity, became publick Professor of Divinity there for a time, and read openly on the Apocalips of St. John. When Qu. Mary was advanced to the Crown, he was not only restored to his Professorship in the University of Oxon, but also was made one of the Chaplains to that Queen, and Canon of Christ Church. In 1559, Qu. Elizabeth being then in the Throne, he lost those, with other, preferments, (of which the Rectory or Headship of Whittingden Coll. in Lond. was one) and was committed to custody with Matthew Archbishop of Canterbury; by whose perswasions he recanted what he had written in defence of the celebracy of Priests. See more of this matter in a Book intit. De antiquitate Britannicae Ecclesiae &c. in Matthaeo. — Printed about 1572-3. being the first impression of that Book. Afterwards our Author R. Smyth giving Matthew the slip, he went to Doway in Flanders, and was constituted Dean of S. Peters Church at that place by Philip K. of Spain, who erecting an Academy there about that time, made him the first Kings Professor thereof. He was by those of his persuasion accounted the best Schoolman of his time, a subtle disputant, and admirably well read in the Fathers and Councils, which did evidently appear in his disputations in the Divinity School with Pet. Martyr, whom, as the R. Cath. Writers of his time say (d), he did in a most egregious manner baffle several times. The whole story of it you may see elsewhere (e), and therefore I shall not make a recital of it now, only say that the Protestant (f) Writers report, that he was more a Sophister than Divine, that he was non-plus'd several times by Martyr, and that he was a goggle-ey'd fellow and very inconstant in his Opinion. As for his Writings they are these.

Declaration upon his retraction made at Pauls cross 15. May 1547. Lond. 1547. oct. This retraction was for certain articles contained in two Books of his making, viz. one in Defence of the sacrifice of the Masse, and that called, as it seems, A brief treatise &c. wherein he endeavoured to prove, that unwritten verities ought to be believed under paine of damnation.

Diatriba de hominis justificatione contra Pet. Martyrem Lovain. 1550. oct.

Defensio calibathis sacerdotum contra P. Mart. Lov. 1550. oct. Printed also as it seems at Paris the same year.

Confutatio quorundam articulorum de votis monasticis Pet. Martyris Bili. These two last, being printed at Lovaine in one Vol. are very full of faults by the negligence of the Printer, and absence of the Author, who pretended they were printed against his Will, and wished afterwards that he had never made them, because he was then persuaded with himself, that the Priests of England made a vow (a religious vow) when they were made Priests; which he perceived afterwards was not true. This he told Dr. Cranmer Archb. of Canterbury in a certain (g) letter, when he heard that he the said Cranmer had made a Collection of (or answer to) the aforesaid Books De calibatu & votis monasticis.

Disputation with Bish. Rydley in the Div. School at Oxon; his Sermon at his and Latimers burning, with Speeches, Orations, &c. — See in Joh. Fox his Book of the Acts and Mon. of the Church.

A bucklar of Cath. Faith of Christ's Church, containing divers matters, now of late called into controversie by the new Gospellers. Lond. 1555. in two books or parts. The things controverted were (1) Whether a man may keep Gods commandments. (2) Concerning works of supererogation. (3) Concerning purgatory. (4) The signe of the cross and crucifex, &c.

Refutatio luculenta crassæ & exitiosæ hæresis Johannis Calvini & Christoph. Carlili Angli, qua astruunt Christum non descendisse ad inferos alios, quam ad infernum inferum. Printed 1562. The said tenet that Christ descended into hell was maintained in a Commencement held at Cambridge, in 1552. by the said Carlile, and opposed then in disputations by Sir Joh. Cheek: Whereupon Smyth wrote the Refutation before-mention'd. Afterwards Christoph. Carlile came out with a book entit. Concerning the immediat going to Heaven of the souls of the faithful Fathers before Christ, and concerning his descent into hell, &c. Lond. 1582. oct. (sec. edit) I find one Christopher Carlile to have lived for some time at Barham in Kent, whence removing to the Parish of St. Botolph near Billingsgate in London, died there in the beginning of the Year 1596, leaving then behind him a Relict called Marie. Whether this Chr. Carlile be the same with the former, I cannot tell. Another also of both his names lived in his time, whose warlike skill was sufficiently tried in the Low Countries, France and Ireland, and in America at Carthage and Santo Dominico, an. 1585: Which worthy Soldier died (*) about the Year 1593. R. Smyth hath also written,

De missæ sacrificio contra Melanctonum, Calvinum & alios. Lov. 1562. oct.

De Infantium baptismo, contra Calvinum. Printed there the same Year.

Defensio externi & visibilis sacerdotii, & propugnatio altarium, cum confutatione communionis Calvinianæ. Ibid.

Confutatio earum quæ Philip. Melancthon objecit contra propitiatorium missæ sacrificium. Ibid.

De libero hominis arbitrio contra Calvinum. Lov. 1563. oct. and other things, which you may see in Pissem. This learned Doctor gave way to fate on the seventh of the ides of July (according to the accompt followed at Doway) 1563. in Fifteen hundred sixty and three, aged 63. Whereupon his body was buried in the Chappel of our Lady joyning to the Church of St. Peter at Doway before-mentioned. Several of both his names have been Writers, but they being after him in time, I shall mention them in their respective places.

148. THOMAS PAYNELL, or Paganell, descended from an ancient Family of his name living in Lincolnshire, was from his youth always exercised in virtue and good letters. While he was in his juvenile years he was made a Canon Regular of Merton Priory in Surrey, the Monasticks of which place having had interest in the College of St. Mary the Virgin situated in the Parish of St. Michael and St. Peter in the Baylie, (built purposely for the training up of young Can. Reg. in Philosophical, or Theological learning, or both) he was sent thither, where improving himself much in Divine learning, returned to his Monastery, and a little before the dissolution of that and others, became Prior of a certain Monastery of Canon Regulars near to London as Baleus (b) faith, tho the name of the place he tells us not. But being soon after ejected, when his Monastery was to be imployed for a laical use, had a pension allowed him during his life: Whereupon retiring to London, and sometimes to Oxon, had the more leisure to write and translate Books; the titles of which follow.

Preface to the Book of measuring of Land, as well of Woodland as Plowland — Printed at Lond. in the time of Hen. 8. in oct. The Book it self was written by Sir Rich. de Benese sometimes Canon of Merton Priory, but corrected and made fit for the press by Paynell. In the Year 1519. one Rich. de Benese a secular Chaplain supplicated the Ven. congregation for the Degree of Bach. of Arts, but whether the same with the writer, I cannot justly say, because he is written secular Chaplain. Neither can I say that Rich. Benese Clerk, Parson of Long Ditton in Surrey in the time of H. 8. be the same also; who in his last (i) Will and Test. dated 3. Nov. 1546. and proved 20. Oct. 1547. doth bequeath his body to be buried in the yard belonging to the Church there. Our Author Thom. Paynell did also translate from Lat. into English (1) Of the contempt of the world. Lond. 1533. oct. written by Erasmus. (2) Of the Medicine Guacum and of the French disease, &c. Lond. 1536. and 1539. oct. written by Ulrich Hutten a Knight of Almaine. (1) The civility of Childhood, with the discipline and institution of Children. Lond. 1560. oct. (2) The assaults of Heaven. Lond. in qu. besides other translations which you may see (*) elsewhere. In my searches I once saw a Will (k) without date, made for Thom. Paynell Priest, born at, or near to Botby-Paynell in Lincolnshire, afterwards Parson (as it seems) of Cottingham lying between Hull and Beverley in Yorkshire, to which place he was a Benefactor, and left considerable Legacies to 20 poor Maidens born, and dwelling, there. He gave to St. Johns Coll. in Oxon (wherein, as it seems, he had studied in his elderly years in the latter end of H. 8. and in the time of Ed. 6. at which time it was called St. Bernards Coll.) all his Books in his Chamber at London, and desired that at his Funeral, a Sermon be Preached by a Catholick Doctor, or a Bach. of Divinity, &c. This will, which seems to have been made at London, was proved in the Prærogative Court of Canterbury, on the 22 of March (according to the English account) in Fifteen hundred sixty and three. I do, and always did, take it to be made for Thom. Paynell the writer, and conclude thence that he died in the Winter time 1563. but where buried I cannot tell.

EDWARD FERRERS, a most ingenious Man of his time, was of the same Family with those of Baldeley-Clenton in Warwickshire, but the name of the particular place where he was born, or the name of the House in Oxon, wherein educated, I cannot justly say. Sure it is that he continued there several years, being then in much esteem for his Poetry, and about the time that he left the Univ. wrote, Several Tragedies.

Com. or Interludes.

All which being written with much skill, and magnificence in his meeter, gave the King so much good recreation, (as the Author (†) of the Art of English Poesie saith) as he had thereby many good rewards, and adds farther, that for such things, as he hath seen, of his writing, and of the writing of Tho. Sackville, they deserve the price, &c. Our Author Ferrers hath also written these two Poems following, viz.

The fall of Rob. Tresilian Chief Justice of England, — and,

The unlawful murder of Tho. of Woodstok Duke of Gloucester — with several other things which I have not yet seen, and was Author, as one (*) or more writers say, of a Book intit. A myrroure for Magistrates. Lond. 1559. Published by Will. Baldwin, whom I shall anon mention. In which Mirror are involved the two Poems before mentioned, and other things of the composition of the said E. Ferrers, who was in great renown in Fifteen hundred sixty and four, being, if I mistake not, the same Edw. Ferrers of Baldeley Clenton, who died and was buried there, in that year, leaving behind him a Son named Henry, whom I shall mention under the Year 1633.

WILLIAM BALDEWYN, who seems to have been a Western Man born, spent several years in Logic and Philosophie in this University, being the same Will. Baldwin (as 'tis probable) who supplicated the venerable congregation of Regents that he might take a Degree in Arts, in Jan. 1532, but whether it was granted, or that he took such a Degree it appears not in the Register of that time. After he had left the University (being then accounted a noted Poet of that time) he became a School-master and a Minister, and a Writer of divers Books, the titles of which follow.

Of moral Philosophie, or the lives and sayings of Philosophers, Emperours, Kings, &c. — Several times printed at London in qu.

Precepts and Counsellors of the Philosophers.

Phraiselike declaration in English meeter, on the Canticles or Ballads of Salomon. Lond. 1549. qu.

The use of Adagies.

Similies and Proverbs.

Comedies.

When printed, or where, I cannot find.

A myrroure for Magistrates, wherein may be seen by example of others, with how greivous plagues, vices are punished, &c. Lond. 1559. qu. in an old English Character. It is a piece of historical poetry relating the Acts of unfortunate English Men, commencing with the fall of Rob. Tresilian Chief Justice of England, and ending with George Plantagenet third Son of the Duke of York, and hath added in the end from Jo. Skelton the Poet, the story in verse of K. Ed. 4. his sudden death in the midst of his prosperity. In the Epistle to the Reader, subscribed by the Author Baldwin, he tells us he had a second part to print, reaching down with his stories of unfortunate Men to Queen Maries time, but whether it was printed, I know not, for I have not yet seen it. This Book, or another bearing the same title, written by John Higens, is commended by several Authors, particularly by him that wrote Hypercritica (1) for a good piece of poetry. Clar. 1564. As for Baldwin he lived, as 'tis said, some years after Qu. Eliz. came to the Crown, but when he died it appears not.

WILLIAM RASTALL Son of John Rastall of Lond. 151: don Printer, by Elizabeth his Wife, Sister to Sir Thomas More Knight, sometimes Lord Chancellour of England, was born in the City of London, and educated in Grammar learning there. In 1525 or thereabouts, being then in the year of his age 17, he was sent to the University of Oxon, where laying a considerable foundation in Logick and Philosophy, left it without a Degree, went to Lincolns Inn, and there by the help of his Academical education, he made a considerable progress in the municipal Laws of the Nation, and in 1. Edw. 6. he became Autumn or Summer Reader of that House. But Religion being then about to be alter'd, he, with his ingenious and learned Wife Wenefrid Daughter of Jo. Clement (of whom I shall speak in 1572.) left the Nation and went to the University of Louvaine in Brabant, where continuing all the time of that Kings Reign, returned when Qu. Mary came to the Crown, was made Serjeant at Law in 1554; and a little before the said Queens death, one of the Justices of the Common-pleas. At length Religion altering again after Elizab. became Queen of England, he returned to Louvaine before mention'd, where he continued till the time of his death. He hath written,

The Chartuary. Lond. 1534.

A Table collected of the years of our Lord God, and of the years of the Kings of England, from the first of Will. the Conquerour: shewing how the years of our Lord God, and the years of the Kings of England, concur and agree together; by which table it may quickly be accounted how many years, months, and days be past since the making of any evidences. Lond. 1563. oct. Continued by another hand and printed there again in oct. 1607. It was also printed there a third time 1639. in a large oct. corrected and continued by the famous Almanack-maker John Booker born at Manchester in Lancashire, 23. Mar. 1601. and bred a Clark under an Alderman of London; who, after he had published several matters of his Profession (of which The bloody Irish Almanack, was one, printed at London, 1646. in 11. Sh. in qu.) gave way to fate on the sixth of the ides of April an. 1667. and received sepulture in the Church of St. James in Duke-place, Lond. Whereupon a Marble-stone was soon after laid over his grave at the charge of his great admirer Elias Ashmole Esq. The said Table of years, is now involved and swallowed up in a Book entituled Chronica juridicalia: or, a general Calender of the Years of our Lord God, and those of several Kings of England, &c. with a Chronological table of the Lord Chancellours and Lord Keepers, Justices of the Kings-bench, Common pleas, Barons of the Exchequer, &c. Lond. 1685. oct. By whom this Book was transcrib'd, I know not yet: evident it is, that it consists only of Rastalls Tables, and Sir Will. Dugdale's Chronica series, &c. at the end of his Origines juridicales, &c. and published by some down-right plagiarism purposely to get a little money. Our Author Rastall hath also written and published, Termes of the English Law: Or les termes de la ley — several times printed.

A collection in English, of the statutes now in force, continued from the beginning of Magna Charta, made 9. Hen. 3. to the 4 and 5 of Phil. and Mary. Lond. 1559. 84. fol. Continued by another hand to the 43 of Queen Elizab. Lond. 1607. 84. fol.

A collection of entries, of declarations, barres, replications, rejoinders, issues, verdicts, &c. Lond. 1566. 96. 84. fol. He also corrected and published a Book intit. La Nouvel natura brevium Monsieur Anon. Fitzherbert, &c. des choses notables contenues en quel nouvelment, &c. To which he also added a table. This Book was printed several times; one of which editions came out at Lond. 1598. oct. He also composed two tables, one of which contains the principal matters concerning pleas of the Crown, and the other of all the principal cases contained in a Book called, The book of assizes and pleas of the Crown, &c. and a Table to Fitzherbert's Grand abridgment of the Law.

Life of Sir Thom. More Knight. — Whether printed I cannot tell. Sure I am that Rastall collected all such works of Sir Tho. More that were wrot in English — Lond. 1557. fol. As for those things written against Jewell, which go under the name of Rastall, are not to be understood as written by this Will. Rastall, as a certain Author (m) would have it, but by John Rastal a Theologift, as I shall tell you under the Year 1600. This our Author Will. Rastall, who was accounted a most eminent Lawyer of his time and a grand zealot for the R. Catholick Religion, died at Lovaine before-mention'd 27. Aug. in 1565. Fifteen hundred sixty and five: whereupon his body was buried within the Church of St. Peter there, on the right hand of the Altar of the Virgin Mary, near to the body of Wenefred his Wife, who was buried there in July 1553. He had a Brother named Job. Rastall who was a Justice of the Peace, Father to Elizabeth Rastall, the Wife of Rob. Longber LL. D. as I have elsewhere told you.

152. JOHN PULLAYNE, a Yorkshire Man born, was educated in New Coll. of which he was either Clerk or Chaplain, or both successively, and in the Year 1547. being then 3 years standing Master of Arts and thirty years of Age, was admitted one of the Senior Students, of Cb. Cb. and much in esteem for his Lat. and English Poetry. About that time he became a frequent Preacher and a zealous Reformer, but when Qu. Mary came to the Crown, he absconded and preached privately to the brethren in the Parish of St. Michael on Cornhill in London, where I find him in 1556. Afterwards he was forced beyond the Seas to Geneva, but returned when Qu. Elizab. was in the regal Throne, and had the Archdeaconry of Colchester bestowed on him, (lately enjoyed by Dr. Hugb. Weston) besides other spiritualities. He hath written, 1565. Tract against the Arrians. — And translated into English verse. (1) The Ecclesiastes of Salomon. (2) Hist. of Susanna. (3) Hist. of Judith. (4) Hist. of Hester. (5) Testament of the 12. Patriarchs. He went the way of all flesh, in Fifteen hundred sixty and five, which is all I know of him, only that after his death fell out a controversy among his Relations for his estate, under pretence that his Children were illegitimate, because he had taken to him a Wife in K. Edwards Reign. The Reader is to understand that there was one John Pollayne an Oxfordshire Man born, elected and admitted Prob. Fellow of Merton Coll. in 1507. but what he hath written I know not, he being altogether different from the former, notwithstanding Baleus is pleased to tell (n) us, that the said former Pullayne the Writer, was of Merton Coll. which is false.

153. THOMAS CHALONER Son of Rog. Chaloner, (by Margaret his Wife Daughter of Rich. Middleton) Son of Tho. Chaloner, second Son of Rice Chaloner of Denbigh in Wales, was born in London, educated in both the Universities, especially in that of Cambridge, where for a time he devoted himself to the Muses, as he did afterwards to Mars. After he had left the University, he travell'd beyond the Seas in the company of Sir Hen. Knevet Embassador from K. Hen. 8. to the Emperor Charles 5. Which Emperor, T. Chaloner did afterwards serve in the expedition of Algier, where being (*) Shipwrack'd, did, after he had swom till his strength and his armes failed him, catch hold of a Cable with his teeth, and so escaped, but not without the loss of some of them. In the beginning of K. Ed. 6. he received the honor of Knighthood in the camp besides Rokesborough, immediatly after the battel of Musselborough, (wherein he had shewed great valour) from Edward Duke of Somerset Lord Protector of England, 27. Sept. 1547. and soon after was by him made one of the Clerks of the Privy Council. In the time of Qu. Mary he mostly lived in a retir'd and studious condition, but in the very beginning of Qu. Elizabeth an. 1558. he went on an honorable Embassie to the Emperour Ferdinand, such esteem then had the Queen for his port, carriage and admirable parts, and about an year after was sent ordinary Embassador to Philip K. of Spayne, where he continued 4 years, in which time, at leisure hours, he wrot his Book of a Commonwealth (which I shall anon mention) in elegant and learned verse, whilst (as he saith in his Preface to it) he lived in Winter in a stove, and in Summer in a barne. Soon after his return from Spayne he ended his days, as I shall tell you by and by, having before written several things, as,

A little Dictionary for Children.

(1) The office of Servants. Lond. 1543. oct. written by Gilb. Cognatum: which translation is dedicated to Sir H. Knevet before-mention'd. (2) The praise of folly. Lond. 1549. qu. written by Erasmus. What other things he hath written and translated, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he died in his house in St. Johns near London on the nones of Octob. in Fifteen hundred sixty and Five, and was buried with a sumptuous Funeral according to his worth in the Cath. Ch. of St. Paul within the said City of London. His Son Thomas I shall mention among these Writers under the Year 1615. and his Grandson Edward under 1625. 1565.

JOHN HEYWOOD or Heetwood, a most noted Poet 154. and jester of his time, was born in the City of London, and notwithstanding he is said to be (o) Civis Londinensis, yet he laid a foundation of learning in this University, particularly, as it seems, in that ancient Hostle called Broadgates in St. Aldates Parish: But the crabbedness of Logick not suiting with his airie genie, he retired to his native place, and became noted to all witty Men, especially to Sir Tho. More, (with whom he was very familiar) wrot several matters of Poetry, and was the first, as some say, (but I think false) that wrot English plays, taking opportunity thence to make notable work with the Clergy. He had admirable skill also in instrumental and vocal Musick, but whether he made any compositions in either, I find not. He was in much esteem with K. H. 8. for the mirth and quickness of his conceits, and tho he had little learning in him, yet he was by that King well rewarded. After Qu. Mary came to the Crown, he was much valued by her, often had the honor to wait on, and exercise his fancy before, her; which he did, even to the time that she lay languishing on her death-bed. After her decease he left the Nation for Religion sake, and settled at Mechlin in Brabant, which is a wonder to some, who will allow no Religion in Poets, that this Person should above all of his Profession be a voluntary exile for it. He hath written,

The Play called the four PP. being a new and merry enterlude of a Palmer, Pardoner, Poticary and Pedler — Printed at London in an old Engl. character in qu. and hath in the title page the pictures of three Men (there should be 4) in old fashioned habits, wrought off from a wooden cut.

Philotas Scotch, a Com. — I have seen also an interlude of youth; Printed at Lond. in an old English. Char. temp. Hen. 8. but whether Jo. Heywood was the Author of it, I know not. He also wrot,

The Spider and the Flie. A parable of the Spider and the Flie. Lond. 1556. in a pretty thick qu. and all in old English verse. Before the title, is the picture of Jo. Heywood from head to foot printed from a wooden Cut, with a fur-gown on, representing the fashion of that almost belonging to a Master of Arts, but the bottom of the sleeves reach no lower than his knees. On his head is a round cap, his chin and lips are close shav'd, and hath a dagger hanging at his girdle. After the Preface, which is in verse, follows a table of all the Chapters in the Book, then follows his picture again, as is before described. In the beginning of every chapter (in number 77.) is the Authors picture either standing or sitting before a table, with a Book on it, and the representation of a window near it, with cobwebs, flies, and spiders in it. 'Tis one of the first printed Books in the English tongue that hath many Cuts; and no doubt there is, but that it was in high value in Qu. Maries Reign, as the Author of it was, who ending his days at Mechlin, about Fifteen hundred sixty and five, was buried there, leaving behind him several Children, to whom he had given liberal education: among which were Ellis, and Jasp. Heywood, the former Bach. of the Civil Law, the other M. of Arts, of this University, and both afterwards noted Jesuits.

155. THOMAS HOBY of Bysham near to Maydenhead in Berks. Son of Will. Hoby of Leonminster commonly called Lemster in Herefordshire, was born, as I conceive, in Herefordshire, and after he had spent some time among the Oxonian Muses, he went beyond the Seas, lived in France, Italy, and other Countries several years, became a perfect Master of the Languages there spoken, and at length returned a compleat Gentleman, well furnished with learning, and for a time settled at Bysham. Afterwards being introduced into the Court, he became so much esteemed by Qu. Elizabeth, that she not only confer'd the honor of Knighthood upon, but sent him Embassador to the French King, an. 1565 or thereabouts; where acting too zealous for his Mistress, he was cut off in the prime of his years. What he hath written, I know not: Sure I am that he hath translated from Italian into English Il cortigiano, seu de Aulico written by Baldessar Castiglione, and from Lat. into English. (1) Gratulation to the Church of England, for the restitution of Christian Religion. Lond. in oct. without date: written in Lat. by Martin Bucer. (2) Answer unto the two railing Epistles of Steph. Gardiner B. of Winchester concerning the married state of Priests and Cloysters. Lond. in oct. without date: written also in Lat. by the said Bucer. They were both printed in an English character, after the Authors death, (as it seems) which hapning at Paris on Saturday (*) 13. July, between five and six in the morning (to the great reluctancy of all good Men, nay, to the Queen her self) in Fifteen hundred sixty and six, aged 36 years, his body thereupon was conveyed into England, and at length to Bysham, where resting till his Widow Elizabeth, Daughter of Sir Anth. Coke of Geddy-hall in Essex Knight, had built a Chappel on the South side of the Chancel there, was put into a Vault underneath it. Which being so done, the said Widow caused the body of his elder Brother Sir Philip Hoby a zealous Protestant in Qu. Maries Reign, (who dying issueless 31 May 1558. aged 53. made his Brother Sir Tho. before mentioned his Heir) to be removed from under the Chancel, and to be laid by it in the said Vault. That also being done, she at her own charges caused a fair Table Monument breast-high to be erected over them, with their statua's from head to foot laying thereon, and a large inscription in English prose and verse to be engraven, which for brevity sake I shall now pass by. This Sir Tho. Hoby left behind him several Children, of whom the eldest was Edward, as I shall tell you more hereafter in the latter end of the Year 1616.

156. RICHARD EDWARDS, a Somersetshire Man born, was admitted Scholar of Corp. Cbr. Coll. under the tuition of George Etheridge, on the eleventh of May 1540, Student of the upper table of Christ Church at its foundation by K. Hen. 8. in the beginning of the Year 1547. aged 24, and the same Year took the Degree of M. of Arts. In the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth, he was made one of the Gentlemen of her Chappel, and Master of the Children there, being then esteemed not only an excellent Musician, but an exact Poet, as many of his compositions in Musick (for he was not only skill'd in the practical but theoretical part) and Poetry do shew, for which he was highly valued by those that knew him, especially his associates in Lincolns Inn (of which he was a member, and in some respects an Ornament) and much lamented by them, and all ingenious Men of his time, when he died. He hath written,

Damon and Pythias, a Com. — Acted at Court and in the University.

Palamon and Arcyte, a Com. in two parts. — Acted before Qu. Elizab. in Ch. Ch. hall 1566. which gave her so much content, that sending for the Author thereof, she was pleased to give him many thanks, with promise of reward for his pains: And then making a pause, said to him and her retinue standing about her, these matters relating to the said Play, which had entertain'd her with great delight for two nights in the said hall. 'By Palamon — I warrant he dallieth not in love, when he was in love indeed. By Arcyte — he was a right martial Knight, having a swart countenance and a manly Face. 'By Trecatio — Gods pittie what a knave it is? By Petrus his throwing St. Edwards rich cloak into the funeral fire, which a slander by would have staid by the arm, with an oath, go fool — he knoweth his part I'll warrant you, &c. — In the said play was acted a cry of hounds in the quadrant, upon the train of a fox in the hunting of Thebes: with which, the young Scholars who stood in the remoter parts of the stage, and in the windows, were so much taken and surpriz'd (supposing it had been real) that they cried out, there, there, — he's caught, he's caught. — All which the Queen merrily beholding, said, O excellent! those boys in very troth are ready to leap out of the windows to follow the bounds. — This part being repeated before certain Courtiers in the lodgings of Mr. Rog. Marbeck one of the Canons of Ch. Ch. by the players in their gowns (for they were all Scholars that acted, among whom were Miles Windfore and Thom. Twyne of C. C. C.) before the Queen came to Oxon, was by them so well liked, that they said it far surpassed Damon and Pythias, than which, they thought, nothing could be better. Likewise some said that if the Author did proceed to make more plays before his death, he would run mad. But this it seems was the last, for he lived not to finish others that he had laying by him. He also wrot, Several Poems in Engl. and Latine — Those that speak English are for the most part extant in a Book intit. The paradise of dainty devises. Lond. 1578. qu. Which Book being mostly written by him, was published by Hen. D'isle a Printer, with other Mens Poems mix'd among them. Among which, are those of Edward Vere Earl of Oxford, the best for Comedy in his time, who died an aged Man 24 June 1604. Will. Hunnys (a crony of Tho. Newton the Lat. Poet) who hath about nine Copies in the said collection; Jasp. Heywood, Nich. Lord Vaux, Franc. Kynwelmersh who hath about 8 Copies therein; R. Hall, R. Hill, T. Marshall, Tho. Churchyard a Salopian, Lodowyke Lloyd, one Yloop, and several others. At length this noted Poet and Comedian, R. Edwards, made his last Exit before he arrived to his middle age, in Fifteen hundred sixty and six, 1566. or thereabouts. When he was in the extremity of his sickness, he composed (*) a noted Poem called Edwards Souleknell or the Soules knell, which was commended for a good piece. Ohe George Turberville in his Book of Epitaphs, Epigrams, Songs, Sonnets, &c. (which I shall hereafter mention) printed at Lond. the second time 1570, hath an Epitaph on his death, made by Tho. Twyne of C. C. Coll. and another by himself.

ROBERT POINTZ to whom Alderlie in Glocestershire (where his Family was gentile) gave breath, and Wykebams School near to Winebester education, was admitted perpetual Fellow of New Coll. in 1554. took the Degrees in Arts, that of Master being confer'd upon him in 1560, but went away before he compleated it by standing in the Comitia. Afterwards leaving his Relations, Country; and all future expectation, for Religion sake, settled at Lovaine in Brabant, as it seems, became a Student in Divinity, and published, Testimonies for the real presence of Christ's body and blood in the blessed Sacrament of the Altar, set forth at large and faithfully translated out of six ancient Fathers, which lived far within six hundred years. Low. 1566. oct.

Certain notes declaring the force of those testimonies, and detecting sometimes the Sacramentaries false dealing. Printed with the former book.

✓ Clar. 1566. Miracles performed by the Eucharist — This last with other things that he hath written, as 'tis said, I have not yet seen. An 100 years after this R. Pointz lived another of both his names, and of the same Family, a writer also; and a Knight of the Bath, whom I shall remember hereafter.

158. ANTHONY BROWNE Son of Sir Weston Browne of Abbesford and of Langenbo in Essex Knight, (by Eliz. his Wife one of the Daughters of Will. Mordant of Turwey in Bedfordsh. Esq;) Son (*) of Rob. Browne, (by Mary his Wife Daughter and Heir of Sir Thomas Charlton) Son of Rob. Browne of Wakefield in Yorkshire, (by Joane Kirkham his second Wife) Son of another Rob. Browne of the West Country, was born in Essex, and being made soon ripe for the University, was sent thereunto; but before he had taken a Degree he was transplanted to the Middle Temple; of which, after he had been some years an Inner Barrester, he was elected Summer-Reader 1^o Maria, but did not read till the Lent following. In the 2 Year of the said Queens Reign he with several others were by writ called to the Degree of Serjeant at Law, and was the antientest of the call, and soon after was made Serjeant to the King and Queen. In oct. 1558. (5. and 6. of Ph. and Mar.) he was made Lord Chief Justice of the Common-pleas, but the said Qu. Mary dying soon after, and Elizabeth succeeding, she remov'd him thence and placed in his room Sir James Dyer. Whereupon A. Browne was made for a time (as it seems) a Justice of the Common-pleas, and soon after one of the Justices of the Common-bench, in which dignity he dyed; having, but an year before his death, received the honor of Knighthood from the Queen at the Parliament house. Edm. Plowden the famous Lawyer doth give this (a) testimony of him that he was a Judge of a profound genie and great eloquence: And all eminent Men of that Age did esteem him as able a Person as any that lived in Qu. Elizabeth's time, and therefore fit to have obliged posterity by his Pen, had not too much modesty laid in the way. What he did as to that, was concealed, and partly published under another name, as his Arguments for Marie Queen of Scots her right of Succession to the Crown of England, which were published by Joh. Lesley Bishop of Rosse, as I shall tell you in Morgan Phillips under the Year 1577. Besides which, there is a folio MS. at this day in a private hand entit.

A discourse upon certain points touching the inheritance of the Crown — conceiv'd by Sir Anth. Browne Justice. Which Book coming into the hands of Sir Nich. Bacon L. Keeper of England, was by him answered, and perhaps therein are contained the Arguments before-mentioned. Our Author Sir Anthony wrote a Book also against Rob. Dudley Earl of Leycester, as one (b) reports, but what the contents of it are, he mentions not. At length having always lived a R. Catholick, he gave way to fate (c) at his house in the Parish of South-weld in Essex on the 6. of May in Fifteen hundred sixty and seven; whereupon his body was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, on the tenth of June following. What Epitaph was put over his Grave, I know not: Sure it is, that these verses were made on him several years after his death, which may serve for one.

On the 9. Nov. in the same Year in which Sir Anthony died, Joan his Widow, Daughter of Will. Farington of Farington in Lancashire (and formerly the Widow of Charles Bothe Esq;) died, and the 22 of the same Month was buried near to the grave of her second husband Sir Anthony before-mentioned, who was Nephew to Sir Humph. Browne of the Middle Temple, made Serjeant at Law 23. Hen. 8. one of the Justices of the Kings-bench 34. Hen. 8. and continued in that place till 9. Elizabeth at which time he died, being about 33 Years after he was made a Serjeant.

WILLIAM SALESBURY, a most exact Critick in 159. British antiquities, was born of an ancient and gentle Family in Denbighshire, spent several years in Academical learning either in St. Albans, or Broadgates, hall, or both. Thence he went to an Inn of Chancery in Holbourne near London, called Thavies Inn, where he studied and made sufficient progress in the common Law; and thence, as 'tis probable, to Lincolns Inn. Afterwards he applied his mind to the searching of Histories, especially those belonging to his own Country, wherein he became so curious and critical that he wrote and published,

A Dictionary in English and Welsh, much necessary to all such Welshmen, as will speedily learn the English tongue, thought by the Kings Majesty very meet to be set forth to the use of his gracious Subjects in Wales. Lond. 1547. qu. whereunto is prefixed,

A little treatise of the English pronunciation of the Letters — From the said Dictionary, and treatise, Dr. Joh. Davies obtained many materials when he was making his Dictionary Britannico-latinum.

A playne and familiar introduction, teaching how to pronounce the Letters in the Brytish tongue, now commonly called Welsh, whereby an English Man shall not only with ease read the said tongue rightly, but &c. Lond. 1550. qu. Afterwards perused and augmented by the Author, Lond. 1567. in 7. sh. in qu.

Battery of the Popes bottereulx, commonly called the High Altar. Lond. 1550. in oct. He also published The Laws of Howell Da, and other things relating to his own Country, which I have not yet seen. He was living in the house of Humph. Toy a Bookseller in St. Pauls Ch. yard in London, in Fifteen hundred sixty and seven, (which was part of the ninth and tenth years of Qu. Elizabeth) being then esteemed a Person to be much meriting of the Church and British tongue, but when he died, I find not. Clar. 1567.

ARMIGELL WADE or Waad, a Yorkshire Man born, 160. spent some years in Logick and Philosophie, in St. Mary Magd. Coll. as it seems, took a Degree in Arts 1531, went afterwards to one of the Inns of Court, travelled into various Countries, and after his return became Clerk of the counsel to K. Hen. 8. and afterwards to K. Ed. 6. He is (f) characteriz'd thus — Qui in maximarum artium disciplinis, prudentiaque civili instructissimus, plurimarum linguarum callentissimus, legationibus honoratissimus persunctus, & inter Britannos Indiarum Americarum explorator primus. He made many observations in his travels, especially in America, (being the first English Man that discovered it) which are remitted into the Volumes of voyages collected and published by another hand. This Person, who was a Justice of Peace for the County of Middlesex, died at Belfie or Belfie in the Parish of Hampsted in the said County, 20. June in Fifteen hundred sixty and eight, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church at Hampsted. Soon after was a fair Monument of Alabaster erected over his grave by Sir Will. Waad his eldest Son, Clerk of the Counsel to Qu. Elizabeth. 1568.

WILLIAM TURNER, a noted and forward Theologist and Physician of his time, was born at Morpeth in Northumberland, educated in Cambridge in Trivials, and afterwards for a time in the study of Medicine. This Person who was very conceited of his own worth, hot headed, a busie body, and much addicted to the opinions of Luther, would needs in the heigh of his study of Physick turn Theologist, but always refused the usual ceremonies to be observed in order to his being made Priest: And whether he had orders confer'd upon him according to the R. Cath. manner, appears not. Sure it is that while he was a young Man, he went unsent for, through many parts of the Nation, and Preached the Word of God, not only in Towns and Villages, but also in Cities. In his rambles he settled for a time in Oxon, among several of his Countrymen that he found there, purposely for the conversation of Men and Books, which is one reason I put him here, the other I shall tell you anon. But whether he took a Degree in Arts or Medicine I cannot yet find. At the same time, and after, following his old trade of preaching without a call, he was imprison'd and kept in close durance for a considerable time. At length being let loose, and banished, he travelled into Italy, and at Ferrara he was made a Doctor of Physick, and as much there in esteem for his faculty, as after his return into England he was among the reformed party. In the latter end of K. Hen. 8. he lived at Colen and other places in Germany, where he published one or more Books: and returning to his native Country when K. Ed. 6. reigned, had not only the Prebendship of Botevans in the Church of York bestowed on him by the Archb. of that place, but a Canonry of Windfore, and the Deanery of Wells by the King. About which time, tho the day, or month, or scarce the Year appears, he was incorporated Doctor of Physick with us, which is another reason I put him here; for if I could have found the certain time, (which appears not because the Register of that Kings Reign is imperfect) I would have remitted him into the Fasti. About that time he procured a licence to read and to preach, as many Lay-men did that were Scholars, practised his faculty among the Nobility and Gentry, and became Physician to Edward Duke of Somerset, L. Protector of England. After Q. Mary came to the Crown he left the Nation once more, went into Germany with several English Theologists, thence to Rome and afterwards for a time settled in Basil. But when Qu. Eliz. succeeded, he return'd and was restored to his Deanery, and had other spiritualities, I presume, confer'd upon him, being then a Person had in much esteem for his two faculties, and for the great benefit he did by them, especially in his writings, to the Church and common-wealth. The titles of those Books published under his name are these.

The hunting of the Romish Fox, which more than 7 years hath been hid among the Bishops of England, after that the Kings highness had commanded him (Turner) to be driven out of his Realm. Basil. 1543. oct. Published under the name of Will. Wraughton.

Dialogue, wherein is contained the examination of the Masse, and of that kind of Priesthood, which is ordained to say Mass, and to offer up for the remission of sinne, the body and blood of Christ againe. Lond. in oct.

New Herball, wherein are contained the names of herbs in Greek, Lat. Engl. Dutch, French, and in the Apothecaries and Herbaries, with the properties, degrees, and natural places of the same. Lond. 1551. and 68. fol. It must be now noted, that after this violent and busie Person had got a licence to read and preach, it happened that in a Lecture of his delivered at Thistleworth near to London, he did therein inveigh much against the Poyson of Pelagius, which had then infected the People very much in all parts of the Nation. This Lecture of his being answered in print by one who was his auditor, he straightway came out with a reply entit.

A Preservative, or Triacle against the poyson of Pelagius, lately renewed and stirred up again, by the furious sect of the Anabaptists. Lond. 1551. in tw. which Book being dedicated to Hugh Latimer was usher'd into the world by several copies of Lat. and Eng. verses set before, and at the end of, it; made by Nich. Grimoald of Merton Coll. Tho. Norton of Sharpenhoe, Randol Hurleston or Huddleston and Tho. Soame a Preacher. Afterwards our Author Turner published,

A new Book of spiritual Physick for divers diseases of the Nobilitie and Gentlemen of England — Said to be printed at Rome, but false, an. 1555. oct. by Marcus Antonius Constantinus, otherwise called Thraso miles gloriosus. 'Tis printed in an English Character, and in the title are 4 Lat. verses directed by Turner, ad nobilem Britannum.

The hunting of the Fox and the Wolfe, because they did make havock of the Sheep of Jesus Christ — printed in oct.

A Book of the natures and properties, as well of the Bathes of England, as of other Bathes in Germany and Italy. Collen 1562. in a thin fol. and in an Eng. Char.

Treatise of the Bath at Baeth in England — Printed with the former Book.

Of the nature of all waters — Printed with the former also.

The nature of wines, commonly used here in England, with a confutation of them that hold, that Renish and other small Wines, ought not to be drunken, either of them that have the stone, the rume, or other diseases. Lond. 1568. oct.

Of the nature and vertue of Triacle — Printed with the next Book going before.

The rare treasure of English Bathes. Lond. 1587. qu. — Several things in this Book, were published from his former Books of Bathes. He also translated into English, (1) A comparison between the old learning and the new. Printed in Soutwarke an. 1538. originally written by Urb. Regius. (2) The Palsgraves catechismi. Lond. 1572. oct. What else he hath written and translated, you may see in Joh. Bale, cent. 8. nu. 95. At length after all the rambles and troubles that our Author Turner had made and did endure, he did quietly lay down his head, and departed this life 7. July in Fifteen hundred sixty and eight. 1568. Whereupon his body was buried in the Chancel of the Church of St. Olaves in Heristreet in London, leaving then behind him several Children, of whom Peter, a Doctor of Physick was one, Father to Samuel and Peter; as I shall tell you elsewhere.

WILLIAM BARLOWE was bred a Canon Regular 162. of the order of St. Austin in the Monastery of St. Osfub in Essex, and partly among those of his order in Oxon (where besides a nursery for, was an Abbey and Priory of, that order) and there obtained a competency in Theology, of which faculty, as 'tis said, he was a Doctor. Afterwards he was made Prior of the Canons of his Order living at Rysham near Moydenhead in Berkshire, and by that name and title he was sent in an Embassie to Scotland, as I shall tell you elsewhere. About the time of the dissolution of his Priory, he was elected to the Episcopal See of St. Asaph; the temporalities of which being (i) delivered to him on the second day of Febr. 27. Hen. 8. Dom. 1535. he was consecrated (k) to the said See 22. of the same Month. Thence he was translated to St. David's in the Month of Apr. 1536. and thence to Bathe and Wells in 1547, being then a zealous Professor and Preacher of the reformed Religion. In 1553, upon Qu. Maries coming to the Crown, he was deprived of his Bishoprick for being married; whereupon retiring with many others into Germany under pretence of Religion, lived there in a poor and exile condition. At length when Qu. Elizab. succeeded, he was made Bishop of Chichester, in Decemb. 1559, (where he sat to the time of his death) and in 1560, he was made the first Canon or Probandary of the first stall, in the collegiat Church of St. Peter in Westminster, then founded by Qu. Elizabeth; which Dignity he held with his Bishoprick five years. His works are these.

A Dialogue describing the original ground of these Lutheran factions and many of their abules. Lond. 1553. in oct. Printed in an English Char.

Cosmography — which two last I have not yet seen. He departed this mortal life in the Month of Aug. in Fifteen hundred sixty and eight, and was buried, as I suppose, in the Cath. Ch. at Chichester. After this William Barlowe had been a Prior and a Bishop, he took to Wife one Agatha Wellasbourne, by whom he had issue five Daughters that were all married to Bishops, viz. (1) Anne, who, after she had buried her first Husband named Austin Brad- 1568.

bridge of Chichester, sometimes Fellow of New College, married Harbert Westphaling Bishop of Hereford (2) Elizabeth Wife of Will. Day Dean of Windsor, afterwards Bishop of Winchester. (3) Margaret Wife of Will. Overton B. of Lichf. and Cov. (4) Frances, who after she had buried her first Husband named Matthew Parker a younger Son of Dr. Matthew Parker Archb. of Canterbury, was married to Tobie Mathew, who died Archb. of York. (5) Antonia the Wife of Will. Wykeham Bishop of Winchester. The said Will. Barlowe had also a Son of both his names, whom I shall mention in his proper place.

163. JOHN MAN being the next according to time to be mentioned, I must tell you that he was born in the Parish of Lacocke in Wiltshire, elected from Winchester School, Probationer of New Coll. in 1529, and was made perpetual Fellow two Years after. In 1537, he proceeded in Arts, was the Southern Proctor of the University three years after, and in 1547, he was made Principal of Whitehall, since involved into Jesus Coll. After Qu. Elizabeth was settled in the Throne, he became Chaplain to Dr. Parker Archb. of Canterbury, who having a respect for, did put, him in Warden of Merton Coll. 1562. upon a dissent among the Fellows in an Election of one for that office, as I have told (*) you at large elsewhere. In 1565, he was made Dean of Gloucester in the place of Will. Jennings deceased, (who from being a Monk of that place, was made the first Dean 1541.) and in 1567. in the Month of Aug. he was sent by the Queen her Ambassador to the K. of Spain, who the Year before had sent to our Queen his Ambassador called Goseman or Gooseman de Sylva, Dean (as 'twas said) of Toledo. Of which Ambassadors Qu. Eliz. used merrily to say, that as her Brother the K. of Spain had sent to her a Goos-man, so she had sent to him a Man goose. While he continued at Madrid in Spain in the quality of an Ambassador, he was accused (†) to have spoken somewhat unreverently of the Pope. Whereupon he was excluded from the Court, and afterwards thrust out of Madrid into a Country Village, his Servants compelled to be present at Mass, and the exercise of his own Religion forbidden; and this whether in more hatred to the Queen of England, or to Religion, I cannot say; whereas she in the mean time had shewed all kindness to Goseman the Spanish Ambassador, allowing him his own Religion. This Man-goose, hath (as I have been informed) written and translated several things, but none have I yet seen, only his translation from Latin into English of Common places of Christian Religion, gathered by Wolfg. Musculus, &c. Lond. 1563. fol. and 1573. in a thick qu. He paid his last debt to nature at London, 18. March 1565. in Fifteen hundred sixty and eight, and received sepulture in the Chancel of St. Anns Church near Aldersgate in the same City, leaving issue by his Wife Frances Dau. of Edm. Herenden of London Mercer, several Children; some of whose posterity, do now, or at least did lately, live at Hatfield-Braddock in Essex. In his Deanery of Gloucester succeeded Dr. Tho. Cooper, afterwards B. of Winchester, and in the Wardenship of Merton Coll. Dr. Tho. Bickley afterwards B. of Chichester. Besides this Jo. Man, I find another of both his names of New Coll. born at Writtle in Essex, who, being LL. B. was presented by the Warden and Fellows of the said Coll. to the rectory of Great Horwood in Bucks. an. 1551, where he died 1565.

164. EDMUND BONNER, a Person much esteemed by those of his profession for the zeal he bore to the R. Catholick cause, was the natural Son of George Savage Priest, Parson of Davenham in Cheshire, natural Son of Sir Job. Savage of Clifton in the said County, Knight of the Garter, and one of the counsel to K. Hen. 7. Which Geo. Savage Priest had seven natural Children by three sundry Women, viz. (1) George Savage Chancellour of Chester (2) Job. Wymesley Parson of Torperley in Cheshire, who was made Archdeacon of London by his Brother Ed. Bonner. (3) Randal Savage of Lodge in the said County. (4) Edm. Bonner (of whom we are to make further mention) begotten on the body of Elizab. Frodsham, who was the Wife (after Bonner had been begotten) of Edm. Bonner a Sawyer living with a Gentleman called Armingham of Posters Hanley in Worcestershire, besides three Daughters named Margaret, Ellen, and Elizabeth. Our Author, who was called by his supposed Fathers name, Edm. Bonner, was born either at Elmeley, or at Posters-Hanley in Worcestershire, and in 1512 or thereabouts, became a Student of Broadgates hall, (now Pembroke Coll.) being then a noted nursery for Civilians and Canonists. Soon after, having made a sufficient progress in Philosophy and the Laws, he was on the 12. June admitted Bach. of the Canon, and on the 13. of July following, an. 1519. Bach. of the Civil, Law. About that time he entered into Holy Orders, and performed many matters, relating to his faculty, in the Dioc. of Worcester, by the appointment of the then Bishop. In 1525, he was licensed to proceed in the Civil Law, and about that time obtained the rectories of Ripple, Eledon, Dereham, Cheshwick, and Cherriburton (in Yorks.) Afterwards he was one of the Kings Chaplains, a favourer of the Lutherans, of the divorce between the K. and Catherine of Spain, a favourer of the Kings proceedings in expelling the Popes authority from the Kingdom of England, and Master of the Faculties under Dr. Crammer Archb. of Canterbury. In 1535, he became Archdeacon of Leicester in the place of Edw. Fox promoted to the See of Hereford (which Fox had been installed in that Archdeaconry, upon the resignation of Steph. Gardener LL. D. 27. Sept. 1531.) and by the endeavours of Thom. Cromwell Secretary of State, he was employed Ambassador to the Kings of Denmark and France, to the Pope, and to the Emperour of Germany, and made Bishop of Hereford 1538: the temporalities of which See were (a) restored to him by the K. 4. March the same Year. But before he was consecrated thereunto, he was elected Bishop of London 1. Oct. 1539, (being then in an Embassy) had restitution (b) made of the Temporalities belonging thereunto 18. Nov. following, and was consecrated 3. Apr. 1540. After the death of K. Hen. 8. and Religion being about to be reformed by K. Ed. 6. Bonner seemed at first to be forward for it, but recanting what he had done, he was enjoyn'd to preach a Sermon at Pauls cross, (to make farther trial perhaps of his humour) wherein leaving out the article of the Kings authority, was, upon the complaints of Job. Hooper and Will. (some call him Hugh) (c) Latimer Bach. of Div. and Parson of St. Laurence Pountney (who prosecuted him very zealously for it, and his slowness in forwarding reformation in his Diocels) first committed Prisoner to the Marshalsea 20. Sept. and in the beginning of Oct. following an. 1549. was depriv'd of his Bishoprick. Soon after which time, his Mother Elizab. Frodsham died and was buried at Fulham, at whose Funeral, Bonner, tho a Prisoner, gave to several Persons mourning coats. In the beginning of Aug. 1553. he was released out of the Marshalsea, and restored to his Bishoprick by Qu. Mary, in whose Reign he shew'd himself severe (being put upon it by publick authority) against the Protestants, as may be fully seen in Job. Fox his Book of the Acts and Mon. of the Church. As for the writings of the said Bonner, they are many, but all that I have yet seen, are only these, viz.

Preface to the oration of Stephen Bish. of Winchester concerning true obedience — Printed at London. in Lat. 1534. 35, and at Hamburg 1536. oct. Translated and imprinted by a most zealous enemy to the Papists called Mich. Wood, who wrote a bitter and libellous Epistle before, and a conclusion after, it, to the Reader — Print. at Roan 1553. oct. I have seen another translation of it (perhaps by the same hand) without the said lib. Epist. printed in oct. an. 1536. In the said Pref. written by Bonner are several matters against the Popes power in England, and in defence of the Kings divorce from Qu. Catherine.

Several Letters to the Lord Tho. Cromwell. an. 1538.

A declaration to the Lord Th. Crom. describing to him the evil behaviour of Steph. Bish. of Winchester, an. 1538. — These two last are mention'd in the Acts and Mon. of the Church, under that year.

Responsum & exhortatio. Lond. 1553. in oct. Which answer, and exhortation to the Clergy in praise of Priesthood, beginning Dum tacitus apud me considero, &c. were utter'd by our Author after Job. Harpesfield had finished his Sermon to the Clergy in St. Pauls Cath. in Lond. 16.

Articles (in number 37.) to be enquired of in his general visitation exercised by him in the City and Dioc. of London. an. 1554. — These being very unusual articles, I do therefore here set them down, especially for this reason, that Jo. Bale hath commented on them with a great deal of raillery in a Book entit. A Declaration of Edmund Bonners articles. London. 1561. oct.

A profitable and necessary doctrine (or Catechisme) with certaine Homelies adjoynd thereunto, for the instruction and information of the People within the Dioc. of London. London. 1554. 55. qu. Or thus. A necessary doctrine containing an exposition on the Creed, seven Sacraments, ten commandments, the pater noster, Ave Maria and the seven deadly sins.

Various letters, declarations, arguings, disputes, &c. — As in the said Book of Acts and Mon.

After Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown, he was for denying the Oath of Supremacy deprived of his Bishoprick again, as he himself hath set it down in a spare leaf before Eusebius his Ch. Hist. with Ruffinus his commentary, printed at Basil, in the Year 1528. Which Book I, some years ago, bought for the sake of the note, which he had written, running thus. Litera dominicali A. an. dom. MDLIX die Maii XXX vocatus ad concilium, recusavi prestare iuramentum, & omnino deprivatus. Afterwards being committed to his former prison, the Marshalsea in Southwarke near London, continued there in a cheerful and contented condition till the time of his death: which therefore made those that did not care for him, say, that he was like Dionysius the Tyrant of Syracuse, who being cruel and peremptory in prosperity, was both patient and pleasant in adversity. 'Tis said that Dr. Bonner being sometimes allowed liberty, he would walk, as his occasions served, in the street, and sometimes wearing his tippet, one begg'd it of him (in scoff) to line a coat, no (saith he) but thou shalt have a fools head to line thy cap. To another that bid him Good morrow Bishop quondam, he streight replied Farewel knave semper. Which answers are Epigrammatiz'd by an admired (d) Mule of our Nation in histime. When another Person shew'd the said Bonner his own picture in the Acts and Mon. of the Church, &c. commonly call'd the Book of Martyrs, on purpose to vex him, he merrily laugh'd and said a vengeance on the fool, how could he get my picture drawn so right? And when one asked him, if he were not ashamed to whip a Man with a beard, he laugh'd and told him, his beard was grown since, but (saith (e) he) if thou hadst been in his case, thou wouldst have thought it a good commutation of penance to have thy bum beaten, to save thy body from burning, &c. — He gave way to fate in the aforesaid Prison 5. Sept. in Fifteen hundred sixty and nine, and was at midnight buried near to the bodies of other Prisoners in the Cemetery belonging to St. Georges Church in Southwarke, in which Parish the Marshalsea is situated. He had caused formerly two of his Nephews (Sons of one of his Sisters before-mention'd) to be educated in Broadgates hall, one of which was named Will. Darbyshire, who, by his Uncles favour, became Prebendary of St. Pauls Cathedral, and dying in Broadgates, was buried in St. Aldates Church adjoining, 3. July 1552. The other was Tho. Darbyshire, who proceeded Doctor of Laws, as a Member of Broadgates, in 1555, under which year you may see more of him in the Fasts.

165. ANDREW KINGSMYLL Son of John Kingsmyll of Sidmanton in Hampshire, was born there, or in that County, elected Fellow of Allsouls Coll. from that of Corp. Chr. in 1558, studied the Civil Law, wherein he attained to a considerable knowledge, and was admitted to the reading of any Book of the Institutions in that faculty, in the beginning of the Year 1563. About that time also he exercised himself much in the Scriptures, and having a great memory, could readily rehearse memoriter in the Greek tongue St. Pauls Epistles to the Romans and Galatians, and St. Johns first Canonical Epistle, besides other Chapters of the Old and New Test. and several Psalmes.

(d) Sir Joh. Harrington in his Epigrams, lib. 4. Epig. 15. (e) See the same Author in his Brief view of the state of the Church of England, &c. London. 1653. p. 16.

He exercised himself also by writing of sundry matters that he might grow in judgment, readiness, and aptness to teach others, if at any time he should be called thereunto; whereof a little treatise entit. A view of Mans estate, &c. yieldeth some proof, which he wrot at about 22 years of Age. He esteemed not so much the preferment and profit, whereunto many ways he might easily have attained by the profession of the Law, as the comfortable assurance (which he usually urged) and blessed hope of life eternal. Wherefore to further himself therein, he sought not only the exact knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew tongues, but also for a time to live in some one of the best reformed Churches, where he might both by the doctrine and discipline of the Gospel, be dayly confirm'd in the true worship of God, and well prepared for the Ministry of the Church. For this end he settled in Geneva, where he remained the space of three years, being well liked by the learned and godly there. From thence he removed to Lozanne; where being too good for this world, ended this mortal life, leaving behind him a rare example of godliness among the Calvinistical Brethren there. He hath written,

A view of mans estate, wherein the great mercy of God in mans free justification is shewed. London. 1574. 1580 &c. oct.

A godly advice touching marriage. London. 1580. oct.

Excellent and comfortable treatise for all such as are any manner of way either troubled in mind or afflicted in body. London. 1578. oct.

Godly and learned exhortation to bear patiently all afflictions for the Gospel of Jes. Ch. (on Gal. 6. 14.)

Conference between a godly learned Christian and an afflicted conscience concerning a conflict had with Satan. All which, and I think a Sermon on S. Job. 3. 16. printed in oct. were published, after the Authors death, by his friend and contemporary Franc. Mylls a Kenish Man, M. of A. and Fel. of Alls. C. As for the Author, he surrendered up his last breath, in the prime of his years, at Lozanne, (and therefore the more lamented by the brethren,) in the Month of Sept. in Fifteen hundred sixty and nine, 1569: leaving behind him an excellent pattern of his virtues and piety, which all should, but few did, imitate. It must be now known that in the beginning of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the Univ. of Oxon was so empty (after the R. Cath. had left it upon the alteration of Religion) that there was very seldom a Sermon preached in the University Church called St. Mary, and what was done in that kind, was sometimes by Laurence Humpfrey President of Magd. C. and Thom. Sampson Dean of Ch. Ch. But they being often absent, a young Man of Allsouls Coll. would often step up and Preach to the admiration of all his auditors. This young Man, whom, as Sir Hen. Savile Warden of Merton Coll. (who came to the University in 1561.) use to stile the young Bachelour of Alls. Coll. I take to be Andrew Kingsmyll Bach. of Law, and none else.

WILLIAM TRESHAM Son of Rich. Tresham by Rose 166. his Wife, Daughter of Tho. Billing Esq; was born of, and descended from, a knightly Family of his name living at Newton in Northamptonshire, educated in Grammar and Logick in this University, elected Probat. Fellow of Merton Coll. in 1515, and at some years standing in the Degree of Master of Arts, he was unanimously chosen Registrar of this University, in the latter end of 1523. Afterwards he was made one of the Canons of the first foundation of the Coll. at Oxon. founded by K. Hen. 8. an. 1532, being about that time a Doctor of Div. and in great repute for his learning, as also much noted for his taking part with K. Hen. 8. in the matter of divorce from Qu. Catherine: And being also esteemed an active and forward Man, had the office of Commissary (the same now with that of Vicechancellor) of the University conferr'd upon him, which he executed with great commendation for several years. When K. Hen. 8. founded the Bishoprick of Oxon, and settled the Cathedral on the ruins of Osney Abbey, by his Charter dated the first of Sept. an. 1542 he made this Dr. Tresham one of the Canons, where continuing till the Cathedral was translated to his Coll. called Ch. Church, he was made the first Canon of the second Prebendship or Canonry there; and afterwards had under his name these things published.

which disputation hath been printed once at least among Pet. Martyrs works, but whether true according to the MS. copy in Corp. Ch. Coll. Library, I doubt it. 'Tis also translated into English, and printed with the disputations of Will. Cheadsey and Morg. Philipps — Lond. 1568 fol. After this disputation was concluded to his great credit, we find him to have suffered imprisonment several times in the Reign of K. Ed. 6. After Qu. Mary came to the Crown he had

A disputation with Archb. Cranmer, Bishop Ridley, and B. Latymer in the Div. School at Oxon. an. 1554. — Printed for the most part in Joh. Fox his Book of the Acts and Mon. of the Church, &c. At length after Qu. Eliz. came to the Crown, he was, for denying the Oath of Supremacy, deprived of his Canonry of Ch. Ch. in 1560, and committed to custody at Lambeth, with Matthew Archb. of Canterbury. Afterwards being released thence, upon security given that he would not concern himself in word or action for the future against the Religion then established, he retired to his rectory of Bugbrook in Northamptonshire, (confer'd upon him by the King 1541.) and remained there for some time; but at length was deprived of that also, as the records of the Registraries office belonging to the Church of Peterborough do testify. He paid his last debt to nature in Fifteen hundred sixty and nine, and was buried in the middle of the Chancel of the Church at Bugbrook before-mentioned, (saith (f) one who lived near his time) tho upon search in the register belonging to that Church, his name (perhaps upon neglect) is not to be seen therein. Of this zealous Person for the R. Cath. cause, I have several times made mention in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 268. a. b. 275. a. and in lib. 2. p. 257. b. 258. a. 422. a. 426. a. b. &c.

167. WILLIAM ALLEY received his first breath at Wycombe (Great Wycombe) in Bucks. was educated in Eaton School near to Windsore, admitted into Kings Coll. in Cambridge, in the Year 1528, took one Degree in Arts in that University, retired to Oxon, where he spent some time to make a farther progress in Academical studies. Afterwards he married, was beneficed, and became a zealous reformer: But when Qu. Mary came to the Crown, he left his cure, travelled from place to place in the North parts of England where he was not known, and by his sometimes practising of Physick and teaching of youths, he obtained a comfortable subsistence for himself and his Wife. When Qu. Eliz. succeeded, he read the Divinity Lecture in St. Pauls Cathedral in London: which being admirably well performed, he was called thence to be Bishop of Exeter; to which See being consecrated 14. Jul. 1560. had the Temporalities thereof (*) given to him 26. Aug. following. In Nov. 1561 he supplicated the venerable congregation of Regents of this University that the Degree of Bach. of Divinity might be conferr'd on him: which being granted, he supplicated for that of Doctor; and that being granted also, he was admitted to them both successively, without any mention at all of Incorporation. He was a Person Universally learned, especially in Divinity and in the tongues, Preached almost every Holy-day, and read a Lecture every day while he lived at Exeter. He hath written,

The poor mans Library, a rapodie or miscellany, in two tomes. The first containeth seven Lectures upon the first Epistle of St. Peter, read publickly in St. Pauls Cath. in London, an. 1560. The second containeth 5. Lectures upon the said first Epist. read in the same place. Lond. 1571. fol.

Hebrew Grammar — Whether ever printed, I know not. He took his last farewell of this world on the 15. day of April in Fifteen hundred and seventy, and was buried in the middle almost of the Presbytery or Choire, (not far from that place where Woolston one of his Successors was afterwards buried) leaving behind him a Son named Rog. Alley Archdeacon of Cornwall. Soon after was a Mon. put over his grave, with an inscription thereon, wherein 'tis said that he was acerrimus Evangelicæ veritatis propugnator, morum probitate præcelibris, bonarum disciplinarum mirabili scientia clarus, &c.

his first entry into the University, an. 1545 or thereabouts, and after the last foundation of Ch. Ch. had been finished by K. Hen. 8. he was soon after made a Student thereof, an. 1548. aged 18. where going through the usual Classes of Logick and Philosophy, proceeded M. of Arts, and was Junior of the Act celebrated in St. Maries Church, 18. Jul. 1552. From the time that he was first made Student of Ch. Ch. he always gave great hopes that he would prove a considerable Person in his time, being composed from his youth to gravity, and endowed with an acute genie and a quick vigor of mind. In 1560 he was made the second Canon of the second Prebendship of the said Church, was admitted to the reading of the Sentences the Year following, and afterwards became Doctor of D. Dean or Rector of Bocking in Essex, Archdeacon of Colchester (in the place, as it seems, of Joh. Pullayne deceased) and at length upon the translation of Dr. Edwyn Sandys from Worcester to London in 1570 he was nominated by the Queen to succeed him, but before consecration thereunto, he died. He was in his younger days a noted Poet and Comedian, and in his elder, an exact Disputant, and had an excellent faculty in speaking and preaching. He hath transmitted to posterity, Poemata varia. This ingenious Person died at Bocking before-mention'd, (having a little before resign'd his Canonship of Ch. Ch.) and was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, 22. Aug. in Fifteen hundred and seventy, saith the register belonging to that Church, which I suspect is false, because there was a commission (g) issued out from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury at Lond. to Margaret his Widow dated 21. Aug. 1570. to administer the goods, debts, and chattels of him the said Dr. Jam. Calphill lately Archd. of Essex (as there he is stiled) deceased. So I presume he died about the beginning of that Month.

JOHN BOXALL was born at Bramshott in Hampshire, educated in Grammar learning in W. of Wykeham's School near to Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New Coll. an. 1542, took the Degrees in Arts, being then accounted one of the subtlest Disputants in the University. Afterwards he entred into holy orders, but did not preach in the Reign of K. Ed. 6. When Qu. Mary came to the Crown, he was made Archdeacon of Ely, (in the place, as I suppose, of Dr. Hen. Cole) her Secretary of State, Prebendary of Winchester, and Warden of Winchester Coll. 1554, in the place of Joh. Whyte made B. of Linc. About that time being appointed one of the prime Preachers of the Nation to hold forth at Pauls Cross to revive the Catholick Religion, which had been eclipsed in K. Edwards Reign, had, while he was preaching, (as one (n) saith) a dagger flung at him, but I presume false, because the generality of writers say that that act was committed on Gilb. Bourne. In July 1557 he was made Dean of Peterborough in the place of Jam. Curthopp deceased, and on the 20. Dec. following he was installed Dean of Norwich in the place of Joh. Christopherson made B. of Chichester, and about the same time Dean of Windsore; in which place being installed, he was sworn Scribe or Registrary of the most noble order of the Garter 6. Feb. 1557. and the Year following was actually created D. of Div. and made Prebendary of York, and Sarum. After Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown he was depriv'd of the Deanery of Windsore (that of Norwich he gave up before Qu. Maries death) and George Carew succeeding him in 1559, he was admitted and sworn thereunto, 22. Apr. 1560. About that time he was also deprived of the Deanery of Peterborough, whereupon the Queen bestowed it on Will. Latymer D. D.

1560, which, together with the Church it self, he had likely to have lost upon information given to the Queen that it was ruinous and no prayers said therein, but upon better information from Latimer, the great Peer that begg'd it withdrew, and nothing more was done in the matter. As for Boxall, he being thus deprived, he was committed to free custody in the Archb. house at Lambeth, with Thirlby B. of Ely, Tonstall B. of Durham and others; but soon after being overtaken with a dangerous feaver, had liberty to go over the water to London, and settling in the house of a near relation recovered, and enjoyed himself in great retiredness for some years after. He is said by a noted (o) Author to have been a Person of great modesty, learning, and knowledge, and by another, (p) greater than he, that there was in him tantum à natura ingenta modestia comitasq; summa, qua quoscunque notos ad se diligendum astrinxit. One (q) of his perswasion, who highly extolleth him for his eloquence and learning, saith that he wrot several things, but they perishing with the Author, never saw light. The truth is, that in all my searches I could never see any thing under his name but a Latine Sermon, which he preached, as it seems, in London, where it was afterwards printed in oct. but upon what subject I cannot tell, nor any thing else of the Author, only that he died in London towards the latter end of the Year Fifteen hundred and seventy, for on the 28. March 1571. there was a Commission (q) granted from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury to Edmund and Rich. Boxall natural and legitimate brothers of him the said Job. Boxall Clerk, lately deceased in the City of London, to administer his goods, debts, Chattels, &c.

170. HUMPHREY LHUYD or Lloyd, Son and Heir of Rob. Lloyd alias Rossenball of the ancient Borough of Denbigh in Denbighshire, by Joan his Wife, Daughter of Lewis Pigott, was born at Denbigh before-mention'd, but in what house of learning in Oxon, he first of all applied himself to Academical studies, I know not: Sure it is, that after he had taken the Degree of Bach. of Arts, which was in 1547, I find him by the name of Humphrey Lloyd to be a Commoner in Brasenose Coll. and in the Year 1551 to proceed in Arts as a Member of that House; at which time, as it seems, he studied Physick, being then ripe in years. Afterwards retiring to his own Country, lived mostly within the walls of Denbigh Castle, practised his faculty, and sometimes that of Musick for diversion sake, being then esteemed a well bred Gentleman. He was a passing right Antiquary, and a Person of great skill and knowledge in British affairs. The learned Camden styles (b) him a learned Britaine, and for knowledge in Antiquities reputed by our Countrymen, to carry, after a sort, with him, all the credit and honour, &c. He hath written,

An Almanack and Kalender, containing the day, hour, and minute of the change of the Moon for ever, and the sign that she is in for these three years, with the natures of the signes and planets, with dyvers other thyngs, as it doth plainly appeare in the Preface — This was the first thing that our Author published, as it appears in the said Preface, but when, or where, it was printed, the imperfect copy, (which is in oct.) from whence I had the title, shews not.

nished and continued by David Powell — Lond. 1584. qu. (3) The treasure of health containing many profitable Medicines. Lond. 1585. oct. written by Pet. Hispanus. To which translation our Author Lloyd added the causes and signes of every disease, with the Aphorismes of Hippocrates. These are all, I think, that he hath written and translated, for among my searches I have seen no more, nor do I know any thing else of the Author, only that he paid his last debt to nature, about Fifteen hundred and seventy, and 1570. was buried in the Church of Whitchurch near Denbigh before-mention'd. Soon after was a Monument of Alabaster, set up in the wall, over his grave, to his memory: On which was portraied his Effigies in a praying posture, with a desk, and a book laying thereon, before him, a sword by his side, but nothing else military in his habit. Under his said Effigies is a plain free stone in the said wall, whereon are engraven eight barbarous English verses: The two first of which run thus.

Of Humphrey Lloyd Mr. of Art. A famus worthy Wight.*

In the last verse is mention made of an Epitaph annex'd, but where that was written, unless on the stone lying on his grave, (wherein probably the day and year of his death were set down) I cannot tell. Many years before his death he took to Wife Barbara Daughter of George Lumley and Sister to John Lord Lumley; by whom he had issue Splendian and John, who both died without issue, Henry an inhabitant of Cheame in Surrey, and Jane the Wife of Rob. Coymore.

LAURENCE VAUS, Vaux or Vaulx, so many ways I 171. find him written, was born near to Blackrode in Lancashire, received his Academical education in Oxon, partly, as it seems, in Queens Coll. but mostly in that of Corp. Ch. where he was either Clerk or Chorister, and much favoured by Jam. Brokes Fellow of that house. How long he continued there, or whether he took a Degree in Arts it appears not. About the Year 1540 he applied his studies to the Theological faculty and was made a Priest, being then esteemed (i) to be Vir eximia doctrinæ pro instruendâ in fide catholicâ juvenute. Afterwards he became Chaplain to the said Brokes when he was Bishop of Glocester, Warden of Manchester Coll. in his own Country on the death of George Collier (of the Family of the Colliers near to Stone in Staffordshire) in the beginning of the Reign of Queen Mary, and in 1556 he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences in this University. Upon the coming to the Crown of Qu. Eliz. and the reformation of Religion that followed, he left his preferment (in which Will. Byreb of the Family of Byreb hall in Lanc. succeeded 2. Eliz.) and went into Ireland, where he was dispoiled of all he had by thieves, and narrowly escaped death. Thence he went into the Low Countries, where, at Lovaine, he was made a Monk, as (k) one saith, of the order of St. Dionyse, meaning, I suppose, of the Cenobie of St. Dionyse, because there is no such order; where he wrot, Godly contemplations for the unlearned — These two last are printed with one, two, or more of the editions of the Catechisme.

Certain brief notes of divers godly matters — Printed with the Catechisme in 1583 — 99. oct. At length our Author Vaux making a return into England to propagate his, and strengthen others in, Religion, was apprehended, and imprisoned in the Gate-house at Westminster, where he (l) dyed in great necessity, about the Year, as I find (m) it reported, Fifteen hundred and seventy; but where 1570. buried, I cannot justly say, because the register of St. Margarets Church (wherein the Prison called the Gate-house before-mentioned is situated) makes no mention of him in that Year, three years before, or three years after, as I have been informed by the Letters of Dr. Simon Patrick Prebendary of St. Peters Church in the said City, and Dean of Peterborough, afterwards Bishop of Chester.

172. RICHARD SHAGENS who is written in one of our registers Schafines, was born in Ireland, became Fellow of Balliol Coll. in 1556 being then Bach. of Arts, a noted disputant and an excellent Philosopher. In 1560 he took the Degree of Master, and four years after resigning his Fellowship, he retired into his native Country, where he gained a good report for his noted parts in speaking and penning. Rich. Stanyburst his countryman saith (r) that he was afterwards Schoolmaster in Ireland and a learned and a vertuous Man, but telleth us not what he hath written, and therefore I suppose that what he did of that nature, was after Stanyburst had given the said character of him. Contemporary with this Shagens, or a little before, were Students in Oxon, these Irish Men following (1) Patrick Cusack a Gentleman born, who, after he had left Oxon was a Schoolmaster in Dublin, where his (s) admirable learning gave great light to his Country, but employed his studies rather in instructing of Scholars than in penning of Books. He wrot in Lat. Diversa Epigrammata. (2) One Dormer a Civilian, who was born at Rosse, and wrot (t) in Ballad royal The decay of Ross. (3) One Sheine, who wrot (u) De republica. See more among the Bishops, under the Year 1582 and in the Fasti, 1523. (4) Peter Lombard a most learned Man of his time, but did not take any Degree. See more of him in Pet. White among the writers, under the Year 1590. (5) Elias Sheth, who wrote Divers Sonnets. (6) One Taylor a Bach. of Arts, who proceeded in the University and wrot Epigrammata diversa. What his Christian name was I cannot justly say, because many of his Surname and time did proceed Masters in this University, as Tho. Taylor in 1539. Will. Taylor 1541. and 1551. and Tho. Taylor of Allf. Coll. 1563. Whether this last be the same Th. Taylor who was a Lancashire Man born and chosen Fellow thereof 1557. or another, chosen in 1562, I know not. Many other Irish Men were also conversant in studies here, even till an University was founded at Dublin, after which time we had but few.

173. JOHN STORIE, a most noted Civilian and Canonist of his time, was educated in Philosophical learning, and in the rudiments of the Civil Law in an ancient hostle for Civilians called Henxey hall in St. Aldates Parish in Oxon; where making great proficiency, he was admitted Bach. of the Civil Law in 1531. In 1535 when K. Hen. 8. first founded certain Lectures in the University, he appointed Joh. Storie to read that of the Civil Law, and in 1537 he became Principal of Broadgates hall, being also about that time Moderator of one of the Civil Law Schools. In 1538 he proceeded in his faculty, and afterwards performing excellent service at the Siege of Bologne in Picardie, in the administration of the Civil Law under the Lord Marshall there; the King in consideration thereof, did renew his former grant of the said Lecture in form of Letters Pat. for the term of life of the said John, in the Year 1546 or thereabouts, joyning with him for his ease, Mr. Rob. Weston Fellow of Allf. College. When Qu. Marie came to the Crown, she renewed his patent again, but soon after resigning his professorship, because he had got greater preferment at London, and the Chancellourship of the Dioc. of Oxon. if I mistake not, became a zealous Man in the Religion then professed, and an eager enemy against the poor Protestants, as the Histories of those times will tell you. I find published under his name these things following.

Oration against Th. Cranmer Archb. of Canterbury, in 1556.

Discourse with Joh. Philpot the Martyr about matters of Religion, and with others.

Answer to Examinations during his imprisonment in the tower of London, in 1570.

Speech at his execution at Tybourne 1^o June 1571. — with other things (of which some relate to his profession) that I have not yet seen. When Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown, he was imprisoned, but soon after broke out, and going beyond the Sea, continued an enemy to the Protestants there, became (r) a sworn servant to the Duke of Alva at Antwerp, and from him received a special commission to search the Ships for goods forfeited, and for English Books; in which service he did very great harm to the English Protestants. At length being invited under hand to search the Ship of one Parker an English Man, went unwarily therein: Whereupon Parker caulking the hatches to be shut when Storie was searching under deck, he hoisted sail and brought him Prisoner into England about the beginning of Decemb. 1570. So that being clap'd up close Prisoner within the Tower of London, did undergo there several examinations. At length being brought to a trial, and stedfastly denying to take the Oath of Supremacy (as he had done several times before within the Tower) he was drawn thence on a hurdle to Tybourne, on the first day of June in Fifteen hundred seventy and one, (having been prayed for and animated in his faith by Joh. Feckenham Prisoner in the said Tower) where, after he had spoken a large speech, which was unexpected, and therefore not interrupted, he was for a little time hanged; but before he was half dead, he was cut down, and when the Executioner cut off his privy members, he rose up with alacrity, and gave him a blow on the ear. But his bowels being soon after draw'd out of his belly, and his body quarter'd, his head was set upon London-bridge, and his quarters were hanged on 4 gates of the City. Several of his treasons and conspiracies against the English Nation you may see in a pamphlet printed in oct. an. 1571, bearing this title. A copie of a letter sent by a Gentleman, student in the lawes of the realm, to a friend of his concerning Dr. Storie. And what relates to him as praise worthy, you may see in Concertatio (a) Ecclesie Catholicae in Anglicana, taken from Nichol. Sanders his seventh Book De visibili Monarchia. His Martyrdom is imprinted, or represented (b) in the English Coll. at Rome, and he is called with the two Nortons, Joh. Felton and others, Saints. The Franciscans have a great respect for his memory also, because he had been a lay-brother of that Order, and had done several signal services for them.

174. JOHN JEWELL one of the greatest lights that the reformed Church of England hath produced, was born at Buden in the Parish of Berinerber in Devon. 24. May 1522. His Father was Joh. Jewell, and his Mother of the Family of the Bellamies, who sparing neither labour or charge for his education, was at length, by the care of Joh. Bellamie his uncle, educated in Grammar learning first at Branton, then at Southmoulton, and at length at Barnstaple, in his own Country, under one Walt. Bowen. In which last School being made ripe for the University, he was sent to Oxon. in July 1535 and being entred into Merton Coll. under the tuition of John Parkhurst, (afterwards B. of Norwiche) was by him made his Portionist, now called Postmaster, and by his care and severe tuition laid the foundation for greater learning that followed. In the Year 1539. after he (upon examination) had shew'd himself a youth of great hopes, he was admitted Scholar of C. C. Coll. 19. Aug. and the Year after was made Bach. of Arts. So that being put into a capacity by that Degree of taking Pupils, many resorted to him, whom he mostly instructed in private in Protestant principles, and in publick in Humanity, he being about that time Rhetorick reader in his Coll. In 1544 he was licensed to proceed in Arts, which he compleated in an Act celebrated 9. Feb. the same year. When K. Hen. 8. was dead, he shew'd himself more openly to be a Protestant; and upon P. Martyr's arrival at Oxon, to be an admirer and hearer of him, whose Notary he was when he disputed with Tresham, Cheadsey and Morgan. In 1550 he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, and during the Reign of K. Ed. 6. became a zealous promoter of reformation, and a Preacher and Catechiser at Sunningwel near Abendon in Berks. Soon after Qu. Mary came to the Crown, he was forced to leave the Nation, and retire first to Frankfort with Henry the eldest Son of Sir Franc. Knollys, Rob. Horne, and Edwyn Sandys, and afterwards to Strasburgh with Joh. Poyner, Edmund Grindal, Joh. Cheek, &c. After Qu. Maries death he returned in 1558, and in the Year following he was rewarded with the Bishoprick of Salisbury for his great learning and sufferings, being about that time appointed one of the Protestant Divines to encounter those of the

Romish perswasion when Qu. Elizabeth was about to settle a reformation in the Church of England. In 1560 he preached at Pauls cross on the second Sunday before Easter, on 1. Cor. 11. 23. For I have received of the Lord, that which also I have delivered unto you, &c. In which Sermon he shew'd himself the first, who made a publick challenge to all the Rom. Catholicks in the world, to produce but one clear and evident testimony out of any Father, or famous writer, who flourished within 500 years after Christ, for any one of the many articles which the Romanists at this day maintain against the Church of England, and upon any good proof of any such one allegation to yield up the bucklers and reconcile himself to Rome. Now tho Thom. Hardyng and some others undertook him about the controverted articles, yet, as those of the reformed party say, they came off so poorly, and Jewell on the contrary so amaz'd them with a cloud of witnesses in every point in question, that no (c) one thing in that age, gave the papacy so deadly a wound as the said challenge at Pauls cross, so confidently made and bravely maintain'd. Thus say the Protestant writers; but let us hear what a grand (d) zealot for the Romish cause saith concerning the said matter — 'After this Man (meaning B. Nich. Rydley) stepped to Pauls cross in the beginning of Qu. Elizabeths days, about the Year 1559 and 1560 Mr. Job. Jewell, otherwise called Bishop of Salisbury, and he proceeded yet farther in this brag and fiction, (meaning that what the Fathers said, made for the Protestants) for he protested there, even with feigned tears, that if any one authority, place, sentence or asseveration of any one Father, Doctor, Council, or authentical History, within the first 600 years after Christ, could be brought forth by any man living for any one of those points of Catholick Religion (which he there recited) to be in controversy, that then plainly and sincerely he would subscribe. Against which vain and shameless bragg, when Dr. Hardyng and divers other learned men of our side, began to write from Louayne, and to bring forth authorities of all Fathers, Doctors, Councils and Histories in great abundance, the first effect of this challenge, that appeared to the world, was a severe proclamation, that no such book written in English by the Catholick party should be received or read in England, under great punishments. By which Provision Mr. Jewell thinking meetly well defended, he plyed the pulpit often, and renewed his challenges many times, and perceiving notwithstanding that Dr. Hardyngs confutation was come into England, he answered the same with a long volume of Rhetorical words, and stuffed the Margent thereof with the shew of infinite Authors, as tho the whole world had been for him, and none for the other side: And with this he deceived the People then, and doth to this day, such I mean that have not commodity or learning, or other means to examine those places, and to find out the manifold lyes and falsifications therein contained. And this was the gain by all likelihood that Mr. Jewell pretended to his cause by that work, knowing full well that this sort of Men is far the greater, which would be gained and settled in his doctrine before the learned sort (who are but few in comparison of the other) could have time, books, and commodity to discover and refute him, and when they should do it, they should hardly be believed &c. — How many learned Men lightly of our Nation have taken upon them seriously to go over that book of Mr. Jewells, and to examine it by the Authors themselves with any indifferency of mind, have for the most part been thereby converted to Catholick Religion, though never so great Protestants before: Of which sort I have heard relation of many, but of some I can testifie my self, for that I have heard it from their own mouths, who of earnest Protestants were made most zealous Catholicks by that means principally; of which number I think it not inconvenient to name here some two or three, omitting others, which for just respects may not be named. The first of them is Sir Tho. Copley, made Lord afterwards in his banishment by the King of France, who oftentimes hath related unto one, with much comfort of his soul, how that being a zealous Protestant, and very familiar to Robert the late Earl of Leycester in the beginning of Qu. Elizabeths days, when Mr. Jewells book was newly come forth, he being also learned himself in the Latin tongue, took pains to examine certain leaves thereof, and finding many fallhoods therein, which were inexcusable (as they seemed to him) he conferred the same with the said Earl, who willed him that the next time Mr. Jewell dined at his table, he should take occasion after dinner to propose the same, which he did soon after: And receiving certain trifling answers from Mr. Jewell, he waxed more hot, and urged the matter more earnestly; which Jewell perceiving, told him in effect That Papists were Papists, and so they were to be dealt withal; and other answer he could not get. Which thing made the good Gentleman to make a new resolution with himself, and to take that happy course which he did to leave his Country and many great commodities, which he enjoyed therein, to enjoy the liberty of conscience, and so both lived and died in voluntary banishment, &c. The second example which I remember of mine own knowledge is Mr. Doctor Stevens, a learned Man yet alive, who being Secretary or Chaplain to Mr. Jewell, and a forward Man in the Protestant Religion at that time, espied certain false allegations in his Masters book, whilst it was under the print in London, whereof advertising him by Letters, (for that he supposed it might be by oversight) the other commanded notwithstanding the print to go forward, and passed it over as it was. Which this Man seeing, that had a conscience, and sought the truth indeed, resolved to take another way of finding it out: And having found it in the Cath. Church, where only it was to be found, he resolved also to follow it, and so he did, and went voluntarily into banishment for the same, where yet he liveth to this day in France, &c. — As for the third example, which is Will. Rainolds, I shall remember from my before quoted Author, when I come to speak of him, and in the mean time proceed to speak of Jewell. In the beginning therefore of the Year 1565, he, tho absent, was actually created Doctor of Div. and the year following, when the Queen was entertain'd by the Oxonian Muses, he shew'd himself a profound Theologist in moderating at Divinity disputations in St. Maries Church. The learned Camden (e) saith that he was a wonderful, great and deep Divine, a most stout and earnest maintainer of our reformed Religion against the adversaries, by his learned books. That he was a Man (f) of a singular ingenie, of exquisite erudition in Theologicals and of great piety. As for Jewells writings the titles of them follow.

Commentary upon the Epistle to the Galathians.

Com. on the Epist. of St. Peter. — At length this worthy prelate paying his last debt to nature at Monkton-Farley 23. Sept. in Fifteen hundred seventy and one, was buried almost in the middle of the Chaire of his Cathedral at Salisbury. At which time Giles Laurence Archdeacon of Wilts. preached the funeral Sermon, and Will. Holcot of Buckland in Berks. (formerly a Lay-preacher) administered at the funeral. See more of Joh. Jewells works in Joh. Garbrand under the Year 1589.

175. DAVID WHITEHEAD, a great light of learning and a most heavenly professor of Div. of his time, was of the same family with those of Tuderley in Hampshire, and, when at ripe years, was educated in all kind of learning and virtue in this (b) University, but whether in Brazenose or Alls. Coll. as some surmise, I find not. What Degrees he took it doth not appear, or whether he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, because in the latter end of Hen. 8. and all the time of K. Ed. 6. the publick registers are very imperfect. In the time of Hen. 8. he was Chaplain to Anna Bulleyne, by whose means he had some preferment in the Church; and in the beginning of Qu. Mary, he among several zealous Protestants went to Frankfort in voluntary exile; where, being in great esteem with the English congregation wrot, and answers to the objections of Dr. Rob. Horne concerning matters of discipline and worship. See there in p. 128. 129. &c. 146. 147. &c. After his return into England, he had a hand in the third edition of the English Liturgy, in 1559, and was chosen one of the Disputants against the R. Cath. Bishops. So that in his discourses shewing himself a deep Divine, the Qu. thereupon had so great an esteem for him, that she offer'd him the Archbishoprick of Canterbury, but he refused it, as about the same time he did the Mastership of the Hospital called the Savoy in the Strand near to London, affirming that he could live plentifully on the preaching of the Gospel without either. So that whether he had any spiritualities of note confer'd on him, is yet doubtful, he being much delighted in travelling to and fro to preach the word of God in those places, where he thought it was wanting. His life was spent in celibacy, as it became a true Theologist, and therefore the better esteemed by the Queen, who had no great affection for such Priests that were married. He was conducted by death to the habitation prepared for old age, in Fifteen hundred seventy and one, but in what Church, or Chappel buried, I know not. Take therefore this for his Epitaph, which was made by one (i) of his acquaintance.

THOMAS KEY or Cay, whose name, and the same 176. bearers of armes, tho they have continued for several generations at Woodsome or Woderstone and elsewhere in Yorkshire; yet I cannot say that this our Author was born there, because the statutes of Allsouls Coll. (of which he was Fellow) oblige the society to choose their Members from the Province of Canterbury. His Relations therefore having in his time (and perhaps before) lived in Lincolnshire, I shall appoint that County for his native place, but the house of Learning in Oxon. of which he was originally a student, I cannot assign, unless University Coll. Howsoever it is, sure I am, that he was in 1525 elected Fellow of Alls. Coll. being then about 3 years standing in the University, where running through the several Classes of Logick and Philosophy, took the Degrees in Arts, and made so great a proficiency in his studies, that he became an eminent Latinist, Grecian, Poet and Orator, excellent also for all kind of worth, and at length antiquitatum nostratum plane belluo, — as one (k) is pleased to stile him. In the Year 1534 he was unanimously chosen Scribe or Registrary of the University, being then esteemed most worthy of that place, because he had a command of his tongue and pen: For in his time, and long before, it was commonly the Registraries office to speech it before, and write Epistles (as the Orator doth now) to great personages. But as he was excellent in those matters, so to the contrary in the performance of his Registraries place. For whether it was upon a forelight of the utter ruin of the University, which was intended, as he thought, by the Reformers, (for he lived in the changeable times of Religion) or his being besotted with a certain crime, which he could not avoid till old age cured it, he became so careless in committing the acts of congregation and convocation to writing, that divers articles being publickly put up against him by the Masters, he was deprived of that place in 1552, and Will. Standish M. of A. of Magd. Coll. succeeded by virtue of the Kings Letters, sent to the University in Oct. 1543 for the next reversion of that office. In 1559 he was made Prebendary of Stratton in the Church of Sarum, by virtue of the Queens Letters, dated in Dec. the same year, in 1561 he was elected the Head or Master of Univ. Coll. (to which he was afterwards a considerable benefactor) and upon the death of Pet. Vannes, (whom I shall anon mention) which hapned in the beginning of 1563 he became Rector of the rich Church of Tredington in the County and Dioc. of Worcester: All which he kept to his dying day. Copies of it; one of them Mr. Tho. Allen of Gloucester-hall, and another Mr. Miles Windfore of Corp. Ch. Coll. had in their respective libraries. From one of which Copies, I remember formerly I took some notes, being then in other hands, but where either of those Copies are now, in truth I cannot tell. Our Author Tb. Key translated from Lat. into English Erasmus his Paraphrase on St. Mark, being that part of the New Test. which he was desired to translate by Qu. Catherine Parre. Also from English into Lat. The Sermons of Dr. Jo. Longland Bishop of Lincolne; from Greek into Lat. Aristotles book De mirabilibus mundi, dedicated to the Archbishop of Canterbury; Euripides his Tragedies, and the third oration of Isocrates, called Nicocles; with other things which I have not yet seen. At length arriving to the age of Man, he concluded his last day in his Lodgings in Univ. Coll. about the middle of the month of May in Fifteen hundred seventy and two, and was buried on the 20 of the same month under the North wall of the alley or isle, joyning on the North side of the body of the Church of St. Peter in the East, near to, and within, the East gate of the City of Oxon. Over his grave, tho there was never any Epitaph to celebrate his memory, yet certain noted (l) Poets of his time have done it in their respective works, by Encomia's and Epigrams, to which I refer the curious reader, as they are cited in the margin. As for Pet. Vannes, whom I have before-mention'd, he was the Son of Steph. de Vannes of the City of Luca in Italy, was brought into England by Andrew Ammonius his Mothers brother, and made Secretary of the Latin tongue to K. Hen. 8. who sent him to Rome with Steph. Gardiner and others, to sollicite the Pope for a divorce from Qu. Catherine. In the Year 1527. March 5. he was made Prebendary of South Grantsbam in the Church of Sarum, upon the resignation of one Will. Burbanke, and in 1529. Dec. 4. Preb. of Bedwyn in the same Church, on the resignation of Thom. Winter. In 1534 he was made Archdeacon of Worcester in the place of Dr. Will. Cleybroke deceased, and the same year Feb. 25. was admitted Preb. of Bool in the Church of York. In Feb. 1539, he, by virtue of the Kings Letters, became Dean of Salisbury, but whether in the place of Reymund Pade who obtained that Deanery in Janu. 1522. I cannot tell, nor do I know yet to the contrary, but that he was deprived of that Dignity in the beginning of the Reign of K. Edw. 6. because that one Tbo. Cole is said (m) to be Dean of Salisbury in that Kings time. Howsoever it is, sure I am that Vannes was Dean in the time of Qu. Mary, and beginning of Qu. Elizabeth, and that several years before, viz. in 1543. March 12. he was made Preb. of Sbipston (Sbipston under wood) in the said Ch. of Sarum, on the death of Dr. Job. London, that in 1545 he occurs one of the Canons of the Coll. of K. Hen. 8. at Oxon, and soon after Rector of Tredington in the Dioc. of Worcester. On the sixth day of May 1563 he resigned his Deanery of Salisbury, and in few days after died either in London or Westminster, leaving then all his wealth to his heir called Benedict Hudson alias Vannes. This Peter Vannes being well known to Job. Leland, he is therefore by him (n) numbred among* the famous Men living in the Reign of K. Hen. 8. He was also much in favour with Cardinal Wolsey, to whom he wrot divers letters while he continued in Rome an. 1528 giving him an account of the affairs of that place, and how matters went relating to the divorce between K. H. 8. and Qu. Catherine.

JOHN CLEMENT had his original education in 177. this University, but in what house, it appears no more, than the place where he was born, which is altogether, as yet, unknown to me. Afterwards being acquainted with Sir Tbo. More for the pregnant parts that were visible in him, was by him appointed to be tutor to his Children, and afterwards to Margaret his Daughter. About the Year 1519 he settled in Corp. Ch. Coll. being about that time constituted (n) by Card. Wolsey his Rhetorick reader in the University, and afterwards that of Greek; both which he performed with great applause to the benefit of the Academians. In the Reign of K. Ed. 6. he being then one of the Coll. of Physicians at London, he left his native Country for Religion sake, and then, if I mistake not, he took the Degree of Doctor of Physick beyond the Seas. Afterwards, returning in the time of Qu. Mary, he practised his faculty with good success in Essex near London, but when Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown, and a reformation of Religion followed, he left England once more, and spent the remainder of his days beyond the Seas. He hath written, Epigrammatum & aliorum carminum, lib. 1. And did translate from Gr. into Lat. (1) The Epistles of Greg. Nazian. (2) The Homilies of Nicephorus Calixtus of the Greek Saints. (3) The Epistles of Pope Celestin the first, to Cyrill Bishop of Alexandria, besides other matters which I have not yet seen. He died at Mechlin in Brabant (the place wherein he had lived several years, and had practised his faculty) on the first day of July in Fifteen hundred seventy and two, and was (o) buried near to the tabernacle in St. Rumbolds Church there, and close to the grave of his sometimes beloved Wife Margaret, who died 6. July 1570, I mean that Margaret, on whose Marriage with Jo. Clement, the Antiquarian (p) Poet hath bestowed a Song.

THOMAS HARDYNG was born at Beconton in 178. Devonsh. educated in Wykeham's School near Winchester, became true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. (after he had served two years of probation) an. 1536, took the Degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1542, at which time being esteemed a knowing Person in the Tongues, he was by the favour of K. Hen. 8. made Hebrew Professor of the University, and shortly after became Chaplain to Hen. Grey Marquess of Dorchester, afterwards Duke of Suffolk. In the Reign of Ed. 6. he was a Protestant, and seemed forward (*) for a reformation, but after his death and Qu. Mary's settlement in the throne, he wheeled about, became Prebendary of Winchester, proceeded in Divinity, and on the 17. Jul. 1555 was made Treasurer of the Church of Salisbury, in the place of Rich. Arche. After Qu. Elizabeth had for some time swayd the Scepter, he was deprived of his Treasurership, and Tbo. Lancaster (the same Person, I think, who had been deprived of the Bishoprick of Kildare in the Reign of Queen Mary for being married) was put into it in the beginning of Jan. 1559. So that our Author Hardyng relinquishing his other Spiritualities, (all matters being then involved in controversies) he upon pretence of some danger that was likely to ensue, went beyond the Seas to Brabant, where settling at Lovaine, he became the target of Popery, and a zealous assertor of his Religion in writing these Books following.

Answer touching certaine untruths which Mr. Jo. Jewell charged him with, in his late Sermon at Pauls cros, 8. Jul. 1565. Antw. 26. Jul. 1565 in qu. and oct. with other things which I have not yet seen. Most of the afore mentioned books, were by his Countryman Will. Rainolds turned into Latin, but money being wanting, their publication was therefore hindered. This learned Man Dr. Har. dyng died at Louaine in the sixtieth Year of his Age, or thereabouts, in Fifteen hundred seventy and two; whereupon his body was buried in the Church of St. Gertrude there, on the 16 day of Septemb. the same year. Soon after was a monument with a large inscription thereon, set over his grave; a Copy of which I have (q) seen, as also a great Encomium of him by one (r) who well knew him, which, for brevity sake, I shall now omit.

179. JOHN HALES or Hayles a younger Son of Tho. Hales of Halesplace in Halden in Kent, was born in that County, and commonly called Club-foot Hales, because in his younger days he had got that deformity by a wound from his own dagger at the bottom of his foot. This Person being very much addicted to Letters from his childhood, was sent to this University for a time, but to what Coll. unless to that of Brasnose (wherein several of his Sirname and time studied) I know not. Yet so it was that he having a happy memory, accompanied with incredible industry, became admirably well skill'd in the Lat. Greek, and Hebrew tongues, and at length in the municipal Laws, and in Antiquities; which made him admired by all ingenious Men of his time. In the Reign of K. Hen. 8. he was Clerk of the Hamper for several years, obtained a fair estate in Warwickshire and elsewhere upon the dissolution of Monasteries and Chantries, founded a Free-School at Coventry, and for the use of the youth to be taught there, did write,

Introductiones ad Grammaticam. — partly in Engl. and partly in Latin. He wrot also,

High way to Nobilitie. Lond. in qu. And about that time translated into English Precepts for the preservation of good health. Lond. 1543. oct. written by Plutarch. When Qu. Mary came to the Crown he fled beyond Sea as a voluntary Exile, and settling at Frankfort in Germany we find him a zealous Man for the uniting of the Exiles there in peace. See more in a book entit. A brief discourse of the troubles at Frankford in Germany. printed 1575. in qu. p. 44. 45 &c. 92. &c. When Qu. Elizabeth succeeded he returned, and the first thing that made him then to be noted was,

An Oration to Qu. Eliz. at her first entrance to her Reigne, an. 1558. — It was not spoken, but delivered in writing to her by a certain noble Man. The beginning of it is, Albeit there be innumerable gifts, &c.

He also wrot a little book in favour of the house of Suffolk, especially of the Children of Edw. Seymour Earl of Hertford, eldest Son of Edward Duke of Somerset, who was married to the Lady Cath. Grey, Dau. of Hen. Duke of Suff. (of near alliance in blood to the Queen) in his house in Chanon row within the City of Westminster, in Oct. 1560. The effect of which, was to derive the title of the Crown of England, in case Qu. Eliz. should die without issue, to the house of Suffolk. This Marriage, notwithstanding the Archb. of Cant. did by his sentence pronounce unlawful, yet our Author Hales, who was esteemed a Man very opinotive, tho otherwise very learned, did maintain in the said book that their sole consent did legitimate their conjunction. Which pamphlet flying abroad, came straight way to the Court: Whereupon the Queen and the Nobles being highly offended, the Author was quickly discovered, and forthwith imprison'd in the Tower of London. Soon after Sir Nich. Bacon then Lord Keeper was presumed to have had a finger in it, for which he was like to have lost his office, if Sir Ant. Browne who had been L. Ch. Justice of the Common-pleas in Qu. Maries time, would have accepted of it; which her Majesty offer'd to him, and the Earl of Leycester earnestly exhorted him to take it; but he refused it, for that he was of a different Religion from the State; and so Sir Nic. Bacon remained in his place, at the great instance of Sir Will. Cecil, (afterwards L. Treasurer) who, tho he was to be privy to the said book, yet was the matter so wisely laid upon Hales and Bacon, that Sir Will. was kept free, thereby to have the more authority and grace to procure the others pardon, as he did. Soon after Jo. Lesley Bishop of Ross, a great creature of Mary Queen of Scots, did answer that Book, for which he got the good will of many, tho, of others, not. As for our Author Hales, he gave way to fate on the fifth of the calends of January in Fifteen hundred seventy and two; whereupon his body was buried in the Chancel of the Church of St. Peter's poor in London. He died without issue, so that his estate which chiefly laid in Warwickshire, of which his principal house in Coventry, call'd Hales place, otherwise the White Fryers was part, went to John, Son of his Brother Christopher Hales, (sometimes also an Exile at Frankfort) whose posterity doth remain there to this day.

ELIZE HEYWOOD sometimes written Ellis Hee. 180. wood, Son of Job. Heywood the famous Epigrammatist, was born in London, and by the indulgence of his Father was carefully educated in juvenile learning in that City, and in Academical in Oxon. In 1547 he was elected Probationer-Fellow of Allsouls Coll. where spending some time in Logicals and Philosophicals, he applied his genie to the study of the Laws, in which faculty he took one degree, an. 1552, being the sixth year of K. Ed. 6. Afterwards he travelled into France and Italy, continued for some time at Florence, being patroniz'd by Card. Pole; and became such an exact Master of the Italian tongue, that he wrot a book in that Language entituled, Il Moro, lib. 2. Fiorenz. 1556 in octavo. This book which is dedicated to the said Cardinal contains a discourse, fancied to be in the house of Sir Tho. More sometimes L. Chanc. of England, and in consolation with him. Besides this book, he wrot, as 'tis said, other things in Italian, or in Lat. or in his mother tongue, which being printed beyond the Sea, we seldom or never see them in these parts. About that time our Author receiving instructions concerning matters of faith from an English Man called Hall, he went into the Low Countries, and at Antwerp performed the office of Preacher, and Prefecthip of the spirit. Thence he went to Louaine, where he died in the twelfth year, after his ingress into the society of Jesus; which was about Fifteen hundred seventy and two. 1572. He had a younger brother named Jasper, bred also in Oxford, and leaving the Nation for Religion sake, entred himself into the said Society, as I shall tell you under the Year 1597. num. 295.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, or Grimald received his 181. first being in this world in Huntingdonshire, and his first Academical education in Christs Coll. in Cambridge, where taking the Degree of Bach. of Arts, went to Oxon, and was incorporated there in the said Degree in Apr. 1542. In the next month he was chosen Probationer-Fellow of Merton Coll. he being then in the 23 year of his age. In 1544 he proceeded in Arts, and 1547 when the Coll. of King Hen. 8. was to be settled and replenished with Students, he was put in there as a Senior, or Theologist, (accounted then only honorary) and the rather for this reason, because he about that time, did read a publick Lecture to the Academians in the large refectory of that place. All that I have yet seen of his writings are these.

Vicars, Archdeacons, Deans, &c. for living remote from their Flocks, and for not performing the duty belonging to their respective offices. He hath also divers Lat. and English copies of verses, occasionally printed before, and in commendation of, other Mens works; and has also translated from Lat. into English, Cicero's three books of duties to Marcus his Son. Lond. 1558. oct. with other things from Greek. He was in great esteem among Men in the fifteenth year of Qu. Elizabeth.

182. LEWIS EVANS was a Monmouthshire Man born, as it seems, and mostly educated in Oxon: Afterwards being a forward and zealous Man for the R. Cath. Religion at London (where he had got some employment) was brought into trouble by Dr. Grindal Bishop of that place. So that being forced to fly, he went beyond the Sea, and settled for a time at Antwerp: where to shew his zeal for the cause, he translated a Book from Lat. into English, entitled Certaine tables set forth by Will. Bishop of Rurimund in Gelderland, wherein is detected and made manifest the dotting dangerous doctrine, and baynous heresies of the rash rablement of the hereticks. This book was by Lew. Evans entit.

The betraying of the beastliness of the Hereticks, &c. Antw. 1565 in tw. Afterwards the said Evans being reconcil'd to the Ch. of England by some of his friends; did, to shew his zeal for the love he had to it, write and publish a book as full of ill language against the Roman Catholics, as the other was as full of good for them, entitled.

The Castle of Christianity, detecting the long erring estate, as well of the Rom. Church, as of the Bishop of Rome. Lond. 1568. oct. Which being dedicated to Queen Elizabeth. he saith in his Epistle to her, that he himself had once drank of the puddle of ignorance, of the mud of idolatry, of the pond of superstition, &c. whereupon great distast being taken by the R. Catholics, the common report flew abroad by their endeavours, that he was gone over again to the Church of Rome, in which being settled, he died in great ease and content. These reports being often told to Evans while he was in Oxon, by the learnedest there, he soon after published a book entit.

The hateful hypocrisie and rebellion of Romish Prelates. Lond. 1570 in tw. to which he added these two treatises following:

A view of certaine rebellions and their ends.

Four paradoxes. First a Bishop and a Minister is all one. (2) A Bishop, &c. — Afterwards, if I mistake not, our Author Evans was a Schoolmaster, and was the same Person, I think, that revised and increased with phrases and necessary additions, A short dictionary for young beginners, compiled at first by John Wubals, and by him published at Lond. 1566. in qu. but when the additions of Evans came out, I find not. Afterwards the said Dictionary was augmented with more than 600 rythmical verses (whereof many are proverbial) by Abr. Flemmyng a native of London, printed at Lond. 1594. qu. In my travels and searches I find one Lew. Evans a Flintshire Man, to be a Student of Ch. Ch. in the time of Ed. 6. and to have taken the Degrees in Arts, (that of Master being compleated 1557) but this Person, I presume, is not the Author, because the Author doth not stile himself in his Books Bach. or Master of Arts. Another Lew. Evans a Brecknockshire Man, became Fellow of Oriel C. an. 1566, Mast. of Arts 1570 and resign'd his Fellowship 1577. A third, who was a Monmouthshire Man, was matriculated as a Member of Gloc. hall, 1574, aged 28. And a fourth also I find to be a Minister of God's word, who in the 31 year of his age, or more, was matric. as a member of the same Hall, and as a Native of Monmouthshire, an. 1581. and in 1585 took the Deg. of M. of A. Whether either of these was the Author before-mentioned, is to me as yet doubtful, or whether the same with Lew. Evans, who, by the favour of Dr. Pier. B. of Sarum became Prebend of Warmister, in that Church, an. 1583, (which he resigned in May 1598) I cannot tell: or whether the same with Lew. Evans Clerk, Parson of Westmeane in Hampshire, who died there, about the beginning of 1601, leaving then behind him a Wife and Children, and houses in Winchester.

JOHN PARKHURST Son of George Parkhurst, was born at Guildford in Surrey, sent, when very young, to Oxon, where he was educated in Grammar learning in the School joyning to Magd. Coll. common gate, under the famous (†) Mr. Thom. Robertson, was elected Probationer-Fellow of Merton Coll. in 1529, and three years after proceeding in Arts, entred into holy orders, tho better then for poetry and oratory, than Divinity. At length he became Rector of the rich Church of Cleve (called by some Bishops Cleve) in Gloucestershire, where he did a great deal of good by his hospitality and charity. After the death of K. Ed. 6. he left all for Religion sake, and went into voluntary exile to Zurich, where remaining till the death of Qu. Mary, not without great dangers and afflictions, returned when Qu. Eliz. succeeded, and was by her made Bishop of Norwiche: To which See being elected 13. Apr. was consecrated on the first of Sept. and installed by John Salisbury Dean of that Church, 27 of the same month, an. 1560, and about six years after was made D. of D. He hath written and published, Epigrammata in mortem duorum fratrum Suffolciensium, Caroli & Henrici Brandon. Lond. 1552. qu. They were the Sons of Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolke, and died of the sweating sickness. Some of which Epigrams were afterwards published in his Ludica, which I am now to mention.

Ludica sive Epigrammata juvenilia. Lond. 1573. qu. Which book tho written in his younger days, and contains therein more obscurity than the Epigrams of Martial (as some say, tho I my self cannot perceive it) yet while he was Bishop he must needs have it printed, alledging that he would not be like Heliodorus to lose his Bishoprick for it. He also view'd, took pains about, and published John Shepreve his Disticks on the New Test. and added thereunto of his own, Epigrammata Seria. Lond. 1560. oct. Most of which seem to be taken from his former book, while it remained in MS. See more in Job. Shepreve, under the Year 1542. At length this Bishop yielded up his last breath in Fifteen hundred seaventy and four, and was buried in the body or middle Isle of the Cath. Ch. at Norwiche. Over his grave was soon after a fair monument of marble raised between two pillars on the S. side of the said middle Isle: on which Mon. was his proportion engraven on bras, with a gown and square capon, holding his hands together in a praying posture, with this inscription engraven on bras also, but taken away in the civil war. Johannes Parkhurstus Theologiae professor, Gylfordiae natus, Oxoniae educatus, temporibus Mariae Reginae pro nitida conscientia Tigurinae vixit exul voluntarius. Postea praesul factus, sanctissime hanc rexist ecclesiam 16 annis, & mortuus est secundo die Februarii, an. 1574. aetatis suae 63. Another inscription which is on one of the said pillars runs thus. Viro bono, docto ac pio Johanni Parkhursto Episcopo vigilantissimo, Georgius Gardiner posuit hoc. Which George (*) Gardiner, who was D. of D. was installed Dean of Norwiche 24. Dec. 1573, in the place of John Salisbury deceased. Ralf Gualter, Father and Son, both of Zurich, and entirely beloved of this our Author Parkhurst have written (a) Epicedes on his death; which, if they could be procured, (being very scarce) might satisfy a curious reader concerning some actions of him the said Parkhurst.

LEONARD DIGGES second Son of James Digges 184. of Digges Court in the Parish of Berham in Kent, by Philippa his second Wife Daughter of John Engbam of Chart in the said County, was born in the Province of Kent, particularly, as it seems, at Digges Court, educated for a time in this University, (but in what house, unless in Univ. Coll. I know not) where laying a foundation of greater learning, departed without a Degree, and afterwards became a most excellent Mathematician, a skilful Architect, and a most expert surveyour of Land. At length left it should be thought that he studied only for himself, and not for the benefit of others, he published a book entit. Tetragonicon: Briefly shewing the exact measuring, and speedy reckoning of all manner of lands, squares, timber, stones, steeples, &c. Lond. 1556. qu. Augmented, and published again by his Son Tho. Digges — Lond. 1592. qu.

(†) Vide in Epigram. Jo. Parkhurst, p. 28. (*) The said Dr. Gardiner was buried on the S. side of the South ile of the Cath. Ch. of Norwiche; over whose grave was this inscription put in an arch of the wall. Georgius Gardiner Barvici natus, Cantabrigiae educatus primo minor canonicus, 2º Praebendarius, 3º Archidiaconus, Nordovic, & demum 28. Nov. an. 1573 factus est sacellanus D. Reginae & Decanus hujus Ecclesiae, in quo loco per 16 annos arexit. He died in winter time, 1589. (a) Edit. Tiguri 1576. in qu.

Printed there again 1647 qu. Our Author Leon. Digges wrot also,

A Geometrical practical treatise named Pantometria, in 3. bookes. — Which being attempted in his younger years, his said Son Thomas supplied such parts of it after his death, as were left obscure and imperfect, adjoining thereunto, A discourse Geometrical of the five regular and Platonical bodies, containing sundry Theoretical and Practical propositions arising by mutual conference of these solides, Inscription, Circumscription, and Transformation. Lond. 1591. fol.

Prognostication everlasting, of right good effect: or, choice rules to judge the weather by the Sun, Moon, Stars, &c. Lond. 1555-56. and 64. qu. corrected and augmented by his said Son Thomas, with divers general tables and many compendious rules — Lond. 1592. qu. what else he wrot, I find not, nor certainly when he died, unless about the Year Fifteen hundred seventy and four, or whether his death was at Eltham in Kent, or at another place. There is some memory of him and his Family (in whose veines hereditary learning doth seem to run) on a Monument in Chilham Church in Kent, not to shew that he was buried there, but to shew the genealogie of his Family, set up by his Grandson Dudley Digges (of whom I shall make mention in 1638) which being too long for this place, I shall pass it by at present for brevity sake.

185. RICHARD WILLS who in his books writes himself Willeius, which is the reason why some call him Willey, was a Western Man born, educated in Grammar learning in Wykeham School near to Winchester, and in Academi- cal for a time, in his Coll. at Oxon, but before he took a Degree, or was made Fellow, he left the University, and travelled into France, Germany and Italy; where spending some years in several Universities, return'd an accom- plish'd Gentleman: And being noted for his admirable dexterity, and honorable advance in the Latine Empire, as Joh. Brownswerd was at the same time, wrot and published,

Poematum liber ad Gul. Baronem Burghleium.

De re poetica disputatio.

In suorum poemat. Librum Scholia.

With other things, as 'tis probable, but such I have not yet seen. In the Year 1574 Apr. 24. he by the name and title of Rich. Wills Master of Arts of the University of Mentz in Bavaria, supplicated the ven. congregation of Regents that he might be incorporated into the same De- gree in this University; but the said Regents suspecting his opinions, did grant his desire conditionally. (1) That he produce a testimony of his creation under the seal of the University of Mentz. (2) That he render a testimo- ny of his faith before the Vicechanc. and Proctors, and Clar. 1574. (3) That he acknowledge the Queen to be his legitimate Governess, or Monarch of all England, &c. whether he performed these conditions, or was really incorporated, appears not in any of the registers.

186. RICHARD TAVERNER Son of Joh. Taverner of Brisley in Norfolke, was born at Brisley, or else in that County, in the Year 1505, descended from an ancient Family of his name living sometimes at North Elmham near to Brisley before-mentioned, educated for a time in Logick in Bennet Coll. in Cambridge, but before he had consummated an year and an half there, did, with others of that University go to Oxon. for preferment about the same time that Card. Wolsey did begin his Coll. there. At length being admitted one of the Junior Canons of that Coll. he took the Degree of Bach. of Arts in the Year 1529 and about that time obtaining a competent know- ledge in Philosophy, the Greek tongue and Divinity, left Oxon some time before the said Coll. came into the Kings hands by Wolseys fall, and forthwith went to an Inn of Chancery near London call'd Staire Inn, otherwise Strond Inn, (pulled down when Edw. D. of Somerset built Somerset house in the Strond or Strand) and thence to the Inner Tem- ple (for before his time and some years after, students were not admitted into the Inns of Court, before they had read the ground of Law in one of the Inns of Chancery) where his humour was to quote the Law in Greek, when he read any thing thereof. In 1534 he went to the Court, and was there taken into the attendance of Tho. Cromwell then Principal Secretary to K. Hen. 8. by whose commen- dation, he was afterwards made by the said King one of the Clerks of the Signet in ordinary, an. 1537. Which place he kept till the first of Q. Mary, having been in good repute not only with K. Hen. 8. but also with K. Edw. 6. and most of all with Edw. Duke of Somerset Lord Prote- ctor. In 1552, he, tho a mere Lay-man, obtained by the name of Rich. Taverner Master of Arts (being Master of Arts of both the Universities) a special licence sub- scribed by K. Ed. 6. to Preach in any place of his domi- nions, and the more for this reason because the scarcity and slackness of Preachers was so great, that some of the Kings Chaplains were appointed to ride circuit about the Kingdom to preach to the People, especially against Po- pery. I have been informed by some notes of him, writ- ten by his (b) Grandson, that he preached before the King at Court, and in some publick places in the King- dom, wearing a velvet bonnet or round cap, a damask gown, and a chain of gold about his neck; in which ha- bit he was seen, and heard, preaching several times in St. Maries Church in Oxon. in the beginning of Qu. Eliz. In like manner other Lay-Gentlemen, such that had been educated in the Universities, did either preach, or else write books concerning controversies in Religion, or else make translations from Divinity books. Will. Holcot of Buckland in Berks. Esq; (whom I have mention'd in Joh. Jewell) sometimes of Univ. Coll. was often seen in the same habit in Pulpits in London, and in his own Country, and would often give the printed Catechismes in the book of Common-Prayer to Children as he walked in London streets to learn without book, and would after call out those children and examine them, and for encouragement would give, especially to the poorer sort of them, money, silk points, ribbands, &c. Sir Tho. More also, after he was called to the bar in Lincolns Inn, did for a considerable time read a publick Lecture out of St. Austin De civitate Dei, in the Church of St. Laurence in the Old Jewrie, to which the learned sort in the City of London would re- sort. Afterwards also, when he was L. Chanc. of Eng- land, he wrot treatises against the Lutherans, and when at home on Sundays he would sit in the choir in a surplice and sing service. But to return; as for our Author Rich. Taverner, he, for security sake when Qu. Mary came to the Crown, did recede to his house called Norbiton hall in Surrey, where he mostly continued all her Reign. But when Qu. Elizab. succeeded, he presented to her a gratu- latory Epistle in Latin; by which being made more known to her than formerly, she had so great respect for, and confidence in, him, that she not only offer'd to him the Degree of Knighthood, but put him into the com- mission of peace for the County of Oxon, (wherein he had several mannors that had belonged to religious houses) entrusted him with a considerable share of the concerns thereof, and in the 12 Year of her Reign, Dom. 1569 made him High Sherriff of the said County. In which office he appeared in St. Maries Pulpit with his sword by his side (as 'tis said) and a chain of gold hanging about his neck and preached to the Scholars a Sermon (there be- ing then a great scarcity of Divines in the University) beginning thus. Arriving at the mount of St. Maries, in the stony (c) stage where I now stand, I have brought you some five biscuits; baked in the oven of charity, carefully conserv'd for the chickens of the Church, the sparrows of the spirit, and the sweet swallows of salvation, &c. Which way of preach- ing was then mostly in fashion, and commended by the generality of Scholars. This Rich. Taverner hath written and published,

The sum or pith of the 150 Psalmes of David, redu- ced into a forme of prayers and meditations, with other certaine godly orisons, &c. Lond. 1539. oct.

Recognition or correction of the Bible after the best exemplars. Lond. 1539 fol. Allowed to be publicly read in Churches in the English tongue, with an Epist. dedic. to the King, whose servant Taverner then was. But after the death of the Lord Cromwell the Kings Secretary, an.

Owen* was Vicechanc. about 1654, and a framed pulpit of wood was set on the pedestal that upheld the frame of stone.

1540, the Bishops caused the Printers of the Bible in the Engl. tongue to be imprison'd and punished, and this our Author for his labours was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London; but he so well acquitted himself, that he was shortly after released, and restored to his place in Court and in the Kings favour.

He also translated from Lat. into English (1) Rob. Capito (Grosthead) his prayers on the Psalms. Lond. 1539. oct. (2) Confession of the Germans exhibited to the Emperour Charles 5. in the Councell of Augusta in the Year 1530, to which is added, The Apologie of Melancton of the said confession. Lond. 1536 in oct. Translated at the command of the Lord Cromwell Lord Privy Seal, (3) Common places of Scripture orderly and after a compendious forme of teaching, &c. Lond. 1577. oct. Written by Erasmus Sarcerius (4) An introduction to a Christian concord and unite in matters of Religion. Translated from Erasm. Roterd. De sciendi ecclesiae concordia. Which translation was done by our Author upon K. Hen. the eighth, his coming into the Parliament house an. 1545, at which time he exhorted the members thereof (of which number R. Taverner our Author was one) to charity, unity and concord. At length after he had lived beyond the age of Man, and had been a zealous promoter of reformation and the Protestant Religion, laid down his head in peace, and willingly resign'd up his last breath at Wood-eaton near to, and in the County of, Oxford, in the man- nour-house now standing there, (which he did build from the ground, about 1544) on the 14 day of July in Fif- teen hundred seventy and five. Whereupon his body be- ing conveyed to the Church there by two Heralds or Of- ficers of Arms about 5 days after, was buried in the Chan- cel with great solemnity near to the body of his first Wife Margaret. Soon after the said Officers caused to be hung up, on the North wall of the said Chancell, an helmet, standard, pennon and other cognisances belonging to Es- quires. All which continued there several years after the Restauration of K. Ch. 2. and then were pulled down by Mr. Job. Nourse the Lord of that manour, to make room for a monument and banners for his Relations. He the said Rich. Taverner had married two wives; the first was Margaret Dau. of Wals. Lambert Esq. by whom he had se- veral Sons, whose male issue is now, as I conceive, worn out, except that of Peter his second Son of Hexton in Hert- fordsh. His second Wife was Mary Daughter of Sir Job. Harcourt, of the noble and antient family of the Harcourts of Stanton-Harcourt in Oxfordshire, by whom having only one Daughter that survived, named Penelope, she was married to my Grandfather (by the Mothers side) nam- ed Robert La Petite, commonly called Pettie, of Wisford near to Henlie, and of Costesford near Bister, in Oxford- shire Gentleman, a younger Son of Job. Pettie of Tetsworth and Stoke-Talmache near Thame in the said County Esq. The next Brother in order to the said Rich. Taverner, was named Roger, born in Norfolk also, and educated for a time in Cambridge, afterwards Surveyour general on this side of the river Trent of the Kings woods to Hen. 8. Ed. 6. and Qu. Elizabeth, who in the Year 1560 wrot a (e) book De fame, viz. of the means to prevent famine in this land, dedicated to Qu. Elizab. who delivering it to Dr. Parker Archb. of Canterbury, he gave it afterwards with many other MSS. to Bennet Coll. Library in Cambridge, where it now remains, and hath had this testimony given of the writer by some of that house in the beginning of Ch. 1. that tho the Author was no professed Scholar, yet he was competently learned, well versed in the affairs of the Commonwealth, and of the Estates of Kingdoms in For- eign parts, and that the book was worthy of publication. He died at Upminster in Essex (where he had a fair Estate) and was buried in the Church there, in 1582, leaving be- hind him a Son named John, who in 1600 publish'd a little treatise concerning The making of ponds, breeding and feeding of fish, and planting of fruits, &c. printed several times. Which John succeeded his Father in the survey- ourship before-mention'd, and dying in 1606 was, as I con- ceive, buried by his Father, leaving then behind him a Son named Roger, living 1636.

HENRY BULL, a Warwickshire Man born, became Demie of Magd. Coll. in 1535 or thereabouts, perpetual 187. Fellow in 1540. being then Bach. of Arts, and afterwards a zealous (*) Man for reformation in K. Edw. days, an exile in the time of Qu. Marie, and a double, if not a treble, beneficed Man in the Reign of Qu. Eliz. He hath transmitted to posterity, Christian prayers and holy meditations, as well for pri- vate as publick exercise, gathered out of the most godly learned of our time — Printed at Lond. several times; one edit. bears date 1584. another 92. a third in 1605. and all either in oct. or 16°.

Lydlies prayers, with certaine godly additions. — He also translated from Lat. into English A commentary upon the 15 Psalms called Plalmi Graduum, that is Psalms of degrees, from Psal. 120 to Psal. 133, faithfully copied out of the Lectures of Dr. Mart. Luther. Lond. 1577. qu. &c. Pub- lished with an Epistle before it by Job. Fox the Martyrolo- gist, at which time the translator had been dead about two or three years, for if I mistake not, he gave way to fate about Fifteen hundred seventy and five. One of both 1575. his names, who was a rich Physician of London, died there in June (or thereabouts) in 1577, but of what kin to the former, I know not.

NICHOLAS WHITHALK, a Theologist of Lofan- 188. ne, studied several years in Merton Coll. for the sake of the Warden thereof Dr. Bickley, with whom he had con- tracted an acquaintance while he was an Exile in the time of Qu. Mary, but whether he took a degree, tho suppli- cate he did for one, it appears not. He hath written, Christianae fidei ac verae religionis compendium, in locos communes digestum, & nunc primum in vulgus emissum. Lond. 1575. oct. Dedic. to Sir Will. Cecil Lord Burleigh. No doubt 1575. there is but he hath published other things, but such I have not yet seen.

LAURENCE NOWELL the third Son of John Now- 189. ell of Great Meerley in Lancashire (where his ancestors had lived several generations before him) by Dowabell his Wife, Daughter of Thomas Hesketh of Rufford in the said Coun- ty Esq. was born, as I conceive, at Great Meerley before- mentioned, or at least in the said County, sent to Bras- nose Coll. to obtain Academical learning, about 1536, where applying his Muse to the study of Logick for a lit- tle while, went to Cambridge, where taking the Degree of Bach. of Arts, return'd to Oxon. and was incorporated in the said Degree in July 1542. In the year following he was licensed to proceed in Arts, and about that time being in sacred orders became Master of the Free-school at Sutton-Colfield in Warwickshire, where he continued for some years. In the Reign of Qu. Mary he absconded for a time in the house of Sir Job. Perrot called Carew Castle in Pembroke-shire, where, besides that Knight, he found two of his perswasion, viz. Mr. Perrot (Sir Johns Unkley) who had been reader of the Greek tongue in the Reign of K. Ed. 6. and another Gent. called Banister: But before that Queen died, he went into Germany, where finding out his Brother Alexander Nowell, sorted himself among the English Exiles there. After Qu. Elizabeth came to the Crown he was made Archdeacon of Derby and Dean of Lichfield, which he kept (with one or more benefices, besides the Prebendship of Ampleford in the Ch. of York, which he obtained upon the resignation of Will. Day Bach.

of Div. 27. May 1566.) to his dying day. He was a most diligent searcher into venerable antiquity, a right learned Clerk also in the Saxon Language, and was one of the first that recalled the study thereof. When he abode in Lincoln Inn, in the lodgings of one of his brethren, who was a Counsellour of note there, he was a tutor in those studies to Will. Lambard the Antiquary of Kent, who was esteemed the second best in them, and made use of his assistance and notes when he compiled his book De pris- tis Anglorum legibus. Our famous Antiquary Will. Camden tells (f) us that he (Laur. Nowell) was a Man of good note for his singular learning, and was the first in our age that brought into ure againe, and revived the Language of our Ancestours the Saxons, which through disuse lay forlet and buried in oblivion. He hath written,

Vocabularium Saxonum, or a Saxon English Dictionary.--- Written in 1567. 'Tis a MS. in qu. and was sometimes in the hands of the learned Selden, but now in Bodlies Library. Franc. Junius who maketh honourable mention of the Author, had a Copy of it, and Will. Somner the Antiquary of Canterbury made use of the original when he compiled his Saxon Dictionary. He also (L. Nowell) made several collections from antique historical MSS. which, as rarities, are kept to this day in the Cottonian Library. One of them is thus entituled.

Collectanea ex Chronicis Gregorii Caerquent Monachi Cæno- bii Glocestrensis, ab an. 681. ad an. 1290. 'Tis under Vespasians head A. 5. with other collections out of the Registers of Worcester and Glocester. This eminent Antiquary died, as 1576. it seems, in Fifteen hundred seventy and six, (his will being dated 7. Oct. the same year) aged 60 or more, but where buried unless in the Cath. Ch. at Lichfield I cannot tell. He left behind him a Son of both his names, who was a Commoner of Brasnose Coll. 1590. aged 18, and had, if I mistake not, for his successor in his Deanery one George () Bulleyn D. D.* who dying in Januar. 1602, was succeeded by Dr. Will. Tooker. One Hen. Boleyn D. D. was sometimes Chauntor and Residentiary of Lincolne, Archdeacon of Chichester and Rector of Borneford, who dyed 1491. but what relation George had to this Henry, I know not.

190. GERARD LEGH Son of Hen. Legh or Leigh of London, natural or base Son of Randal Legh, (by his Concubine one Woodroffs Widow of Derby) second Son of Sir Edm. Legh of Baguly in Cheshire Knight, (living 39. H. 6.) was born in London, where being trained up for a time in Grammaticals, was sent to Oxon to compleat them, and to obtain so much of the Logicals that he might the better conquer the rudiments of the municipal Law; for, if I am not mistaken, he studied for some time in one of the Inns of Court. But such was the vigour of his natural genius to Heraldry, Genealogies, and History, that he postpon'd those beneficial studies and totally gave himself up to those of honor and less benefit. All that he hath published is that fruitful and worthy treatise, entit.

The Accedence of Armorie. Lond. 1568. and 1612. in qu. Which being the first book of that nature that was ever printed in the English tongue, was a pattern or plat- form to those that came after, viz. to Will. Wyrley in his True use of Armory. Printed 1592. qu. to Job. Boswell when he wrote his Works of Armory in 3 books. Lond. 1597. qu. and to others. In the beginning of Apr. 1577. there was some dispute made among the relations of the said Ger. Legh who should administer his goods, debts, chattels, &c. So that I presume he died in Fifteen hundred seventy and six; (18. Elizab.) which is all that I yet know of him, or his works.

191. WILLIAM BLANDIE was born at Newbury in Berk- shire, educated in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, elected Probationer-Fellow of New Coll. in 1563, took one Degree in Arts three years after, and the same year was removed thence by the Bishop of Winton in his visita- tion of that Coll. but for what reason, unless for Pope- ry, I cannot tell. About the same time he went to Lon- don, became Fellow of the Middle Temple, and afterwards translated from Lat. into English The five Books of Hiero- nimus Oserius, containing a discourse of Civil and Christian Nobility. Lond. 1576. qu. What other things he hath trans- lated, or whether he hath written of any Subject I can- 1576. not tell.

ANTHONY RUSSHE, a florid and frequent Preach- 192. er of his time, was born in the Diocess of Norwiche, ad- mitted Probationer-Fellow of Magd. Coll. in July 1554, did compleat the Degree of Master of Arts 1558, and soon after quitting his Fellowship, became Chaplain to Qui. Elizabeth, Dean of Chichester (in the place perhaps of Barth. Traber) Doctor of Divinity, and in the Year 1567 Canon of Windsore. He hath written,

A President for a Prince: wherein is to be seen by the testimonie of antient writers, the duty of Kings, Princes and Governours. Lond. 1566. in qu. and other things, as I conceive, but such I have not yet seen. He paid his last debt to nature on the first day of April, in Fifteen hun- 1577. dred seventy and seven, aged 40 or more, and was buried in the Chappel of St. George at Windsore. Over his grave is an Epitaph containing a great Elogie of him, which for brevity sake I shall now omit, and in the mean time proceed to the next writer in order to be mentioned.

RALPH GUALTER Son of the famous Ralph Gual- 193. ter was born at Zurich in Helvetia, spent several years in this University, (mostly in Merton Coll.) took the De- gree of Master of Arts in 1573, and then returning to Zu- rich became Minister of St. Peters Church there, where he was held in great admiration for his quick and forward parts. He hath written,

Elegia de militia Christianorum in his terris adversus sata- nem, carnem, & mundum militantium.

Epitaphium in Hen. Bullengeri obitum. written in Greek.

Epicidium in obitum Job. Parkhursti Episcopi Nordovicensis.

Tigur. 1576. qu.

Argos Helvetia. Sive carmen de Tigurinorum navigatione Tiguro Argentoraturn usq; uno die confecta.

Carmina in imagines Doctorum nostri seculi virorum.

Varia Epigrammata & Epitaphia. At length having spent his short life in learning and virtuous industry, sur- rendred up his pious Soul to him that gave it, in Fifteen 1577. hundred seventy and seven, aged 25 or thereabouts. Where- upon his body was buried, as 'tis said, in St. Peters Church before-mention'd; at which time the chief Scholars there did much bewail his loss by their Poetry. A certain (*) Author tells us that this Ralph Gualter the Son, hath writ- ten Homilies on the lesser Prophets, but such I have not yet seen. The Father hath, and therefore I suppose there is a mistake in the matter.

MORGAN PHILIPPS or Philip Morgan a Monmouth- 194. shire Man born in the Dioc. of Landaff, became a student in the University in 1533 or thereabouts, made so great a progress in Logick and Philosophy, and became so quick and undermining a Disputant, that when he was Bach. of Arts, he was commonly called Morgan the Sopbister. In the Year 1538 he was elected Fellow of Oriel Coll. being then an year standing in the Degree of Bachelaur, and taking that of Master of Arts, he entred into the sacred function. In 1546 he was made Principal of St. Maries Hall, and three years after was one of the Triumviri that undertook a publick disputation in the Divinity School with Pet. Martyr. In 1550 he resign'd his Principality, being then Bach. of Div. and in the beginning of Qui. Maries Reign he became Chauntor of St. Davids Cathedral. Whereupon, and because of his absence from Oriel Coll. for more time than was allowed, he was denounced non- socius in 1554. In the beginning of Qui. Elizabeth he left his preferment, friends, and country for Religion sake, spent most of his time at Lovaine and Dorway, and wrote several books, as 'tis said, but I have seen only these follow- ing, which go under his name, viz.

Defence of the honour of Mary Queen of Scotland, with a declaration of her right, title, and interest to the Crowne of England. Leig. 1571. in 2 books in oct.

A treatise shewing that the regiment of Women is con- formable to the Law of God and nature, in one book. Ib. 1571. oct.

These two treatises, containing three books, were published under his name, but written as a noted

(f) In Britannia in Cornwall. (*) The said George Bulleyn be- came Rector of Bangor on the translation of Will. Chaderton from the See of Chesier to Line. in June, an. 1575.

(*) Edward Leigh in his Treatise of religion and learning, &c. p. 216.

(g) Author tells us by Job. Lesley Bishop of Rosse in Scotland, upon occasion of sundry Pamphlets that came out against the marriage of Mary Qu. of Scots to be had with the Duke of Norfolk, and the right by which she claimed to become heir unto England. Which Bishop, as 'tis farther added, did afterwards ingeniously acknowledge in his Commentaries, that he had his arguments for her right of succession secretly from Sir Anth. Browne Chief Justice of the Common-pleas, and from Serjeant Job. Carryll an excellent common Lawyer of the Inner Temple. So that if Morg. Philipps was not the Author of the said treatises, I cannot justly say that he wrote any thing else, only his,

Disputatio de Eucharistiae Sacramento in Univ. Oxon habita contra D. Pet. Martyrem, 31. Maii, an. 1549. Lond. 1549. qu. 8cc. See more in Pet. Martyran. 1562. and in Will. Tresham 1569 &c. But let our Author Camden, and his follower here quoted, say, what of Lesley's being the Author of those books, and others judge of the matter, as he, and they, please; while I tell you that a writer (b) before Camden in time, and equal with him in learning, as to the studies he professed, reports, that the said Morgan Philipps a Man of good account for learning among those that knew him, was thought to have written the said treatises (divided into three books) by the advice and assistance of Sir Anth. Browne: which thing is made the more credible by the many authorities of our common Law, which there are alledged. The first book doth endeavour to clear Mary Q. of Scots for the murder of the Lord Darley her Husband, which by many was laid against her. The second doth handle her title to the Crown of England, and the third doth answer the book of Job. Knox the Scot, entit. Against the monstrous government of Women. But not long after the said book was published, John Lesley Bishop of Ross in Scotland (who at that time was Embassador for the said Qu. of Scots in England) did more largely handle in the second book of a treatise which he published, her title to the Crown of England, &c. Thus he; so that according to this Authors opinion here quoted, Lesley had no hand in the said treatises, but in another different from them, which I think is most true. At length, after our Author Morg. Philipps had suffered about 17 years exile, died at Louvaine, or rather at Doway in Fifteen hundred seventy and seven; for on the 15. Feb. the same year, was a Commission (i) granted from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury to George Farmour of Estnepton in Northamptonshire Esq. to administer the goods, debts, chattels, &c. of Morgan Philipps Clerk, sometimes Chauntor of the Cath. Ch. of St. David, who lately died in parts beyond the Seas.

195. THOMAS DORMAN was born at Berehamstede in Hertfordsh. partly educated in the Free-School there under Mr. Rich. Reve a Protestant, by the care and exhibition of his Uncle Tho. Dorman of Agmondesham alias Amerham in the County of Bucks. and partly in Wykeham's School near to Winchester. At length being made full ripe for the University, he was elected Probationer-Fellow of New Coll. but leaving that house before he was made compleat Fellow, (upon what account I know not) was after Qu. Mary came to the Crown, elected Fellow of Allsouls Coll. in 1554, where following his studies with indefatigable industry, was admitted in the University to the reading of any book of the institutions of the Civil Law, an. 1558. But upon the alteration of Religion which soon followed in the beginning of Qu. Eliz. he left all he had in the University, his friends, country and patrimony, and went to Antwerp, where being encouraged in his studies by Dr. Tho. Hardyng, then an Exile in those parts, (and therefore zealously took his part against Jewell.) became Bach. and at length Doctor of Divinity. He hath written,

As for the death of this our learned and pious Author, which hapned at Tournay in the Low Countries about Fifteen hundred seventy 1577. and seven, this note following written in a MS. remaining in the English Coll. of Seculars at Doway, doth intimate thus of it. Thomas Dormannus vir doctus, qui unum aut alterum librum edidit contra Hæreticos, postea fuit pastor in civitate Tornacensi, & ibidem obiit circa an. 1577.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE an Esquire and an Essex 196. Man born, had his education in both the Universities, chiefly, as I conceive, in Cambridge; whence being translated to Greys Inn to study the municipal Law, made less progress in that profession than in Logick, which was but little, for having a rambling and unfixed head he left that place, went to various Cities in Holland, and became a Soldier of note, which he afterwards professed as much, or more, as learning, and therefore made him to take this motto Tam Marti quam Mercurio. From thence he went into France to visit the fashions of the royal Court there, where he fell in love with a Scottish Dame. At length being weary of those vanities, and his rambles in other Countries, he returned into England, and retiring to Greys Inn again, was esteemed by all ingenious Men there, to be a Person of breeding, eloquent, and witty, the most passionate among them to bewail and bemoan by his dexterous Pen the perplexities of love, and the best of his time for his activity in advancing the stage part. Afterwards receding to his patrimony at Walshamstow in the Forest, within the Province of Essex, (at which place if I mistake not he was born) he published several matters, among which are these that follow.

Flowers — Poems so called. The first of which is entit. The anatomy of a Lover. The second The arraignment of a Lover. The third The passion of a Lover; and the last is, The Lover encouraged by former examples, determineth to make virtue of necessity. Several of these Poems are contained in those made by him called The Devises.

The delectable historie of sundry adventures passed by Dan Barthelmew of Bathe — This is written in verse.

The Reporter, or the Reporters conclusion — This is also a Poem.

Fruits of War, written upon this Theame, Dulce bellum inexpertis. — Began to be written at Delft in Holland.

Hearbs — Poems so called. In which are several translations as I shall tell you anon, and several copies of verses that are in The Devises.

Weedes — Poems so called, with several things intermix'd in prose.

The Divises — These are also Poems; among which are various copies of verses made by our Author on certain Theams given by several Gentlemen, among which are Francis and Anthony Kynwelmersh, Essexians and noted Poets of their times, (the former having had several Poems printed in a Book entit. The paradise of dainty Devises. Lond. 1578) Alex. Nevill of Cambridge, Richard Courttop, &c.

The Steele Glas. A Satyre. Lond. 1576. qu. Before which is the Authors picture in armour, with a ruff and a large beard. On his right hand hangs a musquet and bandileers, on his left stands books and inkhorn, and under him is written Tam Marti quam Mercurio. Among several commendatory verses set before it, Wals. Rawley of the Middle Temple hath one.

The complaynt of Phylomene. An Elegie. Lond. 1576. qu. This Elegy was begun in Apr. 1562, continued in Apr. 1575, and finished the 3 day of the same month 1576.

Discourse of the adventures of Mr. F. J. (Freeman Jones) — Written mostly in prose, about 1572.

Glas of government. A tragical comedie so entit. because therein are handled as well the rewardes of virtue, as also the punishment for vice. Lond. 1575. qu. Written partly in rhyme, but mostly in prose.

Princelie pleasures at Kenilworth castle — A mask written in verse and prose. 'Tis a relation of the entertainment of Qu. Elizabeth given to her there by Robert Earl of Leycester, 9. 10. 11. &c. of July 1575.

Certaine notes of instruction concerning the making of verse or rime in English — This is written in prose. He also translated from Italian into English (1) The supposes, a Co.

a Comedy. Originally written by Aristo. This Com. was set out by Gascoigne, and publicly acted at Greys Inn, in 1566. 'Tis among his Poems called Hearbes (2) The pleasant fable of Ferdinando Feronimi and Leonora de Valesco. Transl. from the riding tales of Bartello. 'Tis among Gascoignes Poems called Weedes: And from Greek into English, Jocasta, a Tragedie; written by Euripides. This also was set out by Gascoigne and publicly acted in Greys Inn, 1566. In this translation the said Gascoigne had the assistance of Francis Kynwelmer before mention'd, who translated about half of it. The Epilogue was written by an ingenious Gentleman of the said Inn called Christoph. Telverton, afterwards an eminent Counsellour, a Knight and a Judge, who dying at Easton Maudit in Northamptonshire 1607 left behind him several Sons, of whom Henry was the eldest, afterwards a Knight and a Judge also, as I shall tell you elsewhere. This Trag. is among Gascoignes Poems called Hearbes. All which poems and translations being gathered together, were printed in an English character in two vol. in qu. One of which was printed at London about 1577, and the other there (after the Authors death) an. 1587, at which time it was usher'd into the world by various copies of verses written by the Poets of that time. As for the Author of them, he made his last exit, or yielded to nature, in his middle age, at his house in Walsbamstow before mention'd, in Oct. or Nov. in 1578. Fifteen hundred seventy and eight, and was buried, as I suppose, in the Church there. I find another George Gascoigne Esq. but later in time than the former, of whom, I know nothing, only but that he was of the Middle Temple, and that he dyed about 1619.

197. JOHN HARPESEILD, a grand zealot for the Rom. Cath. Religion, was born in the Parish of St. Mary Magdalen (in Old Fishstreet) within the City of London, educated in Grammar learning in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New Coll. in 1534, took the Degrees in Arts, holy Orders, was made Chaplain to Bonner Bishop of London, and left his Fellowship about 1551, being then beneficed in London. About 1554 (he being then D. of D.) he was made by his Patron Archdeacon of that place, in the room of Job. Wyntesley of less activity by far than Harpesfeild; and it was then (temp. Maria Reg.) observed that as Dr. Bonner B. of London shew'd himself the most severe of all Bishops against Hereticks, as they were then called, so our Author Harpesfeild of all Archdeacons, which was the reason he fared the worse for it upon the change of Religion. In 1558, some months before Qu. Mary died, he became Dean of Ch. Ch. in Norwyche, upon the resignation of John Boxall, but forced to leave that dignity in the beginning of 1560 to make room for John Salisbury suffragan Bishop of Thetford, who had been ejected in the first year of Qu. Mary. I find published under this Doctor Harpesfeild's name these things following.

Concio ad clerum in Ecclesia S. Pauli, 16. Oct. 1553 in Act. cap. 20. 28. London. 1553. oct.

Homelies to be read in Churches within the dioc. of London. London. 1554-55. At the end of Bonnors Catechisme.

Disputations for the degree of Doctor of Divinity, 19. Apr. 1554. — Printed in the Acts and Mon. of the Church, by Job. Fox: In which disputation Archb. Cranmer bore a part.

Disputes, talkings, arguings, examinations; letters, &c. — Printed also in the said book of Acts and Mon. After Qu. Elizabeth came to the Crown, he was committed Prisoner to the Fleet, where continuing for an year or more, was released upon security given that he should not act, speak, or write against the doctrine of the Church of England. Whereupon retiring to the house of a near relation of his, dwelling within the Parish of St. Sepulcher in the Suburb of London, spent the remainder of his days in great retirement and devotion. At length paying his last debt to nature in Fifteen hundred seventy and eight, was buried, as I conceive, in the Church of that Parish. On the 5. Dec. in the same year, one Anne Worsop the nearest of kin to him, had (a) a Commission granted to her from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury to administer the goods, debts and chattels of Job. Harpesfeild D. D. of the Parish of St. Sepulcher in London. lately deceased; so that I presume he died either in Oct. or Nov. going before. He had a brother named Nicholas, whom I shall remember under the Year 1583.

JOHN FOWLER was born in the City of Bristol, educated in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted Fellow of New Coll. after he had served two years of probation, in 1555, resigned it in 1559 and the year after took the Degree of Master of Arts, but did not compleat it by standing in the Comitia. About that time leaving England, he took upon him the trade of printing, partly at Amwerp and partly at Louvaine, whereby he did signal service for the R. Catholics in printing their books for the vindication of their cause against the Protestants in England. He was well skill'd in the Greek and Latin tongues, a tolerable Poet and Orator, and a Theologist not to be contemn'd. So learned he was also in Criticisms, and other polite learning, that he might have passed for another Robert, or Henry, Stephens, Printers. He did diligently peruse the Theological sums of St. Thomas of Aquine, and with a most excellent method did reduce them into a Compendium. To which he gave this title, Loca communia Theologica, &c. lib. 1. He wrot also, Additiones in Chronica Genebrandi.

Epigrams and other verses — He also translated from Lat. into English, The Epistle of Orosius; and The oration of Pet. Frarin of Antwerp against the unlawful insurrections of the Protestants under pretence to reform Religion. Antw. 1566. oct. answered by Will. Fulke of Cambridge. At length giving way to fate at Newmarck called by some Krainburg in Germany, 13. Febr. in Fifteen hundred seventy and eight, was buried in the Ch. yard of St. John the Evangelist there, near to the body of John Harrys, sometimes Father to Alice his Wife.

GEORGE FERRERS seems to have been born at or near to St. Alban in Hertfordshire, was educated for a time in Oxon. whence going to Lincolns Inn, did, after he was Barrester, become as eminent for the Law, as before he was for his Poetry, having been as much celebrated for it by the learned of his time as any. This Person, tho he hath not writ much, as I can yet find, yet he is numbered among the (b) the illustrious and learned Men of the Age he lived in, by Job. Leland the Antiquary. He hath written,

Miscellany of Poems. — And translated from French into Latin The Statutes called Magna Charta. The beginning of which is Hic habes candidè lecto, leges, &c. He ended his days at Flamsted in Hertfordshire, in the beginning of the Year Fifteen hundred seventy and nine, and was, as I conceive, buried there. You may see more of him, his character and employments in the Author before quoted. In the Year 1542 I find one George Ferris Burgess for Plymouth to sit in a Parliament then held; whether the same I know not.

WILLIAM WHITTYNGHAM Son of Will. Whittyngham Gent. (by his Wife the Daughter of Haughton of Haughton Tower) Son of Will. Whittyngham of Over, Son of Seb Whittyngham of Swanlow in Cheshire, was born in the City of Chester, became a Commoner of Braunose Coll. in the sixteenth year of his age 1540 or thereabouts, where being put under a careful Tutor, did make great proficiency in learning. In 1545 he was elected Fellow of Allsouls College, being then Bach. of Arts, in which faculty proceeding two years after, was made one of the Senior Students of Ch. Church, at what time it was founded by K. Hen. 8. and endeavoured by him to be replenish'd with the choicest Scholars in the University. On the 17. May 1550 he had leave granted to him to travel for 3 years by the Dean and Canons of the said house; whereupon he went into France, and remaining in the company of learned Men there for some time, had intentions to go into Italy, but being prevented by sickness (which took him at Lyons) he spent some time among the Students in Paris, but chiefly in the University of Orleanse. About that time, if I mistake not, he took to Wife Catherine the Daughter of Lewis Jacqueine, by his Wife, the heir of Gousteron Lord of Inghram and Turvoyle near to the said City of Orleans. After he had spent more than an year there, he went to certain Universities in Germany, and thence to Geneva, where tarrying till towards the latter end of K. Ed. 6. he returned into England. But that King dying, and Religion seeming to put on another face, he went with other company into France, where hearing soon after that certain Protestant Divines of England were for Religion sake fled to Frankfort, and were about, with license from the Magistrate, to settle a Church there, did hasten thither and entred himself into their association: But they dissenting among themselves concerning matters pertaining to Religion, were forced to disjoyn, and those that did best like of the forms of government of the Church of England in the days of K. Ed. 6. were to remain at Frankfort, and those that liked better the order and discipline of the Church at Geneva, were to go to that place, among whom Whittingham was one and the chiefeft, as you may farther see in a book entit. A brief discourse of the troubles begun at Frankford 1554--- Printed 1575, wherein the opposit and restless humour of this Person may easily be discern'd. Soon after their settlement at Geneva, John Knox a Scot, Minister of the English congregation there, was to leave that place and return to his Country; so that Whittingham being look'd upon as the fittest Person to succeed, was earnestly desired by Joh. Calvin to take that employment upon him, but he alledging that in his former travels and observations, with the learning of several languages, he had fitted himself more for state employment than that, he modestly denied it. At length Calvin urging him farther, he was thereupon made a Minister according to the Geneva fashion and then took the employment upon him. Soon after Miles Coverdale, Christoph. Goodman, Amb. Gilby, Tho. Sampson, W. Cole of C. C. Coll. and this our Author Whittingham undertook the translation of the English Bible, but before the greater part was finished, Qu. Mary died. So that the Protestant Religion appearing again in England, the exil'd Divines left Frankfort and Geneva and returned into England. Howbeit Whittingham with one or two more being resolv'd to go through with the work, did tarry at Geneva an year and an half after Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown. At the same time also he turned into meter those Psalmes that we to this day sing in our Churches, inscribed with W. W. They are in number five, of which the 119 Psalme is one, as large as 22 other Psalmes, as also the ten commandments, and a prayer, at the end of the book of Psalmes. At length Whittingham returning into England, he was appointed to go in company with Francis Earl of Bedford to condole the death of the French King, an 1560, and soon after to go with Ambrose Earl of Warwick to Newhaven to be preacher there, while the said Earl defended it against the French. Where, tho he shew'd himself ready in his function, yet he spared not to perswade the English from Uniformity, and observance of the rites and ceremonies of the Church. Notwithstanding this, so great a respect had the said Earl for him, that upon writing to his Brother Robert Earl of Leycester, he procured for him from the Queen the Deanery of Durham, in 1563, in the place of Ralf Skinner. Which Deanery the Queen having partly promised Dr. Tho. Wilson one of the Secretaries of State, was forced by the over-intreaties of the said Earl to give it to Whittingham, who enjoying it about 16 years, was then succeeded by the said Wilson, who enjoyed it not two years. After Whittingham had remained there for some time, Sir Will. Cecil Secretary of State was made Lord Treasurer, in whose place Whittingham was among others nominated, and had he stirred in it and made interest with his friend Robert Earl of Leycester, he might have obtained it. About the same time the order of the sacerdotal vestures being generally established for Church-men, and so pressed that they that would not use the same, should not be permitted to exercise their Ministry, he then, and not before, submitted himself thereunto. And being upbraided therewith for so doing by one that had been with him at Geneva, he answered that he, and others, knew, and had heard John Calvin say that for external matters of Order, they might not neglect their Ministry, for so should they for tithing of Mint, neglect the greater things of the Law. And as concerning singing in the Church, Whittingham did so far allow of it, that he was very careful to provide the best songs and anthems that could be got out of the Queens

Chappel to furnish his choire withal, himself being skilful in Musick. To pass by the good service he did his Country against the Popish rebels in the North parts of England in 1569, and his Church of Durham in repelling the Archbishop of York his visiting it, an. 1578, I shall only take notice that whereas he is stiled by certain Authors (c) the false and unworthy Dean of Durham, was because he was only Master of Arts, the statutes of the Ch. of Durham requiring that the Dean thereof should be Bach. of Divinity at least, that he was not a Minister according to the form of the Church of England, but of Geneva, and that he was but a luke-warm conformist at the best. The publick works that he hath done as to learning are, (1) His Translation of the Geneva Bible (2) His turning into Meter several of the Psalmes of David, as I have before told you. (3) His translation into Latine the Liturgie of the Church of Geneva. (4) Nich. Rydleys Declaration of the Lords Supper. Genov. 1556. To which Whittingham put (d) a Preface of his own making. (5) N. Rydleys protestation: This I have not yet seen, and know nothing more of it. (6) His translation from Lat. into English of The Book of prayer, or the English Liturgie: See more in A brief discourse of the troubles begun at Frankford, 1554, &c. Printed 1575. p. 34. 35. He also wrot the Preface to Christoph. Goodmans book entit. How superior powers ought to be obeyed, &c. with several other things, which are not yet, as I conceive, published. As for the works of impiety that he performed while he sate Dean of Durham, were very many; among which I shall tell you of these. Most of the Priors of Durham, having been buried in coffins of stone, and some in marble, and each coffin covered with a plank of marble, or free-stone, which laid level with the paving of the Church (for anciently Men of note that were laid in such coffins, were buried no deeper in the ground, than the breadth of a plank, to be laid over them even with the surface of the pavement) he caused some of them to be plucked up, and appointed them to be used as troughs for horses to drink in, or hogs to feed in. All the marble and free-stones also that covered them, and other graves, he caused to be taken away and broken, some of which served to make pavement in his house. He also defaced all such stones as had any pictures of bras, or other imagery work, or chalice wrought, engraven upon them; and the residue he took away, and employed them to his own use, and did make a washing-house of them at the end of the Century-garth. So that it could not afterwards be discerned that ever any were buried in the said Century-garth, it was so plain and straight. The truth is, he could not (e) abide any thing that appertained to a goodly religiousness, or Monastical life. Within the said Abbey-church of Durham were two holy-water stones of fine marble, very artificially made and engraven, and bossed with hollow bosses, upon the outer-sides of the stones, very curiously wrought. They were both of the same work, but one much greater than the other. Both these were taken away by this unworthy Dean Whittingham, and carried into his kitchen, and employed to profane uses by his Servants, steeping their beef and salt fish in them, having a conveyance in the bottoms of them to let forth the water, as they had when they were in the Church to let out holy water, &c. He also caused the image of St. Cuthbert (which before had been removed from its proper place by Dean Rob. Horne, who also had a hand in such impieties) and also other antient monuments to be defaced, and broken all to pieces, to the intent that there should be no memory of that holy Man, or of any other who had been famous in the Church and great benefactors thereunto (as the Priors, his Predecessors were) left whole and undefaced. I say it again that he did this to the end that no memory or token of that holy Man St. Cuthbert should be left, who was sent, and brought thither by the power and will of Almighty God, and was thereupon the occasion of the erection of the monastical Church of Durham, where the Clergy and Servants have all their Livings and Commodities from that time to this day. At length after his many rambles in this world, both beyond and within the Seas, and his too to forward zeal for the promoting his Calvinistical (if not worse) opinion, whereby much mischief hapned to the Church of England, he did unwillingly (being then full of worldly troubles) submit himself to the stroke of death, on the tenth day of June in Fifteen hundred seventy and nine, and was buried in the Cath. Church of Durham. Soon after was a tomb-stone laid over his grave, with an Epitaph of 12 long and short verses engraven on a bras plate, fastned thereunto; which, with most if not all of the monuments which were set up after his time, were miserably defaced by the Scots when they invaded England in 1640. The first four verses run thus.

*Quæ Whittinghami cernis monumenta sepulsi,
Et vitæ & mortis sunt monumenta piæ.
Anglia testis erat, testis quoque Gallia vitæ
Exilis, hæc vidit Præfatus illa decus.*

So that as he before had in a woful manner violated the monuments of his predecessors and others, so was his by Invaders, and nothing now left to preserve his memory, or Person to shew the place where his carcase was lodg'd.

201. HENRY COLE, a zealous maintainer for a time of the Rom. Cath. Religion, was born at Godshyll in the Isle of Wight in Hampshire, educated in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. in 1523, studied the Civil Law, travelled some years after into Italy, was at Padua, where he advanced his studies, and afterwards, notwithstanding all this, he did acknowledge K. Hen. 8. to be the supreme head of the Church in England. In 1540, he being then returned and settled in London, he took the Degree of Doctor of the Civil Law, and the same year resign'd his Fellowship, being then an Advocate in the Court of Arches, Prebendary of Salisbury, and about that time Archdeacon of Ely in the place (as it seems) of Rich. Cox. In 1542 he was elected Warden of New Coll. and in 45 he was made Rector of Newton Longvill in Bucks. Soon after when K. Ed. 6. came to the Crown, he was altogether for reformation, was an admirer of Pet. Martyr, was a frequenter of Protestant service and a receiver of the holy communion according to their way, did after preach up reformation in the Church of St. Martin commonly called Carfax in Oxon, did approve of the proceedings of King Ed. 6. and other matters as a learned and puritannical (*) Author tells you. In 1551. (5. Ed. 6.) he resigned his Wardenship, and the year after the aforesaid Rectory. In 1554 (2. Maria) he was made Provost of Eaton Coll. (in the place of Tho. Smith LL. D. of Cambridge) of which house he had been Fellow, and the same year had the Degree of Doct. of Div. confer'd upon him. Soon after he was appointed one of the Commissioners to visit the University of Cambridge, became Dean of St. Pauls Cathedral on the removal of Feckenham to Westminster an. 1556, Vicar general of the spiritualities under Card. Pole Archb. of Cant. and in 1558 one of the overseers of the said Cardinals will. I find extant under Dr. Coles name these things following.

Letters to Joh. Jewell Bishop of Salisbury, upon occasion of a Sermon that the said Bishop preached before the Queens Majesty and her honorable Counsell, an. 1560. Lond. 1560 in a pretty thick oct. It was afterwards remitted into Jewells works. I find also that divers letters of Dr. Cole were sent to Bishop Jewell after he had preached at Pauls cross on the second Sunday before Esther in the year 1560, which are also printed.

Disputation with Archb. Cranmer and Bish. Rydley in the Div. School at Oxon, an. 1554—Printed in the Acts and Mon. of the Church.

Funeral Sermon at the burning of Dr. Tho. Cranmer Archb. of Canterbury.—He hath also other things extant, which I have not yet seen. After Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown, he, with Jo. Whyte B. of Winchester, and five more most zealous Cath. Divines, did dispute with as many Protestant Divines concerning matters of Religion, when Qu. Elizab. was about to make a reformation in the Church of England. But that disputation coming to nothing, he was depriv'd of his Deanery to make room for Dr. Will. May Master of Trin. Coll. in Cambridge, who dying about the beginning of 1561. Alex. Nowell succeeded him. About that time Dr. Cole was imprison'd, but where I cannot tell: Sure I am that he died in or near to the Compter in Woodstreet within the City of London, in the month of Decemb. in Fifteen hundred seventy and 1579. nine, but where buried by his Executor Humph. Moseley Secondary of the said Compter, I know not. Job. Leland the Antiquary was Dr. Cole's acquaintance, and having had experience of his learning, hath eterniz'd his memory among other learned Men of our Nation and of his time, in his book of Encomia's (f), to which the curious reader may recur if he please, wherein he'll find a just character of this our Author Dr. Cole and his learning.

PETER MORWYN or Morwyng, a zealous reformation of his time, was born in Lincolnshire, made perpetual Fellow of Magd. Coll. in 1552, being then Bach of Arts, and in the year after supplicating some few days before K. Edwards death that he might proceed in that faculty, did obtain his desire: But that King then dying and Morwyn foreseeing that Religion would alter, he was not presented to that Degree. Soon after, he, and others of his society, consulting how to withdraw themselves in private, obtained leave to be absent for a time, but to what place Morwyn went beyond the Seas (for he was a voluntary exile in Germany) I find not. Sure it is that after Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown, he retired to his Coll. and in 1559 was presented to the Degree of Master, and became renowned among the Academians for his great knowledge in the Lat. and Greek tongues and poetry. When Dr. Bentham was promoted to the See of Lichfield he made him his Chaplain, and upon the next vacaney, Prebendary and Canon of the said Church, and well benefited near to that place. He hath translated into English. (1) A compendious and most marvellous history of the latter times of the Jews commune weale, beginning where the Bible and Scriptures leave, and continuing to the utter subversion and last destruction of that Country and People. Lond. 1558-61. and 1593, in oct. Written in Hebrew by Joseph Ben. Gorion. (2) The treasure of Enonimus containing the wonderful hid secrets of nature, touching the most apt times to prepare and distill Medicines. Lond. 1565. qu. besides other books, which I have not yet seen. He was living at, or near to, Lichfield in the month of May, in Fifteen hundred seventy and nine, in which year he was appointed one of the administrators of the goods, chattels, &c. of the said Bish. Bentham, but how long he lived after that year, I cannot tell, nor where his reliques were lodg'd.

JOHN LISTER was descended from those of his name in Yorkshire spent some years among the Oxonians, and wrot,

A rule to bring up children; wherein is declared how the Father opposeth the Son in the Holy Scripture, whereby all Parents may be taught how to bring up their Children—Printed at Lond. in oct. about 1580. What other things he hath written and published I cannot yet

JOHN ROGERS called by some Job. Rogers the second, because one of both his names (of Pembr. Hall in Cambr.) was a writer in the Reign of Ed. 6. and a Martyr for the Protestant cause in the time of Qu. Mary, was educated for some years in this University, but whether in Qu. Coll. where one of both his names was Fellow and proceeded Master of Arts, in 1556, or another Job. Rogers (of Mert. Coll. I think) who was admitted Master in 1576, I cannot justly say. Sure I am that Job. Rogers of Oxon. wrot and published these treatises following.

The displaying of an horrible sect of gross and wicked hereticks, naming themselves the Family of Love, &c. Lond. 1579. oct.

The lives of the Authors of the Family of Love.—Printed with the former.

Answer to certaine Letters maintaining the opinions of those of the Family of Love—Printed also with the former, and in the same year. What else this Author hath published I cannot yet find, nor when, or where he died. I find one John Rogers to be a Senior Student of St. Alban's hall 1569, which perhaps may be the same with him of Mert. Coll. because that when any Postmaster, or Student there, taketh the Degree of Bach. of Arts, they commonly receede to the said Hall, which joyns to the Coll. of Merton.

205. ALAN COPE to whom the City of London gave his first breath, was made perpetual Fellow of Magd. Coll. in 1549, and Master of Arts in 52, being that year Senior of the Art celebrated 18. July. In 1558 he was unanimously chosen Senior Proctor of the University, and in less than two years after, when he saw that the R. Cath. Religion would be silenced in England, he obtained leave to absent himself for a time from the said College. Whereupon waiting for a prosperous gale, ship'd himself beyond the Seas, and at length went to Rome; where, tho he before, had for the space of 5 years, studied the Civil Law in this University, he was actually created, (as 'tis said) Doctor or Bach. of Div. and became one of the Canons of St. Peters Church there. Vir fuit eximii ingenii, (as one (g) faith) qui post magnos in Ecclesiâ dei per fide Catholicâ tuendâ susceptos labores, scripsit opus quoddam insigne intitulat.

Historiæ Evangelicæ veritas. Seu singularia vitæ Domini Jesu Christi, eo ordine quo gesta fuerunt recensita, & ipsius quatuor Evangelistarum verbis contexta, &c. Lov. 1572, and at Doway 1603. qu. He also published under his name, 1580. Sex Dialogi, &c. Antw. 1566. But those Dialogues were written by Nich. Harpesfeld; as I shall tell you in my discourse of him. As for A. Cope he surrendered up his last breath at Rome about Fifteen hundred and eighty, and was buried in the Chappel belonging to the English Hospital or Coll. there, leaving behind him, a most admirable exemplar of vertue, which many did endeavor to follow, but could not accomplish their desires.

206. DAVID de la HYDE was admitted Probationer-Fellow of Merton Coll. 1549, proceeded Master of Arts four years after, being then admired and much adored for his most excellent faculty in disputing, which he exercised as well in the publick Schools, as at home. Soon after he was licensed by the Society of his Coll. to study the Civil Law, but took no Degree therein in this University: And being ejected the Coll. for denying the Queens Supremacy over the Ch. of England in 1560, he went thereupon into Ireland; where, if I mistake not, he was born, and prosecuting his studies there, as he had done in Oxon. became an exquisite and profound Clerk, well read in the Greek and Lat. tongues, expert in the Mathematicks, a proper Antiquary, and an exact Divine. His pen was not lazie (as one (b) faith) but daily breeding of learned books. He wrot, Schemata Rhetorica in tabulam contracta. And an oration also entit.

- Clar. 1580. De Ligno & Feno. Spoken in praise of Mr. Jasper Heywood, who was in the time of Qu. Mary Rex regni fabarum in Merton College; which was no other than a Christ-mas Lord, or a Lord or King of misrule. He hath written many other things, which being done and printed beyond the Seas, we see them but seldom, or never, in these parts.

207. JAMES WALSH an Irish Man born, was educated in this University, but what Degrees he took there, I find not. In the Year 1572 and belike before, he had a Chamber, and took his commons in Hart hall, being then a Student in Divinity with Mr. Leonard Fitz-Simons his Countryman. Both whom are entituled Magistri that year in the (i) Matricula of the University, under Aula cervina. The said Jam. Walsh hath written, Epigrammata diversa. With other things of the like nature, and translated into English The Topography of Ireland, written in Lat. by Silv. Giraldus. Which translation with Scholia's was made also much about the same time by Job.

- Clar. 1580. Hooker alias Vowell of the City of Exeter, as you may see elsewhere. In the time of this Jam. Walsh, studied in Hart hall also, divers of his Country men of Ireland, some of whom having been afterwards Men of note, or else writers, you shall have their names as they follow. (1) Da-

LEONARD FITZSIMONS was born in the Diocess 208. and County of Dublin in Ireland, admitted Scholar of Trinity Coll. (from that of Corp. Ch. of which he was Clerk) 17 June 1558, aged 17, and the next year was made Fellow, being then Bach. of Arts. In 1563 he proceeded in that faculty, but being a R. Cath. in his heart, and therefore unwilling to take holy Orders according to the Church of England, left his Fellowship and retired to Hart hall about 1571. At length going into his own Country, had some employment confer'd upon him, and was in his latter years, as I conceive, a Rom. Priest. He is characterized by one (k) who knew him, to be profundus clericus, qui utraq; linguas, Theologiam & Mathematicam admodum caluit & coluit. And there is no doubt but that he hath written and published several Books, which being printed beyond the Sea, we seldom see them in these parts. He was famous and noted for his learning in Ireland in Clar. Fifteen hundred and eighty, but when he died, or where 1580. his relicks were lodg'd, I cannot tell. One Hen. Fitzsimons, a famous Jesuit was also educated in Hart hall, as I shall tell you elsewhere.

JOHN SECURIS, a Wiltshire Man born and a most 209. noted Person for his admirable parts while he studied in New Coll. in the time of Ed. 6. (but not in the condition of a Fellow) did retire to Paris for the improvement of his studies, where applying his muse to the faculties of Physick and Astronomy, became a diligent hearer of the Lectures of Dr. Jacobus Silvius of high learning and famous memory, the reader of the Physick lecture in that University, who usually had a thousand auditors every time he read. After he had compleated his studies there, he returned into England and settled within the City of Salisbury, where he was much frequented for his great knowledge in Medicine, and wrot,

Several Prognosticons — One of which for the Year 1580 I have seen, and to it is joyned

A compendium; or, brief instruction how to keep a moderate diet — In the title of the said Prognosticon he writes himself Master of Arts and Physick, but whether he took those Degrees in Oxon. I cannot tell, because the register containing the acts of Congregation and Convocation, is almost totally neglected during the Reign of Ed. 6. In the Preface to the said Compendium, he tells us that in his time fell near to Salisbury hailstones as big as a childs fist of 3 or four years old. Our Author Securis hath also written,

A detection and querimonie of the daylie enormities and abuses committed in Physick, concerning the three parts thereof, that is of the Physicians part, the part of Surgeons and the part of Poticians. Lond. 1566. in oct. Dedicated in a Lat. Epist. to both the Universities, Oxford (of which he faith he was an Alumnus) and Cambridge. After which follows a Preface to the reader in old English verse, and at the end of the book is a peroration to both the Universities. Contemporary with this noted Author Securis, was another Astrologer called Evans Lloyd a Welsh Man, educated in Logicals and Philosophicals in Oriel Coll. but took no Degree here. Afterwards retiring to the great City, wrot several Ephemerides, which were much valued in their time; one of them written for the Year 1582. I have seen, supputated especially for the elevation and meridian of London, but may generally serve for all England. It was printed there the same year, and approved by Dr. John Dee, with whom, as also with Securis, he had acquaintance.

210. NICHOLAS QUEMERFORD was born in the City of Waterford in Ireland, took a Degree in Arts 1562 after he had spent at least 4 years in this University in pecking and hewing at Logick and Philosophy: Which Degree being compleated by Determination, he went into his own Country, entred into the sacred function and had preferment there, but turned out from it becaule of his Religion. He wrot in English a pithie and learned treatise, very exquisitely penn'd as one (l) saith, entitled.

Answers to certaine questions propounded by the Citizens of Waterford.—Also

- Divers Sermons.—Soon after he left his Country for the sake of Religion, went to the University of Lovaine in Brabant, where he was promoted to the Degree of Doctor of Divinity 23. June 1576, and afterwards, as 'tis said, 1580. wrot and published divers other things. See more in Peter White, under the Year 1590. To him I now add his great friend and countryman Rob. Garvey of the Diocess of Kilkenny, who was elected Fellow of Oriel Coll. 1563, proceeded Master of Arts three years after, and became noted for his skill in both the Laws, and for a volubility in the English and latin tongues, as my Author (m) an Irish Man tells me, but whether he published any thing I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he died in Ireland about 1579.

211. MAWRICE CHAWNEY, Chamney, Chancy, or Chanmy, so many ways I find him written, was from his juvenile years a Carthusian Monk in the house of that order near London, (now called by some the Charter-house, and by others Suttons Hospital) the Brethren of which place, as of others in England, did commonly study in an ancient place of Literature near to London Coll. alias Burnells Inn within this University, and no doubt there is but that this M. Chawney did receive instruction in Theological matters therein, or at least in some other house of learning in Oxon. But so it was, that at the dissolution of religious houses by K. Hen. 8. he, with his brethren (18 in number) being committed to custody for denying the Kings Supremacy over the Ch. of England, did at length with much difficulty escape out of prison, and so consequently death, which all the rest suffered at several times, before the Year 1539. At length settling himself at Bruges in Flanders became Prior of some of his English Brethren (of the same order) there: And from him do our English Carthusians beyond the Sea at Neoport in Flanders derive their succession in the said house near London, to this day, having always been by them esteemed a most devout and pious Person. He hath written a book entit.

Historia aliquot nostri sæculi Martyrum cum pia, tum lætu jucunda nunquam antehæc typis excusa. Printed (at Mentz in Bavaria as it seems) an. 1550 in qu. and dedicated by Vitus à Dulken Prior of the Carthusians of St. Michael near to Mentz and William à Sittart Procurator of the said house, to Theodore Lober à Stratis Prior of the Carthusians house of St. Marie the Virgin in Buxia near to Memmingen in Schawben a Province of Germany. This book contains (1) The Epitaph of Sir Tho. More, written by himself in Latin, fixed over his grave in Chelsey Church near to London. (2) The captivity and martyrdom of John Fisher B. of Rochester. (3) The capt. and mart. of the said Sir Tb. More, sometimes L. Chanc. of England. (4) The martyrdom of Reynold Brigitt a pious Divine, and of others. (5) The passion of 18 Carthusians of London, beginning with the life and passion of John Houghson the Prior of them all, contained in 14 Chapters, &c. This passion and martyrdom of the said Carthusians was by the care of our Author represented (n) in figures; and being afterwards engraven on copper, were printed at Colom. Ub. about 1608. He also reviewed, corrected, and put some additions to a book entit. Vita Carthusiana, written by Peter Sutor Prior of the Carthusians at Paris, an. 1522. Which being so done, he wrot the Epistle dedicatory before it; all printed together at Lovaine, 1572. in oct. Our Author Chawney (as he writes himself in that book) was then living in his Cell at Bruges before-mention'd, with several English Carthusians under his government. I have seen a MS. written by our Author Chawney, bearing this title,

The divine clowde of unknowing — The beginning of which is, Goostly frende in God, I pray the and beseech the that thou wilt have a besy beholding to the course and mannr of thy calling, &c. It containeth 75 Chapters, and with i is bound his Epistle of private counsel, the beginning of which is, Goostly frende in God, as touching thy inward occupation, &c. And at the end of the book is this written. Liber domus Salvatoris beatissime virginis Mariae juxta London Ordinis Carthusiani, per M. Chawney, quem exaravit secundum Willmum Exmense. The said Exmense or ex Mewe, who had been bred in Christs Coll. in Cambridge did enter himself a Carthusian of the said house near London in the 28 year of his age, being then sufficiently versed in the Gr. and Lat. tongues. Afterwards he was made Vicar, and thence removed to be Procurator thereof: And being one of the number that denied the Kings Supremacy, suffered death by hanging, drawing and quartering, 19. June 1535. As for our Author Chawney he submitted to fate on the 12. July in Fifteen hundred eighty and one, according to the account followed in Flanders. Whereupon his body was buried, as I suppose, in the Chappel belonging to the Carthusians at Bruges before-mention'd. He hath left behind him a most celebrated name for his rare piety, which is preserved among those of his profession at Bruges, Neoport in Flanders, and at other places. Neither is it denyed by any knowing and moderate Protestants but that his name is worthy to be kept in everlasting remembrance.

- RICHARD DAVYES, a Welsh Man born, was educated, as it seems, in New Inn, but what Degrees he took in Arts, it appears not. In Qu. Mariæ Reign he retired beyond the Seas upon account of Religion, whence returning in the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth, was elected Bishop of St. Asaph on the deprivation of Tbo. Goldwell; the temporalities of which See he receiving (o) 29. March 1560, was the year following translated to the See of St. David, and in 1566 was actually created Doctor of Divinity. He hath published several things, among which are,

Epistle to all the Welsh, especially within his Diocess, wishing a renewing of the ancient Cath. faith by the light of the Gospel of Christ. — Printed and bound with the New Test. in Welsh, an. 1567. It was printed also among other things, and published by Charles Edwards a Welsh Man. — Ox. 1671. in oct.

Funeral Sermon preached 26. Nov. 1576. in the Parish Church of Caermerthen at the burial of Walt. Earl of Essex, on Rev. 14. 13. Lond. 1577. qu. Whereunto is added a genealogical Epitaph with memorials on the said Count, but these were made by other Men. This Bishop paid his last debt to nature about the month of Octob. in Fifteen hundred eighty and one, aged about 80 years, and 1581. was buried in the Parish Church of Abergwilly in Caermerthenshire, leaving then behind him a Widow called Dorotbis, and several Children.

- JOHN TWYNE Son of William, Son of John, Son of Nicholas, Son of Sir Brian Twyne of Long Parish in Hampshire Knight, was born at Bolsingdon in the same County, educated, as it seems, in New Inn, where applying his studies to the Civil Law, was admitted to the reading of any of the Books of Institutions, an. 1524. at which time the said Inn was replenished, and did excellently flourish with Civilians. After he had left the University he became supreme Moderator of the Free-school within the cemetery gate at Canterbury, and in 1553 Mayor of that City. At length growing rich (for his School was very much frequented by the youth of the neighbourhood, many of which went afterwards to the Universities) he purchased Lands at Preston and Hardacre in Kent, which he left to his posterity. He was a Person well read in Greek and Lat. Authors, in the histories and antiquities of our Nation, and much valued for his abilities in other matters by the learned Men of his age, particularly by his acquaintance (p) Job. Leland, who numbers him among the illustrious worthies of his time. He hath written, who afterwards, with an Epistle, made it publick. Our Author John Twyne hath also written and collected divers things of antiquities, which are dispersed in several hands, and some of them descending to his Grandson Brian Twyne, he gave them at his death to the Library of C. C. Coll. At length our Author arriving to a good old age, gave way to fate 24. Novemb. in Fifteen hundred eighty and one, and received sepulture in the Chancel of the Church of St. Paul within the City of Canterbury. Over his grave is an inscription, wherein he is stiled Ar-miger, and said to have been Mayor of Canterbury in the time of Wyatts rebellion, in the beginning of Qu. Mary. This Epitaph being written in verse, I shall now omit, and commend you to that just Encomium of him given by Leland before-mentioned. By Alice his Wife (who died 20. Oct. 1567. aged 60 and in the 43 year of her Wedlock) Daughter of Will. Piper of Canterbury he had issue divers Sons. The first was Laurence Twyne who was Fellow of Allsouls Coll. and Bach. of the Civil Law, an ingenious Poet of his time, as several copies of verses, set before books, written in commendation of their respective Authors, do sufficiently attest. He was a married Man, lived at Hardacre in Kent, and left issue behind him at his death several Children. The second was Tho. Twyne before-mention'd, whom I shall mention under the Year 1613. The third was John Twyne whose ingenuity also is scatter'd in several copies of verses before books in the time of Qu. Elizabeth; and the fourth was Nicholas, of whom I know nothing.

De rebus Albionis, Britannicis atq; Anglicis commentariorum libri duo. Lond. 1590. in oct. written to his Son Thomas;

214. RICHARD COXE was born, as 'tis (q) said, at Whaddon in Bucks. elected from Eaton School, Scholar of Kings Coll. in Cambridge, in 1519, where taking the Degree of Bach. of Arts, went to Oxon for preferment, was made one of the junior Canons of the Cardinal Coll. and in Decemb. 1525, was, with other Cantabrigians incorporated in the same Degree. About that time he supplicated that he might answer at the Austin Fryery (now called Disputations in Austins) and answer the Masters in formal disputations, which was granted conditionally that he also oppose at the said Fryery. This exercise being by him performed in order to the taking of his Masters Degree, he was licensed to proceed in Arts, 8. Feb. following, and accordingly did proceed in an Act celebrated 2. July 1526. Soon after being notoriously known to be a follower and abettor of the opinions of Luther, he was forced to leave Oxon, and some years after became Master of Eaton School near to Windfore, where by his diligent instruction, the boys profited much. About the Year 1537 he proceeded D. of D. at Cambridge, became Archdeacon of Ely, in the room, as it seems, of Tho. Thirlby promoted to the See of Westminster, and afterwards was incorporated at Oxon in the Degree of Doctor. In 1543. Jan. 8. he was made Dean of the new erected Cathedral of Osney near Oxon, and in 1546 when that See was translated to Cb. Cb. he was also made Dean there. In 1547 he was chosen Chancellor of the University of Oxford, being in great favour with the then K. Ed. 6. By which election it fell out, that as the Oxonians enjoyed one that had been partly educated in Cambridge, so it was with the Cantabrigians in former time by their election of John Bromyard an Oxonian and an eminent writer in the Reign of Rich. 2. and since by their election of Dr. Thomas Rutil in the Reign of Hen. 7. But what mad work this Dr. Coxe did in Oxon while he sat Chancellor, by being the chief Man that worked a reformation, I have elsewhere (r) told you. In 1548. July 16. he was installed Canon of Windfore in the place of Dr. Thomas Magnus, who resigned that dignity in 1547, and about that time was made one of the Privy Council, Almoner to the King and Dean of Westminster: But when Qu. Mary came to the Crown, he, among others, fled to Frankfort in Germany, where he shewed (s) himself among the English Exiles a zealous Man for the Common Prayer, as used in the days of K. Ed. 6. against Job. Knox a Scot and a violent Calvinist. When Qu. Elizabeth succeeded in the Empire, he was appointed the chief of the Protestant Divines to encounter those of the Rom. persuasion in a disputation, when that Queen was about to settle a reformation in the Church of England. But that disputation coming to nothing, he was made Bishop of Ely, to which See he was consecrated 21. Dec. 1559; yet, whether it was for his retiredness, or small hospitality, or the spoil he was said to make of his woods and parks, feeding his Family with powdered venison, he was but in little favour with the said Queen. At Cambridge he was esteemed a good Scholar, and a better Poet than Dr. Wal. Haddon, who call'd him Master, as having been either his Scholar or Servant. There goes under this Dr. Coxe's names,

Oration at the conclusion of the disputation. — These two orations, which are in latine, were printed 1549. in qu. and afterwards among Pet. Martyrs works. Dr. Coxe also had a considerable hand in framing the first Liturgy of the Church of England, and a hand in the third an. 1559, and also turned into metre the Lords Prayer, at the end of the Psalmes of David, besides other works not yet remembred by publick Authors. He yielded up his last breath (22. Jul.) in Fifteen hundred eighty and one, and 1581. was buried in the Cath. Church of Ely near to the monument of Bishop Goodrich. I find another Rich. Coxe who was living (and a writer) in the time of the former, but that Rich. Coxe which Job. Leland the Antiquary and Poet doth so much (t) celebrate for his faith and integrity in a copy of verses written to Thom. Legh of Adlington Esq. must be understood of Bishop Coxe before mention'd.

NICHOLAS SAUNDERS the most noted defender 215. of the R. Cath. cause in his time, was born at Charlewood in Surrey, educated in Grammar learning in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. an. 1548, Bach. of the Laws 3 years after and about 1557, Shagling Lecturer, or as he himself (u) saith tantumquam regius professor juris canonici. But Religion putting on another face in the beginning of Q. Eliz. he left England about 1560, and going to Rome was made Priest and D. of D. and soon after went with Cardinal Stanislaus Hosius to the Council of Trent, where he shew'd himself to be a Man of great parts by his several disputations and arguings. Which Cardinal having an especial respect for, made him his individual companion in his journey into Poland, Prussia and Lithuania. As for the chief actions of his life that followed, his Sisters Son John Pitts, will tell (w) you. But that which I must not forget now to let you know, is, that when he was a Nuntio from P. Gregory 13 into Ireland (where he, with 3 Ships full of Spaniards landed at Smerwick in Kerrey, about the first of July 1579) to encourage the Irish there to take up arms and rebel against Qu. Elizabeth, was (after they, with the said Spaniards had been overcome by the English) forced to abscond in caves, dens, woods, &c. At length after two years time, being not able to hold out longer, did miserably perish by hunger and cold, at the same time as my Author saith (but as it seems false) that Gerald Fitzgerald Earl of Desmond chief captain of the rebels was taken in a poor cottage and kill'd. Of which matter hear what the learned Camden (x) tells us — 'The principal of whom (meaning the priests that persuaded the said Earl to forfeit his allegiance to his Prince) was Nich. Saunders an English Man, who, very near at the same instant of time, was miserably famish'd to death, when, forsaken of all, and troubled in mind for the bad success of the rebellion, he wandred up and down among woods, forests and mountains, and found no comfort or relief. In his pouch were found several speeches, and letters, made and written to confirm the rebels, stuffed with large promises from the Bishop of Rome and the Spaniard. Thus the divine justice (if a Man may judge) stopped that mouth with hunger, which had been always open to encourage rebellions, and to belch forth malicious lies and slanders. For (to omit other things) he was the first Man that broached that abominable lye concerning the birth of Qu. Elizabeth's Mother, which no Man in those days (though the hatred and the malice of the Papists was then fresh against her, and might remember it) ever knew, England in full forty years after never heard of, the computation of time doth egregiously convince of Pius 5. against Qu. Elizabeth to have been lawful, and affirmeth that by virtue thereof, one Dr. Nich. Moreton an old English fugitive and conspirator was sent from Rome into the north parts of England to stir up the first rebellion there, whereof Charles Nevile Earl of Westmorland was a head captain. And thereby it may manifestly appear to all Men how the said Bull was the ground of the rebellions both in England and Ireland.

Afterwards the book being translated into French, and printed 1673--4, gave occasion to Gilbert Burnet D.D. to write his two volumes of The Historie of the reformation of the Church of England. In the appendix to the first of which, you may read more of Saunders and his work de Schismate, as also of Edw. Rishton and his corrections and additions of, and to, that book.

Pitseus*, who tells us that he died in Ireland about 1580. yet Edw. Rishton who was his contemporary and knew him well, saith in the preface to the first edition of the book De orig. & progressu schism. printed at Col. Agrip. 1585 that he died in Ireland (in the County of Kerrey) in Fifteen hundred eighty and one. So that how it comes to pass that Camden should say (b) that he died in 1583, I cannot justly tell, unless his information was, that he died at that instant of time (as is before said) when the E. of Desmond was killed, which was (c) 1583 as he saith. The reader must now know, that whereas Camden (whom I follow in some things) tells us that our Author N. Saunders was miserably famish'd to death, seems to be contrary to what a certain (d) Author of Camdens time reports, but he being one of Saunders's perswasion may perhaps not be believed by many. He tells us that before the end of the said war, wherein Desmond was kill'd, Saunders was overtaken with the flux, (a usual disease with strangers in Ireland) and tho he was strong, and in the judgment of all near to him, far from the approach of death, yet in the beginning of the night he desired Cornelius the Bishop (titular) of Killa-loa to give him the extreme unction, for, saith he, this night I shall die, having received a call from my Creator. Whereupon Cornelius made answer that there was no need of it, seeing that his body was strong, and no sign of death near it. Notwithstanding this, his disease pressing forward, he was anointed in the middle of the night, and about the time of Cock-crowing he surrendered up his Soul to God. In the night following he was carried to his grave by 4 Irish chevaliers, whereof Dermotius O'Sullivan (father to the Author, whom I here quote) was one, and was buried by certain Priests according to their manner, his body having been exposed to the sight of certain Persons as well of England as of Ireland, who for privacy sake, were prohibited their presence at his funeral. Afterwards Cornelius went into Spain and died at Lisbon, an. 1617. Thus in effect the said Author, who tells us not the name of the place where he died, or was buried, neither the time when.

EDMOND CAMPIAN another stiff defender of the R. Cath. Religion, was born in London on St. Pauls day in Jan. 1540. educated in School-learning among the blew coats in Ch. Ch. Hospital within the said City, spoke an eloquent oration before Qu. Mary there at her first coming to the Crown, an. 1553, put in Scholar of St. Johns Coll. by the worthy founder thereof at its first foundation, took the Degree of Master of Arts in 1564, and was Junior of the Art celebrated on the 19. of Feb. the same year; at which time speaking one or more most admirable orations, to the envy of his contemporaries, caused one (*) of them, who was afterwards an Archbishop to say, that rather than he would omit the opportunity to shew his parts and dominare in una atque altera concupiscula, did take the oath against the Popes Supremacy, and against his conscience. Soon after, if not before, he took holy orders according to the Church of England from the hands of Rich. Cheyney Bishop of Gloucester, (who had encouraged him in his studies) and became a florid Preacher. In 1566 when Qu. Elizabeth was entertained by the University of Oxon, he did not only make an eloquent oration before her at her first entry, but also was Respondent in the Philosophy Art in St. Maries Church, performed by him with great applause from that Queen and the learned auditory. In 1568 he was the junior Proctor of the University, being the first of his Coll. who did undergo that office, and in the Year following he took a journey into Ireland, where improving his time very industriously, did, by the help of his admirable parts, write in short time a history of that Country; but then he being discovered to have left the Church of England and to labour for Profelytes, was seized, and detained for a time; but getting loole from his keepers, did with much ado obtain footing on the British shoare, an. 1571, where making but short stay, took shipping again and went into the Low Countries, and settling for a time in the English Coll. at Doway made an open recantation of his heresie, as they there still'd it, studied Divinity and had the Degree of Bach. of that faculty conferr'd upon him. Thence he went to Rome, where he was admitted into the Society of Jesus, in 1573, and being esteemed by the General of that order to be a Person every way compleat, was sent into Germany, where living for some time at Brune and afterwards at Vienna, compos'd a Tragedy called Nectar & Ambrosia, acted before the Emperor with great applause. Soon after settling at Prague in Bohemia, where had been newly erected a College for Jesuits, taught there, for about 6 years time, Philosophy and Rhetorick and became amongst them a constant Preacher in the Latin tongue. At length being called thence to Rome, was, with Father Persons, sent at the command of P. Gregory 13 into England, in 1580, where arriving at Dover, on the day next following that of St. John Baptist, was the day after that received with great joy by the Catholics in London. Afterwards he printed privately and by stealth his neat well penn'd book called Rationes decem, of which many copies were disperfed in St. Maries Church at an Ast-time, an. 1581. by one who was sometimes a Member of St. Johns Coll. (in the time of Campion) named Will. Hartley a R. Priest, a native of Nottinghamshire, and a learned Man, who being taken in short time after, was imprison'd, and in Feb. 1584 being released, was (with other Priests and Jesuits) put on Ship-board at Tower-wharf, and thence at the Queens charge was wafted over the Seas to Normandy, where he and his company were left to their shifts. Afterwards it being commonly known that Campion was in England, great inquisition was made after him. At length at the desire and insinuation of Walsingham Secretary of State, one George Eliot a Priest-catcher (sometimes a zealous Catholick) undertook, for a considerable reward, to find him out. But all his searchings in London availing not, he did at length, upon some intimation received, go into Berks. where with his attendants, making great enquiries, did with much ado find him out (disguised like a Royster, as 'tis said) in the house of Edw. Yates Esq. at Lyford, a little before which time Persons the Jesuit, who had been with, and accompanied, him in his travels to and fro, had left him, and diverted his course towards Kent. So that being carried as a Prisoner with triumph through Abendon, Henly, Colebrooke, and so through part of London with a paper fastned to his hat, and a writing thereon to shew to the People that he was Edm. Campian a most pernicious Jesuit, was clap'd up a close Prisoner within the Tower of London, where he did undergo many examinations from several People, abuses, wrackings, tortures and I know not what; but scarcely answered the expectation raised of, when certain Divines disputed with him. About which time a little Pamphlet was published in oct. containing a discourse of his apprehension, which I have not yet seen. All writers, whether Protestant or Popish, say that he was a Man of most admirable parts, an elegant Orator, a subtle Philosopher and disputant, and an exact Preacher whether in English, or Lat. tongue, of a sweet disposition, and a well-polished Man. A certain (f) writer saith he was of a sweet nature constantly carrying about him the charms of a plausible behaviour of a fluent tongue and good parts, and another (g) who was his most beloved friend, saith that he was upright in conscience, deep in judgment, and ripe in Eloquence. As for the works by him written, and published under his name, they are these.

Nectar & Ambrosia, Trag. — Much praised by Greg. Martin.

Rationes decem oblatis certaminis in causa fidei, redditae Academicis Angliae. Printed first of all privately in the house of one Stonor a Cath. Gent. living near to Henly in Oxfordshire, an. 1581, afterwards, at least five times, publicly beyond the Seas, (of which once was at Aug. Trev. 1583 in Concertat. Eccles. Cath.) and at length were translated into English — Lond. 1687. qu. These reasons were very learnedly answered by Will. Whistaker of Cambridge, and replied upon by John Durey a Scot; which Durey was answered by Dr. Laur. Humphrey.

Nine articles directed to the Lords of the Privy Council, an. 1581 — See more in Mer. Hammer, under the Year 1604, and in Rob. Persons, an. 1610.

Various conferences concerning Religion, had with Protestant Divines in the Tower of London, on the last of Aug. and on the 18, 23, and 27. of Septemb. 1581. Lond. 1583. qu. Among those Divines that he disputed with, were Alex. Nowell Dean of St. Pauls Cath. and Will. Day Dean of Windsore.

The History of Ireland, in two books — Written 1570. The MS. or original of which, being in the Cottonian (b) Library, was afterwards published by Sir James Ware of Dublin Knight — Dubl. 1633. fol.

Chronologia Universalis. Much commended by Greg. Martin before-mention'd.

Narratio de divortio Hen. 8. Regis ab uxore Catharina. Printed at the end of Nic. Harpesfield's Ch. History, at Doway, by the care of Rich. Gibbon a Jesuit, who also added thereunto a Lat. translation of John Speeds Catalogue of religious Houses, Colleges, and Hospitals in England and Wales.

Among which orations, are those (as I suppose) which he made at the funeral of Sir Tho. Whyte, and of the Lady Amey Roberts the first Wife of Robert Earl of Leycester, whose body having been at first buried in Common Church near Abendon, (for there she died, or rather was murdered, in the mannon house there belonging to *Ans. Letters to Everard Mercurian, General of the Society of Jesus, giving an account of his proceedings in England, an. 1580. — Printed in Lat. in Concertatio Eccles. Cath. in Anglia, part 1. p. 3. and elsewhere. Besides all these, are other things of our Author Campion, which I have not yet seen, that were collected and published among some of his works by Silvester à Petra Sancta a Jesuit of Italy, printed at Antw. 1631. in tw. but those things being scarce and rare to be had, I can make no farther report of them, nor their Author, only that he, with other Rom. Priests, having been found guilty of treason according to the Act of 25. Ed. 3. and of adhering to the Bishop of Rome, the Queens Enemy, and of coming into England to disturb the peace and quiet of the Realm &c. were executed at Tybourne near London on the first of Decemb. in Fifteen hundred eighty and one, but what afterwards became of 1581. Campions carcals I know not. Paul Bombin a Jesuit hath written his Life and Martyrdom, published at Antw. 1618. in 12°. and afterwards at Mantua an. 1620. in oct. But that Pamphlet, which I have several years look'd after, but in vain, is the Report of the death and martyrdom of E. Campian, R. Sherwyn and A. Briant, printed in English, in oct. soon after their death. The two last of which I am now about to mention.

RALPH SHERWYN, where born unless in the We. 217.

Stern parts of England I know not, was made Fellow of Exeter Coll. by Sir Will. Petre a principal benefactor thereunto, in July 1568, went through with great industry the several classes of Logick and Philosophy, and in 1574 proceeding in Arts, was made Senior of the Ast celebrated 26 July the same year, being then accounted an acute Philosopher, and an excellent Grecian and Hebræian. Afterwards he, (with Job. Currey M. of A. and Fellow of the said Coll.) obtaining leave to travel beyond the Seas in July 1575, left the University, utterly renounced the Religion, in which he had been mostly educated, went to Doway, spent some time in the study of Divinity in the English Coll. there, and was made Priest with Laur. Johnson (who afterwards was hanged by the name of Richardson) 23. March 1577. In that place (and for a time in the English Coll. at Rome) he continued in making progress in divine studies till about the beginning of 1580, and then instead of going into England with certain Persons of his society into the Mission, he went to Rheims upon publick concerns to be had with Thom. Goldwell Bishop of St. Asaph then there, who being at that time in a sickly condition, and therefore not able to serve Sherwin and his Brethren as to Episcopal confirmation and other matters relating to the mission, he waited upon the said Bishop in the quality of a Chaplain during his sickness. Afterwards being well, and sent for to Rome, Sherwin went into England, and before he was quite settled in London, he was taken in the house of one Roscarriot or Roscarrock, committed Prisoner to the Marshalsea, and had fetters fastned to his legs. While he continued there he had notice once or twice that he should prepare himself to dispute with certain Protestant Divines; whereupon shewing himself very ready to encounter them, he was translated to the Tower of London, where, after he had many questions proposed to him concerning Campion, Persons and other Priests, he shew'd himself afterwards to be a Man of parts, and one that needed not to be asham'd of his education in Exeter College. At length after he had continued there more than an year in great misery, was at length tried for his life, and refusing several times the Oath of Supremacy and going to hear service in the Protestant Churches, was condemned to die. His writings are,

Discourse in the tower of London with Edm. Campian the Jesuit.

Account of the disputations in Wisbich Castle between Will. Fulk of Cambridge and certain R. Priests who were were Prisoners there. — These two are not printed, but kept in MS. as choice reliques among R. Cath. beyond the Sea. Where, or else in the Tower, Rich. Stanyhurst saw them.

Epistles and Letters to divers Persons — Two of which are in a book entit. Concertatio Ecclesie Catholice. Aug. Trev. 1594. fol. 71. 72. &c. See more of him in the latter end of Pet. White, under the Year 1590. At length being found guilty of high treason, was hang'd, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn 1. Decemb. in Fifteen hundred eighty and one. At the same time suffered Edm. Campian before-mentioned, who was much pittied by all learned Men, especially by his contemporaries in Oxon, as Sherwyn was, who had been very often a companion with Campian in his travels. Alex. Briant also (whom I am now about to mention) did suffer at the same time, and tho not so much commiserated by Scholars, yet by many others, because he was, as the character went on both sides, juvenis pulcherrimus, vultu innocens & prope angelico, &c. Contemporary with Ralph Sherwyn was one Martin Ayray, who, after he had left this University, was one of the first that was brought up in the English Coll. at Rome, and was companion there with the said Sherwyn. Afterwards he became a good workman in England and of great edification for divers years (as those of his opinion say) both before he was taken, and afterwards in Prison. He was living in 1602 which was the last year of Qu. Elizab. at which time he was Provost of the English Church and residence of St. George in St. Lucar of Spain.

218 ALEXANDER BRIANT received his first breath in Somersetshire, was admitted a Student of Hart hall about Lent-term in 1573 aged 17 or more, where being trained up under a tutor sufficiently addicted to Popery, left the University and went to Rheimes and afterwards to Doway: At the last of which places taking the Priesthood on him, he returned into his own Country, an. 1579. and settling for a time in Somersetshire, converted the Father of Rob. Persons the Jesuit, to the R. Cath. Religion. On the 28. Apr. 1581 he was taken in the night time in his Lodging by one Norton, who took away 3 l. in money from him, besides cloathes, and conducting him to a Magistrate, was after examination, committed close Prisoner to the Compter in London, where enduring great misery till the morrow after the Ascension, was removed to the Tower of London, and there (as (k) 'tis reported) he was tormented with needles thrust under his nayles, racked also otherwise in cruel sort, and specially punished by two whole days and nights with famine, which they did attribute to obstinacy, but indeed (sustained in Christs quarrel) it was most honorable constancy. While he was in Prison he wrot (l), Litteræ ad reverendos patres societatis Jesu in Anglia degentes. The beginning of which is, Quoties mecum cogito reverendi patres, &c. They were written purposely that they would be pleased to receive him into the Order of Jesus before he died, which accordingly they did to his great comfort.

Several Letters to his friends, and afflicted Catholicks. — Whether extant I know not. At length being found guilty of high treason at a Sessions in London, he was hang'd, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn, on the first day of Dec. in Fifteen hundred eighty and one; whereupon his quarters were hanged up for a time in publick places. He had for his Tutor in Hart hall (after he had continued there for some time) one Rich. Holtbie born at Fraiton in Yorkshire, educated for a time in Cambridge, and afterwards going to Oxon, settled in the said hall, an. 1574 aged 21. and more; but departing without any Degree in this University, he went beyond the Seas to Doway, then to Rheimes and other places, became a noted Jesuit and spun out his time to a fair age. The reader is now to know, that during the principality of Philip Rondell of Hart hall, who had weathered out several changes of Religion (tho in his heart he was a Papist, but durst not shew it) many Persons who were afterwards noted in the Rom. Church, were educated under him, but they having not exercised their pens upon any subject that I can yet find, I can claim no pretence to set them down among such writers that that ancient house of learning hath sent into the learned world.

JAMES DYER second Son of Rich. Dyer of Wymanul-ton in Somersetshire Esq. by his Wife the Dau. of one Wai-ton of the said County, was born, as I conceive, at Wymanul-ton, but in what house he was educated in Oxon (for he was a Commoner for some time there) it appears not, notwithstanding tradition tells us in Broadgates hall. From thence, without the honor of a Degree, he went to the Middle Temple, where making great proficiency in the municipal Laws, was, after he had continued for some time in the Degree of Barrester, elected Autumn, or Summer, Reader of that house 6. Ed. 6. and about the same time was by writ called to the Degree of Serjeant at Law. In the Reign of Qu. Marie he was made a Justice of the Common-pleas, (being about that time a Knight and Recorder of Cambridge) and in the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth Lord Chief Justice of that Court, in the place of Sir Anth. Browne, and not Lord Ch. Justice of the Kings-bench as one (m) doth falsly report. As for his writings which shew him a great and eminent Sage of the Law, and a Person of great abilities are these.

Reports: or, a collection of Cases, with divers resolutions and judgments given upon solempne arguments, &c. and the reasons and causes of the said resolutions and judgments, in the Reigns of K. Hen. 8. Ed. 6. Phil. and Mary and Qu. Eliz. Lond. 1601. 1621. &c. fol. Abridged by Sir Tho. Ireland of Greys-Inn, (the same Person who abridged the Eleven Books of Reports of Sir Edw. Coke) and by another, with a table made to them: printed by Rich. Totbill.

Learned reading upon the useful statute of 32. Hen. 8. chap. 1. of Wills, and of 34 and 35. Hen. 8. chap. 5. for the explanation of that statute. Lond. 1648. qu. At length this great Lawyer having arrived to a good old age, paid his last debt to nature at Stowton in Huntingdonshire (where he had purchased an estate) on the 24. March in Fifteen hundred eighty and one, whereupon his body was buried 158. in the Parish Church of Much Stowton in the said County, near to that of his Wife, on the 9 day of Apr. 1582. His said Wife was named Margaret Dau. of Sir Maurice Abarrow of Hampshire Knight, Widow of Sir Tho. Eliot of Carleton in Cambridgeshire, (by whom she had 3 Sons but all died without issue) which Margaret (n) died 25. Aug. 1569, but having had no Children by Sir James went after his death to Richard, Son of his Brother Laurence Dyer, whose posterity are at this time Baronets in Somersetshire.

RICHARD BRISTOW another most zealous Person 220. for the R. Cath. cause, was born of honest Parents within the City of Worcester, educated in Grammar learning under one Rog. Golbourne M. A. (the same I think who was a Reader in St. Bernards Coll. in the Year 1540) was saluted the Oxonian Muses in 1555, but whether he was then entered into Exeter Coll. I know not. One Bristow I find to be Chaplain of Ch. Ch. in 1549. 50. and 51. but him I cannot take to be the same with the former, because he of Ch. Ch. seems then to be Master of Arts. As for our R. Bristow he took the Degree of Bach. of Arts in the beginning of the Year 1559, that also of Master in 1562, and was Junior of the Aet celebrated 13 of July the same Year, at which time he was entered in the Proctors book as a member of Ch. Ch. About that time, having obtained great credit among the Academians, for his admirable speeches spoken while Junior of the Aet, he applied himself to the study of Divinity, became noted in the University for his acute parts, and being recommended therefore to that singular lover of learning Sir Will. Petre, was by him promoted to one of his Scholarships or Fellowships in Exeter Coll. in July 1567, where exercising himself much in Theology, did in a set disputation in the Divinity School put the Kings Professor (L. Humphrey) to a non-plus, as those of our Authors perswasion do report. At length being convinced that he had erred in his opinion, left the Coll. in 1569, his Religion, and the Kingdom, went to Lovaine and became acquainted with Dr. William Allen, who made him the first Moderator (or Prefect of studies) in the English Coll. by him founded at Doway, took upon him the Priesthood, being the first in that Coll. that did so, and read the publick lecture of Divinity there. In 1573 his said Scholarship or Fellowship of Ex. Coll. being pronounced void, because he had been absent several years, John Petre Son of Sir W. Petre before-mention'd did put into his room Mr. Oliver Whiddon Archdeacon of Totnes 27. Oct. but resigned it in the latter end of Nov. following. Afterwards upon Dr. Allens instituting another Seminary at Rheims, Bristow was sent for, and the care of that place was committed to him also, in 1579, while another was his substitute at Doway: About which time he took the Degrees in Divinity, partly at Doway and partly at Louvaine, and became famous in those parts for his Religion and learning. He hath written,

A brief treatise of diverse plaine and sure wayes to find out the truth in this doubtful and dangerous time of heresie, containing sundry motives unto the Cath. Faith; or, considerations to move a Man to believe the Catholics, and not the Hereticks. Antw. 1599. in tw. and before, at another place. Dr. W. Allens testimony of this treatise is prefixed, dat. 30. Apr. 1574, wherein he saith that the said book contains with great perspicuity, order, and art divers most excellent works, whereby to discern in Religion the true judgment of the Catholick Church from the false vanity of the Hereticks, &c. that it is also in all points Catholick, learned and worthy to be read and printed. These motives were answered by Dr. Will. Fulke of Cambridge.

Reply to Will. Fulke, in defence of Dr. Allens scrowle of articles, and book of Purgatory. Lov. 1580. qu. Whereupon Dr. Fulke came out with a rejoinder the Year following.

Anti-Heretica Motiva, omnibus catholica doctrina orthodoxis cultoribus pernecessaria. Atrebat. 1608. in two tomes in qu. This large book, which contains most, if not all the former motives, was translated into Lat. by Thom. Worthington a Secular Priest (afterwards a Jesuit) an. 1606. and by him published at Arras two years after.

Demands (51 in number) to be proposed by Catholics to the Hereticks. — Several times printed in oct. This also was answered in a book entit. To the seminary Priests late come over, some like Gentlemen, &c. Lond. 1592. qu.

A defence of the Bull of P. Pius 5. — He also collected and for the most part wrote Annotations on the New Testament, translated into English at Rheims. And was also as it seems Author of, Veritates aureae S. R. ecclesiae auctoritatum vet. patrum, &c. Printed 1616. qu. for the name of R. Bristow Anglus is set to that Book. At length after our Author had lived at Rheims about two years, went privately into England (by his Physicians advice) for healths sake in 1581, and going to London, was kindly received by, and entertain'd in the Family of, one Bellamie, (Rob. or Jerome Bellamie as it seems) a sincere and constant Lover of R. Catholics and their Religion. But his distemper being gone too far, dyed the year following, and was by Bellamie buried 1582. privately, but where, unless near to Harrow on the hill in Middlesex, where the Bellamies had a seat and Lands, I know not. In the Year 1682 I received a note from one of the English Coll. in Doway, whereby I was instructed that Rich. Bristow was made D. of D. at Doway, from whence he was sent into England, where he died not far from London 18. Oct. 1581. But this note I reject, because that what I have said already of his death, I had from the writings of one that knew him, viz. Tho. Worthington, who published his Motives.

221. GREGORY MARTIN received his first breath at Macksfield near to Winchelsey in Suffex, was put in one of the original Scholars of S. Johns Coll. by the Founder thereof Sir Tho. White, in 1557, where going thro the usual forms of Logick and Philosophy with incredible industry, took the degree of Master of Arts, 1564. Afterwards he was taken into the Family of Thomas the great and mighty Duke of Norfolk to be Tutor to his Son the Lord Philip (afterwards Earl of Surrey) and his Brethren; where continuing for some years, it hapned in that time that the said Duke came to Oxon, and giving a visit to S. Johns Coll. had an eloquent Speech delivered before him by one of that Society, wherein, of Gr. Martin, he said thus — Habes illustrissime Dux, Hebraeum nostrum, Graecum nostrum, Poetam nostrum, decus & gloriam nostram. After he had done with his service in the said Dukes Family, and received sufficient rewards for his pains, he went beyond the Seas, and renouncing his Religion openly, (for before he was but a Catholick in private) he retired to Doway, where applying his mind to the studies of Divinity, was made a Licentiat in that Faculty, in 1575. Afterwards going into Italy, he went to Rome to do his Devotions to the places and Temples of the Apostles, but making no long stay there, he went to Rheims in France, where fixing his station in the English Coll. became publick Professor, and one of the Divinity-Readers there. He was a most excellent Linguist, exactly read and vers'd in the Sacred Scriptures, and went beyond all of his time in humane literature, whether in Poetry or Prose. As for those things he hath written, they have been, and are, taken into the hands of Men of his profession, but all that I have seen of them, are only these.

A treatise of Schisme, shewing that all Catholics ought in any wise to abstaine altogether from heretical Conventicles, viz. their Prayers, Sermons, &c. Doway 1578. oct.

A discovery of the manifold corruptions of the Holy Scripture by the Hereticks of our days, especially the English Sectaries, and of their foul dealing herein by partial and false translations, &c. Rheims, 1582. oct. Answered in a book entituled, A defence of the sincere and true translations of the Holy Scriptures into the English tongue, &c. Lond. 1583. oct. Written by Will. Fulke D. D. Master of Pembroke hall in Cambridge.

Treatise of Christian Peregrination and relicks — Printed 1583. oct.

Epistles to certain of his friends — The last of which (which is the largest) dat. 15. Oct. 1575. was written to Dr. Tho. Whyte then lately Warden of New Coll. touching his following the world, and dissembling in Religion against his conscience and knowledge.

Of the love of the soul, with questions to the Protestants — Printed at Roan in Normandy. He hath also written other books which remain in MS. in several Libraries beyond the Sea, as I conceive, treating of Divinity. In the Year 1584 was set forth a certain book which one (*) calls a horrid piece of Popish malice against Queen Elizabeth. wherein her Gentlemen were exhorted to act the like against the Queen, as Judah had done with applause and commendations against Holofernes. The Author was never discovered, but the suspicion lighted upon Gregory Martin, (one very learned in the Greek and Lat. tongues) as my Author before quoted saith, but how he could be Author, having been dead two years before that time, I cannot say. He also was the chief Man that translated the New Testament; printed at Rheims 1582, for which work his name remains precious to this day among those of his party. He also made other translations, which are preserved in MS. in certain Libraries, among which is the Tragedy of Cyrus King of Persia, which is, as some say, in the Library of St. Johns Coll. in Oxon. See the titles of other books, which are remembered by one (o) that knew him, while I in the mean time tell you, that our Author dying 28. Octob. in Fifteen hundred eighty and two, was 1582. buried in the Parish Church of St. Stephen at Rheims. There is an Epitaph over his grave comprehended in 16 verses, the two first of which are these.

Quem tulit umbrosis tenerum Scythia sylvia,

Gallica qua spectat regna Britannus ager.

The rest I shall now omit for brevity sake and proceed to the next in order, who was a Romanist also.

WILLIAM HART, a most zealous young Man for 222. the R. Cath. cause, was born in Somersetshire, entred in his puerile years into Lincoln Coll. an. 1572, where after he had been instructed in Grammar and Logick, left it without a Degree, his relations and Country, and going beyond the Seas to Doway, compleated his studies in Philosophy. Afterwards he travelled to Rome, studied Divinity and was there made a Priest. At length being sent into the mission of England before he was 24 years of age, settled in Yorkshire, where he administred comfort to the afflicted Catholics for a considerable time, with little or no interruption. At length being taken and imprison'd at York, he wrote, Letters to certaine Catholics.

Letters to his spiritual Sons.

(*) Gul. Camden in Annal. sub. an. 1584. (o) Jo. Pi-few in lib. De illustr. Angl. script. at. 16. nu. 1031.

Letters

Letters to the afflicted Cath. and to those that suffer in Prison.

Letters to a noble Matron — All which, at least 10 in number, were as I presume written by him in the English tongue. The Latine copies, with many things of their Author, you may see in a book entit. Concertatio Ecclesiæ Catholica in Anglia, p. 104. mention'd in Job. Bridgewater among the writers following, under the Year 1594. This Will. Hart was hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd, for being a R. Priest, at York, on the 15 of March in Fifteen hundred eighty and two, and his quarters afterwards hanged up in publick places. In his time were several young Scholars of Lincoln Coll. educated, and afterwards professed themselves openly to be R. Catholics, having received instructions from some of the Fellows that were inclined that way, but chiefly from the Rector thereof Job. Bridgewater before-mentioned, who always was in his heart a R. Catholic, and resign'd at last his Rectory to prevent expulsion. Some of them I shall mention, as they lay in my way.

223. NICHOLAS HARPESEILD an eminent Theologist, well skill'd in both the Laws, and in Greek, History, and Poetry; in all, or most of which faculties, having written very well, do report him renowned by those of his own perswasion. His first being in this World, he received in the Parish of St. Marie Magd. (in Old-Fishstreet) within the City of London, and his Grammaticals in Wykeham's School near to Winchester. In 1536 he was admitted true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. (after he had served 2 years of probation there) about which time having with great industry gone through all the parts of Philosophy, he applyed himself to the study of the Civil and Canon Law, wherein he became very eminent. In 1544, he being then Bach. of the Civ. Law of about an year standing, was admitted Principal of an ancient hostle (mostly for Civilians) called White hall (on the Site of which, Jesus Coll. was afterwards partly built) and in 1546 he was appointed by K. Hen. 8. to be the Kings Professor of the Greek tongue in the University. In 1553 he left his Fellowship, took the Degree of Doctor of his faculty, and had then considerable practice in the Court of Arches. In 1554 he was made Archdeacon of Canterbury in the place of Edm. Cranmer, (Brother to the Archb.) deprived for being married, and in the beginning of Qu. Elizab. he was one of the 7 R. Cath. Divines who were to dispute with those of the Protestant party concerning matters of Religion, when Qu. Eliz. was setting on foot a reformation in the Church of England. But that matter coming to nothing, he was soon after imprison'd for defying the Queens Supremacy over the Church, and thereupon had opportunity given to write several books, some of which follow.

Dialogi sex, contra summi pontificatus, monasticæ vitæ, sanctorum, sacrorum imaginum, oppugnatores & pseudo-Martyres. Antw. 1566. qu. Which book being put into the hands of his friend Alan Cope, he put it out under his name, lest danger should befall the Author in Prison. See before in Alan Cope, an. 1580. Our Author Harpesfeild wrote also,

Historia Anglicana Ecclesiastica, à primis gentis susceptæ fidei incunabilis, ad nostra fere tempora deducta. Duac. 1622. fol. published by Rich. Gibbon a Jesuit. 'Tis a book no less learnedly, than painfully performed, and abating his partiality to his own interest, he well deserves of all posterity. The original of this Ecclesiastical history, written with the Authors own hand, is in the Cottonian-Library, under Vitellius. C. 9. num. 12. and a copy of it in two volumes is in the Archbishops Library at Lambeth, L. 3. and 4. But in that copy in the Cottonian, are several things expunged by the Licenser, and not at all remitted into the printed copy. Among which are these to be in p. 422. cap. 2. lin. 4. and to come in between the words inter exitialem, and Qui omnis, &c. — Non ignoro magna Innocentium Romanum pontificem invidia propter Johannem (meaning K. John of Engl.) apud quosdam laborare (quæ de re non est hic discipulandi locus, neque ego quidem idoneus arbiter, neque volo eam mihi quam non habeo, jurisdictionem prorogare) qui ut non forsitan omni culpa immodicaque cupiditate libranda sit, ita certe Johannes, qui, &c. Allo in the same page and chapter, in the last line from the bottom, saving one, are these words omitted between Innocentio suggerente and Stephanum Langtonum — aut ut quidam tradunt pontificiarum dirarum terroribus exprimente — There are many other things of the like nature omitted in the printed copy, which the MS. in Cottons Libr. had in it before they were expunged, especially matters that laid open the discords, broiles, and ambitious poverty of the begging Fryers.

Historia hæresis Wicliffianæ. Published by the said Gibbon with the former book; a MS. copy of which is also in Lambeth Library, l. 5.

Chronicon à diluvio Noë ad an. 1559. Written in lat. verse, and is at this time in the Cottonian Library, under Vitellius C. 9. nu. 11.

Impugnatio contra Bullam Honorii papæ primi ad Cantabrigiam. MS.

A treatise concerning marriage, occasion'd by the pretended divorce between K. Hen. 8. and Qu. Catherine. In 3 books — MS. in New Coll. Library. The beginning of the Epistle to the Reader is, It is an old saying, &c. and of the work it self; Forasmuch as this matter is incident to the life and doings of Sir Tho. More, &c. At the end of the said book is this note. This copy was taken from the original, which was found by Mr. Topcliff in the house of William, sometimes servant to the said Dr. Harpesfeild, who confessed that two lines of the said original, were of his said Masters own hand writing. What other things, he hath written, whether published, or in MS. I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that after he had been a Prisoner in London, more than 20 years, he gave way to fate in Fifteen hundred eighty and three, having had this Encomium given to him by the Antiquarian-Poet (p) Job. Leland — Atticæ Linguae interpres facilis, disertus, aptus. I find (q) another Nich. Harpesfeild who was bred in Oxon. and being 24 years of age 1496 became about that time Minister of Uphill in Somersetshire by the presentation of Joan the relict of Edward Viscount Lisle, and Rector of Ashrengney alias Ryngesash in the Dioc. of Exeter; but what relation the former I had to this, know not. 1583.

JOHN NICOLLS, a busie and forward Welsh Man, 224. was born near to Dunraven, or, as the R. Cath. writers say, at Cowbridge, in Glamorganshire, did first of all apply his muse to Academical learning in White hall where Jesus Coll. now stands, in the Year of his age 16. where spending one year, he translated himself to Brasenose Coll. and continued there till he was Bachelours standing. Afterwards leaving the University without a Degree, he went into his own Country, where at first he taught a Gentlemans Children, and then became Curat of Witchcomb, under one Mr. Jones Vicar of Taunton in Somersetshire. From thence he removed to Whitestanton, where he exercised his function till 1577, at which time being possessed with certain motives, left the Church of England, went to London and ship'd himself for Antwerp, where tarrying for some time, he went to Rbeimes and at length to Rome. So that as soon as he was settled, and had gained an opportunity, he offered himself to the inquisition, made a recantation of his heresie, as 'tis there call'd, and forthwith was not only received into the bosome of the holy Cath. Church, but also as a member into the English Coll. at that place; where, after he had continued about two years, did, under pretence of going to Rbeimes, return into England, was seized on at Islington by London, sent Prisoner to the Tower, and there recanted his R. Cath. opinions before Sir Owen Hopton Lieutenant thereof, several courtiers, and others. After which he published these books.

His pilgrimage, wherein is displayed the lives of the proud Popes, ambitious Cardinals, lecherous Bishops, fat bellied Monks, and hypocritical Jesuits. Lond. 1581. oct.

Declaration of his recantation, wherein he desireth to be reconciled, and received as a member into the true Church of Christ in England. Lond. 1581. oct. Soon after came out A confutation of Job. Nicolls his recantation, &c. written by Anonymus, but answer'd by an old puritan call'd Dudley Fenner, Lond. 1583. qu. Which Fenner a noted dissenter from the Church of England died at Middleborough in Zeland, in the winter time, an. 1589.

Oration and Sermon pronounced before the Cardinals, an. 1578. — or as another title saith. An oration and sermon made at Rome by commandment of the four Cardinals and the Dominican inquisitor, &c. Lond. 1581. oct. After which the R. Catholics taking these things as unworthily and falsely done, one of them named Rob. Persons a Jesuit published a book against him entit. A discovery of Jo. Nicolls Minister, misreported a Jesuit. Printed 1581. in oct. After which, Nicolls to vindicate himself, published,

An answer to an infamous libell maliciously written and cast abroad against him. Lond. 1581. oct. Notwithstanding which, and the endeavours of D. Fenner and other Puritans, who laboured to strengthen him in his Faith, yet he went beyond the Sea again, but upon what account I know not, tho I am apt not to think, upon any design of turning Mahumetan, as N. Saunders or rather his continuator Rishon is pleased to tell (r) us. However it is, sure I am, that being got as far as Roan in Normandy, he was there seized on, clapt up in Prison, an. 1582 and like to pay for his old tales against the Romanists. Soon after came out a Pamphlet entit. A report of the apprehension and imprisonment of Jo. Nicolls Minister, at Roan, and his confession, &c. Printed 1583 in oct. In this perplexity and restraint, the said Rishon tells us how Nicolls recanted all that he formerly had uttered against them, protesting that what he had formerly divulged, was either through vain glory, envy, fear, or hopes of reward. About that time he also wrot, Literæ ad D. Gul. Alanum. Printed at the end of Saunders his third book De schism. Anglican. Col. Agr. 1590 and Literæ aliæ ad eundem Alanum, 19. Feb. 1583. Printed there also in the same edition. After which follows, Confessio publica Joh. Nicolai; qua fatetur se multa mendacia contra summum Pontificem, Cardinales, & Catholicos Anglos protulisse eo tempore, quo in Angliâ versabatur, &c.

Clar. 1583. What became of him afterwards I cannot find, nor do I know any more of him only this, that it doth appear from his writings that he was an inconstant Man in his Religion, timorous, vain-glorious, and a meer braggadocio. I find another Joh. Nicolls, who was born in Norwycb, educated in Cambridge, and from the Popish Religion wherein he was trained up, became a zealous Protestant, but he lived and died before the time of the former Jo. Nicolls. See more in Jo. Bale, cent. 9. nu. 26.

225. THOMAS HETH, or Heath well known to, and respected by, Dr. Job. Dee and Mr. Tho. Allen, was born in the City of London, admitted Probationer-Fellow of Allsoul's Coll. in 1567, proceeded in Arts 1579, being then in great repute for his admirable skill in Astronomical and Physicall affairs. The products of which are,

A manifest and apparent confutation of an Astrological discourse lately published to the discomfort (without cause) of the weak and simple sort.

Brief Prognostication, or Astronomical prediction of the conjunction of the two superiour Planets, Saturne and Jupiter, which shall be in 1583. Apr. 29. &c. — Printed with the former book. Both these were written 25 March the same year, to Sir George Carey Knight, Knight-Marshal of her Majesties most honorable household, who was a cherisher of the muse of our Author, and printed at Lond. 1583. oct. The said Astrological discourse, which our Author answer'd, was written in the beginning of January, an. 1582. upon the great and notable conjunction of the two superior Planets, Saturne and Jupiter, which was to happen 28 Apr. (Heib saith 29.) 1583, by Rich. Harvey a native of Saffron-Walden in Essex, Brother to Dr. Gabr. Harvey, and a Student in Cambridge, particularly, as I conceive, in Trinity hall, afterwards a professed Divine, and a Man of note. Upon the coming out of the said Astrological discourse, the common sort of People were driven out of their wits, and knew not what to do. But when nothing hapned, which was therein predicted, they fell to their former security, and condemned the discoverer of extreme madnels and folly. Whereupon Tom Nash did register (s) down the infinite scorn that the whole realm entertained it with, the adages also that ran upon it, with Tarltons and Eldertons nigrum thesa set to it. What became of our Author Tho. Heath I know not, nor of another Tho. Heath Bach. of Arts of Magd. hall, an. 1570, whom my friend takes to be the Astronomer, and not him of Alls. Coll. but mistaken, as I conceive, for certain reasons, not necessary to be now set down. Heath the Astronomer was in great renown among those of his profession in Fifteen hundred eighty and three, but when he died, or where he was buried, I cannot justly say. As for Rich. Harvey before-mention'd, it was the very self-same Person who read the Philosophy Lecture at Cambridge, and the same whom the whole University biffat, if you'll believe that noted Buffoon (t) Tho. Nash his contemporary there; who farther adds, that Tarlton at the theater made jests of him, and W. Elderton consum'd his ale-cramm'd nose to nothing, in bear-baiting him with whole bundels of ballads. 'Twas the same Rich. Harvey also that set Aristotle with his heels upward on the School-gates at Cambridge, and asses ears on his head, a thing that the said Tom did in perpetuam rei memoriam (u) record: And the same Person who coming to take one Smiths (a young Bachelor of Trinity Coll.) questions, cried out, when he durst not venture on them, Aquila non capit muscâ; and so gave them to him again. Whereunto, the other (being a lusty big-bon'd fellow, and a Goliath or Behemoth in comparison of him) strait retorted, nec eliphas mures, and thereupon parted. The same Dick Harvey also, of whom Christoph. Marlo was wont to say that he was an asse and good for nothing but to preach of the iron age. But to let pals other matters which these vain Men report of Rich. Harvey, it is fit that the reader should know some of the other works that he hath done, which shew him quite another Person than what they make him to be, as (1) A discourse of the eclipse of the Sun which hapned in 1582, as also A compendious table of pblebotomie. Both printed at the end of the Astrological discourse. Lond. 1583. oct. (2) Ephemeron, five Pæan, in gratiam propurgatæ, reformatæque Dialecticæ. Lond. 1582. oct. (3) Theological discourse of the Lamb of God, and his enemies. Containing a brief commentary of Christian faith; together with a detection of old and new barbarisme. Lond. 1590. qu. and fourthly was, as I conceive, the Author of another book entit. Philadelphus; or, a defence of Brutes and the Brutans history. Lond. 1593. qu. This Rich. Harvey had a Brother named John Harvey a Cambridge Man also, who wrot An addition to the late discourse upon the great conjunction of Saturn and Jupiter. Lond. 1583. oct. which discourse, as I have told you before, was written by his Brother Richard, and thereunto was adjoyn'd by John his translation of Hermes Tresmagistus his Jatromathematica, and was afterwards Author of A discursive problem concerning prophecies, how far they are to be credited, according to the surest rules of Div. Phil. Astrol. and other learning, &c. Lond. 1588. qu.

THOMAS MARTYN, a younger Son of Tho. Mar- 226.
tyn Gent. was born at Cerneley commonly called Cearne in Dorsetshire, educated in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, admitted true and perpetual Fellow of New Coll. after he had served two years of probation, an. 1539, where applying his genius to the faculty of the Civ. Law, made great proficiency therein. At length obtaining leave to travel, went as a Tutor to certain young Gentlemen into France, where making his chief residence in the University of Bourges, took the Degree of Doctor in the same faculty there. Of whose behaviour and manner of life, while he continued there, is a testimony (w) extant, written by Francis Baldwin of Arras, Doctor of the Civ. Law and publick Reader at Bourges. But forasmuch as the said Baldwin was an ill natur'd, turbulent and quarrellous Man, as I understand from other places, and Jo. Bale the publisher of the said testimony (full of ill language) as bad almost as he, and one that speaks well of no R. Catholic, not so much as of Sir Tho. More, Cuthb. Tonstal Cardinal Job. Fisher, &c. especially of those that wrot against Priests marriages, as our Author Thom. Martyn did, they therefore, I presume, are not to be believed, tho there is no doubt but that Martyn had his faults as well as they. Besides what is in that testimony, Bale calls him (x) a known pedant or paederafter, the subtle (y) summoner of Berkshire and the clark protector of the Popes Sodomites under Winchester a polytick (z) Gentleman that runs with all winds — the great (a) Hercules and mighty defender of stinking buggeries, &c. besides other ill language (b) elsewhere. But if you'll consult Pisens you'll find him quite another Man, as others also of his perswasion make him, which I shall now omit. In 1553 he resigned his Fellowship, being then in good practice in the Court of Arches and an officer in the Archdeacons Court of Berks. In the Year 1555 he was incorporated Doctor of the Civil Law in this University, about which time being in favour with Dr. Bonner Bishop of London and with Gardiner B. of Winton, became Chancellor to the last, and of noted repute during the Reign of Qu. Mary, who had so great a respect for him and his abilities, that she commissioned him with Dr. Storie to go to Oxon to trie and examine Archb. Cranmer. He published,

A treatise proving that the marriage of Priests and professed Persons, is no marriage, but altogether unlawful. Lond. 1554. qu. Whereupon Job. Ponet or Poynt Bishop of Winton, came out with an answer thus entit. An apology fully answering by Scriptures and antient Doctors a blasphemous book gathered by Dr. Steph. Gardiner, Dr. Rich. Smyth, Albertus Pigbius and other Papiſts, as by their books appears, and of late set forth under the name of Tho. Martyn Doct. of the Civ. Law, &c. Printed beyond the Sea, an. 1555—56. in oct. In which book, fol. 9. Ponet saith thus—'Thy book hath betrayed thee Martyn, for thy fondness was not known before it came abroad, but as soon as that shewed it self in Mens hands, they might easily perceive that in playing the Christmas Lords minion in New Coll. in Oxon in thy fools coat, thou didst learn thy boldness, and began to put off all shame, and to put on all impudence. By the aforesaid title we are given to understand, as if B. Gardiner, Dr. Smyth, &c. were Authors of, or at least had considerable hands in, it; with whom agrees Baleus (e) before-mention'd, who styles Martyn, Winchesters voice, but whether true I cannot say it. The book hath been commended by many learned Persons, and no doubt but he had helps in it; but whether by any of the former, is doubtful. About the same time came out another answer entit. A defence of Priests marriages, established by the imperial laws of the Realm of England, &c. printed in qu. To which tho no name is set to it, yet it is (*) said to be written by Dr. Matthew Parker, who was afterwards Archb. of Canterbury. The same year Tho. Martyn put out,

A confutation of Dr. Joh. Poyntes book entit. A defence for the marriage of Priests, &c. Lond. 1555 (qu) He hath also extant, Oration to Dr. Cranmer Archbishop, 12 March 1555.—The beginning of which is, Albeit there are two governments &c.

Discourse between him and Archbishop Cranmer concerning conscience and matters of Religion.—The beginning is Mr. Cranmer you have told here a long glorious tale, &c. Which oration and discourse you may see in the Acts and Mon. of the Cb. by Jo. Fox, under the Year 1555, besides Examinations and Conferences, under the Year 1556.

Vita Gul. Wicami Wintoniensis Episc. Lond. 1597. Ox. 1690 in a large qu. Printed after the death of the Author, who took much of his matter from the life of the said Bishop written by Tho. Chaudler (d) sometimes Warden of New Coll. There is a copy of this book in the Library of the said Coll. and in a leaf before the title, are curiously delineated with a Pen the effigies of the said W. Wykeham setting in a chaire. On the right hand is Chicheley founder of Alls. and on the left, Waynfleet of Magdalen, College; both holding the pictures of their respective Colleges in their hands, and presenting them, as 'twere, to the founder of New Coll. they having had their education therein. As for our Author Tb. Martyn, he concluded his last day in Fifteen hundred eighty and four, for in that year several books, of his gift, or bequest, were sent to New Coll. Library, to be there reposed for the use of the Fellows thereof. In my former searches among records I (†) found one Joann the relict of Tho. Martin lately of Isfield in Suffex, to have received a commission from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, dated 26. June 1584 to administer the goods, debts, chattels, &c. of the said Tb. Martin lately deceased, but without the addition of Doctor of Civil Law, or of that of Gent. or Esq. However he may be the same with the Doctor, because, as I have observed, many whose names have been odious among some, or have retired in private because of their Religion, their names in wills or administrations are barely written without addition of a title, or town sometimes, only in general of the County.

EDMUND PLOWDEN Son of Humph. Plowden by Elizab. his Wife, Daughter of Job. Sturey of Rossball in Shropshire, was born of an ancient and gentile Family at Plowden in the said County, spent 3 years in the study of Arts, Philosophy and Medicine at Cambridge, and afterwards, as I conceive, was entred into the Inns of Court. Soon after coming to Oxon, he spent 4 years more in the same studies there, and in Nov. an. 1552 he was admitted to practice Chirurgery and Physick by the Ven. Convoc. of the said University. But as about that time Dr. Tho. Phaer did change his studies from common Law to Physick, so did our Author Plowden from Physick to the common Law, being then about 35 years of age. In 1557 he became Autumn or Summer reader of the Middle Temple, and three years after Lent reader, being then a Serjeant at, and accounted the Oracle of the Law. He hath written in old French,

The Commentaries or Reports of divers cases, being matters in Law, and of arguments thereupon; in the times of the Reigns of K. Ed. 6. Qu. Mary and Qu. Elizabeth: In two parts. Lond. 1571. 78. 99. &c. fol. To which was a table made by Will. Fleetwood Recorder of Lond. They are esteemed exquisite and elaborate commentaries and are of high account with all professors of the Law. Afterwards they were abridged in the French tongue—Lond. 1659. oct. (and several times before) translated by Fabian Hicks Esq. and printed also in oct. There goes also under our Author Plowdens name, Plowdens Queries, or a moot-book of choice cases useful for the young Students of the common Law—This was several times printed, and afterwards translated from French into English, methodised and enlarged by H. B. of Lincolns Inn Esq.—Lond. 1662. oct. At length, as this famous Lawyer Plowden mostly lived a R. Cath. in his heart, so he dyed in that faith, on the sixth day of Feb. in Fifteen hundred eighty and four, and was buried in the Church belonging to the Temples between the body of Catherine his Wife (Dau. of Will. Sheldon of Realy in Worcestershire Esq.) and the North wall, near the East end of the choir; leaving then this character (†) behind him, (which shall serve instead of his Epitaph, notwithstanding there is one already over his grave) that ut in juris Anglicani scientia, de qua scriptis bene meruit, facile princeps; ita vitæ integritate inter homines suæ professionis nulli secundus. He left behind him a fair estate in lands lying at Plowden before-mention'd, at Sbiplake in Oxfordshire, and at Burfield in Berks, as also a Son of both his names to enjoy it, who dying in less than two years after his Father, did bequeath (*) his body to be buried in the Chappel of the Bow built and erected by his ancestors (wherein some of them were buried) joyning to the Church of North Lydbury (near to which place is the Village called Plowden situated) in Shropshire. The name and posterity of this Edm. Plowden do now remain at Sbiplake in Oxfordshire.

PATRICK PLUNKET Baron of Dunsanie in Ire. 218. land, Son of Rob. Plunket Baron of the same place (who died 1. Elizab.) was educated in Grammar learning at Ratough (e) under one Stagbews, and from thence was sent to Oxon to obtain Logicals and Philosophicals, but to what house there, unless to Gloucester hall, (where many of his Countrymen, and some of his Sirname studied in the time of Qu. Elizab. as I shall anon inform you) I cannot justly tell, or whether to Univ. Coll. when Richard Stanyhurst (who calls him his Brother) studied there, I am as yet ignorant. Howsoever it was, sure I am, that by the care of his Father-in-law Sir Christoph. Barnwell Kt. he was maintained according to his condition for some years in this University, where profiting much in several sorts of learning, tho honored not, or was honored with, any Degree, did afterwards compose several things fit for the press, which (f) by reason of his bashfull modesty, or modest bashfulness were wrongfully imprisoned, and in a manner stifled in shadowed couches—I doubt not, (as my Author

(g) adds) but what by his fame and renown in Learning, he shall be answerable to his desert and value in writing, &c. This worthy Baron who was of ancient extract in Ireland, and of the R. Cath. Religion, was a Person noted in his Country for his great possessions there, for his good natural parts, and renowned therefore among the learned in Fifteen hundred eighty and four: In which year, and after, he had books dedicated to him, as being not only a learned Person himself, but also a Patron of learning and learned Men. While he studied in this University, were eight of his Countrymen of Glouc. hall matriculated in 1574, having been Students there some years before, as Walter, Henry, and Job. Talbot of gentile extraction, the first of which was then 21 years of age, and the other two 20. Edw. Plunket a Gentlemans Son, of 20 years of age; Christoph. Galway and John Martill, Sons of Plebeians, the former 19, the other 20, years of age; and one Pendergast and Whitty the Sons of Gent. the former 22, the other 21, years of age. Besides these were several other Irish Men matriculated as members of that Hall during the Reign of Qu. Elizab. as (1) Rich. Whyte a Gentlemans Son, aged 21. an. 1578. (2) Giles Hovenden of Leis in Kings County, the Son of a Gent. an. 1582. aged 26. (3) Gerard Salwey of (Dromore) an Esq; Son, the same year, aged 14. with others, to the beginning of K. James his Reign, which for brevity sake I now omit. Of the said Baron Plunkets Family was descended that most ven. and religious Dr. Oliver Plunket titular Primate of Ireland, who being found by some Persons to have been deeply engaged in the Popish Plot in Ireland, an. 1678. 79, was brought over into England, where receiving sentence to die in Westminster hall, was accordingly hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd at Tyburn on the first day of July 1681; whereupon his quarters only (not his head) were buried in the yard of St. Giles Church in the Fields near to London, by the bodies of the five Jesuits, that were a little before executed, and buried under the North wall of the said Yard. In the said place Plunkets quarters continuing till the fanatical plot broke out in 1683, they were taken up and conveyed beyond the Sea to the Monastery of the Benedictines (of which order he was a Brother) at Lamb-spring in Germany, where they were with great ceremony and devotion re-buried. Before I speak of the next writer, the reader may be pleased to know farther of this Plunket, that when the Lady D. D. had borrowed 200 Crowns of an Irish Priest at Bologna; she, rather than repay that sum procured the Archbishoprick of Armagh (to which the Primacy of Ireland is annex'd) for the said Plunket by the means of Cardinal Rospigliosi; who, tho he would not be at the congregation that day, wherein that matter was to be done, yet he made Card. Chigi do it; and when Card. Barbarini opposed the nomination, Chigi told the said Cardinal that it must be so: This was about 1669.

229 JOHN de FECKENHAM was so called because he was born of poor Parents living in a cottage, or poor house, joyning to the Forest of Feckenham in Worcestershire, tho his right name was Howman. While he was a Child, he was very apt to learn, having a natural genie to good letters, and to any thing that seemed good; which being perceived by the Priest of his Parish, he was by the endeavours and persuasions of one or more considerable Persons taken into Evesham Monastery in the said County, the Abbat and Monks of which, were of the Order of St. Benedict. When he arrived to the age of about 18 he was sent by his Abbat to Glocester Coll. in this University, where there was a particular apartment for the young Monks of that Abbey to lodge in, and to continue there for certain years, purposely to obtain Academical, or at least Theological, learning. Afterwards, he being called home by his Abbat to make room for other Monks to succeed in the said apartment, his Abbey was soon after dissolved, viz. 17. Nov. 1535 at which time he had an allowance (b) made to him from the Exchequer of an annual pension of 100 florens during his natural life. Whereupon retiring to the said Coll. of Gloc. again, I find (i) him there in 1537, in which year he subscrib'd by the name of John Feckenham to a certain composition then made between

Rob. Joseph Prior of the said Coll. and 29 Students thereof on the one part (of which number Feckenham was one of the Seniors) and three of the Senior Bedells of the University on the other; and in the Year 1539 he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, being about that time Chaplain to Dr. John Bell Bishop of Worcester. But that Bishop giving up his place in few years after, our Author Feckenham was entertained by Dr. Bonner B. of London, with whom continuing till 1549 (at which time he was deprived of his Bishoprick and put into the Marshalsea) he was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London, occasion'd, as 'tis said, by Mr. Rob. Horne, afterwards B. of Winchester. Soon after he was released, or rather borrowed thence for a time by Sir Philip Hobie, for no other reason but to dispute about matters of Religion to satisfy Protestants, who then thought that their Religion could not be denied. The first disputation that he had with the chief of that party was at the Savoy in the house of the E. of Bedford. The second in the house of Sir Will. Cecill in Canon row, and the third in that of Sir John Cheeke at the Carmes (or White fryers) lately dissolv'd. These three disputations which were well carried on with great vigour and dexterity, especially by Feckenham, were prorog'd to other places, as first to Pershore in Worcestershire, in which town was then lately a famous Monastery of the Benedictines standing, and in the said County was Feckenham then beneficed. At which place, I say, Hooper Bishop of Glocester and Worcester did dispute with him, he being then in visiting his Diocese, and received satisfaction from what he then said. The next was in the Cath. Ch. of Worcester, where Jo. Jewell did, as 'tis reported, (but I think false) oppose him. When these things were done he was remanded to his Prison in the Tower, where continuing till the first year of Q. Mary, was then released, and not only made Dean of St. Pauls Cathedral, but soon after (in Nov. 1556) Abbat of Westminster and Chaplain to that Queen. In 1554 he was in Oxon and openly disputed with Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer about matters of Religion before they were to sacrifice their lives in the fire, and in the beginning of 1556 he was actually created Doctor of Divinity, being then in wonderful esteem for his learning, piety, charity, humility and other virtues. All the time of Qu. Maries Reign he employed himself in doing good offices for the afflicted Protestants from the highest to the lowest, and did interceed with the Queen for the Lady Elizabeth, for which he gained her displeasure for a time. After the said Lady Elizab. came to the Crown, and Religion about to be altered, he denied the Queens Supremacy over the Church of England, in 1559. About that time he planted the elmes, which do yet, or did lately, grow in the garden belonging to the Coll. of Westminster. But the Queen having a very great respect for his learning and virtuous life, as also for his former tenderness of her, sent for, and had private discourse with him; but what it was, none yet do positively know, tho there be not wanting some that say, that she offer'd to him the Archbishoprick of Canterbury, if he would take the oath and conform to the Church of England, which he refused. The year after, he was committed Prisoner again to the Tower, and about that time did undergo several disputes with Protestant Divines about Religion, but was not suffered to be one of those that were publickly to dispute with the said Divines when the Queen was setting on foot a reformation in the Church of England. In the winter time 1563 he was committed to free custody with Dr. Horne B. of Winchester, who, as the R. Catholics say, did deal uncivilly and falsely with him: But tarrying with that Bishop only one Winter, he was sent to the Tower again, thence after some time to the Marshalsea, then to a private house in Holbourn, and in 1580 to Witch castle in Cambridgeshire, where he remained to the time of his death in great devotion and sanctity of life. Under his name, do go these things following.

Caveat Emptor — This I have not yet seen.

Commentarii in psalmos Davidis. This was seen in MS. in the hands of the Author (while he was a Prisoner at London) by Rich. Stanyhurst, but lost with other things, (as 'tis conceived) among which was his Treatise of the Eucharist, written against Job. Hooper. At length after our Author had seen many changes in Religion and had continued stedfast in that, wherein he was educated, surrendered up his pious Soul to him that gave it, within the precincts of Wisbich castle before-mention'd, in Fifteen hundred eighty and five; and soon after, was buried, but where, unless in the Parish Church there, I cannot tell; leaving then behind him this character, that he was a Person full of offices of piety and humility, and was always ready, tho of a contrary opinion, to do good to the Protestant party, especially in the Reign of Q. Mary when they suffered. Our celebrated Antiquary W. Camden tells (k) us that he was a learned and good Man, lived a long while, did a great deal of good to the poor, and always solicited the minds of his adversaries to good will.

230. RICHARD CALDWALL or Chaldwell, a Staffordsh. Man born, was educated in Brasenose College, of which he was afterwards Fellow, took the Degree of M. of Arts, entered upon the Physick line, and in the 32 year of his age became one of the Senior Students of Ch. Ch. a little after its last foundation by K. Hen. 8. an. 1547. Afterwards he took the Degrees in the said faculty and became so highly valued for his learning, and happy practice therein, that he was examined, approved and admitted into the Physicians Coll. at London and made censor of it in one and the same day. Six weeks after he was chosen one of the Elects of the said Coll. and in 1570 President thereof. He hath written several matters relating to his profession, but whether extant I cannot tell. All that I have seen of his labours is his translation into English of The tables of surgery, briefly comprehending the whole art and practice thereof, &c. Lond. 1585. fol. Written originally by Horatio More, a Florentine Physician. As for his death, which 1585. happened in Fifteen hundred eighty and five, and other of his works, let the learned Camden tell (l) you in these words — Nec inter hos, licet minoris notæ, silendus hoc etiam anno fato functus Richardus Chaldwellus à Coll. Ebor. Nati Oxonie Med. Doctor, qui ut de reipub. bene mereretur (adscito in partem honoris Barone Lumleio) lectionem Chirurgicam bonesto salario in Medicorum collegio Londini à Thoma Linacro fundato instituit. Juxtaque ad Sancti Benedicti inhumatur, in monumento laqueis, plumbis, & carbibus, scanno Hypocratis, glossocomis & aliis chirurgicis ex Brihasio & Galeno medicamentis exornato. The Coll. of Physicians was then in Knight-riders street in London, not far from the Church of St. Benedict near Pauls Wharf.

231. EDWARD RISHTON, of a right ancient Family in Lancashire, became a Student in the University about 1568 particularly, as it seems, in Brasenose College, where after he had spent some years in Philosophy and Mathematics, supplicated the Ven. congr. of Regents in Apr. 1572 for the Degree of Bach. of Arts, having performed all exercise requisite thereunto, but whether he was admitted it appears not in the University registers. Afterwards he left his native Country and Friends, and went to Doway, where studying for some time in the English Coll. was made M. of A. Thence he went to Rome in 1577 and after he had consummated certain studies in Divinity, was made (m) a Priest in 1580 or thereabouts. Soon after he was sent into the Mission of England, but before he was quite settled, he was taken and kept close Prisoner in the Tower of London and elsewhere 3 or 4 years. At length being released, his life spared, and he condemned to banishment with Jam. Bosgrave a Jesuit, John Hart and others, he went into France, and settled for a time in the University of Pont-à-mousson in Loraine to the end that he might proceed in the study of Divinity and take a Degree or Degrees therein; but the plague being then there and he careless to avoid it in time, was infected therewith and soon after died. This is that Edw. Rishton, qui impie ingratus (as one (n) saith) in Principem cui vitam debuit, publicatis scriptis malitiæ virum illico evomuit. The titles of the said writings are these.

Synopsis rerum ecclesiasticarum, ad an. chr. 1577. Whether in Engl. or Lat. I know not, for I have not yet seen it.

Profession of his faith made manifest, and confirmed by 24 reasons (or motives) — It must be now known that Nich. Saunders left behind him at his death two imperfect books De schismate Anglicano; with the beginning of the third, commencing with the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, which coming into the hands of our Author Rishton after he had suffered imprisonment for some time in England, he supplied what was defective in them, corrected and caused them to be published at Colen. 1585. to which he added of his own composition, besides the third book, which was in a manner all his,

Rerum pro religione catholica ac in turri Londinensi gestarum ab an. 1580. ad an. usque 1585 indiculus seu diarium, with a preface to it.

Religiosorum & sacerdotum nomina, qui pro defensione primatus Rom. Ecclesiæ per Martyrium consummati sunt, sub Henrico 8. Angliæ rege, &c. Mostly taken out of Saunders his book De visibili Monarchia Ecclesiæ, &c. These additions, with the book De Schismate, having undergone several impressions, as I have told you elsewhere, have been since added to them (1) An appendix, which makes a fourth book, excerpted from certain of the works of Peter Ribadeneira a Jesuit (2) Summarium rationum, quibus Cancellarius Angliæ & Prolocutor Puckeringsius Elizabethæ Angliæ Reginae persuaserunt occidendum esse Mariam Stuartum Scotiæ Reginam, &c. Which being published in English were translated into Latine, and had added thereunto, Supplicium & mors Regiæ Scotiæ, &c. by the labour of Romoald Scot (3) Epistola Doctoris Johannis Pistorii Nidani ad D. Jacobum Gryneum Ministri verbi Ecclesiæ Basiliensis. (4) Mariæ Stuartæ Reg. Scotiæ innocens à eade Darlema, &c. written by Obertus Barneſapoliſ. Which four things being added to Rishtons additions to Saunders book De Schismate, were all printed together at Colen 1628 in a thick oct. What other things our Author Rishton hath extant, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he dying near to St. Manbou after, or about, Fifteen hundred 1585: eighty and five (in his flight from Pont-à-mousson to avoid the pest) was buried there by the care (o) of Job. Barnes an English exile, the same, I suppose, with John Barnes the Benedictine Monk, whom I shall mention elsewhere. I find one Edw. Risden a Secular Priest of the English Coll. at Doway in this Mans time, who was afterwards of the Order of Carthusians, but he being descended from the Risdens or Risdons of Devonshire, must not be taken to be the same (as some are apt to do) with Edw. Rishton before-mention'd. I find also one Edw. Risden or Risdon a Devonian to have been Fellow of Exeter Coll. and Master of Arts 1566, which probably may be the same with the Carthusians; sed Qu.

HENRY SIDNEY who was learned in many languages, and a great lover of learning, was born of, and descended from, a noble Family of his name living at Cranleigh in Surrey, became a Student in New Coll. (as it seems) in 1543 or thereabouts, but making no long stay there, he went to the Court, where he became a companion to Prince Edward (afterwards King Ed. 6.) and by him much esteemed. In the third year of that Kings Reign he received the honour of Knighthood, and was forthwith, being then about 22 years of age, sent Embassadour into France, where he behaved himself far beyond his years. In the 2 and 3 of Phil. and Mary he was made general Governour of all the Kings and Queens revenues, within the Realm of Ireland, and about two years after Lord Justice thereof. In the 2 of Qu. Elizabeth, he was (q) appointed Lord President of the Marches of Wales, and 4 years after was made Knight of the honorable order of the Garter, having before been employed in one or more Embassies. In 1568, in the month of Apr. he was constituted Deputy of Ireland, and in Aug. the same year, being then at Oxon, he was actually created Master of Arts. Afterwards he was Lord Justice again and twice Deputy of the said Kingdom, &c. This Person hath written many things, which chiefly continue at this time in MS. All that I have seen are,

A godly letter to his Son Philip. Lond. 1592. oct. Since which time have been other letters of his to the said Person made extant; two of which I have (r) seen without date, as that which begins thus, Son Philip I have received two letters from you. And the other My Son, the virtuous inclination of thy matchless mother, &c. He hath also written, Miscellanies of Irish affairs — MS. and caused also the Statutes of Ireland to be first published in print. He paid his last debt to nature in the Bishops Pallace at Worcester in his return from Ludlow, on (s) the fourth day of May 1586. in Fifteen hundred eighty and six, and was buried 21. of June following in the Church at Penshurst in Kent, he having some years before obtained the manour thereof to him and his posterity for ever. The character given of him by one (t) that knew him in Ireland, I shall here insert for a conclusion of those things I have said of him, which is this. 'He was stately without disdain, familiar without contempt, very continent and chaste of body, no more than enough liberal, learned, and a great lover of learning, perfect in blazoning of Arms, skilful of Antiquities, of wit fresh and lively, in consultations very temperate, in utterance happy, which his experience and wisdom hath made artificial, a preferer of many, a Father to his Servants, and both in war and peace of commendable courage.

233. WILLIAM GOOD was born in the ancient Town of Glastenbury in Somersetshire, educated in Grammar learning there, admitted Scholar of C. C. Coll. 26. Feb. 1545, afterwards Fellow, Master of Arts 1552, and about that time Humanity reader in the said College. After Queen Mary came to the Crown, being then a most zealous R. Catholick, he was promoted to an Ecclesiastical Benefice in his own Country called Middle Chinnock, and to a little Prebendship in the Church of Wells called Comba octava, in Nov. 1556, besides the rectory of a School in the said City. All which he keeping till Qu. Elizabeth came to the Crown and for some time after, he voluntarily left them, and his native Country for Religion sake, and retiring to Tourney in Flanders, entred himself there into the Society of Jesus, in 1562 aged 35. After he had served his probationship, he went into Ireland with Father David the titular Archbishop of Armagh, who left no stone unremoved there for the settling of that Kingdom in the Catholick faith and obedience. Four years being spent in that Country, not without some danger, he went to Louvaine, where he met with Rob. Persons about to enter into the said Society, whom he strengthened with many arguments in order thereunto. In 1577 he was called to Rome to take upon him the profession of the four vows; which being done, he went into Sweden and Poland in the company of Anth. Possevin to settle certain affairs relating to the society. Two years after he returned to Rome, and became Confessor to the English Coll. there, newly converted from an Hospital dedicated to the Holy Trinity, to a Seminary for the educating the youth of England that profess the R. Cath. Religion. Vir fuit probatæ virtutis & doctrinæ, (as one (u) of his society saith) atque imprimis in historiis Sanctorum Angliæ optime versatus, quorum res gestas in templo collegii Anglicani curavit coloribus exprimi, quæ subinde in æs incisæ prodierunt tacito ipsius inscriptæ, Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ Trophæa. Robnæ 1584. fol. Library also of the English Coll. at Rome there is extant a Manuscript digested according to the years of Christ and Kings of Britaine containing the Acts of the Saints of Britain. Which book is said there among those of England to have been composed and written by our Author Good, who dying at Naples 5. July (according to the account there followed) in Fifteen hundred eighty and six, was buried in the College of the Jesuits there, who have yet a great respect for his name: One or more of whom have promised me a copy of his Epitaph, if there be any, but no answer have I yet received.

PHILIP SIDNEY, the short-liv'd Ornament of his noble Family, and the Marcellus of the English Nation, hath deserv'd, and without dispute or envy enjoyed, the most exalted praises of his own and of succeeding Ages. The Poets of his time, especially Spencer, reverenc'd him not only as a Patron, but a Master; and he was almost the only Person in any age (I will not except Mecenas) that could teach the best rules of Poetry, and most freely reward the performances of Poets. He was a Man of a sweet nature, of excellent behaviour, of much, and withall of well digested, learning; so that rarely wit, courage, breeding, and other additional accomplishments of conversation have met in so high a degree in any single Person. It is to be wish'd that his life might be written by some judicious hand, and that the imperfect essay of Sir Fulk Grevill L. Brook might be supply'd; In the mean time I am forc'd to consider him only as an Author, and to give him these short notes of his life and education. He was Son of Sir Hen. Sidney before-mention'd by the Lady Mary his Wife, eldest Daughter of Job. Dudley Duke of Northumberland, was born, as 'tis supposed, at Penshurst in Kent, 29. Nov. 1554, and had his Christian name given to him by his Father, from K. Philip, then lately married to Qu. Mary. While he was very young, he was sent to Christ Ch. to be improved in all sorts of learning; and was contemporary there with Rich. Carew Author of The Survey of Cornwall, where continuing till he was about 17 years of age, under the tuition of Dr. Tho. Thornton Canon of that house, he was in June 1572 sent to travel, for on the 24 Aug. following, when the Massacre fell out at Paris, he was then there, and at that time, (as I conceive) he, with other English Men, did fly to the house of Francis Walsingham Embassadour there from the Queen of England. Thence he went through Lorraine, and by Strasbourg and Heydelburg to Frankfort in Sept. or Oct. following, as his said (w) life written by Sir Fulk Grevill his companion and friend attesteth. But what is added there, that Hubert Languet accompanied him in the whole course of his 3 years travels, is a great mistake, as will appear by Languet's Epistles to our Author Philip Sidney, printed more than once. For so it was, that in the next spring in May 1573, Languet removed to Vienna, where our Author met him again, and stayed with him till September, when he went into Hungary and those parts. Thence he journied into Italy, where he continued all the Winter following, and most of the Summer, an. 1574, and then he returned into Germany with Languet, and next spring he returned, by Frankfort, Heydelberg, and Antwerp home into England, about May 1575. The like mistakes are in the said life (x) concerning Languet coming into England in February. 1578, at which time, 'tis said, he was about 66 years of age, whereas he was but 61; that also he and Sidney parted at Sea, which could not be, for Duke John Casimire, with whom he came, went away so suddenly, that Languet could not take leave of him. In the Year 1576 he was sent (y) by the Queen to Rodolph the Emperour to condole the death of Maximilian, and also to other Princes of Germany, at which time he caused this inscription to be written under his Arms, which he then hung up in all places where he lodged. Illustriss. & generosiss. viri Philippi Sidneii Angli, Proregis Hiberniæ filii, Comitum Warwici & Leycestriæ nepotis, sereniss. Reginæ Angliæ ad Cæsarem Legati. The next year, in his return, he saw that gallant Prince, Don John de Austria Vice Roy in the Low-countries for the K. of Spain, and William Prince of Orange or Orange; by the former of which, tho at first he was lightly esteemed, upon the account of his youth, yet after some discourse he found himself so stricken with him, that the beholders wondred to see what tribute that brave and high minded Prince paid to his worth, giving more honour and respect to him, in his private capacity, than to the Embassadors of mighty Princes. In the Year 1579, he, tho neither Magistrate or Counsellour, did shew himself, for several weighty reasons, opposite to the Queens matching with the Duke of Anjou, which he very pithily expressed by a due address of his humble reasons to her, as may be fully seen in a book called (a) Cabala. The said address was written at the desire of some great personage, his Uncle Robert (I suppose) Earl of Leycester; upon which a great quarrel happened between him and Edw. Vere Earl of Oxford. This, as I conceive, might occasion his retirement from Court next Summer, an. 1580, wherein perhaps he wrot that pleasant Romance called Arcadia. In 1581 the treatise of marriage was renewed, and our Author Sidney with Fulk Grevill (b) were two of the tilers at the entertainment of the French Embassador; and at the departure of the Duke of Anjou from England in Febr. the same year, he attended him to (c) Antwerp. On the 8. Janu. 1582 he with Peregrine Bertie received the honour of Knighthood from the Queen, and in the beginning of 1585 he designed an expedition with Sir Francis Drake into America, but being hindred by the Queen (in whose opinion he was so highly prized that she thought the Court deficient without him) he was in Octob. following made Governour of Flushing, about that time delivered to the Queen for one of the cautionary towns, and General of the Horse. In both which places of great trust, his carriage testified to the world wisdom and valour, with addition of honour to his country by them; and especially the more, when in July 1586 he surprised Axil, and preserved the lives and honour of the English Army at the enterprise of Gravelin. So that whereas (through the fame of his high deserts) he was then, or rather before, in election for the Crown of Poland, the Queen of England refused to further his advancement, not out of emulation, but out of fear to lose the jewel of her times. What can be said more? He was a Statesman, Soldier, and Scholar, a compleat Master of matter and language, as his immortal Pen shews. His Pen and his Sword have rendered him famous enough. He died by the one, and by the other he'll ever live, as having been hitherto highly extolled for it by the Pens of Princes. This is the happiness of art, that although the sword doth achieve the honour, yet the arts do record it, and no Pen hath made it better known than his own, in that book called Arcadia. Certain it is, he was a noble and matchless Gentleman; and it may be justly said without hyperboles of fiction, as it was of Cato Uticensis that he seemed to be born to that only which he went about. His written works are these.

The Countess of Pembroke's Arcadia—Several times printed at London in quarto and fol. Which being the most celebrated Romance that was ever written, was consecrated to his noble, virtuous and learned Sister Mary, the Wife of Henry Earl of Pembroke, who having lived to a very fair age, dyed in her house in Aldersgate-street in London 25. Sept. 1621. whereupon her body was buried in the Cathedral Church of Salisbury among the graves of the Pembrochian Family. This Arcadia, tho then, and since, it was, and is, taken into the hands of all ingenious Men, and said by one living at, or near, the time when first published, to be a book most famous for rich concept and splendor of courtly expressions, yet the Author was not so fond, a B. Heliodorus was of his amorous work, for he desired (e) when he died (having first consulted with a Minister about it) to have had it suppressed. One who writes himself G.M. (f) wrot the second and last part of the first book of the said Arcadia, making thereby a compleat end of the first History—Lond. 1613. qu. And in the eighth edit. printed at Lond. 1633. Sir W. A. Knight made a supplement of a defect in the third part of the History, and R. B. of Linc. Inn Esq; added then a sixth book thereunto. In 1662 came out the said Arcadia again, in 6 books; with several of his other works added to them. In 1624 it was printed in French, in 3. vol. or parts in oct. and hath, as I have been informed, undergone several impressions in France. It hath been also printed once or more in the Dutch language and in others. Sir Philip also wrot, Almonzor and Almanzaida, a Novel. Lond. 1678. oct. This book coming out so late, it is to be enquired, whether Sir Philip Sidney's name is not set to it for sale-sake, being a usual thing in these days to set a great name to a book, and to enhance the price of it by the esteem of the supposed Author.

Instructions describing what special observations are to be taken by Travellers in all nations, states, and countries — This book which is printed in 12°, hath the names of Robert Earl of Essex and Sir Philip Sidney put to it, but may be question'd whether either had a hand in it. He also translated from French into English, A work containing the trueness of Christian Religion against Atheists &c. written originally by Philip Morney. But the said translation being left imperfect by Sidney, Arthur Golding finish'd it. — Lond. 1587. qu. He also (Sidney) turn'd the Psalms of David into English verse, which are in MS. in the Library of the Earl of Pembroke at Wilton, curiously bound in a crimson velvet cover, left thereunto by his Sister Mary Countess of Pembroke. At length Sir Philip being wounded in the battle at Zutphen, while he was getting up the third horse (having had two slain under him before) on the 22. Septemb. in Fifteen hundred eighty and six, he was carried to Arnhem, where languishing under his wound 25 days or thereabouts, he died on the sixteenth of October following. This was that Sidney, whom, as Gods will was, he should be therefore born into the world, even (g) to shew unto our age a sample of ancient virtues: so his good pleasure was, before any looked for it, to call for him again, and take him out of the world as being more worthy of Heaven than Earth. Soon after his death, his body was brought to Flushing, and being embarked with great solemnity on the first of November, landed at Tower Wharf on the sixth day of the said month. Thence 'twas conveyed to the Minorities without Aldgate, where it lay in state for some time till his magnificent funeral in St. Pauls Cathedral 16. of Feb. following; which, as many Princes have not exceeded in the solemnity, so few have equalled in the sorrow for his loss. He was buried near to that place which his Father-in-law Sir Francis Walsingham had designed (as I have heard) to be entombed in, without any monument or inscription save only a copy of English verses written on a wooden table, that were divers years after his death put over his grave. When his said Father-in-law was buried in that place afterwards, there was a fair tomb designed for them both, and epitaphs composed by Dr. Jo. Rainolds, a copy of which for Sidney you may see (b) elsewhere. James King of Scotts, afterwards of England honored him with an Epitaph of his composition. The muses of Oxon also lamenting

Those of New Coll. in their Peplus (i) Sidnei, dedicated to Henry Earl of Pembroke (who married Sir Philip's Sister) as having been formerly of that house, did bewail his death. The said Sir Philip left behind him a Daughter named Elizabeth, who being born in 1585, Scipio Gentilis an eminent Civilian wrote a Lat. Mannours Earl of Rutland, but died without issue by him.

235. THOMAS BOURCHIER was descended from those of his name who were Earls of Bathe, but in what County born, I cannot yet tell, received some parts of literature in this University, particularly, as I conceive, in Magd. Coll. yet took no Degree there, unless in the Reign of Edw. 6. when the common register of the University was in a manner totally neglected. Afterwards upon pretence of being weary of the heresie, as he call'd it, that in his time was practis'd in England, he went beyond the Seas, settled in Paris, took upon him then, if not before, the habit of St. Francis, and lived as a Brother in the house of that order there, where also others of his Country lived, and at length became Doctor of Divinity of the Sorbon, at which time he was held in great esteem for his Religion and learning. Afterwards going to Rome he lived among those of his order in the Monastery called by Latin Authors Ara celi, and at length became Penitentiary to the Church of St. John Lateran there. He hath written,

Historia Ecclesiastica de Martyrio fratrum ordinis Minorum Divi Francisci de observantia, qui partim in Anglia sub Henrico 8. Rege, partim in Belgio sub Principe Auriaco, partim & in Hybernia tempore Elizabethæ regnantis Reginae, passi sunt ab an. 1536. ad an. 1582. Par. 1582. and 1586. in oct. Ingolst. 1583. in tw. The names of those English Men that suffered Martyrdom in England, were Father Anton. Brorbe, or, as some call him, Brockby, Tho. Cortt, Thom. Belchiam and Father John Forest. All which were executed in 1537. and 38. What other things our Author Bourchier hath written, I cannot tell, nor any thing else of him,

- 1586 only, that he departed this mortal life (*) about Fifteen hundred eighty and six, and was buried either in the Church of St. John Lateran, or in that belonging to the Monastery called Ara celi before-mention'd.

236. THOMAS BRASBRIDGE, a Northamptonshire Man born, was elected Demie of Magd. Coll. by the endeavours of Peter Morwyn, an. 1553, aged 16, where after he had continued a sedulous Student for some years, was elected Probationer-Fellow of Allsouls College in 1558. Thence also he returned to Magd. Coll. of which he became Fellow in 1562, and soon after proceeding in Arts, applied his mind partly to Divinity and partly to Physick. In 1574 he supplicated to be admitted to the reading of the Sentences, but whether he was really admitted it appears not. The next year he resign'd his Fellowship, having a spiritual cure, or School, or both, conferr'd on him at, or near to, Banbury in Oxfordshire, where, as it seems, he practis'd Physick. His works are,

The poor Mans Jewell, viz. a Treatise of the pestilence. To which is annexed a Declaration of the virtues of the hearbes Cardus benedictus and Angelica, &c. — Lond. 1578. and 91. in oct.

- Clar. 1586. Questiones in Officia M. T. Ciceronis, &c. Oxon. 1615. oct. Dedicated to Dr. Laur. Humphrey President of Magd. Coll. an. 1586. What other things he published, I cannot yet tell, nor any thing of his latter end.

237. JOHN FOX the noted Martyriologist, was born at

(i) Edit. Ox. 1587. qu. (*) Jo. Pisew in lib. De illustr. Angl. script. et. 16. num. 1036.

St. Botolphs town commonly called Boston in Lincolnshire, an. 1517, became a Student of Brazenose Coll. at about 16 years of age under the inspection and patronage of Mr. Job. Hawarden Fellow thereof. Afterwards he was elected Fellow of Magd. Coll. and proceeded Master of Arts in 1543, which was the highest Degree he attained to in this University, being then esteemed eminent for his learning and knowledge in the three tongues. About that time King Hen. 8. setting up a mongrel Religion in the Land, which our Author did not like by shewing his opinion in several respects, especially by absenting himself from the Chappel, did, with others of the same mind, resign his Fellowship about St. Mary Magd. day in 1545, meerly as 'twas thought to prevent expulsion. Afterwards he was entertain'd for a time in the house of Sir Thom. Lucy in Warwickshire, where, as 'tis said, he took to him a Wife, and then went to Riegate in Surrey to be tutor and teacher to the children of the Duke of Norfolk; where remaining for some time, was the first Man (as 'tis said) that ever preached the Gospel in that place, even when the Roman Catholick Religion was in great strength. But Gardiner Bishop of Winchester having notice of, caused search to be made after, him. Whereupon the said Duke being careful of, sent him safely into Germany; where, in the City of Basil he became a most painful labourer at his Pen in the house of Operinus a learned Printer. Being then about 30 years of age, he had read over all that either the Greek, or Latin Fathers had left in their writings, the Schoolmen in their disputations, the Councils in their Acts or the Consistory in their Decrees, and acquired no mean skill in the Hebrew tongue. After King Hen. 8. had been dead some time, he returned to Magd. Coll. whence, after a little stay, he went again to his charge at Riegate, and there remaining till after Queen Mary came to the Crown, left England once more, and retired to his old Landlord at Basil, where continuing a severe drudge at his book till Queen Elizabeth was settled in the Throne, he returned to his Country and was received by the said Duke, then living at his manour place called Christ Church in London, who very bountifully entertain'd him. From that house he travelled weekly every Munday to the house of John Day the Printer to consummate his Acts and Monuments of the Church, and other works in English and Latin. But as for the preferments he then enjoyed, (for he was offer'd to accept in a manner what he pleased) were only the Prebendship of Shipton in the Church of Salisbury (which he obtained on the death of Peter Vannes, in the month of May 1563) and as some say, the Vicaridge of St. Giles near Cripplegate in London, but this last, I suppose, he kept (if he had it at all) but a little while in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, being always averse to subscribe to the Canons, (tho tendred to him by Parker Archbishop of Canterbury) and to the ceremonies, in some part, of the Church. He was a Person of good natural endowments, a sagacious searcher into historical antiquity, incomparably charitable, of exemplary life and conversation, but a severe Calvinist and a very bitter enemy in his writings (exceeding the rules of charity, as 'tis conceived by some) against the Rom. Catholick party. He hath written,

De Christo triumphante, Comædia. Lond. 1551. Bas. 1556. oct. &c. Written at Basil in the house of Operinus before-mention'd, translated into English by Rich. Day or D'asia, Son of John Day the noted Printer in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, with this title, Christ Jesus triumphant, wherein is describ'd the glorious triumph and conquest of Christ, over sin, death and the Law, &c. Lond. 1579 and 1607 oct. Which Rich. Day, by the way it must be noted, was bred a Scholar in Kings Coll. in Cambridge, and afterwards exercis'd the place of Minister at Riegate in Surrey, in the room of our Author Fox, but soon after leaving that profession, followed the trade of Printing, and lived several years near to Aldersgate in London where his Father had lived before. In 1672 it was published again at Lond. in oct. and dedicated to all Schoolmasters, to the end that it might be admitted into their respective Schools for the eminent elegance of its style, by T. C. Mast. of Arts of Sydney Coll. in Cambridge.

Acts and Monuments of matters most special and memorable; hapning in the Church, with an universal historie of the same. Wherein is set forth at large the whole race and course from the primitive age to these latter times of ours, &c. — Lond. 1583. in two vol. in fol. the 4th. edition. There again 1596, &c. Printed also in 3. Volumes 1632, &c. In the Year 1684 the said book came out again in 3 volumes with copper cuts, the former editions having only wooden. The undertakers of which impression had in a manner obtained a promise from King Charles 2. to revive the order in Queen Elizabeths time of placing the said book of Acts and Monuments in the common Halls of Archbishops, Bishops, Deans, Archdeacons, Heads of Colleges, &c. according to the Canons of Dr. Matthew Parker Archbishop of Canterbury, an. 1571, to the end that they might not be losers by the said impression, &c. As our Author Fox hath taken a great deal of pains in the said volumes and shew'd sometimes much judgment in his labours, so hath he committed many errors therein, by trusting to the relations of poor simple People, and in making such Martyrs that were living after the first edition of his book came forth, tho afterwards by him excused and omitted. Nay Father Parsons, if he may be believ'd, tells us of his wilful corruptions and falsifications of Authors, particularly Ven. Bede, of his tergiversation, impertinent and ignorant arguments, contempt of antiquity, his rejection of our ancient Historiographers and I know not what. But these matters being beyond my Province to mention, I shall only refer the reader to the two parts of conversions in the first volume of those three called, A treatise of three conversions of England, &c. where he may not only find much discourse concerning the said book, or volumes of Acts and Mon. but also of the Author of them, as the index at the latter end will direct him. See also the said Parsons his Relation of a trial held in France about religion... Printed 1604. p. 59. 60.

Haddon LL D.) and published, The four Evangelists in the old Saxon tongue, with the English thereunto adjoynd. Lond. 1571. qu. What else he wrote and translated you may see in (*) Baleus; but the reader is to understand that several of those books that he mentions, were never printed. At length after our Author had spent 70 years or more in this vain and transitory world, he yielded to nature on the 18. Apr. in Fifteen hundred eighty and seven, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of St. Giles without Cripplegate before-mention'd. Over 1587. his grave is set up an inscription to his memory on the South wall, a copy of which you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2 p. 195. but not one word of him (which is a wonder to me) is mention'd in the Annals of Elizab. written by Will. Camden, or by any Epigrammatist of his time, only Joh. Parkhurst, who was his acquaintance in this University. He left behind him a Son named Samuel, born in the City of Norwych, made Demie of Magd. Coll. 1576. aged 15, afterwards Fellow of that House and Master of Arts, who about 1610 wrote The life of his Father Joh. Fox, which is set in Latin and English before the second Volume of Acts and Monuments, printed at Lond. 1641. I find one Joh. Fox to be Author of Time and the end of time, in 2 discourses, printed at Lond. in 12°, but that Joh. Fox was later in time than the former. While Joh. Fox the Martyriologist was Prebendary of Sarum, he settled the Corps belonging thereunto (which is the impropriation of Shipton Underwood near Burford in Oxfordshire) on his Son: whose Grand-daughter named Anne, Heir to her Father Tho. Fox, was married to Sir Ric. Willis of Ditton in Essex Knight and Baronet, sometimes Colonel-general of the Counties of Linc. Nottr. and Rutland, and Governour of the Town and Castle of Newark, who, or at least his Son Tho. Fox Willis, enjoyeth it to this day. an. 1690.

JOHN FIELD was a noted Scholar of his time in this University, but in what house he studied, I cannot yet tell. One of both his names was admitted Fellow of Lincoln Coll. in the Year 1555, but took no Degree, if the register saith right. Another took the Degree of Bach. of Arts 1564, and that of Master three years after. And a third Jo. Field took the Degree of Bach. of Arts only, in 1570. Which of these three was afterwards John Field the famous Preacher and Minister of St. Giles Cripplegate in London (who saith in one of his books, which I shall anon mention, that he was educated in Oxon) I cannot justly say, unless it be he that was Mast. of Arts. The works of that Joh. Field, who saith that he was of the Univ. of Oxon. are these,

At length our Author Field dying about his middle age, in the latter end of the year (after the 16. Febr.) 239. WILLIAM HARRISON was a Londoner born, educated in Grammar learning at Westminster under Mr. Alex. Nowell in the latter end of King Hen. 8. or beginning of King Edw. 6. sent to Oxon to obtain Academical learning, but to what house therein, unless Ch. Ch. I cannot justly tell. From Oxon he went to Cambridge, and making some stay there, became at length domestick Chaplain to Sir Will. Brook Knight, Lord Warden of the Cinque ports and Baron of Cobham in Kent; who, if I mistake not, preferr'd him to a benefice. He hath written,

Historical description of the Island of Britain: with a brief rehearsal of the nature and qualities of the People of England, and such commodities as are to be found in the same. In 3. books — They were first published in the first and second volume of Chronicles that go under the name of Raphael Holinshed, printed at Lond. 1577. in fol. and there again in 1587 with augmentations by Jo. Hooker alias Vowell. The collection is made from divers choice Authors, many of which were then in MS.

A Chronologie. — Gathered and compiled with most exquisite diligence, after the example of Gerardus Mercator, and other late Chronoligers: So saith Raph. Holinshed in his Preface to the third volume of Chronicles. What he hath written besides, I know not, nor any thing else, but that he was living in Fifteen hundred eighty and seven. I find one Will. Harrison born in the Dioc. of London, elected Bachelaur-Fellow of Merton Coll. 1557, admitted M. of Arts in 1560, being then beneficed near to Northampton, but he dying 1564 cannot be understood to be the same with the writer. Another Will. Harrison I find to be installed Canon of Windsore, 1586. being about that time Rector of Radwynter, (in Essex) who dying 1593 was buried at Windsore, leaving behind him several Children which he had by his Wife Marian Daughter of Will. Isebrand of Anderne near to Guisnes in Picardie. Whether this Will. Harrison be the same with the writer, I cannot tell.

240. WILLIAM WATKINSON was educated in Ch. Ch. became Prebendary of Milverton in the Church of Wells after he had taken the Degree of Bach. of Arts, afterwards he was one of the Proctors, and Bach. of Divinity of this University. He hath translated into English. (1) Of the happiness of this our age, and the ingratitude of Men to God for his benefices. Lond. 1578. qu. Written by Joh. Rivius. (2) Meditations on the 32. Psalm. Lond. 1579. oct. and other things, which I have not yet seen. How long he lived beyond Fifteen hundred eighty and seven (29. Elizab.) in which year he took the Degree of Bach. of Div. I know not.

441. ULPIAN FULWELL, a Somersetshire Man born, and a Gentlemans Son, became a Commoner of St. Maries Hall, in the Year 1578 aged 32 but whether he took any Degree among us, it appears not. While he continued in the said House, where he was esteemed a Person of ingenuity by his contemporaries, he partly wrote,

The eighth liberal science, called Ars adulandi, or, the Art of flattery — Printed 1579. qu. Afterwards having learned the art of Poetry among the Academians, he wrote and published,

A pleasant enterlude, intit. Like will to like, quoth the Devil to the Collier. Wherein is declared what punishment follows those that will rather live licentiously, than esteem and follow good counsel. Lond. 1587. qu. Written in rime, Clar. and printed in an English Character. The name of Ulp. 1587. Fulwell stands quoted by Jo. Speed in his life of K. Ed. 6. in his Chronicle, and therefore, I suppose he hath other things printed, for I cannot conceive that Jo. Speed should quote him for any thing out of the two former books.

ROBERT CROWLEY, or Crolem as he writes him- self, a very forward Man for reformation in the time of K. Ed. 6. and Qu. Elizab. was (a) born in Glocestershire, became a Student in the University about 1534, and was soon after made Demie of Magd. Coll. In 1542, he being then Bach. of Arts, was made Probationer-fellow of the said House by the name of Rob. Crule, but whether he took the Degree of Master of Arts it appears not; for likely it is, that he left the University when K. Hen. 8. began to settle a mongrel Religion in the Nation. When K. Ed. 6. began to Reign, he exercised the profession of Printing in Ely rents in Holbourn near to London, sold books, and at leisure times exercised the gift of Preaching in the great City and elsewhere: But upon the succession of Queen Mary, he, among several English Protestants, left the Kingdom, went to Frankfort in Germany and settled there purposely to enjoy the Religion which had been practised in England in the days of K. Ed. 6. After her decease he returned, and had several benefices bestowed on him, among which was the Vicaridge of St. Giles by Criplegate in London, (of which Church he wrote himself Vicar 1566.) where continuing his pretended gifts in preaching, was followed and respected by the neighbourhood of those parts, and by others for his skill in rimes and poetry. He hath written,

The Supper of the Lord after the true meaning of the sixth of John, and the xi of the i Epist. to the Corinthians, &c. And incidently in the exposition of the Supper, is confuted the Letter of Mr. Tho. More against Joh. Frith — Printed 5. Apr. 1533 in a small oct.

Confutation of Nich. Shaxton Bishop of Sarum, his recantation of 13 Articles, at the burning of Mistris Anne Askew. Lond. 1546. (oct.)

Explicatio petitoria (ad Parliamentum) adversum expilatores plebis. — Printed in the Engl. tongue 1548 in oct. Translated into Lat. by John Heron.

Confutation of Miles Hoggard's wicked ballad made in defence of transubstantiation of the Sacrament. Lond. 1548. oct.

The voice of the last Trumpet blown by the seventh Angell, &c, containing 12 several lessons. Lond. 1549. oct. Written in meter.

Pleasure and pain, heaven and hell. Remember these four and all shall be well. Lond. 1550 51. in oct. Written in meter.

Way to wealth, wherein is plainly taught a most present remedy for sedition. Lond. 1550. oct.

One and thirty Epigrams, wherein are briefly touched so many abuses, that may, and ought to, be put away. Lond. 1550. in tw. This was printed by the Author (Crowley) in his house in Ely rents before-mention'd.

An apologie of those English Preachers and Writers, which Cerberus the three-headed dog of hell, chargeth with false doctrine under the name of Predestination. Lond. 1566. qu. Of which book you may see more in Canterburies doome, written by Will. Pryune, p. 169.

Of the signes and tokens of the latter day. Lond. 1567. oct.

A setting open of the subtile sophistry of Tho. Watson D. D. which he used in his two Sermons preached before Qu. Mary in Lent 1553 concerning the real presence in the Sacrament. Lond. 1569. qu.

(a) Reg. 3. electionum soc. C. Magd. an. 1542.

Sermon in the Chappell at Gilde hall in London 29. Sept. 1574. before the Lord Mayor and the whole state of the Citie, on Plalme 139. ver. 21. 22. 23. 24. &c. Lond. 1575. oct.

Answer to Tho. Pound his six reasons, wherein he sheweth that the Scriptures must be judged by the Church. Lond. 1581. qu.

Brief discourse concerning those four usual notes whereby Christs Catholick Church is known, &c. Lond. 1581. qu.

Replication to that lewd answer which Frier Joh. Francis (of the Minimies order in Nigeon near Paris) hath made to a letter that his Mother caused to be sent to him out of England. Lond. 1586. qu.

Deliberate answer to a Papist, proving that Papists are Antichristian Schismatics, and that religious Protestants are indeed right Catholics. Lond. 1587. qu.

The Schoole of vertue and book of good nurture, teaching Children and Youths their duties. Lond. 1588. oct. &c. This book is composed in Engl. meter, hath at the end of it certain prayers and graces, and is at this day commonly sold at the stalls of Ballad singers.

Dialogue between Lent and Libertie, wherein is declared that Lent is a meer invention of Man. Lond. in oct. He also translated into English the Psalter of David; The Lany with Hymnes, and turned into meter Dauids Psalmes. All printed in the time of Ed. 6. in qu. an. 1549. &c. He also first of all published The Visions of Pierce Plowman. Lond. 1550. qu. Which hath since, been once or twice made extant with corrections. At length this most zealous Person having lived to a fair age, mostly spent in continual action for the settlement and propagation of the Protestant Religion, submitted to the stroke of death in Fifteen hundred eighty and eight, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church dedicated to St. Giles, situated and being near to Cripplegate in Lond. Over his grave was soon after a monumental stone laid, with this inscription engraven on a brass plate fastned thereunto. Here lyeth the body of Robert Crowley Clerk, late Vicar of this Parish, who departed this life the 18 day of June, an. dom. 1588.

243. GEORGE ETHRYG, or Etheridge, or, as he writes himself in Latine, Edrycus, was born in a mercate town in Oxfordshire called Thame, admitted Scholar of C. C. Coll. in Nov. 1534, being then put under the tuition of John Shepreve, and in Feb. 1539 was made Probationer-Fellow. In 1542 he was licensed to proceed in Arts, and two years after was admitted to the reading of any of the Books of Aphorismes of Hypocrates. At length being esteemed by all to be a most excellent Grecian, he was made the Kings Professor of that language in the University about 1553, and kept that lecture till some time after Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown; and then, because he had been a forward Person against the Protestants in Qu. Maries Reign, was forced to leave it. So that following the practice of his faculty of Medicine with good success in, and near, Oxon, especially among those of his opinion, gained a considerable stock of wealth. He mostly lived, and kept a Family in an antient decayed place of literature called George hall opposite almost to the South end of Caststreet in St. Maries Parish in Oxon, in which he took to him (in the condition of Sojournours) the Sons of divers Catholick Gentlemen to be instructed in several arts and sciences; among whom was Will. Gifford afterwards Archbishop of Rheimes, who received from him rudiments in Grammar, Musick, and partly in Logick. He constantly adher'd to the R. Catholick Religion, wherein he had been zealously educated, for which he suffer'd at the reformation by losing his lecture (perhaps his Fellowship too) and by continual imprisonments to the great impoverishment of his health and estate. In a word, he was esteemed by most Persons, especially by those of his opinion, a noted Mathematician, well skill'd in vocal and instrumental Musick, an eminent Hebrician, Grecian, and Poet, and above all an excellent Physician, as it appears in certain books of his composition, the titles of which follow.

He also turn'd the Psalmes of David into a short form of Hebrew verse, and translated most, if not all, of the works of Justin Martyr from Greek into Latin, with other things, which I have not yet seen. He was living an antient Man in fifteen hundred eighty and eight, but when, or where he died, I know not, nor where buried unless in the yard of St. Maries Church in Oxon, in which his Father and Mother were before buried. John Leland who was his familiar friend did celebrate his memory (*) by verse while he lived, and told him thus.

PETER LEVENS or Levins was born at, or near, 244. Eske in Yorkshire, became a Student in the University, an. 1552, was elected probationer-Fellow of Madg. Coll. into a Yorkshire place 18. Jan. 1557. being then Bach. of Arts, and on the 19. Jan. 1559, was admitted true and perpetual Fellow. In 1560. he left his fellowship, and one Thomas Dunne M. A. succeeded him, but whether our Author Levens proceeded in Arts, or took a degree in Physick, or was licensed to practise that Faculty, it appears not in our Registers. Afterwards he taught a Grammar-School, and practised Physick, which is all I know of him, only that he wrot and published these things following.

A Dictionary of English and Latine words, &c. the English going before the Latine; necessary for Scholars that want variety of words, and for such as use to write in English metre. Lond. 1570. in 18. sh. in qu.

The Author is stiled in the title page Master of Arts of Oxon. and Student in Physick and Chirurgie. This Book was afterwards several times printed with corrections; and one Edition came out at Lond. 1664. what else Peter Levins hath written I cannot yet tell.

THOMAS SAMPSON was born about the year 1517 educated in Grammar and Academical learning amongst the Oxonian Muses, afterwards studied the municipal Laws in one of the Temples, where being converted to the Protestant Religion, did shortly after, as 'tis said, convert John Bradford the Martyr. Whereupon they both taking Orders from Nich. Ridley Bishop of London, became noted Preachers in the Reign of Ed. 6, and about that time Sampson, as 'tis said, was made Dean of Chichester. In the beginning of Qu. Mary he absconded, at which time being well acquainted with one Rich. Chambers a zealous Protestant, they collected moneys in the City of London from the well affected there, to be distributed among such poor Scholars of each University, that were haters of the Roman Catholick Religion. Which matter being at length discovered, he, with his wife the Neice of Hugh Latimer were forced with Chambers to go beyond the Seas to Strasburge, where wholly applying himself to the study of Divinity, was much advanced in the knowledge thereof by his often associating himself with learned Tremelius. After Queen Elizabeth came to the Crown he returned to his native country, and became a frequent Preacher in London and much followed by the reformed party there, and afterwards in the north parts of England. In 1560. the Queen design'd him to be Bishop of Norwich, but he altogether refused it, for no other reason, as 'twas suppos'd, but that he was much disaffected to the Hierarchy and Ceremonies of the Church of England. In the latter end of the said year (in the beginning of March) he supplicated the venerable congregation of Regents of this University, that whereas he had for the space of 16 years studied Divinity he might be admitted to the reading of Epistles of S. Paul, that is to the degree of Bach. of Divinity which was before the time of Reformation, to the reading of the Book of Sen- tences. This Supplicat was granted by, notwithstanding he had taken no Degree before among, them, as it appears from the publick Registers. In the same congregation he supplicated also that after he was admitted Bach. of Divinity he might have liberty to proceed in the same Faculty; but to that no answer was given. Afterwards he supplicated that he might not only use the habit of Master of Arts in the time of his admission to the Degree of Bach. of Divinity, but afterwards also while he continued in that state. Which request, though granted simpliciter, yet it doth not appear that he was admitted to that Degree. In Michaelmas term, 1561. he was installed Dean of Christ Church in Oxon, in the place of Dr. George Carew, and soon after in the month of November he supplicated the congregation of Regents, that it might be lawful for him to Preach within the limits of the University in a doctoral habit. Which desire, being, as they thought, unreasonable, yet because he was a Dean they granted it only to continue till the Aut following. At that time there being a great scarcity of Divines in the University, and but very few Masters, he the said Sampson and Laur. Humphrey of Magd. Coll. another severe Calvinist, preached by turns every Lords day either at St. Maries or elsewhere to the Academians, and soon after got another brother of Allsouls Coll. (as 'tis said) to joyn with them, but who that was, unless Andrew Kingmyll LL. B. who afterwards out of pure sanctity went to Geneva, I know not. But Sampson being too severe a Calvinist, if not worse, to govern such a noted Coll. as Cb. Cb. (for he was an enemy to Organs, ornaments of the Church, clerical vestments, the square cap, (he always in imitation of Humphrey wearing the round cap) and rather a perfwader from, than encourager, to use them) he was at length, after a great many of admonitions from authority to conform, and entreaties from certain Bishops so to do, removed from his Deanery by the sentence of Matthew Archbishop of Canterbury, an. 1564. Afterwards he obtained the Mastership of the Hospital of Will. de Wygston at Leycester, (besides the Penitentiaryship, or the Prebend of St. Pancras in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul) where continuing for some time in teaching, he was by the leave and favour of the Queen permitted to be a Theological Lecturer in Whittingdon Coll. in London: but before he had enjoyed that place 6 years, he was taken with the palfie. Whereupon retiring to his hospital spent the remaining part of his days in preaching and writing. Those works that go under his name are these.

He also corrected, and caused to be published Two Sermons, the first of repentance, the other of the Lords Supper. Lond. 1581. oct. written by his friend Job. Bradford, with other things of that Author. At length Tbo. Sampson having lived beyond the age of Man in a perpetual motion (as 'twere) for the carrying on of the holy cause, laid down his head, and gave up the ghost on the 9. Apr. in 1589. Fifteen hundred eighty and nine, whereupon his body was buried in the Chappel of the Hospital of Will. de Wygston before-mention'd. Over his grave was a monument soon after fastned to the South wall thereof, with an inscription on it, erected by his Sons John and Nathaniel Sampson. A copy of which, with other matters of the said Author, which I have not here mention'd, you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Ox. lib. 2. p. 254. From this Tbo. Sampson, is, if I mistake not, descended Tbo. Sampson a pretender to Poetry, Author of Fortunes fashion portrayed in the troubles of Lady Elizab. Gray, Wife of Edw. 4. Lond. 1613. qu. a Poem, dedicated to Henr. Pilkington of Gadsby in Leicestershire.

246. JOHN BROWNSWERD or Brunswerdus as he writes himself, a most noted Master of the Latin Tongue, was born, as I conceive, in Cheshire, and had a considerable part of his education in this University, but mostly, as 'tis thought, in Cambridge, where, I presume, he took one, or more Degrees. After his retreat thence, he settled at Macclesfield in Cheshire, where he taught the Free-school with very good success, and having obtained a good report, and honourable advancement in the Latin Empire, was deservedly numbred amongst the best Latin Poets that lived in the Reign of Qu. Elizab. His works are,

Progymnasmata aliquot poemata. Lond. 1590. qu. with other things which I have not yet seen. He took his last farewell of this world on the 15. Apr. in Fifteen hundred 1589. eighty and nine, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Macclesfield before-mentioned. In which year Tbo. Newton his sometimes Scholar did publish a book of Encomia's of certain illustrious Men of England, in which he hath this Distick of Brownsward.

Rhetora, Grammaticum, Polyhistora teque poetam

Quis negat: is lippus, luscus, obesus, iners.

And soon after, the said Newton, whose respect to his memory was great, set up a Monument on the South wall of the said Chancel, with an inscription thereon, stiling Brownsward, Vir pius & doctus, and concluding with these two verses.

Alpha poetarum, Coryphaeus Grammaticorum,

GEORGE PETTIE, a younger Son of John le Petite 247. or Pettie of Tetworth and Stoke-Tatmach in Oxfordshire Esq; was born in that County, and at about 16 years of age, an. 1564 was a Scholar or Student of Cb. Cb. under Mr. Tbo. Barnard Canon thereof, and took one Degree in Arts as a member of that house in the latter end of the Year 1568. Soon after he left the University, travelled beyond the Seas, and at length became excellent for his passionate penning of amorous stories, equal for poetical invention with his dear Friend Will. Gager, and as much commended for his neat stile as any of his time. He hath written a book intit.

A Pettie pallace of Pettie his pleasure, containing many pretty stories in comely colours and most delightful discourses—Printed at Lond. twice at least in an English character, one of which editions bears date, 1608. in qu. written in imitation of a book intit. The pallace of pleasure beautified, adorned and well furnished with pleasant histories and excellent Novells, &c. Lond. 1569. qu. written by Will. Painter Clerk of the ordinance and armory within the Tower of London. The aforeaid Pettie pallace, &c. I have in my study, and for the respect I bear to the name of the Author (he having been uncle to my Mother Maria la Petite) I will keep it, but 'tis so far now from being excellent or fine, that it is more fit to be read by a School-boy, or rustical amoratto, than by a Gent. of mode or language. The said George Pettie translated from French into English, (with a preface of his own put to it,) The civile conversation of M. Stephen Guazzo, in 4. books. —Lond. 1586. qu. written originally in the Italian tongue, which I have also. Three of the said books were translated by the said Pettie, the fourth was begun by him, but finished by Barthelm. Young of the Middle Temple Gentleman, being the same Barthelmew, as I think, who lived afterwards at Alhurst in Kent, and died there in 1621. What other matters G. Pettie hath written, or translated, I cannot tell, nor do I know any thing material of him besides, only that he died in the prime of his years at Plymouth in Devonshire (being then a Captain and a Man of note) about the latter end of July in Fifteen hundred eighty and 1589. nine, and was buried, as I have been told, in the great Church there. The Lands which he had by his Fathers gift in Aston-Rovant, in Kingston in the Parish thereof, and at Tetworth in Oxfordshire, he gave to his Brother Christopher Pettie.

JOHN GARBRAND alias Herks Son of Garbrand 248. Herks a Dutch Man and Bookseller living sometimes in St. Maries Parish in Oxon, was born within the City of Oxon, educated in Grammar learning in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New Coll. an. 1562, being esteemed then a good Poet. Afterwards, he, by the favour of Bishop Jewell (who had been well acquainted with his Father while he lived in the University) became Prebendary of Yatesbury in the Church of Salisbury, on the resignation of Tbo. Whyte LL. D. in Nov. 1565, being then only Bach. of Arts, and Prebendary of Minor pars Alisara in the said Church. In 1567 he left his Coll. and on the 18. of March 1568 he was made Preb. of of Chute and Cheesbury in the said Church of Sarum, on the deprivation of Job. Fuller, Garbrand being then Rector of North-Crowley in Bucks. In 1582 he took the Degrees in Divinity, was then accounted an eminent Theologist and a noted Preacher, but withal a severe Puritan. He hath gathered together, corrected and compleated several things of the said B. Jewell, whom he in a marvellous manner had admired, as (1) A view of a seditious bull sent into England from Pius 5. Pope of Rome, an. 1569. (2) A short treatise of the Holy Scriptures. Lond. 1582. oct. Both which Jewell delivered in divers Sermons in the Cathedral Church of Salisbury, an. 1570. (3) An exposition on the two Epistles to the Thessalonians. Lond. in oct. (4) Certain Sermons preached at Pauls Cross. Lond. 1583. oct. They are in number fix. (5) Treatise of the Sacraments, gathered out of certain Sermons preached at Salisbury. Lond. 1583. oct. This Dr. Garbrand died in the Winter time 1589. (about Christmas) in Fifteen hundred eighty and nine, and was buried in the Church of North-Crowley before-mention'd. He gave by his will several books to New Coll. Library: And all such books and papers that were given to him by B. Jewell, as also all such loose sheets which he the said Garbrand had drawn for common places, gathered out of that Bishops books, he gave to Rob. Chaloner and John Rainolds Doctors of Divinity.

249. LAURENCE HUMPHREY, or Humphredus as he sometimes writes himself, was born at a mercate Town called Newport Paynell in Bucks. educated in Latine and Greek learning at Cambridge, made Demie of Magd. Coll. in Oxon, 1547, perpetual Fellow two years after, (being then Bach. of Arts) and Master of the said faculty in 1552. About that time he was made Greek reader of his Coll. took holy orders and became a zealous and forward student in the Theological faculty. In June 1555 (2. and 3. of Phil. and Mary) the President, Vicepresident, Deans, &c. of that Coll. gave leave (*) to the said Humphrey, who in the opinion of all was much commended for his life and conversation, as also for the excellency of his learning and wit, that he might freely for the cause of study travel into trasmarine parts for one year, conditionally that he contain himself from those places that are suspected to be heretical or favourers of heresie, and that also he refrain from the company, who are, or were authors of heresie or heretical opinions, &c. Which leave being procured, he went forthwith to Zurich and associated himself with the English exiles there, that had fled from the Nation for Religion sake. After the death of Qu. Mary he returned to his Coll. and was restored to his Fellowship, having been expelled thence because he did not return thereunto, after his time of leave was expired. In the Year 1560 he was constituted the Queens Professor of Divinity in the University of Oxon, being then about 34 years of age, at which time was a very great scarcity of Theologists throughout the body of Students, and in the year following he was elected President of his Coll. In 1562 he took the Degrees in Divinity, and in 1570 he was made Dean of Gloucester upon the promotion of Dr. Tho. Cooper to the See of Lincoln. In 1580 he was constituted Dean of Winchester in the place of Dr. Job. Watson promoted to the See of Winchester, which was the highest preferment he had among the Clergy; and the reason for it (as 'twas guessed) was, because that in matter of ceremony or indifferency, he altogether consented not to the Church of England. For the truth is, that from the City of Zurich (remarkable for the Preachings and death of Zwinglius) and the correspondence that he had at Geneva, he brought back with him at his return into England so much of the Calvinian both in doctrine and discipline, that the best that could be said of him was, that he was a moderate and conscientious Nonconformist. Whence 'twas that by his being many years President of Magd. College, publick Professor of Div. in the University and several times Vice-chancellor, he did not only, upon advantage issuing from those places, stock his Coll. with a generation of Nonconformists, which could not be rooted out in many years after his decease, but sowed also in the Divinity School such seeds of Calvinisme, and labored to create in the younger sort such a strong hatred against the Papists, as if nothing but divine truths were to be found in the one, and nothing but abominations were to be seen in the other. This was the opinion of several eminent Divines of the Church of England, yet one (a) that lived in his time and knew him, saith that he and Dr. Will. Fulke of Cambridge, whom he stiles standard bearers for a long time of the Nonconformists, did grow conformable in the end, as they grew ripar in experience and sager in judgment: Howsoever it was, sure it is, that Humphrey was a great and general Scholar, an able linguist, a deep Divine, and for his excellency of stile, exactness of method and substance of matters in his writings, he went beyond most of our Theologists. An eminent (b) Archbishop who knew him well saith that he (Dr. Humphrey) had read more Fathers, than Campian the Jesuit ever saw, devoured more than he ever tasted, and that he had taught more in this University, than he either had learned or heard. Dr. Humphrey hath written,

Epistola de Græcis literis, & Homeri lectione & imitatione, ad Praesidem & Socios Coll. B. Mar. Magd. Oxon. Set before a book intit. Cornu copiae, &c. written by Hadrian Junius--Baf. 1558. The beginning of the said Epistle is Patriæ communis nostræ, &c.

Concio in die Cinerum. Pr. in oct. He also (with Rob. Crowley) hath written a book against that of Miles Hoggeard, published in Qu. Maries Reign against the Protestants, and other things which I have not yet seen: And reviewed, corrected and published Job. Shepreves book intit. Summa & Synopsis N. Testamenti, &c. At length after Dr. Humphrey had spent most part of his time in a studious and retired condition, tho with little comfort of his Wife and male Children, he departed this mortal life on the kalends of Febr. in Fifteen hundred eighty and nine, aged 63, and was buried at the upper end of the inner Chappel of Magd. Coll. Soon after was a comely mon. set over his grave, in the South wall; which, when the said Chap. was adorn'd, and paved with Marble, was removed, and set up on the S. wall of the outer Chappel: The inscription of which, you may read in *Hist. & Antiq. he had 7 Sons and 5 Daughters, She dyed 27. Aug. 1611. aged 74 and was buried in the Chancel of Steeple-Barton Church in Oxfordshire; over whose grave her eldest Dau. called Justina the Wife of Caspar Dormer of the said place Esq; erected a fair Monument, as she had before done over that of her Father in Magd. Coll. Chappel.

250. JOHN BANISTER was born of honest and wealthy Parents, but in what County I know not; studied Logicals for a time in this University; afterwards entering upon the Physick line, solely gave himself up to the study of that faculty and chirurgery. In 1573 he was licensed by this University to practice Physick; about which time being settled in the antient borough of Nottingham lived there many years in great esteem, and was wonderfully followed by all sorts of People for his happy practice in that and chirurgery. His works are,

A needful, new, and necessary treatise of chirurgery, briefly comprehending the general and particular curation of ulcers. Lond. 1575. oct.

Certain experiments of his own invention, &c.

History of Man, sucked from the sap of the most approved Anatomists, &c. in 9 books — Lond. 1578. in a thin fol.

Compendious chirurgerie, gathered and translated especially out of Wecker, &c. Lond. 1585. in tw.

- Antidotary chirurgical, containing variety of all sorts of Medicines, &c. Lond. 1589. oct. What other books he hath published I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he was in great renown in the middle of the Reign of Qu. Elizabeth. Several years after his death came out his works in six books, as

- 1 Of Tumours
- 2 Of Wounds
- 3 Of Ulcers
- 4 Of Fractures and Luxations, (5) Of the curation of Ulcers, and (6) Antidotarie, beforemention'd. All which six books were printed at Lond. 1633. qu.

251. THOMAS RANDOLPHE Son of Avery Randolphe of Badlesmere in Kent, was born in that County, made Student of Ch. Ch. when K. Hen. 8. turn'd it into a Cathedral, admitted Bach. of the Civil Law 1547 and about that time was made a publick notary. In 1549. Nov. 20. he succeeded Rob. Weston in the principality of Broadgates hall, which he kept till 1553, and then Tho. Stempe LL. D. was admitted into his place. In the Reign of Qu. Elizabeth he being then Doctor of his faculty, he was (c) employed in several Embassies, as thrice to the Peers in Scotland, thrice to Q. Mary of Scotland, after her return from France; seven times to K. James the 6. of Scotland, thrice to John Basilides Emperor of Russia, once to Charles the 9. of France and again to Hen. 3. The Queen of England, who knighted him, rewarded these his services with the Chamberlaines office in the Exchequer, heretofore a place of great honour and worth, the Mastership or office of Comptroller general of the Post horses, and with some small Land. He hath written,

An account of his Embassage to the Emperor of Russia, an. 1568. — Remitted into the first vol. of Rich. Hakeluyts voyages. Lond. 1598. He then (in 1568) procured privileges from the Emperor of Russia for the English Merchants trafficking there.

- Instructions given to, and notes to be observed by, James Bassendine, Jam. Woodcock and Rich. Browne for the searching of the Sea, and border of the coast, from the river Pechora, to the Eastwards, an. 1588. — There was then a commission granted to Sir Thom. Randolphe for the searching of those parts, but he entrusted the matter with the 3 Persons before-mention'd. See more in the said vol. of voyages by R. Hakeluyt. At length after Sir Thomas had painfully spent his time in fundry and frequent Embassies, and in continual services of his Prince and Country, at home and abroad, he quietly surrendered up his last breath in his house at St. Peters hill near to Pauls Wharf in 1590. London, on the 8. of June in Fifteen hundred and ninety, aged 67, (leaving then behind him several Children that he had by two Wives) whereupon his body, accompanied by one or two Heralds of armes, was buried 6. July following in the Church of St. Peter near to the said Wharf. Besides this Tho. Randolphe a Statesman, hath been another of both his names of a later date, and a most celebrated

Poet of his time; of whom, by the way, I desire the reader to know these matters following, viz. that he was born at Newnham near to Daintry in Northamptonshire, 15 June 1605, Son of Will. Randolphe of Hams near to Lewis in Sussex (Steward to Edw. Lord Zouch) by Elizabeth his Wife, Dau. of Tho. Smith of Newnham before-mentioned, educated in Westminster-School, and went thence (being one of the Kings Scholars) to Trinity Coll. in Cambridge 1623, of which he became Fellow. Afterwards he commenced Master of Arts, in which Degree he was incorporated at Oxon, became famous for his ingenuity, an adopted Son of Benj. Johnson, and accounted one of the most pregnant wits of his age; the quickness of which was first discovered when he was about 9 or 10 years old, when then he wrote the History of the incarnation of our Saviour, in verse, which is at this day preserved in MS. under his own hand writing. When he arrived to Mans Estate, and perhaps before, he wrote (1) Poems. (2) The Muses Looking-glass, a Comedy. (3) Amyntas or the impossible dowry, a Pastoral. (4) Aristippus, or the jovial Philosopher, &c. Trag. presented in a private show. (5) The conceited Pedler; presented in a strange shew. — Lond. 1630. qu. (6) Jealous Lovers, Tr. Com. (7) Hey for honesty, down with knavery. Com. Translated out of Aristophanes his Plutus: Augmented and published by F. J. Lond. 1651. qu. All which, except the last, were gathered together, and printed in one vol. by the care of his Brother Rob. Randolphe Student of Ch. Ch. in Oxon. being then commended to the world by divers Poets of the said University. Several other things of the like nature, were expected from the said young Poet Th. Randolphe, but by indulging himself too much with the liberal conversation of his admirers (a thing incident to Poets) brought him untimely to his end, in the House of Will. Stafford of Blaberwyke in Northamptonshire Esq. (having spent some time in that of his Father at Little Houghton in the said County in his delightful studies) Whereupon his body being buried in an Isle, joyning to the Church at that place (among those of the Staffords) on the 17 day of March, an. 1634, had soon after a Monument of white Marble, wreathed about with laurel, erected over his grave, at the charge of Sir Christopher (afterwards Lord) Hatten of Kirby. The inscription on which, in Lat. and Engl. ver. was made by the Poets Friend Pet. Hausted of Cambridge.

DAVID POWELL, a learned searcher into the bowels of venerable antiquity, and the most skilful Person in British histories that his time produced, was born in Denbighshire, entred a Member of this University in 1566 or thereabouts, but in what Coll. or Hall resident, I know not. Sure 'tis that as soon as Jesuw Coll. was founded (1571) he translated himself thereunto, took the Degrees in Arts as a Member thereof, holy Orders, and at length was made Vicar of Ruabon in his own Country. About that time he had confer'd on him a Dignity in one of the Cathed. in Wales (St. Asaph I think) grew famous for his learning, and soon after took the Degrees in Divinity. His works are, Annotiones in itinerarium Cambriae, scriptum per Silv. Giraldum Cambrensem. Lond. 1585. oct. Franc. 1603.

Annot. in Cambr. descriptionem, script. per Silv. Giraldum.

De Britannica historia recte intelligenda, Epistola ad Gui. Fleetwoodum civis Lond. Recordatorem. Which two last books are printed with his Annotiones in Itin. Cambr. He also took a great deal of pains in making a Welsh Dictionary, but died before he could perfect it; corrected also and published Historia Britannica, written by Ponticus Vironius, in 6 books, — Lond. 1585. oct. And amended and augmented The History of Cambria now called Wales; which was translated into English by Humph. Lloyd Gent. — Lond. 1584. qu. This History of Cambria was originally written in Latin by Caradoc a Monk of Lancarvan, and by him continued till the Year 1156. Afterwards being yearly augmented by several hands, was, as I have told you, translated into English by H. Lloyd as you may see under the Year 1570, but he dying before he could come near to the end of it, 'twas finished by our Author D. Powell, and by him published. What else he hath transmitted to posterity, I find not, nor any thing more of him, only that he was buried in his Church of Ruabon (as the Antients there say, tho the register not, because 'tis imperfect) about Fifteen hundred and ninety, and that his Son Sam. Powell succeeded him in the Vicaridge of that Village. They add also that he had left behind him several things fit to be printed, but what became of them after his death they could not tell. The next that I must mention

tion is one, who was accounted an eminent Scholar of his time, as by the generality of writers is confess'd.

253. DANIEL ROGERS, a most accomplished Gent. of his time, who puts in some of his writings the addition of Albimontanus to his name, was the Son of John Rogers (by his Wife Adriana Pratt alias de Weyden) Son of Job. Rogers of Deryend in the Parish of Aston in Warwickshire, was by his Fathers care strictly educated in juvenile learning, but at the coming to the Crown of Q. Mary, being then about 13 years of age, he went with his Father, as it seems, beyond the Seas for Religion sake; where settling at Frankfort, obtained great knowledge in humane learning, especially in the Greek tongue. After his return in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth, he was sent to Oxon, but to what particular Hall or Coll. therein, I know not. In July 1561 he was admitted Bach. of Arts, and in the beginning of Aug. following was licensed to proceed in the same faculty; the first of which Degrees he compleated not by Determination, nor the other by standing in the Comitia. Afterwards taking to Wife Susan Dau. of Nicasius Yetswiert Secretary of the French tongue to Q. Eliz. and one of the Clerks of the signet, was introduced into the Court, where his most admirable parts being quickly discerned, he became one of the Clerks of the Council to that Queen, and often employed by her in (d) Embassies, as into the Netherlands an. 1575, to Don Job. of Austria 1577, and to the K. of Denmark in 1588. He was a very good Man, excellently well learned, a good Lat. Poet, and one that was especially beloved by the famous Antiquary and Historian W. Camden, for whose sake he had laid the foundation of,

A discourse concerning the Acts of the Britains, the form of their Common-wealth, and the order and laws by which they lived—Which discourse he intended to communicate to the said Camden, to have it inserted in his Britannia, but he died (e) before 'twas finish'd. He wrot also,

Ode, Epigrammata, Epitaphia, &c. in laudem & mortem Johannis Juelli Episc. Sarisbur. See at the end of the said Jewells life written by L. Humphrey. He hath also published certain Latin Poems, which are quoted by the said Camden in his discourse (f) of the City of Salisbury, and Poems in English mentioned by other Persons with great commendation, but these I have not yet seen. He hath also Lat. verses occasionally printed in other Authors, as before Ortelius his Theatrum orbis terrarum, and an Epigram to the University of Oxon, in Ralph Agas his Accurate description (or Type) of the said University, an. 1578. He yielded up his last breath to him that gave it, on the 11th of Febr. in Fifteen hundred and ninety; whereupon his body accompanied by an Herald or two, was buried on Shrovetuesday the 16 of the same month near to that of Nicas. Yetswiert before-mention'd in the Church of Sunbury near to Hampton-court in Middlesex. I find another Dan. Rogers later in time than the former, who among several things that he hath published are, (1) David's cost, wherein every one who is desirous to serve God aright, may see what it must cost him. Lond. 1619. oct. being the effect of certain Sermons. (2) A practical Catechisme. Lond. 1633. (3) Lectures upon the History of Naaman the Syrian, his disease and cure. Lond. 1642--50. fol. (4) Matrimonial honour, or the crown and comfort of marriage, &c. Lond. 1642. qu. with other things which I have not yet seen. But this D. Rogers who was a Man of most rare parts, was educated in Christs Coll. in Cambridge, afterwards a Minister and Bach. of Div. and I think the same, who was Parson of Haversham in Bucks. qu.

ARTHUR FAUNT, a most noted Jesuit of his time, Son of Will. Faunt of Foston in Leicestershire Esq. was born of an antient and gentile Family living at that place, an. 1554, and being very studious and delighted in Letters while he was a Child, became fit for Academical studies at 14 years of age. Whereupon being sent to Merton Coll. in 1568 he was committed to the tuition of the most noted Philosopher of that house named Job. Potts; who, tho he had been before ejected by Mr. Jo. Man the Warden, yet was he permitted to attend his Pupil, whom he before had instructed in Grammar in the Country. But the said Potts being a R. Cath. or else an hearty well-wisher to the Popish Religion, he took away his Pupil from the said Coll. with the advice of his relations (who were Catholics also) and in the beginning of 1570 conducted him to Lo-vaine in Brabant, where entering him into the Coll. of the Jesuits the same year, left him and went into Ireland. In the said Coll. he continued till he was Bach. of Arts; at which time, having a desire to travel, he went to Paris, where he remained for a time. Thence he went to Mynchen or Munchen a City and University in Bavaria, where William Duke of that Province, did, for the towardliness that he saw in him, choose him for his Scholar, and maintained him in the said University. While he continued there, he took the Degree of Master of Arts, and then having an ardent desire to study Divinity, he departed thence in the Year 1575, went to the English Coll. of Jesuits at Rome, made a very forward progress in that faculty, and changed his name to Laurence Arthur Faunt. Not long after, he was constituted Divinity reader in the said Coll. and was in very great favour with P. Greg. 13. who, had he lived a little longer, would, as 'twas then supposed, have honoured our profound Author Faunt with a Cardinals cap. However in token of his love, he gave him, on his humble desire, license to make a seal, that by virtue of it, which should be set to a writing to be drawn up by him, any of his Countrymen (whose welfare he ever tendred) might with safety pass through any Country, without peril of the Spanish inquisition, or any danger else whatsoever. In the mean time the K. of Poland having settled a Coll. for Jesuits at Posna, a City in his Dominions, our Author was sent by the said Pope to be Governour thereof. So that leaving Rome in order for that employment 10. June 1581, he was not long after received there with ceremony. Where, for his great learning, gravity, wisdom, and his religious life and conversation, he was held in great esteem by the spiritual and temporal estates of that Nation. While he remained there, he wrot several books, among which these following are some.

Cena Lutheranorum & Calvinianorum oppugnatio. part. 2. Posnan. 15986. qu.

Catholica Eucharistiae defensio. Printed with Cena, &c.

Apologia Libri sui de invoc. & venerat. Sanctorum contra falsas Danielis Tossani criminationes, &c. Col. Agrip. 1589. in oct. He also wrot without his name set to it, Tractatus de controversiis in ordinem ecclesiasticum & secularem in Polonia. Print. an. 1592. in qu. With other things which the Bib. script. of his society will tell you. This worthy Person, who was much celebrated in his time, gave way to fate at Vilna the chief City of the Province of Lithuania in Poland, on the 28. Febr. according to the account there followed, in Fifteen hundred ninety and one, (which is ninety with us) after he had religiously served in the society of Jesus about 25 years, to their great renown and honour. The next Person in order to be mention'd is one, as famous in his way, as the former, but of the reformed Religion.

THOMAS MOUFET or Muffet was born in London, in or near St. Leonards Shoreditch, as I conceive, because his name and relations lived in that Parish, and one John Muffet died there in 1596. After he had been educated in Grammar learning in that City, he spent some time in this University, afterwards travelled into divers Countries in Europe, where he became known to the most eminent Men, especially Physicians and Chymists of that time, and was doctorated in Physick in some noted University in his travels. After his return, he fell into very great practice within the City of his nativity, became much honoured and beloved by Peregrine Bertie Lord Willoughby of Eresbie, and esteemed the famous ornament of the body of Physicians, and the true pattern of all polite and solid Literature. He hath written,

De jure & praestantia Chemicorum Medicamentorum dialogus Apologeticus. Francof 1584. Ursell. 1602. oct. and in the first volume of Theatrum Chemicum, Argent. 1623. oct. pag. 70.

Epistolae quinque Medicinales. Most of which were written to one whom the Author calls Philaethes a German Chymist. They were printed with the former book in that impression of 1602, and I think elsewhere.

Nesomantica Hippocrateas; sive Hippocratis prognostica tunc et, ex omnibus ipsius scriptis methodice digesta, &c. Franc. 1588. oct. in 9 books. He also, by his great labour and charge, did enlarge, and finish, Insectorum sive minimorum Animalum Theatrum; olim ab Edw. Wottono, Conrado Gesnaro, Thomaz Pennio inchoatum. Which Book the Author leaving behind him in MS. at his Death, it came some years after into the hands of Sir Theod. de Mayern, Knight, who published it in Fol. at Lond., 1634. with an Epistle Dedicatory before, and Preface to, it: But before that time some imperfect Copies of it were published by Laur. Scholzius, an. 1598, &c. This Book was published in the English Tongue at Lond. 1658. Fol. by J. R. M. D. Dr. Monset hath written also,

Healths improvement; or, Rules comprising and discovering the nature, method, and manner of preparing all sorts of Food used in this Nation.—This was corrected and enlarged by Christoph. Bennet—Lond. 1655. 4to. What else our Author Monset hath written, I know not, nor any thing more of him, only that in his latter days he lived much at Bulbridge, near Wilton in Wilts. as a retainer to the Pombrochian Family; from which he had an yearly Pension allowed to him to his last day, mostly by the favour of that incomparable Lady, Mary Countess of Pembroke. He concluded his last day towards the latter end of Q. Elizabeth, and was, as I have been credibly informed by one or more ancient Men that belonged to the said Family, buried at Wilton. Contemporary with him was Joh. Securis an eminent Physician of Sarum, whom I have mentioned before.

PETER WHITE, noted for his excellency in Humane Learning while he continued in the University, was born in the Diocess of Waterford in Ireland, elected Fellow of Oriel Col. An. 1551. and in the year 1555. was admitted Master of Arts. About the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign he returned to his Native Country, and became the Happy Schoolmaster of Waterford, and Dean of Waterford for a time. From which last place being ejected for his Religion, about 1565. he continued notwithstanding in his beloved Faculty of Pedagogy, which was then accounted a most excellent Employment in Ireland by the Catholics; especially for this Reason, that the Sons of Noblemen and Gentlemen might be trained up in their Religion, and so consequently keep out Protestantism. His School was, during his time, in a flourishing condition, and by his care and industry many learned Persons issued thence. Among such (not that I shall mention Rich. Stanyhurst, of whom I shall speak hereafter) was one Peter Lombard born in Waterford, who afterwards studied at Louaine in Brabant; where, after he had spent two years and an half in Philosophy, he was chosen (g) when he proceeded Master of Arts, Primus Universitatis, by the uniform consent of the Four Principals; which preferment did not happen in such sort for many years before. About that time the said Lombard wrote Carmen heroicum in Doctoratum Nicolai Quemerfordi, with other things afterwards, which were much valued at Louaine; but such I have not yet seen. See another Pet. Lombard in my discourse of Will. Camden. As for P. White, he hath written,

Epit. figurarum Rhetoricarum. lib. 1.

Annotationes in Orat. pro Archid. poetâ.

Annot. in Orat. pro T. A. Milone.

Epigrammata diversa. lib. 1. He lived, as I guess, to the latter end of Q. Elizabeth; but the particular time when he died, I find not. Equal in time with the said Pet. White, was another of both his Names, an English-Man born, and a severe Calvinist; who, among several things that he hath written, published a Book, intitled, An Answer to certain crabbed Questions, pretending a Real Presence in the Sacrament, together with a discovery of the Jesuitical Opinion of Justification, guissfully uttered by Sherwin at the time of his Execution. Lond. 1582. oct. Also A Sermon against Idolatry, on Apoc. 1. 12, 13. Lond. 1581. oct. &c. Whether he was an Oxford Man, I cannot yet find.

THOMAS NEALE was born at Yeate in Gloucestershire, sped a Child into the College near Winchester, by the endeavours of his Mother's Brother Alex. Belfire

Fellow of New College, where profiting exceedingly in Grammer Learning in the School there, was chosen Probationer of New College in 1538. and two years after was admitted true and perpetual Fellow of the said House. Afterwards prosecuting his Studies with great industry, took the degree of Master of Arts, in 1546. Holy Orders, and soon after became an able Theologist, and admirably well skill'd in the Greek and Hebrew Languages; the last of which he read to several young Scholars in the University, particularly to Bern. Gilpin of Queen's College. About that time Sir Tho. Whyte (who was afterwards Founder of S. John's College) having had notice of his pregnant Parts and Vertues, did for an encouragement allow unto him an yearly Pension of 10*l.* In the beginning of Q. Mary he became Chaplain to Dr. Bonner Bishop of London, and in 1556. being newly returned from Paris, and other places in France, he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, being then Rector of Thenforth in Northamptonshire. But when Q. Elizabeth came to the Crown, and he thereupon bereft of his Lord and Patron Bonner, he betook himself to Oxon; and in 1559. he was made the Queen's Professor of the Hebrew Lecture, entred himself a Commoner of Hart Hall, and built little Lodgings opposite thereunto, joyning to the West end of New Col. Cloister, wherein he lived several years; but his Religion being more Catholick than Protestant, he left Oxon, as he had done his Lecture before; and being of a timorous Nature, and always dreading of being called into Question for his seldom frequenting the Church, and receiving the Sacrament, he retired to an obscure Village, called Cassington, distant from Oxon, North-West, about 4 miles, where purchasing an House, at the end thereof next to Einsham, spent the remainder of his Days in Study and Devotion. As he was accounted by many an eminent Theologist and Linguist, so by some a tolerable Philosopher, Poet, and Geographer. He hath written, Dialogus in adventum sereniss. Regina Elizabetha gratulatorius, inter eandem Reginam & D. Rob. Dudleyum comitem Leicestria, & Acad. Oxon. Cancellarium. Tis a 4to. MS. (h) written in 1566. in long and short Verses, and hath this beginning, Siccine chara tuus, &c. In this Book are contained, besides the said Dialogues, the Pictures, or Effigies of all the Colleges and Schools then in being, with long and short Verses under them, shewing by whom they were founded, and when.

A Table, or Map, describing the Colleges and Halls in Oxon, with Verses underneath each.—This Map was hung up for two or three days on St. Mary's Church door, when Q. Elizabeth was entertained at Oxon, in Sept. 1566. which she several times viewed. I take it to be the same, containing the pictures of the Colleges and Halls, which one Mr. Will. Nisburne, sometimes Commoner of St. John's Col. gave thereunto, and the same which usually hung in the President's Lodgings; but by a decree (i) made by that Society, 28 Aug. 1616. it was given to Sir Tho. Lake Secretary to his Majesty King James I. and one of the Privy Council; whereupon Sir Thomas gave to that College 20*l.* towards the reparation of their Buildings, situated between their Common Hall, and their Publick Gate. Our Author Th. Neale made a translation also of all the Prophets out of the Hebrew, which he presented to Q. Elizabeth, when she was entertained at Oxon, in 1566, and translated from that Tongue several of the Rabbins into Latin, which he dedicated to the great Cardinal Pole: What else he hath performed, either in writing or translating, I cannot tell, neither any thing material of him besides; only, (1) That he is noted by some Writers, to be the Original Reporter of the Consecration of Matthew Parker to the See of Canterbury, at the Nags-Head-Tavern in Cheapside, which since is manifestly made a meer Forgery, and (2) That in the year fifteen hundred and ninety, he being then seventy one years of age, did put up a Monument for himself, with an inscription on a Brasse plate fastned thereunto, at the upper end of the Body of Cassington Church, over the Seat which belonged to the House where he lived, (for he sometimes went to Church,) with intentions to be buried under the said Seat; but when he died, or was buried, the Register of that place, which is very imperfect, tells us not. The Copy of the inscription is printed in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 139. a. One Tho. Neale of Yeate in Gloucestershire (where

ANTHONY de CORRO, or Antonius Corranus, or Corrano, Son of Ant. Corranus Doctor of the Laws, was born at Sevil in Spain, educated there from his Childhood in the R. Catholick Religion, and was at length an Ascetic, but whether a Monk or Fryer, I know not. Afterwards he left his Order and Religion, and being desirous to embrace the Reformed Doctrine, fled from his Country, went into England, in 1570. or thereabouts, and at length to London, where he became a frequent Preacher. In 1571. he was made Reader of Divinity in the Temple, by the favour of Dr. Edwin Sandys Bishop of London; in which Office he continued about three years. In the beginning of March, 1575. he was (l) recommended to the University of Oxon, by Rob. E. of Leicester Chanc. thereof, to the end that he might proceed Doctor of Divinity at the next Aët, have the charges of his Degree remitted, and that he be dispensed with for taking the Degrees in order. In the beginning of April following a Convocation was solemnized, wherein the Chancellor's Letters being read concerning the said matter, a Dispensation was proposed, that he, the said Corranus, might proceed; but the House demurring upon it, was at length granted with this condition, that he purge himself of Heretical Opinions before the next Aët. This they did for this cause, that the Chancellour had design'd him to read Divinity in the University, and to allot him a Catechist Lecture, upon some consultation (as twas pretended) for the utter extirpation of the R. Catholick Religion from the University. This being the seeming design, as it was afterwards the real intention of the Queen's Council, and High Commissioners, to plant him among the Academicians; you cannot imagine what Fears and Jealousies were raised in the Heads of the old Puritanical Doctors and others, who were fully bent to root out the dregs of Popery in the University, lest that which they laboured in, should be frustrated by a Stranger. I have seen a Copy of a Letter written by Jo. Rainolds of Corpus Christi College, to Dr. Laur. Humphrey then Vice-chancellor, dated June 7. wherein several things being said of Corrano and his Doctrine, you shall have the Contents only. (1) That if Corrano be settled in the University, it is to be feared that it will raise such Flames therein, that they will not easily be quenched. (2) 'Tis requisite that it be really known, whether he be able to shew that he be lawfully called to the Ministry of the Gospel, and charge of teaching publicly, either by the order of any Christian Church beyond the Sea, or by the Authority of the Church of England, or whether Ordain'd by a Bishop; of which matters there be some that doubt. And if he be not, how can he read? And if he be, it would be well if it be known. (3) That he is evilly thought of for Heresie of the French Church and others: And Beza doth publicly (m) charge him of it in an Epistle of his that is extant. (4) That he is supposed to be tainted with Pelagianism, which partly appears from certain Tables which he brought with him, and afterwards scattered abroad. On which, a certain Person of sound judgment made such Notes, that from thence one may evidently perceive, that Corrano's obscure speeches in the said Tables, do give just suspicion of very great Heresies, about Predestination and Justification by Faith, two the chief Points of Christian Religion, &c. And therefore it is hoped, that as you were a means to remove Franc. Puccius, so you will endeavour to stop Corrano from coming among us, who is thought to be a Master of Puccius, &c. Thus in brief from Jo. Rainolds. But notwithstanding all the endeavours to keep him out, he was at length admitted, after he had freed himself from Heresie, and became Reader of Divinity to the Students in Gloucester, St. Mary's, and Hart, Hall, lived as a Student in Ch. Ch. in 1579. if not before, of which House he occurs Censor Theologicus, in 1581, 82, 83, 84, and 85. being then also Prebendary of the Prebend of Harlesten, belonging to the Cathedral of St. Paul. In 1579. he stirred again for the Degree of Doctor of Divinity; but I cannot yet find that he was admitted, (notwithstanding he styles himself Doctor of that Faculty, in his Dialogus Theologicus, an. 1574.) and in the year 1582. in April he laid under the censure of Heresie again, upon which arose some trouble, but soon after quieted, and he restored to the good Opinion of the generality of Scholars and others. His Works are these:

An Epistle, or godly Admonition, sent to the Pastors of the Flemish Church in Antwerp, exhorting them to concord with other Ministers.— This was originally written in Latin; but the Copy of it I have not yet seen. Translated into English by Geofry Fenton—London. 1570. oct.

Tabula divinorum operum, de humani generis creatione.— Printed 1574. &c. oct. Translated also into English, under the Title of Tables of God's Works, &c.

Dialogus Theologicus, quo Epistola D. Pauli Apost. ad Romanos explanatur: Collect. ex praelectionibus Corran. London. 1574. oct. printed in English there, 1579. oct.

Supplication to the King of Spain; wherein is shewed the Sum of Religion, for the Profession whereof the Protestants do suffer Persecution in the Low Countries. London. 1577. oct. 'Twas written in Latin and French; but who put it into English, I know not, unless the Author.

Nota in concionem Solomonis de summo hominis bono, quam Hebraei cohelet, Graeci & Latini Ecclesiastem vocant.—London. 1579. and 81. in oct. The version of which into Latin was done by Corranus also. The said Notes were adorn'd with a learned Analasis by Abrah. Scultet. Printed at Francf. 1618. oct.

Sermons on Ecclesiastes.—Abridged by Thomas Pitt—Oxon. 1585. oct. which is called by some Pitt's Paraphrase on Ecclesiastes.

A Spanish Grammer, with certain rules, for teaching both the Spanish and French Tongues.—Put into English by Jo. Thorius, as I shall tell you when I come to him. Printed at London. 1590. qu. What other things Corrano hath written, I find not, nor any thing else of him; only that he dying at London, March 30. or thereabouts, in one thousand five hundred ninety and one, aged 64. 1591. was buried in the Church of S. Andrew; but whether in that in Holbourn, or in that by the Wardrobe, I know not, (perhaps in the last) leaving then behind him a Wife of no good repute, and a Daughter named Susan; which, if the same that was at Woman's Estate in Oxon, a little before her Father's Death, was (if any credit might be given to a Libel of that time, made by an Oxf. Scholar) of a light reputation.

JOHN MOLYNS, Molens or Mullins, so many ways I find him written, was born in Somersetshire, elected Probat. Fellow of Magd. College in 1541. and afterwards being Bach. of Divinity, became a zealous Man for Reformation. In the Reign of Q. Mary he left the Nation for Religion sake, and settled at Zurich, where he was esteemed (*) a learned Man of credit and Authority, being there, as it is said, Greek Reader among the Natives of England: But when Q. Elizabeth came to the Crown, he returned, was made Archdeacon of London, in the place of Jo. Harpesfield depriv'd, and Canon of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, where he was much revered for his great Learning and frequent Preaching. One (†) that knew him well gave this Character of him. Johannes Molinsus Archidiaconus Ecclesiae Paulinae, qui nulli injuriam fecerat, qui prodesse omnibus studuerat, qui Philosophiae, Theologiae, Linguarum studio se totum tradiderat, qui nihil committeret nisi quod, ut Aristides, justus, ut olim Christiani veteres, & nunc (meaning in the beginning of Q. Mary's Reign) misse interesse recusaret, eandem & ancipitem fortunam subire compulsus est; meaning also that he was forced to leave his Fellowship of Magd. College, and seek his Fortune elsewhere, with Arth. Saul, Pet. Morwin, and other learned and pious Fellows of that House, who soon after went as voluntary Exiles into Germany. He hath written and published several Books; yet in all my searches I can only find extant,

He concluded his last day on the eleventh of the Cal. of June, in one thousand five hundred ninety and one, and was buried in the North Isle, joyning to the Choire of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, within the City of London, leaving then behind him a Daughter named Mary, Wife of Walt. Chetwind of Ingestry in Staffordshire. Over his Grave was soon after a flat stone laid, with his Image thereon, engraven on a Brasse plate, and an Epitaph under it, the beginning of which runs thus,

*Clarus Johannes vite moderamine Mullins,

He gave by Will 200 l. to purchase Lands worth 12 l. per An. for an exhibition to be given to two Scholars of Magd. College in Oxon, each to have 6 l. which, if I mistake not, continueth to this day. In his Archdeaconry of London succeeded Theophilus Aylmer, Son of Dr. Jo. Aylmer Bishop of London.

260. CHRISTOPHER HATTON, Son of Will. Hatton of Holdenby in Northamptonshire, Son of John, Son of Hen Hatton, by Eliz. his Wife, Sister and Heir of Will. Holdenby of Holdenby before-mentioned, was born at Holdenby, became a Gentleman-Commoner of S. Mary's Hall, in the Reign of Q. Mary, at which time Will. Alan (afterwards a Cardinal) presided it. Thence, without a Degree, he went to the Inner-Temple; afterwards became successively one of the Queen's Gentlemen Pensioners, Gentleman of the Privy Chamber, Captain of the Band of Pensioners, a Knight, Vice-chamberlain of the Queen's Household, one of the Privy Council, Lord Chancellor of England, Knight of the Garter, and Chancellor of this University. He was 'a Man (n) to say nothing of him, but that which in truth is due, for Religion and Godliness right devout, of approved faithfulness to the State, of incorrupt Equity, for Alms deeds of all others most bountiful, and one (which is not the least part of his praise) that was most willing and ready to support and maintain Learning, &c. He was also somewhat (o) enclined to the Popish Party, by reason his Natural Clemency could not be drawn into a Persuasion, that in case of Religion, Men should be burnt, hang'd, or quartered. And therefore it was that one (p) reporteth that he always was in animo Catholicus; and another (q) that he was of such credit and favour in Rome, as if he was the greatest Papist in England. He wrote, as it is said, several things pertaining to the Law, but none of them are extant; only this, if I may say it is his, and not his Name set to it for sale sake.

A Treatise concerning Statutes, or Acts of Parliament, and the Exposition thereof. Lond. 1677. oct. Whether ever before printed, I know not.

1591. Speeches spoken during the time of his Chancelorship—MS. This great and worthy Person dyed on the 20th. of November in one thousand five hundred ninety and one, aged 51. and was buried in the upper part of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, on the 16th. of December following. Soon after came out a little Book of Verses made on his Death, by several Hands, intit. Musarum plangores. Christopher Lord Hatton, Son of John Hatton, the nearest Kinsman of the Male Line to the aforesaid Sir Christopher, was not of St. Mary's Hall, but of Jesus College in Cambridge, and afterwards a Doctor of the Civil Law of Oxon, as I shall elsewhere tell you. He published the Psalms of David, with Titles and Collects, according to the matter of each Psalm. Printed at Oxon, 1644. in oct. and afterwards enlarged and published several times. These Collects or Prayers at the end of every Psalm, were compiled by Dr. Jeremiah Taylor, and so were the Devotions for the help and assistance of all Christian People, which are at the end of every impression of the aforesaid Book; yet notwithstanding they go all under the Name of the aforesaid Christop. L. Hatton, (having his Arms in the Title of them,) who dying 4. July 1670. being then, or lately, a Member of the Privy Council to his Majesty, was buried in a private Chappel of the Collegiate Church at Westminster (dedicated to St. Peter) opposite to the Capella Regum, on the North side. BARTHELMEW CHAMBERLAINE^{261.}

was born of, and descended from an ancient and gentile Family in Oxfordshire, admitted Scholar of Trinity Col. 7. June 1563. aged 17 years, Probationer in 67, and Fellow the year after. About that time entering into Holy Orders, he became a noted Preacher in these parts, took both the Degrees in Divinity, that of Doctor being completed 1579. before which time he was beneficed and dignified in the Church, but where, I cannot justly say. He hath written and published, Several Sermons, as, (1) The Passion of Christ, and benefits thereby, on Heb. 9. 28. Lond. 1581. and 1613. oct. (2) Concio ad Academicos Oxonienses in Comitibus, An. 1576. Lond. 1584. qu. (3) Sermon at Pauls, on Amos 3. 6. Lond. 1589. oct. (4) Sermon at Farington in Berks, Clar. on— Lond. 1571. oct. with others, which I have not yet seen. Between the time of the first coming of the said Barth. Chamberlain to Trinity College, to the year 1578. I find seven of his Surname to be Students in the said College, and some after; but cannot in all my searches find out George Chamberlaine, who was afterwards Bishop of Ypre, and whether he ever abode in this University in the condition of a Student, I cannot justly say it. The said George Chamberlaine was the eldest Son of George Chamberlaine Esq; (by his Wife, the Daughter of Moses Pring of Gaunt in Flanders) and he the second Son of Sir Leonard Chamberlaine of Oxfordshire Knight, Governor of the Isle of Guernsey, who dyed there 2. Eliz. From which Sir Leonard are the Chamberlains of Sherburn in the said County descended; the Heirefs general of which Family, named Elizabeth, was married to John Nevile, Baron of Abergavenny. The said George Chamberlaine who was Bishop of Ypre, was born at Gaunt before-mentioned, An. 1576. and being bred up to Learning and Religion, became successively Canon, Archdeacon, and Dean of St. Bavo in Gaunt, and at length, in 1626. was made Bishop of Ypre within the Province of Machlin in Brabant, on the Death of Antonius de Henning, where being settled he became much admired (as he was partly before) for his great Piety, for his voluble Preaching in five Languages at least, and beloved of Kings and Princes, &c. Had I time, and room allowed, I would give you a Copy of an Epitaph made on, by one that knew and much admired, him; wherein, no doubt, but that high character of his Piety, Learning, and Worth, is justly said; but I must hasten, and tell you that he dying, to the reluctancy of all that knew him, on the 19. Dec. according to the account followed at Ypre, in 1634. aged 58 years, one month, and 19 days, was buried in his own Cathedral. Some years before his Death he came into England, purposely to resign up his Heirship of his Estate at Sherburn before-mentioned, and elsewhere, which belonged to the noble Family of the Chamberlains, sometimes Barons of Tanqueruil in Normandy, he being the first and true Heir: And this he did for Religion sake, and purposely to avoid the incumbrances of earthly things. See more of him in Atbena Belgica, &c. written by Franc. Sweertius, printed at Antwerp, 1628. where you will find several things that he had written and published.

ROBERT GWINN, a Welsh Man born, took^{262.} one degree in Arts, 1568. and in 1571. leaving the University, went with Thom. Cromther another Batchelaur, to Downay, where being admitted into the English College, made very great progress in Divinity. Afterwards Gwin returning into England, and settling in Wales in the condition of a Secular Priest, did write several Pious Works in the Welsh Tongue, as Anton. Possivinus tells (*) us, but the Titles of them he omits; and also translated from the English into the Welsh Language, A Christian Directory or Exercise guiding Men to Eternal Salvation, commonly called the Resolution: Written by Rob. Persons the Jesuit. which Translation was much used and valued, and so consequently did a great deal of good among the Welsh People. See more in Jo. Davies under the year 1634.

WALTER BAILEY or Bailey, Son of Henry^{263.} Bailey of Warnwell in Dorsetshire, was born at Portsmouth in that County, educated in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted perpetual fellow of New Colledge after he had served two years of probation, an. 1550, tok the degrees in Arts, entred upon the Physick line, was admitted to practice that faculty while he was Proctor of the University, in the year 1558, and about that time was made Prebendary of Dulcote alias Dulcot, &c. in the Church of Wells, which he resign'd in 1579. In 1561 he was made the Queens Professor of Physick in this University, proceeded in that faculty two years after, and at length became Physician to Qu. Elizabeth, and much resorted to for his practice. He hath written,

A discourse of three kinds of Pepper in common use—Printed 1588, in oct. dedicated to Sir Jo. Horsey, Knight.

Brief Treatise of the preservation of the Eye-sight—Printed in the Reign of Qu. Eliz. in tw. and at Oxon 1616, and 1654 in oct. &c. In that Edition of 1616 was printed another or second Treatise of the Eye-sight, collected from Fernelius and Riolanus, but by whom, I know not. They both now go under the name of Bailey, who hath also written,

Directions for health, natural and artificial; with Medicines for all diseases of the Eyes—Printed 1626, in qu.

Explicatio Galeni de potu convalescentium & senum, & præcipue de nostra Ala & Biria paratione, &c. MS. in qu. sometimes in the Library of Robert Earl of Aylesbury. He the said Dr. Bailey surrendered up his last breath, March 3. in fifteen hundred ninety and two, aged 63, and was buried in the inner Chappel of New Coll. whose Epitaph you may read in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 152. b. His posterity do live at this day at Ducklington near to Witney in Oxfordshire, some of whom have been Justices of the Peace for the said County.

264. FRANCISC. PUCCIUS Filidinus was born of the noble and renowned family of the Puccii at Florence, from which had sprung before his time three Cardinals; educated from his Childhood in good Letters and in the R. Cath. Religion, exercis'd the trade of Merchandize at Lyons, where many differences and disputes arising concerning Religion, which were not then quite sopited, our Author Puccius, who was only a Spectator, laid aside his trade, and totally applied himself to the study of Sacred Letters, to the end that he might perfectly understand the grounds of his belief, and what was professed by the Protestants. At length being satisfied in Conscience that those of the Ro. Church were in an error, he left France and Italy, retired into England, and being seemingly a Protestant, he went to the University of Oxon, got himself, thro commendations of his sincerity, to be entred into a Coll. or Hall, wherein he studied Philosophy and Divinity very severely, and took the degree of Master of Arts, an. 1574. About which time, maintaining certain opinions contrary to those of the *Grande*s of the said University, (which were Calvinistical) especially de fide in deum, quæ & qualis sit, had many private disputes with Theologists there, and at length publick. Which disputes being altogether displeasing to them, who esteemed them ridiculous, and the author no better than an arrogant and an opinionative person, they found means to remove him from the University, much about the same time that he was endeavouring to be a Theol. or Catechistical Lecturer, lest his Doctrine should take root among the juniors. For at that time they being very zealous for a thro Reformation, were jealous of all strangers that came among them, and particularly of him, whom they well knew to have been a zealous Papist, and then no well-grounded Protestant. From Oxford he went to London, had several disputes there also, and became acquainted with Ant. Corrano, who living about that time in Oxon also, his person could never be well relisht among them. Afterwards Puccius went (a) to Basil in Germany, upon the invitation of Francisc. Beatus a Roman, then living there; where meeting also with Faustus Socinus, they had many discourses concerning the adventures of Puccius in England, and at length had several disputes (*) there with Socinus himself; with which, he seeming not to be well satisfied, Puccius wrote ten arguments de immortalitate naturali primi hominis ante peccatum. All which being answered by Socinus, were by him, with several disputations that had passed between them, made publick. Afterwards Puccius was forced to leave Basil, because he had printed certain Theses to be disputed on, in which he asserted universum humanum genus in ipso matris utero efficaciter particeps esse beneficiis Christi & vite immortalis & beatæ, &c. Whereupon he went into England, and so to London, where he began to publish his paradoxical opinions, and that with such confidence, as if, Orphæus-like, he meant to charm all to follow him; but his waters being narrowly watch'd, he was seiz'd on, imprison'd, and suffered several calamities, otherwise Oxford would have once more tasted of his Doctrine. Afterwards, being let loose, he went into Flanders and Holland, where he corresponded by Letters with Socinus. From Holland he went to Antwerp, where he did the like, and had several cavilling disputes not only with such that he esteemed heterodox, but with those of his own opinion. Thence he removed to Cracaw in Poland, where he had frequent disputes with the Jesuits, and others, nay and with some of his own persuasion, (Socinus being there also) and wrote several matters in the Italian Tongue against the Church of Rome, in 1585. While he continued in the said City of Cracaw, it hapned that he became acquainted with two persons that had come to that place with Albertus Alaskie, Prince (or Vaywood) of Sirad, when he left England. Their names were John Dee and Edward Kelley, Magicians; who having partly known Puccius in England, did entertain (b) and admit him into their secrets, with great hope of some good to be done by his fellowship; and in August the same year, he was actually with them at Prague in Bohemia (to which place they conveyed him) while certain Spirits appeared to them, Kelley being then Seer, and Dee an observer or writer down of what was said by the Spirits, and Kelley's seeing and interpreting. At length Puccius did not deal truly and sincerely with them, which much troubled Dee; and thereupon he desired to be rid of him. Puccius therefore perceiving it, wrote a large and submissive Letter to the said Dee and Kelley; and among other things, gave him a very punctual account of what had passed between Philip Bishop of Placentia (who was sent by the Pope, as his Nuncio, to have the said Magicians banished, or else sent to Rome) and himself, concerning their cause, apparitions, high attempts, &c. But so it was, that whither by the persuasions of the said Nuncio, or some things utter'd by the Spirits, that all the World should at length come to the Church of Rome, he forthwith recanted before certain Rom. Priests, and became a zealous Papist, and at length a Priest. All that I have seen of his works, besides what are already mentioned, are,

De Christi Salvatoris efficacia in omnibus & singulis hominibus, quatenus homines sunt, assertio Catholica, &c. Goudæ 1592. oct. Ded. to P. Clem. 8.

Epistola ad Jo. Dee & Edw. Kelly. Dat. at Prag. 15. Cal. oct. 1585. 'Tis a large Epistle in Latin, and is the same with the submissive Letter before-mentioned. After the year fifteen hundred and ninety two, he went to Rome, and became Secretary to Cardinal Pompeius Arragon, from whom he expected great matters, but death snatching him untimely away, in the midst of his aspiring thoughts, about the year 1600, was buried in the Church of St. Onuphrius in Rome. I have more than twice sent to that place for the day and year of his death, with a copy of his Epitaph, but as yet I have received no answer. Therefore take this Epitaph made for him, which I have met (c) with elsewhere.

HENRY SALESBURY, born of, and descended from, a right ancient family of his name living in Denbighshire, became a commoner of S. Albans hall in 1581, aged 20 years, took one degree in Arts, and no more, in this University, entred on the Physick-line, practiced afterwards in his own country, and was esteemed by the learned not only an eminent Physician, but a curious Critick, especially as to matters relating to the Antiquities and Language of his country. He hath written, Dictionarium Britannicum. Which being left imperfect in MS, came into the hands of Job. Davies, who made great use of it when he was composing his Dictionarium in was born at Callis, educated in Ch. Ch. in this University, and was afterwards Doctor of Divinity, as I shall elsewhere tell you. He left behind him several Sons, among whom were Isaac of Ch. Ch. and Jacob of All Souls Col.

167. JOHN PENRY or ap Henry, that is the Son of Henry, better known by the Name of Martin Marprelate, or Marpriest, as having been a Plague to the Bishops and Ministers of his time than by his own; was born and bred, as he used to say, in the Mountains of Wales; particularly, as others say, in the County of Bracknock, became a Sub-fizer of Peter House in Cambridge, about 1578. At which time (as one (d) saith) he was as arrant a Papist as ever came out of Wales, and that he would have run a false Gallop over his Beads with any Man in England, and help the Priest, for a shift, to say Mass at midnight, &c. In 1583. or thereabouts, he took a Degree in Arts in that University; and afterwards did perform some, or most, of the Exercise requisite for Master; but leaving the said University abruptly, (for what cause I know not) he retired to Oxon; and getting himself to be entred a Commoner of St. Alban's Hall, (notwithstanding the vigour of Puritanism did then Reign among the Heads of the University, which makes me to think that Penry was not then inclined to Popery) he continued there for some time, finished the remaining part of his Exercise, and in the beginning of July 1586.
he was licensed to proceed in Arts, as a Member of the said Hall, and on the eleventh of the said Month completed that Degree in an Act celebrated in the Church of St. Mary. About that time he took Holy Orders, did Preach in Oxon, and afterwards in Cambridge, and was esteemed by many a tolerable Scholar, an edifying Preacher, and a good Man; but being a Person full of Welsh Blood, of a hot and restless Head, did, upon some discontent, change the course of his Life, and became a most notorious Anabaptist, (of which Party he was in his time the Corruptus) and in some sort a Brownist, and the most bitter Enemy to the Church of England, as any that appeared in the long Reign of Q. Elizabeth. He hath written,

A view of some part of such Publick Wants and Disorders as are in the Service of God, within her Majesty's Country of Wales; with an Humble Petition to the High Court of Parliament for their speedy redress. — Printed 1588. in oct. Therein is shewed not only the necessity of Reforming the State of Religion among that People; but also the only way, in regard of substance, to bring that Reformation to pass.

A defence of that which hath been written in the questions of the ignorant Ministry, and the communicating with them. — Printed 1588. in oct. written against Rob. Some, D. D. of Cambridge, who published the same year, A Treatise deciding several questions concerning the Ministry, Sacrament, and Church. Lond. in qu. As also A confutation of some of Mr. Penry's Errors. About that time J. G. of Oxon published a Book entit. Mr. Some laid open in his Colours; wherein the indifferent Reader may easily see, how wretchedly and loosely he hath handled the Cause against Mr. Penry. — Printed in oct. Penry hath also written,

(d) Cuthb. Curry-Knave in his Almond for a parrot, printed at Lond.
in Qu. fol. 14. a

Exhortation unto the Governours and People of her Majesty's Country of Wales, to labour earnestly to have the Preaching of the Gospel planted among them. — Printed

Theses Martiniana, i. e. certain demonstrative conclusions set down and collected by Martin Marprelate the Great, serving as a manifest and sufficient confutation of all that ever the College of Catercaps, with their whole Band of Clergy-Priests, have, or can bring, for the defence of their ambitious and Antichristian Prelacy. — Published by Martin Junior, 1589. in oct. and dedicated to John Kan- terbury; that is, John Archbishop of Canterbury. At the end of which Book Martin Junior hath an Epilogue.

The just censure and reproof of Mart. Marprelate to Martin Junior. — Printed with the former.

Protestation of Mart. Marprelate: Wherein, notwithstanding the surprizing of the Printer, he maketh it known unto the World, that he feareth neither proud Priest, Antichristian Pope, Tyrannous Prelate, nor godless Catercap, &c. — Printed (1589.) in 12°. by stealth, and very full of faults.

Dialogue, wherein is plainly laid open the tyrannical dealings of the Lords Bishops against God's Children. — Printed (1589.) in qu. Therein are several reflecting stories on Dr. Martin Culpeper Warden of New College, and on Dr. Nich. Bond of Magd. College, and on his excellent dancing. This scandalous Dialogue, (which was reprinted when the Long-Parliament began, An. 1640. purposely to spite Archbishop Laud and the Bishops) was, with other like stuff of the said Mart. Marprelate, answered by T. C. that is, Thom. Cooper, in his Admonition to the People of England, &c. See more in Tho. Cooper under the year 1594.

Treatise wherein is manifestly proved, that Reformation, and those that sincerely favour the same, are unjustly charged to be Enemies unto her Majesty and the State. — Printed 1590. in qu. This was answered in a Book, intit. Pasquils Apology, the first part, wherein he renders a reason of his long silence, and gallops the Field with the Treatise of Reformation. Printed where I was, and where I shall be ready by the help of God and my Muse, to send you a may-game of Martinism, An. 1590. qu.

Ha'y any work for a Cooper, &c. — This was written against Dr. Tho. Cooper before-mentioned, and said to be printed in Europe, not far from some of the bouncing Priests, An. 1590. qu.

Epitomy of the first Book of Dr. John Bridges, against the Puritans. — Printed in qu.

Oxon, and said to be printed over Sea in Europe, within two furlongs of a bouncing Priest, at the cost and charges of Mart. Marprelate, Gent. in qu.

History of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, Numb. 16. Ch.
Applied to the Prelacy, Ministry, and Church-Assemblies of England. — Printed 1609. qu. This Book being left imperfect by the Author when he was seized and imprisoned, was published by one of his Persuasion, who saith in the Title that it was written by Joh. Penry, a Martyr of Jesus Christ; and in the Epistle to the Reader, That he was a godly Man, learned, zealous, and of a most Christian carriage and courage. — That with all godly care and labour, he endeavoured to have the Gospel preached and planted among his poor Country Men, whose Case he greatly pitied, and had compassion of, in that they wanted the means of Salvation among them.
After all this, God using him as a farther Instrument for the more clear manifestation of the Truth; he was hardly treated, imprisoned, condemned, and executed, and so suffered Martyrdom for the Name of Christ, &c. These Books, whose Titles I have here set down, are all that have come to my knowledge, if not too many to have been repeated. The Author of which did in most of them so vilifie the Church of England, and its Members, that as one (*) saith, The Roman Catholics, in disgrace of our Prelacy, have cited several of them in their Books, and Marprelate for a grave Author and Witness, &c. But this the Reader is to understand, that the learned and sober Men did answer most, or all of the said Books, (which were printed by stealth, partly in that nest of rigid Puritans and Schismatics at Fawley in Northamptonshire, and partly at Coventry, and elsewhere,) because they knew Penry to have more than ordinary Learning in him; yet they did not so much work on the Author and his Disciples, make them ridiculous, and put him and them to silence, more than those Answers which were written in a buffooning stile; as (1) that written by Tom Nash, intit. Pappe with an hatchet: alias, A Fig for my God-Son: Or, Crack me this Nut: Or, A Country Cuff; that is, A sound Box of the Ear for the Idiot Martin to hold his Peace: Written by one that dares call a Dog, a Dog. — Imprinted by John Ancke, &c. And are to be sold at the Sign of the Crab-tree Cudgel in Thwack-coat-Lane. (2) That intit. Martin's months mind, &c. pr. 1589. in qu. (3) That called, The return of the renowned Cavaliero Pasquill of England, from the other side of the Seas; and his meeting with Marforius at London upon the Royal Exchange, &c. Lond. 1589. qu. against Martin and Martinism. (4) Another intit. A countercuff given to Martin Junior, &c. by the Pasquill of Engl. Cavaliero, &c. Lond. 1589. qu. (5) That intit. The first part of Pasquill's Apology, which I have before mention'd. (6) A certain Oxford Scholar, under the Name of Cuthbert Curry-Knave; who in his Book called, An Almond for a Parrot, or an Alms for Mart. Marprelate, &c. Printed in qu. doth most egregiously run Martin down. I say, that these Buffoonries and Pasquils did more non-plus Penry and his Disciples, and so consequently made their Doctrine more ridiculous among the common sort, than any grave or learned Answer could do; as in some part did A. L. who entitles himself Anti-Martinus, in his Monitio ad adolescentes utriusque Academia. Lond. 1589. qu. At length our Author Penry being apprehended at Stepney, near to London, (after his return from beyond the Sea,) for his writing and publishing infamous Books and Libels, and the Religion then established, was (after condemnation to die for the same) hang'd at St. Thomas à Waters, on the 29. May, in fifteen hundred ninety and three. He was adjudged at the King's Bench, by Sir Jo. Popham, Knight, L. Ch. Justice of that Court, and the rest of the Judges there assembled, on the 25. of the said Month of May, but was not executed on the next day after judgment, as it was expected, nor the second, nor the third day after; But when Men looked least for the same (as one (*) faith) then was he brought forth, being at dinner, (as I have heard,) by a Warrant under the Hands of John Archbishop of Canterbury, Sir John Puckering Knight, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and Sir John Popham aforesaid; and the matter being carried after a close manner, he was suddenly conveyed to the place of Execution, where he was as hastily bereaved of his Life, and not suffered (though he desired it) to make declaration of his Faith towards God, or of his Allegiance to her Majesty, &c. Thus by the Death of this forward and zealous Person, with the condemnation of John Udal, and Henry Barrow before that time, the neck of the Plots of the fiery Non-conformists were broken, and their brags turned into Preaching of Preces and Lachryma, as the only means for Christian Subjects.

228. WILLIAM FLEETWOOD was born of, (being a natural Son) and descended from, the Fleetwoods of Penwortham, and they from those of Heslyn, in Lancashire; educated for a time in this University, (either in Brasnose Coll. or Broadgates Hall) left it without a degree, and retired to the Middle-Temple, where by continual industry, advanced by good natural parts, he attained to the name of an eminent Lawyer. In 5 of Eliz. he was elected Autumn or Summer-Reader of that house, and in the year following Autumn-Reader again; but he omitting one of those times to read, he was in the 11th year of the said Queen, elected Double Reader thereof in Lent. About that time being made Recorder of London, he was afterwards by Writ, called to the degree of Serjeant at Law, An. 1580. and in 1592. he was made the Queen's Serjeant. He was a learned Man and a good Antiquary; but of a marvelous, merry, and pleasant conceit: And as touching his Learning, Justice, and Eloquence, I cannot better describe them, than a Poet

(*) Author of the Preface to Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, &c.

Observations upon the Eyte of Pickering, Lambert's Areheion, &c. MS. Fol. sometimes in the Library of Rich. Smith Secondary of the Poultry-Compter, with other things which I have not yet seen. This eminent Lawyer did mostly dwell in London, in a street called Noble-street, within Aldersgate-ward, in an house which himself newly built, wherein he dyed, but was buried, as I suppose, in the Church at Great Missenden in Buckinghamshire, (where he had purchased an estate) in the latter end of fifteen hundred ninety and three, for on the 7th of March that year, was a commission (f) granted from the Prorogative Court of Canterbury, to Mariana his Widdow (daughter of Joh. Barley of Kingsley in the said county) to administer the goods, debts, and chattels of her Husband Will. Fleetwood, lately deceased. He left behind him two Sons, whereof Sir Will. Fleetwood, Knight, was one, who succeeded him in the Estate at Missenden, and the other was Sir Thomas of the Middle-Temple, afterwards Attorney to Prince Henry. He had also divers Daughters, one whereof was married to Sir David Foulis Knight and Baronet, and another to Sir Tho. Chaloner Tutor to the said Prince, Son of the learned Sir Tho. Chaloner Knight.

JOHN WOOLTON was born at a Market Town in Lancashire, called Wigan or Wiggen, entred (g) a Student in Brasnose Col. 26. Oct. 1553. aged 18, or thereabouts, having perhaps wore a Gown in the University before that time, supplicated for the Degree of Bach. of Arts, in the beginning of 1555. but it doth not appear that he was admitted. Afterwards, as it is said, he went to, or with, his Uncle Alex. Nowel into Germany; to which place several Protestants of England had receded as voluntary Exiles. In the beginning of Q. Eliz. he returned, and in 1563. being about that time Canon Residentiary of Exeter, he was admitted by the Name of John Wolton, Bach. of Arts to the Church of Spaxton in the Diocess of Wells. In April 1574. he supplicated the vegerable congregation of Regents, that he might be admitted to the reading of the Sentences; but whether his desire was granted, or he admitted, it appears not. In May 1575. being then Warden of Manchester College in his own Country, he supplicated under the Name of John Walton a Minister of God's Word, and sometimes a Student of this University, that he might be licensed to proceed in Divinity; but whether that also was granted, it doth not appear. Sure it is, that he being then the designed Bishop of Exeter, was consecrated thereunto in the beginning of August following. He was a Person of great Piety and Reason, and an earnest assertor of conformity against the Opposers thereof, for which he was blamed by many, but commended by more, after his Death. He hath written,

The armour of proof; shewing the firm fortrefs of defence and haven of rest, in these troublesome times. Lond. 1576. oct.

An. 1576. At length he having sat Bishop about 14 years with great commendations, dyed on the 13th. of March, in fifteen hundred ninety and three, and was buried in his Cathedral Church at Exeter, on the South side of the Presbytery or Chaire, leaving then a Son behind him named John, Fellow of Allsoul's college, Master of Arts, and a Graduat in Physick. Over his Grave was a Monument soon after erected, with an inscription thereon, containing six Verses, two of which run thus:

*Ingenium, genium, mores, pietatis honore,
Eloquiumque pium busta perusta tegent.*

270. THOMAS WATSON a Londoner born, did spend some time in this University, not in Logick and Philosophy, as he ought to have done; but in the smooth and pleasant studies of Poetry and Romance, whereby he obtained an honourable Name among the Students in those Faculties. Afterwards retiring to the Metropolis, studied the Common Law at riper years, and for a diversion wrote, Ecloga in obitum D. Francisci Walsingham Eq. aur. Lond. 1590. in two sheets in qu.

Aminta Gaudia. Lond. 1592. qu. Written in Lat. Hexameter, and dedicated to the incomparable Mary Countess of Pembroke, who was a Patroness of his Studies. He hath written other things of that Nature or Strain, and something pertaining to Pastoral, which I have not yet seen, and was highly valued among ingenious Men, in the latter end of Q. Elizabeth. I shall make mention of another Tho. Watson (who in his younger years was a Poet also) in the Fasti following, among the Incorporations of the year 1554.

271. HENRY SMITH, Son of Erasmus Smith of Bosworth, Son of John Smith, alias Harrys of Withcock, in Leicestershire, was matriculated (b) as a Member of Lincoln Col. in 1575. thus, Henricus Smithe Leicestrensis generosus, Aetat. 15. What stay he made in the same House; or whether he was the same Hen. Smyth, who received (i) the Benefaction of Jo. Claymond, in Bras. Col. An. 1574. or took the Degree of Batchelaur of Arts, it appears not. Sure it is, that having some Ecclesiastical employment conferred upon him, was absent from the University for some time; and at length, in 1583. did take the Degree of Master of Arts, as a Member of Hart Hall, being then esteemed the Miracle and Wonder of his Age, for his prodigious Memory, and for his fluent, eloquent, and practical way of Preaching. Afterwards he became Lecturer of St. Clements Danes without Temple-Bar, near London, where being much frequented by the Puritanical Party, was by them esteemed (as he was by the generality) the prime Preacher of the Nation, which his Sermons, taken into the Hands of all People, did shew. Some of them were printed in 1591, 92, and 93, while he lived; but after his Death, 40 or more were collected into one Volume, and printed at London in 1594. in qu. Among them are (1) A preparative to Marriage. (2) Treatise on the Lord's Supper. (3) Examination of Usury. (4) Benefit of Contentation. (5) Affinity of the Faithful. (6) Christians Sacrifice. (7) Trial of Spirits. (8) Wedding Garment. (9) Way to walk in. (10) Pride of Nebuchadnezzar, &c. There hath been also printed, of late times, a Quarto Volume, containing 53 Sermons, besides Discourses, Prayers, Letters, &c. Among which is God's Arrows against Atheists, &c. which hath been translated and printed in Lat. at Openheim, beyond Sea, An. 1614. oct. All written by the said Henry Smith; among which are those numbred, that were printed 1594. This Person was in very great renown among Men in fifteen hundred ninety and three; in which year, if I mistake not, he died, aged 34. but where he was buried, the Register of St. Clements before-mentioned, tells us not; for his Brother, who lived to about the time of the Restauration of King Charles 2. did assure my Friend, that he retired for Health's sake out of the said Parish, and dyed in another more remote.

THOMAS COUPER, or Cooper, was born 272. within the City of Oxon, educated in Grammer Learning in the School joyning to St. Mary Magd. Col. being then a Chorister of that House; where with very great industry, making proficiency beyond his years, was elected Probationer in 1539. and in the year following perpetual Fellow of the said House. Afterwards proceeding in the Faculty of Arts, he was made Master of the School wherein he had been educated; left his Fellowship about 1546. and gave himself solely up to the studies of Humanity and Medicine. In the Reign of Q. Mary, he being then inclined to the Protestant Religion, he took, as it seems, a Degree in Physick, and practiced that Faculty in Oxon; but when she was dead, he re-assumed his former Faculty of Divinity, became a frequent Preacher, took the Degrees in that Faculty in the latter end of 1566. being about that time made Dean of Ch. Ch. in Oxon, and was several years after Vice-chancelour of the University. In 1569. he was made Dean of Gloucester, in the place of John Man deceased, and in 1570. Feb. 24. he was consecrated Bishop of Lincoln. In 1584. he was translated to Winchester; where, as in most parts of the Nation, he became much noted for his Learning and sanctity of Life. I have heard some reverend and ancient Divines of this University say, (as they had heard it from others who knew the Man,) that at what time Dr. Cooper was to leave Oxon, to go to the See of Lincoln, he did humbly confess, in his farewell Sermon to the University, That he was born of very mean Parents in Cat-street, (k) that he had undergone several mean and servile Offices in Magdalen College, till by the favour of Friends he was advanced to be Fellow and Schoolmaster, &c. And so going forward with a recital of the chief parts of his Life, did, in conclusion, humbly acknowledge God's great providence towards him, praying withal That he would be pleased to prosper him in that great Employment, which was put upon him, &c. Of this Person much may be said, and perhaps some wrong might redound to his memory, if I should say little; for he was indeed a reverend man, very well learned, and exceeding industrious, as it appears by that great Dictionary, which yet bears his Name, and was the cause of his preferment; the foundation of which was taken from Sir Tho. Eliot's Dictionary, and the materials, for the most part, from Rob. Stephens's Thesaurus, and Job. Frisius's Lat. and Germ. Dictionary. The course of his Life in Oxon, was very commendable, and, in some sort, Saint-like, if it be Saint-like to live unreprieveable, to bear a cross patiently, and to forgive great Injuries freely, this Man's example was without pattern. The Truth is, he being little acquainted with the World of Men, he did unhappily marry an Oxford Woman, who proved too light for his gravity, and in the end became so notorious for her ill living, that the Libels that then came forth, did found out her infamy; especially that made by Th. Bulkeley of Alls. col. which tells us, That a certain Person (l) did so much frequent her Company, that at length he was bound in a bond of 100 l. not to come near her. Nay, another (*) tells us, That the whole University in reverence of the Man, and indignity of the matter, offered him to separate his Wife from him by publick Authority, and to set him free, being the innocent Party. But he would by no means agree thereto, alledging, he knew his own infirmity, that he could not live unmarried, and to divorce, and marry again, he would not charge his conscience with so great a scandal. He hath written,

The Epitome of Chronicles, from the 17th. year after Christ, to 1540. and thence afterwards to the year 1560. Lond. 1560. qu. The Reader is to note that one Th. Lanquet, a young Man of 24 years of Age, had composed a Chron. consisting of two parts, reaching from the beginning of the World to the time of our Saviour; and was proceeding on a third part; but death cutting him off in his eager pursuit of the work, in 1545. our Author Cooper undertook to finish it; and his part, which is the third, contains almost thrice as much as the two parts of Lanquet. All which being finished, a third Person, contrary to the Theaurus linguae Romanae & Britannicae, &c. Lond. 1565. in a large fol. This is commonly called Cooper's Dictionary, which was so much esteemed by Q. Elizabeth, that ever after she endeavoured to promote the Author as high in the Church as she could. Of this Dictionary see more in Tho. Eliot, under the year 1546.

An admonition to the People of England; wherein are answered, not only the slanderous untruths, reproachfully uttered by Martin the Libeller, but also many other crimes by some of his Brood, objected generally against all Bishops, &c. Lond. 1589. qu. This Book was written after Mart. Marprelate had writ his Libel, which some (playing with Martin at his own weapon) answered pleasantly both in Rhime and Prose. But this our Author, the Bishop, with Authority and Gravity confuted him soundly in this Book; whereupon Martin replied in a Book entit. Ha's any Work for a Cooper, &c. At length this reverend and holy Bishop paying his last Debt to Nature at Winchester, 29. Apr. in fifteen hundred ninety and four, was buried on the South side of the Chaire, a little above the Bishop's Seat, belonging to the Cathedral there. Over his Grave was soon after laid a flat Marble, with an inscription thereon in Prose and Verse, a Copy of which you may read in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 197. a. He left behind him a Widow named Amev, and two Daughters, one of which, named Elizabeth, was the Wife of Dr. Joh. Belly, sometimes Provost of Oriel Col. afterwards Chancelour of the Diocese of Lincoln, the other was Mary the Wife of John Gouldwell Gent.

273. WILLIAM RAINOLDS, second Son of Rich. Rainolds, a sufficient Farmer, third Son of Rich. Rainolds, was born at Pynhoe alias Pynhawes (the Seat of his Ancestors) near to the City of Exeter in Devonshire, educated in School learning in Wykeham's Coll. near Winchester, elected Probationer of New Coll. in 1560. and two years after was admitted perpetual Fellow. In that House, where then was a severe Discipline kept up, he became a most noted Philosopher, a quick Disputant, and one much noted for his sincere love to the Protestant Cause. In 1566. he proceeded Master of Arts, and about that time he took Holy Orders. In 1572. he left his Fellowship, and retiring to Hart Hall, lived there in the quality of a Commoner: All which time he was earnest for Reformation, while John his Brother of C. C. Coll. stood affected to the Roman Catholick Religion, as it is said. This difference in judgment proved a fireball of Contention between, and engaged, them in a strong Duel, and set Disputes; whereupon both being strengthened by each others Arguments, our Author William turned a zealous Catholick, and John a strong Puritan. Whereupon Dr. Will. Alabaster a learned Divine, and an excellent Poet, made an Epigram on them, a copy of which you may see (m) elsewhere. This is the reason commonly received among Protestants, for each others conversion, but false; for the dispute was, if you will believe one that then lived, between John, and Edmund, Rainolds of C. C. Coll. as I have told (n) you elsewhere. So that now there being no pretence left for William's conversion by disputing with his Brother John, you may take this reason following, different from the other, if your charity will permit you to believe a R. Catholick (o) Author, as he had received it from the mouth or Pen of Will. Rainolds; which is this. — Mr. William Rainolds being first an earnest Professor and Preacher of the Protestant Religion in England, and much engaged among the Puritans in Northamptonshire, (as he was wont to tell,) he fell in the end to read over Mr. Jewel's Book, and did translate some part thereof into Latin; but before he had passed half over, he found such stuff, as made him greatly mistake of the whole Religion, and so he, leaving his hopes and commodities in England, went over the Sea, and the last year of Jubilee, to wit, 1575. he came to Rome, and brought that Book with him, and presented both himself and it to the Tribunal of the Inquisition, of his own free motion and accord, where I guess the Book remaineth still, if it be not burned; and himself after absolution received for his former Errors (which he with great humility and zeal required, and my self also at that time spake with him in that place) he returned into France and Flanders, and there lived many years, with singular edification for his rare Vertue and Learning, &c. Thus a zealous Romanist, whom I have here quoted in the Margin. Afterwards our Author Will. Rainolds went to Rheims in France, where being kindly received by Dr. Will. Allen President of the English College there, was shortly after made Professor or Reader of Divinity, and of the Hebrew Tongue. Afterwards he went to Antwerp, where he wrote, mostly under the Name of Will. Rossus, these things following:

Refutation of Mr. W. Whittaker's Cavils against the Annotations of the New Testament. Par. 1583. oct.

De justa republica Christiana in reges impios & hereticos Authoritate. Antw. 1592. oct. &c.

Catholick Faith concerning Christ's last Supper, against Berengarius and Bruce. Antw. 1593. oct. This Bruce was the same, as it seems, with Rob. Bruce a Scotch Minister.

Paraphrase on the New Testament — MS. in the English coll. of Benedictines at Deinward in Lorraine.

Calvino-Turcismus, i. e. Calvinistica perfidia cum Mahumetanâ collatio, & dilucida utriusque sectæ confutatio. Antw. 1597. Col. Agr. 1603. oct. in four Books. Which Books being left imperfect, were corrected, finished, and published, out of his Notes, by his dear Friend Will. Gifford Dean of St. Peter's Church at Lisle. This Book endeavours to prove that Calvin's Religion is worse in condition, and less probable in reason, than that of the Turks, and hath less ground and substance therein, than the other. The copies of which, stealing over the Sea into England, were answered by one who writes himself T. M. S. in a Book bearing this Title, De Turco-Papismo. Hoc est de Turcorum & Papistarum adversus Christi Ecclesiam & fidem conjuratione, eorumque in Religione & moribus consensione & similitudine. Lond. 1598, 99. qu. ibid. 1604. in oct. To which Book are added 4 more against the said Calvino-Turcismus. In the Preface to the first that came forth, the Author saith, that Will. Rainolds his going over to the Church of Rome, was because he was not compos mentis, as being somewhat distracted for the love of the Wife of one M. a famous Women of Oxon, &c. The said Rainolds also translated from English into Latin all the Works of Tho. Harding, with a large Preface to them, as I have elsewhere told you; but for want of Money they could not be Printed: Also Dr. Will. Allen's Book entit. A true, sincere and modest defence of English Catholics, &c. which Book W. Rainolds did also much increase. And what else he hath written, Piscus will (*) tell you, who adds that he deceasing at Antwerp in Flanders, in fifteen hundred ninety and four, was buried in the Chancel of the Church of the Bigwins there, on the South side of the Altar. Soon after was a stone laid over his Grave, with this inscription thereon. Honorabili Domino D. Gulielmo Reginaldo, alias Rescio pio exuli Anglo, viro doctissimo, & hujus Ecclesie Minist. Obiit 24. Aug. 1594, &c. This W. Rainolds had five Brothers, the eldest of which was named Hierom Fellow of C. C. College, and Master of Arts in 1557. who continuing in the Roman Catholick Religion, practised Physick in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's Reign; but soon after left the University, and whether he went beyond the Seas, and was Doctorated there, I cannot tell. Under this Hierom Rainolds, our Author William, who was the next Brother, did receive most of his tuition, while he was a Junior in Oxon. The third Brother was Edm. Rainolds before-mentioned, Fellow of C. C. College also, who leaving that House because he was in animo Catholicus, retired to Glocester Hall, where living many years in the condition of a Tutor, dyed a wealthy Man. The fourth Brother was James Rainolds, Master of Arts, and Fellow of Exeter Coll. The fifth and youngest was Nicholas, who lived at Pynhams on the Lands of his Ancestors, Father to Will. Rainolds of Cassington near to Woodstock in Oxfordshire Gentleman, sometimes a Member of Glocester Hall, (under his Uncle Edmund.) from whom I formerly received a writing under his hand, concerning his Ancestors and Relations for three Generations above him, part of which is here mentioned.

WILLIAM ALLYN Allen or Alan, so many ways I find him written, was the second Son of John Allen, (by Joanet or Jennet Lyster his Wife, Sister of Tho. Lyster of Westby in Yorkshire.) the Son of George Allen of Staffordshire, who having an Uncle, or near Kinsman, called Allen Abbat of Delawise, settled at Rossal in Lancashire, by the endeavours of the said Abbat, who demised to him divers Lands there, which belonged to his Monastery. At that place (Rossal) was Will. Allyn or Alan, whome we are farther to mention, born; and being arrived to about the fifteenth year of his age, was sent to Oxford in 1547. entered into Oriel Coll. and committed to the tuition of Morgan Philips, the chiefest Tutor then in that House; under whome having profited to a miracle in Logick and Philosophy, was unanimously elected Fellow of that Coll. in 1550. (4. Ed. 6.) Four years after he proceeded in Arts, and stood in that Art, wherein proceeded Tho. Hardyng and Nich. Harpsfield, two noted Writers, the former being then a Proceeder in Divinity, and the other in the Civil Law. In 1556. or thereabouts, he became Principal of St. Mary's Hall, and in that and the year following, one of the Proctors of the University. In 1558. or thereabouts, he was made Canon of York; but soon after upon the coming to the Crown by Q. Elizabeth, and the alteration of Religion that followed, he left his Country and Preferment about 1560. and going beyond the Seas, he retired to Louvaine, then an eminent Academy, especially for the study of Divinity, to which place did several eminent Theologists repair for a time, (as Saunders, Harding, Dorman, Rasfal, &c.) purposely to avoid the places infected with Heresie, as they called it. While he continued at Louvaine, he wrote (*) a Book in the English Tongue against Mr. Jewel, treating of Purgatory, which afterwards was Printed. About that time falling into a grievous disease, by too careful attending a Pupil of his of gentile extraction in England, had advice given him by his Physicians to retire to his Native Country for Health's sake. Whereupon returning into England, he kept himself unknown till he had recovered his former strength; and then endeavouring to reconcile People to the Church of Rome, and to terrifie them from going to the Meetings of Hereticks, as he stiled them, was forced by the Magistrates to leave that harbour, Lancashire. So that going to a certain place near Oxon, he practiced the like, and wrote two Books in English, one Of the Authority of the Priesthood, and the other Of Indulgences. From thence he removed his Quarters to the County of Norfolk, and lived sometimes in the House of the Duke of that Name, and sometimes near it, where he wrote Certain brief Reasons concerning Catholick Faith; whereby the vanity of Heresie, and excellency of Catholick Faith (as therein it is said) were evidently set down, purposely to settle such who were wavering in their Opinion. Afterwards, tho advantage was given to him to return to Louvaine, by the opportunity of a Ship then going from England; yet he neglected it, and went near to Oxon again, went to the University, and meeting with one of his Contemporaries, did work so much upon him by his discourse, that he promised him to abstain for the future from Protestant Company, and their Meetings. Which act of his, being made known to the Parents of the said Contemporary, they prosecuted Allyn so close that he was forced to leave England, after he had continued there about three years. So that retiring to a certain Monastery at Mechlin in Brabant, became a Divinity Reader there; which Office he performed with great commendations for some time. Afterwards being desirous to go to Rome, in the company of Dr. Jo. Vendivile, the King's Professor at Doway (afterwards Bishop of Tournay) did make some advance that way; but for certain Reasons that then passed between them, Allyn turned his Face and went to Doway, (at which place an Academy was settled about 1562.) where he studied Divinity, became Doctor of that Faculty, and so much esteemed for his rare and active Parts, that he was made Canon of the Church of Cambray. Afterwards by his endeavours he began a Seminary at Doway, about 1568. to receive all such learned English Catholics that had fled their Country for Religion sake, where soon after they framed for themselves a common Discipline, after the manner of a College, and got the Pope to assign them an yearly Pension. Soon after our author Allyn being made Canon of Rheims, he procured another Seminary to be erected there by the Guises, Kinsmen to Mary Q. of Scots: For the Netherlands, wherein Doway is situated, being run into confusion, the English Fugitives or Scholars were banished thence, by the command of Don Lewis de Requesens; so that thence going to Rheims they settled there for a time. Afterwards our active Author began another Seminary at Rome, and two in Spain, to the end that English Youths might be trained up, purposely to keep up the Roman Catholick Religion in England. At length for these his great and indefatigable labours, he was created a Priest Cardinal of St. Martin in montibus, by Pope Sixtus 5. on the 28. July, according to our account, An. 1587. and two years after was made Archbishop of Mechlin, or Machlin, the Metropolis of Brabant. The character given of this Man, by several of our English Authors of the reformed Party, is, That he, with R. Persons the Jesuit, and others, did (q) lay in continual wait for the destruction of Prince and People of England, and who by exciting both Foreigners abroad, and natural Subjects at home, plotted the reduction of the R. Religion to its antient vigour, &c. Farther (r) also, That after he had put off both his love to his Country, and his obedience to his Prince, he incensed the Spaniard and the Pope of Rome to assault England: And to that purpose adjoined himself to all pernicious consultations about that matter, after that Pope Sixtus 5. had bestowed on him the title of Cardinal, and the Spaniard had gave him an Abbacy in the Kingdom of Naples, and nominated him Archbishop of Machlin. When the Bull of Excommunication against Q. Elizabeth, at that time that the great Navy was provided for England, came forth, he brought it into the Low Countries, and caused it to be printed in English. Withal he wrote an Admonition to the Englishmen, that they should stick to the Pope and Spaniard; but being deceived of all his hopes, he returned again back to Rome, where, being wearied with the discords, hatreds, and dissensions of the English Run-aways, both Scholars and Nobles, at last he dyed in the 63 year of his Age, &c. Another (s) saith, That he was so ill deserving to be accounted English, as that like another Herostratus, he endeavoured to raise a combustion in the Church and State, &c. But let Writers say what they please; certain it is, that he was an active Man, and of great parts, and high prudence: that he was Religious and Zealous in his Profession, restless till he had performed what he had undertaken, that he was very affable, gentle, and winning, and that his personage was handsome and proper, which with an innate gravity, commanded respect from those that came near, or had to do with, him. His Works as to learning, are these,

A true, sincere, and modest defence of the English Catholics that suffer for their Faith both at home and abroad, against a slanderous Libel entit. The Execution of Justice in England. — Not expressed where, or when, Printed; but by the character and some passages therein, is shew'd that it was Printed beyond the Seas, about 1583. in oct. Printed also in Latin, at Ingolst. 1584. in oct. and in a Book entit. Concertat. Eccles. Cath. in Anglia, &c. 1594. This defence was answered by Dr. Tho. Bilson, in the third part of his Book of the Supremacy, or in that Book called, The true difference between Christian Subjection, and Unchristian Rebellion. As for The Execution of Justice, which the defence answers, was written, as it was then, and since, reported, by Sir Will. Cecil Lord Burleigh. The second impression of which, made at Lond. 1583. in five sheets in oct. I have, and bears this Title, The execution of Justice in England for maintenance of Publick and Christian Peace, against certain stirs of sedition, and adherents to the Traytors and Enemies of the Realm, without any persecution of them for questions of Religion, as is falsely reported, &c.

Epistola de Daventria ditione. Cracov. 1588. in oct. Printed also about that time in English. It must be noted that in 1587. Will. Stanley, and Rowl. York, Englishmen, did traiterously deliver up a Fort near Zutphen, and the strong Garrison of Daventry to the Spaniard; whereupon our Author Dr. Allyn, did (being provoked by the Bull of Pius 5. against Q. Elizabeth) not only commend the Treason, but excited others, in the said Epistle to the like exploit or perfidiousness, as if they were neither bound to serve nor obey an excommunicated Queen. At which time the said Allyn dispatched away divers Priests to Rowl. York, whose Regiment of 13 hundred consisted all of English and Irish, to be Chaplains and Confessors to them. In the year 1588. our author Allyn compiled a Book to be published when the Spaniard should arrive into England, to stir up all the English Papists to take up Arms against the Queen. The first part of the said Book was intit.

A declaration of the Sentence of Sixtus 5. — Grounded on the said Pope's Crusado, whereby he gave plenary Indulgence and Pardon of all Sins to all that gave their helping hand to deprive Q. Elizabeth of her Kingdom. The second part was entit.

An admonition to the Nobility and People of England. — Which Book, or Books, coming straightway to the knowledge of the Queen, she dispatched away (u) D. Val. Dale to the Prince of Parma, Vice-Roy of the Low Countries for the King of Spain; who being introduced into his presence, he did mildly expostulate with him about the said Book or Books, written by Allyn, wherein, as Dale said, he exhorted the Nobility and People of England and Ireland to joyn with the Spanish Forces under him, the said Prince, to invade England, &c. but he pretended he knew nothing of such a Book, and so sent him away unsatisfied. However so it was, that presently upon the overthrow of the great invincible Armado, under their heroical Adalanto, certain Roman Catholics procured the whole impression to be burned, saving some few that had been sent abroad beforehand to Friends, and such as had otherwise been conveyed away by the Printer, and others in secret wise. What else our Author Allyn hath written, Joh. Pitsen, who (w) speaks very honorably of him, will tell you; who adds that he gave up the ghost on the 6. of Octob. according to our account, in fifteen hundred ninety and four, and was buried in the Church or Chappel of the English Colledge at Rome, where there is an Epitaph for him, which being printed by two several Authors at least, I shall now pass it by. The Jesuits triumphed openly (as one (x) saith) at his Death, and among other of the calumniation against him, they said, That God had taken him away in a good time; for if he had lived longer he would have disgraced himself, and lost the credit which he had got. In one or more Books containing the lives, or at least characters, with the Arms, of the Popes and Cardinals of Rome, it appears that the Arms of Cardinal Allyn, are Argent 3 Cornies or Rabbits passant Sable; yet the ancient Arms belonging to the Allens or Allens of Staffordshire (from whom he is descended) are Parted per Chevron Gules and Ermine two Lyons heads erased, in the upper part, or. The next Card. that the English Nation hath been honoured with, is Philip Howard, third Son of Henry Earl of Arundel, and younger Brother to Henry Earl of Norwich and Duke of Norfolk; who at this day is living at Rome. He was born in Arundel House, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes without Temple-Bar near London, an. 1629. and there educated under several Tutors, till he was 14 years of age. At length, upon the eruption of the Civil War, he left the Nation, and travelled with his Grandfather Thomas Earl of Arundel into Italy, and at 15 years of age became a Dominican, or Black-Frier, at Cremona. After several years spent there, he returned into England, and upon the Marriage of King Charles 2. with Katherine the Infanta of Portugal, he became Lord Almoner to her, and continued in her service several years. Afterwards, upon the People's being exasperated against Popery, he quitted that Noble Office, and went to Bornheim in Flanders, where having a Convent of English Fryers of his Order, had not continued there long, but at the desire of his sometimes Tutor, then Confessor to Pope Clement 10. had a Cardinals Cap sent to him by the said Pope in the month of May, 1675. by his Messenger Seignior Con, at which time Father Howard was at Antwerp with the Bishop of that place. By virtue of which, and the instrument with it, he was made Cardinal Priest, Sub st. Ecclesia S. Maria supra Minervam: which Church was in most ancient time built upon the ruins of the Temple of Minerva at Rome, where the said Card. is now generally stiled The Cardinal of Norfolk, and by some The Cardinal of England. Afterwards taking his journey towards Rome, he was attended by his Uncle William Viscount Stafford (beheaded in 1680. upon account of being engaged in the Popish Plot) Mr. John Howard Son of the said William, Lord Thomas Howard Nephew to the said Cardinal, and younger Brother to the present Duke of Norfolk, Seignior Con before-mentioned, Dr. Joh. Laybourne President of the English or Clergy College at Doway, then Secretary or Auditor to the Cardinal, and others. He took his journey through Flanders to Doway, where he was with great solemnity received and lodged in the said Coll. The next day he designing to visit the College of English Benedictines at that place, he was received by the whole Convent in their Church, in a solemn procession with Copes, a Te Deum, and other Ceremonies, as appointed in the Ritual, for such receptions. From the Church he was conducted into the Cloyster, and entertained with a banquet, and a Panigyrick spoken to him, by a Student of that college. All which was so well performed, that Visc. Stafford was pleased to say, that it was the only fit reception his Eminence had met with in all his journey. Afterwards his Eminence went to Paris, where he continued for some time incognito. At length, with other Nobility and Persons of Quality added to the former company, he journeyed to Rome, and made his entry: for the defraying of which and his journey, he had the assistance of the Pope, and not of King Charles 2. and Queen Katherine, as the common report then went.

ADAM HYLL, a most noted and eloquent Preacher of his time, was elected Fellow of Balliol Coll. in 1568. being then Bachelaur of Arts, stood in the Art to compleat the degree of Master of that Faculty in 1572. and on the 12. of Jan. following, he resigned his Fellowship. About that time, he being noted for his practical way of Preaching, he became Vicar of Westbury in Wilts, (in which County he was, as it is probable, born) Parson of Gosage in Dorsetshire, and at length Prebendary of Gillingham Minor in, and Succentor of, the Cath. Church of Salisbury. In 1591. he took the degrees in Divinity, and had he not been untimely snatched away by Death, he would have been advanced to an high degree in the Church. He hath written and published,

A defence of the Article, Christ descended into Hell, with an Answer to the arguments objected against the truth of the said Doctrine, by one Alexand. Hume, &c. — Lond. 1592. (qu.) Afterwards Hume came out with A Rejoinder, wherein the answer to Dr. Hylls Sermon is justly defended. Printed 1593. qu. But before our author Hyll could come out with another answer, he gave way to fate; which hapning at Salisbury about the 16. of Febr. in fifteen hundred ninety and four, was buried in the Cath. Church there, on the nineteenth day of the same Month. Soon after his dignity or dignities in the said Church were bestowed on one Tho. Crump. As for the said Alex. Hume he was Master of Arts of the University of St. Andrew in Scotland, was incorporated here, as I shall tell you in the Fasts; and wrote, besides what is before mentioned, (a) A Treatise of Conscience, &c. (2) Treatise of the Felicity of the World to come, &c. (3) Four discourses of praises unto God, &c. All which were printed at London in 1594. in oct.

276. JOHN THORIE or Thorius, Son of John Thorius Doctor of Physick, who intitles himself, Balliolanus Flandrus, was born in London, matriculated in this University, as a Member of Ch. Ch. 1 Oct. 1586. aged 18. but whether he took a degree, it appears not, though in one of his Books he writes himself a Graduat of Oxford. He was a Person well skilled in certain Tongues, and a noted Poet of his time, as several pieces of his, then published, shew. All the things that I have seen of his writing or translating are these.

A Spanish Dictionary. Lond. 1590. qu. Added to his translation into English of a Spanish Grammar, written by Anth. de Corro; which Dictionary contains the explication of all the Spanish Words cited in the said Grammer, and is as a Key to open every thing therein.

Letters and Sonnets to Gabr. Harvey, An. 1593. — See at the end of a book, entit. Pierces Supererogation; written by the said Harvey: And at the end of another called, Have with you to Saffron Walden, &c. written by Tho. Nash a noted Poet of his time, and a Dramatick Writer, as his published Comedies shew. Our author Thorius also translated from Spanish into English, a book entit. The Councellour: A Treatise of Councils and Councellours of Princes. Lond. 1589. qu. written by Barth. Philip L.L.D. and another entit. The Serjeant Major; or, a Dialogue of the Office of a Serjeant Major. Lond. 1590. qu. Written in Spanish by Francisco Valdes Master of the Camp. I shall make mention of another Joh. Thorius in the Fasts, 1627. and of the Name of Thoris in other years there, and elsewhere; but whether the Thories of Boston and Ingoldmells in Lincolnshire, who lived there in the time of Queen Elizabeth and King James I. and after, were of Kin to the afore-said Joh. Thorie, I know not. Besides all these, I find one Raphael Thorius, commonly called Thoris, a Frenchman, whom I shall set down among the Writers under the year 1625.

277. JOHN BRIDGWATER, or Aquepontanus as he writes himself, was born (a) in Yorkshire, as the Reg. here quoted saith, but descended from those of his name in Somersetshire, applied his Muse to Accademical Studies, at his first coming to Oxon, in Hart Hall; whence translating himself to Brafenose soon after, took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1556. and about that time entred into Holy Orders. In 1562. May 1. he was admitted (b) to the Rectory of Wotton-Courtney in the Diocess of Wells; and on the 14. Apr. 1563. he was elected Rector of Lincoln College, on the resignation of Dr. Francis Babington. On the 23. of May following he was (c) admitted Rector of Luccomb, in the said Diocess of Wells, being then also Archdeacon of Rocheſter, (and soon after being made Canon Residentiary of Wells, was admitted Rector (d) of Porlock in the Diocess thereof, 16. Apr. 1565. In 1570. Nov. 28. he was (e) admitted Master of the Hospital of St. Catherine neay to Bedmystre, and in 1572. March 29. to the (f) Prebendship of Bishops Compton in the Church of Wells. In 1574. he resigned his Rectory of Lincoln College, to prevent, as I presume, expulsion, because he was actually, or very near it, a Roman Catholick, and had given great encouragement, during his Government, to the Students under him, to embrace his Religion. The same year he left Oxon, carried away with him several Goods belonging to the said College, and taking with him certain young Scholars, left all his preferments, acquaintance, and relations, and went beyond the Sea to Rheimes: Where continuing for a time, did at length (as it is said) enter himself into the Society of Jesús. He was esteemed by those of his Profession a good Scholar, and well read in various Authors, as many of his Writings shew; all which being published beyond the Sea, I have only seen these following:

Confutatio virulenta disputationis Theologicae, in qua Georgius Sohn professor Academiae Heidelbergensis conatus est docere Pontificem Romanum esse Antichristum à Prophetis & Apostolis pradiſtum. Aug. Trev. 1589. qu. It must be now known that one Joh. Gibbon a Jesuit, and John Fenne, having taken a great deal of pains in writing the lives and sufferings of several Popish Martyrs, with other matters relating to the Roman Catholick cause; their labours were published under this Title, Concertatio Ecclesiae Catholicae in Anglia adversus Calvino-Papistas & Puritanos, &c. Aug. Trev. 1583. in a pretty thick oct. But many things therein being wanting, or defective, our author Bridgwater took more pains in enlarging, and adding to it other matters, with an account of 100 or more Popish Martyrs, which were partly written by the said Gibbon and Fenne; which being so done, it was printed with this Title, like almost to the former, viz.

Concertatio Ecclesiae Catholicae in Anglia adversus Calvino-Papistas & Puritanos sub Elizabetha Regina, quorundam hominum doctrina & sanctitate illustrum renovata & recognita, &c. Aug. Trev. 1594. in a thick qu. and divided in 3 parts: The Preface to it, dedicated to John Archbishop of Trier; was writ by our author, who subscribes himself at the end, by the Name of Joh. Aquepontanus, who hath also written, Apologia Martyrum, qua ipsorum innocentia variis rationibus demonstratur, &c. Printed in the third part of the said Concertatio Ecc. Cath.

De persecutione Anglicana. — So Pet. Ribadeneira; (b) but his continuatour Phil. Alegamb doth (*) attribute that work to Rob. Persons, entitling it De persecutione Anglicana Epistola, &c. It is printed in the first part of Concertatio Ecclesiae Catholicae.

A Treatise or Discourse against the six articles, which are wont to be proposed to Martyrs. — This I have not yet seen; nor do I know any thing more of the author, only that he was living in great esteem at Trier in Germany, in fifteen hundred ninety and four. From the said Concertatio Eccles. Cath. did Thom. Worthington take most of his materials when he composed his Catalogus Martyrum pro religione in Anglia occisorum, &c. Which, though but a six penny book when it first came forth, yet eleven shillings and more was given for it in a certain Auction, An. 1682. as I shall tell you when I come to speak of the said Worthington. Clar. 1594.

GEORGE TURBERVILLE (de turbida villa) 278. a younger Son of Nich. Turberville of Whitchurch in Dorsetshire, Son of Hen. Turb. of the said place, and he the fifth Son of Joh. Turberville of Bere Regis (a right ancient and gentile Family) in Dorsetshire, was born at Whitchurch before-mentioned, educated in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, became perpetual Fellow of New Coll. 1561. left it before he was graduated the year following, and went to one of the Inns of Court, where he was much admired for his excellencies in the art of Poetry. Afterwards being esteemed a Person fit for business, as having a good and ready command of his Pen, he was entertained by Tho. Randolph Esq; to be his Secretary, when he received commission from Queen Elizabeth to go Embassador to the Emperour of Russia. After our author's arrival at that place, he did at spare hours exercise his muse, and wrote, Hakeluyt*, printed 1598. vol. 1. p. 384, 385, &c. After his return he was esteemed a most accomplished Gentleman, and his company was much sought after and desired by all ingenious men; especially upon his publication of his Labours, entit.

Epitaphs, Epigrams, Songs, and Sonnets. Lond. 1570. oct. Some, if not most, of which were published a little before that time. This Book was the same, as I conceive, which was printed with additions, under his name, in oct. An. 1587. with this Title, Tragical Tales, Epitaphs, and Sonnets, &c. He also translated in English, The Eglogues of John Bapt. Fiera Mantuan. Lond. 1594. Which Eglogues Turberville turned in English Verse, and added an argument to every Eglogue: Also about the same time, he translated into English Verse, and set out, The Heroical Epistles of the learned Poet, Pub. Ovid. Naso: with Aul. Sabinus Answers to certain of the same. Printed in oct. twice as it seems, one edition whereof came out at Lond. 1600. The said Eglogues were afterwards translated by another hand; but not without the help of that translation of Turberville, though not acknowledged. The person that performed it was Tho. Harvey, who writes himself Gent. But whether the same Tho. Harvey who was Master of Arts, the first Master of Kington School in Herefordshire, (founded 1620.) and the author of The Synagogue, in imitation of divine Herbert, I know not. As for George Turberville he lived and was in great esteem among ingenious men, in fifteen hundred ninety and four, (36. Reg. Elizab.) but when he dyed I cannot yet learn. I find one George Turberville to be author of (1) Essays politick and moral. Printed 1608. in oct. (2) The noble art of Venerie, or hunting and hawking. Printed with figures in 1611. in qu. &c. Whether George Turberville before-mentioned was the author of the said two books, or another of both his names, who was a Dorsetshire man born, and a Commoner of Glouc. Hall, An. 1581. aged 18. or a third G. Turberville who was born in the said County, and became a Student in Magd. Hall 1595. aged 17. I cannot justly tell you, unless I could see and peruse the said two books, of which I am as yet totally ignorant.

279^a HENRY WALPOOLE elder Brother to Mich. and Rich. Walpole Jesuits, was born in the County of Norfolk, educated in both the Universities, but in what College or Hall in Oxon, it doth not appear, because not matriculated; so that his stay here being, I presume, but short, nothing occurs memorable of him, only that he was inclined to Puritanism, which made Pasquil in his Apology (i) to challenge Oxford men to enquire and tell him, whether the said Walpole was not a Puritan when he forsook them. Soon after his retirement from the University, he became so zealous a Roman Catholic, that endeavouring to persuade others to his Opinion, he was forced to leave his station: whereupon going to Rome, he was entred into the Society of Jesui, in 1584. aged 25 years; where continuing for some time, he went afterwards into Spain, and when he had spent certain years there, he journeyed into Holland, where he suffer'd much upon account of Religion. In 1593. he was sent into England, was seized on at his first entry therein, and carried to York, where he was imprisoned for denying the Queen's Supremacy over the Church of England. The next year he was sent to London, and committed Prisoner to the Tower, where he suffered much misery. After an years durance there, (in which time several Ministers were with, to persuade him to recant, but in vain,) he was sent back to York, where he suffered death, as I shall tell you anon. He hath written in English Verse,

295^a The Martyrdom of Edm. Campian the Jesuit. — and other things that are not printed, having been secured, by certain Protestants, when the author was imprisoned at York; at which place, he was hanged, drawn, and quartered for Treason, on the 17. Apr. in fifteen hundred ninety and five. See more of him in a book intit. Bibl. Script. Soc. Jesu, written originally by Pet. Ribadeneira. — Lugd. 1609. in oct. continued by Philip Alegambe. — Antw. 1643. fol. and at length by Nath. Sotvellus, commonly called Southwell, of the Family of the Southwells in Norfolk. — Rom. 1676. fol. See also in Historia Provincia Anglicana Soc. Jesu. lib. 5. nu. 33, 34. written by Henry More an English-man, a descendant from Sir Tho. More, sometimes L. Chanc. of England. Which Hen. tells us, that the said Hen. Walpole was educated in Cambridge, without any notice taken of Oxon. The learned Camden in his Annals of Queen Elizabeth, doth make mention of one of the Walpoles, an. 1598. but which, I cannot yet tell.

JOHN HARTE was educated in most kinds of literature in Oxon; but in what College or Hall I cannot find. One Mr. Harte was a Sojournour of Exeter College, An. 1551. (5. Ed. 6.) but him I take to be too soon for our author, who was but a young Man when he encountered Dr. Jo. Rainolds in a disputation. What degrees he took here, it appears not, though those of his Profession (the Jesuits) tell (k) us, that he was Bachelaur of Divinity of Oxon; yet upon the strict perusal of our Registers, I cannot find the least authority for it. After he had left this University, being then, and before, very unsettled and wavering in mind, he went beyond the Seas, changed his Religion, took priestly Orders, and was sent into the Mission of England; but soon after taken and committed to Prison, to a filthy dungeon, as a noted (l) author tells us; who adds that after he (whom he calls the happy young Confessor) had been often by Famine tormented, was unexpectedly brought out to encounter John Rainolds before-mentioned, An. 1583. or thereabouts. Which disputation being smartly held on both sides, those of Harte's Persuasion say that Rainolds was foiled; though, the opposite, not; upon some years after was published,

The sum of a conference between Joh. Rainolds and Jo. Hart, touching the Head, and the Faith of the Church, &c. Lond. 1588. qu. See more in Jo. Rainolds, under the year 1607. Afterwards our Author Harte, who is stiled by a learned (m) Author, Vir praeteris doctissimus, being banished with divers other R. Priests, in 1584. he went to Verdune, where he entred into the Society of Jesui. Thence he was called to Rome, where making some stay till authority commanded him thence, he went into Poland, and settled for a time at Jareslaw. At length giving way to Fate on the 14. of the Cal. of Aug. in fifteen hundred ninety and five, or thereabouts, was buried at Jareslaw, or Joreslaw. Seven years after his Body was taken up, and translated to another place belonging to the Jesuits, who had an high esteem for his Person while living, sanctity of Life and Learning, and when dead for his memory. I find another John Hart, who was Chester Herald, and wrote and published, An Orthography, containing the due Order and Reason how to write or paint the Image of Man's Voice, most like to the Life or Nature. Lond. 1569. And another Jo. Hart of later time, who, among other Books, did publish, The burning Bush not consumed, wherein one may judge whether he be the Child of God or not. Lond. 1641. 2. fourth edit. But whether this last, who was a zealous Puritan, (if not worse,) or the former, who was an Herald, were of this University, I know not as yet.

THOMAS DIGGES, Son of Leonard Digges, 281. mentioned before under the year 1574. by Sarah his Wife, Sister to Jam. and Tho. Wilford, two most valiant Knights of Hartridge in the Parish of Crainbrook in Kent, was born in that County, and for a time educated among the Oxonian Muses, but in what House I cannot yet tell, neither whether he be the same Mr. Digges which the famous Lampoon or Libel, made by Th. Bulkeley, in the time of Q. Elizabeth, (on several Scholars and others of Oxon.) points at. However, of this I am sure, he the said Tho. Digges did spend his younger years, even from his Cradle, in the Liberal Sciences; especially in searching the most difficult and curious demonstrations Mathematical, by the assistance of the practices, observations, monuments, and conferences of his Father. He was a Person of great Piety, well skilled in matters relating to Soldiers, and War, (having been Muster-master General of all Q. Elizabeth's Forces in the Low Countries,) and learned to a miracle in Mathematical Sciences, which made him

England's Defence: a Treatise concerning Invasion: or, a brief discourse of what orders were best for the repulsing of Foreign Enemies, if any time they should invade us by Sea in Kent, or elsewhere. — Written 1599. but not printed till 1686. which was at Lond. in 5 sheets in fol. Besides these and his Nova corpora, &c. he had several Mathematical Treatises lying by him, which were fit for the Press, and by him intended for publick view; but being diverted by Law-sutes, his intentions were not only stopped, but the happy Society of the Mathematical Mules were discontinued. He concluded his last day on the 24. of Aug. in fifteen hundred ninety and five, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of S. Mary the Virgin in Aldermanbury in the City of London. On the North wall of the said Chancel was soon after set up a fair monument to his memory; which continuing till 1666. was in the beginning of Sept. in that year, consumed with the Church it self in the dismal conflagration that then happened in London. You may see more of this Tho. Digges in my discourse of his Father Len. Digges under the year 1574.

EDWARD KELLEY otherwise Talbot was born in the City of Worcester, at about 4 of the clock in the afternoon, on the first day of Aug. in 1555. (3 of Q. Mary) whose Nativity being afterwards calculated, it did appear that he was born to be a man of clear understanding, quick apprehension, of an excellent wit, and of great propensity to Philosophical studies and the mysteries of Nature. This Person, being about 17 years of age, at which time he had attained to a competency of Grammar Learning at Worcester and elsewhere, he was sent to Oxon, but to what House I cannot tell. However I have been informed by an ancient Bach. of Divinity, who in his younger years had been an Ammensis to Mr. Tho. Allen of Gloucester Hall, that he (Kelley) had spent some time in that House: Whereupon I recurring to the Matricula, could not find the name of Kelley, only Talbot of Ireland, three of which Name were Students there in 1573. — 74, &c. about which time Mr. (afterwards Sir) John Davies was instructed in the Mathematicks by the said Allen. But this relation having been somewhat dubiously delivered to me, I must tell you, that Kelley having an unsettled mind, left Oxon abruptly, without being entred into the Matricula, and in his rambles in Lancashire, committing certain foul matters, lost both his Ears at Lancaster, and about that time caused, by his incantations, a poor Man that had been buried in the yard belonging to Law-church, near to Walton in the dale, to be taken out of his grave, and to answer to such questions that he then proposed to him. The story of which, being to me incredible, I shall refer you to the Writer (o) of it, who is too credulous in many matters. About that time our author Kelley became intimate with Dr. John Dee the famous Mathematician, with whom continuing several years in Philosophical Studies, and Chymical Experiments, they both became very famous among Scholars, and therefore noted by Persons of high and noble extraction, one for the Mathematicks, and the other for Chymistry; for though Dee was the most eminent man in his time for the first, yet

(n) In lib. suo De nova Stella, lib. 1. cap. 9. (o) Jo. Weever in his Discourse of ancient Funeral Monuments. Lond. 1631. fol. p. 45, 46.

Kelley went far beyond him in the latter, as by the sequel it will appear. 'Tis reported by a certain (p) Rosacru- cian that they were so strangely fortunate, as to find a very large quantity of the Elixir in some part of the ruins of Glastenbury Abbey, which was so incredibly rich in virtue, that they lost much in making projection, by way of tryal, before they found out the height of that medicine. In the beginning of 1583. Dr. J. Dee having contracted with certain Spirits to act and converse with them, he appointed his Friend Kelley to be his Seer or Skryer, or Speculator, that is to take notice what the Spirits said, and to tell it to Dee, while he wrote down in a Book what was dictated to him. Soon after Dee and Kelley being made known to, and acquainted with, the learned and most noble Polonian, named Albert Alaskie Prince of Sirad, who was come into England to see the fashions of the Court, and to admire the Wisdom of the Queen, he thereupon had so great respect for them, (himself being a Mathematician,) that in Sept. following when he left England he took them and their Wives with him in the same Ship, and travelling with him afterwards by Land, he saw them safely conveyed to Cracow in Poland. Where continuing for some time, they removed to Prague; and at length, in Sept. 1586. to Trebona in Bohemia: at all which places tho Kelley was several times troublesome, inconstant, and false to Dee, yet he mostly performed the office of Skryer. And further, that notwithstanding Dee took the said Spirits to be Angelical, yet Kelley not, but rather meer delusions of the Devil, which hath been since confirmed by Dr. Merie Casaubon, who published the Relation of Dr. Dee's conversing with Spirits. At Trebona Kelley (q) made projection 9. Dec. 1586. with one small grain of the Elixir (in proportion no bigger than the least grain of sand) upon one ounce and a quarter of common Mercury, and it produced almost an ounce of most pure Gold. At another time he made projection upon a piece of mettall cut out of a Warming-pan, and without his touching or handling it, or melting the metal, (only warming it in the fire,) the Elixir being put thereon, it was transmuted into pure Silver. The said Warming-pan and piece were sent to Q. Elizabeth by her Embassador then residing at Prague, that by fitting the piece, with the place whence it was cut out, it might exactly appear to be a part of the said Warming-pan. At another time Kelley, who was openly profuse beyond the modest limits of a sober Philosopher, did give away in Gold-wyer-rings (or rings twisted with three Gold-wyers) at the Marriage of one of his Maid Servants, to the value of 4000 l. but this I think was acted after Dee had left him at Trebona, (which was in May 1589.) otherwise it had not been done, and so consequently Rodolph 2. Emperor of Germany (who had a great respect for him and Dee) would not for his Prodigality, or open management of the secret, or rather, as some say, for a chymical cheat put upon him, have committed him to close custody. The Writings of Kelley that are made publick are these,

Poem of Chymistry. — Pr. in Theat. Chemic. Britannicum. an. 1652.

Poem of the Philosophers-Stone. — Written to his Friend G. S. Gent. Printed there also.

De lapide Philosophorum, Hamb. 1676. in oct. 2u. Whether this be not falsely fathered on him. He hath also several Lat. and Engl. discourses in a Book intit. A true and faithful relation of what passed, for many years, between Dr. Joh. Dee and some Spirits, &c. Lond. 1659. fol. Published by Dr. Merie Casaubon before-mentioned. At length our author Kelley (who had been Knighted by the Emperor, as it seems) being imprisoned the second time (at Prague) by the aforesaid Emperor, after he had been at Liberty for some Months, and in a manner had crept into his favour, attempted an escape out of an high Window by tying his sheets together, after he had divided each into two parts at least; but he being too weighty for them, he fell to the ground before he was half way down; so that bruising his Body and breaking his Legs, he (r) dyed soon after, in Octob. as it seem, in fifteen hundred ninety and five; for on the 25. Nov. following the news of his death came to Dr. Dee then in England, which he inserted in his Diary thus, Nov. 25. an. 1595. news that Sir E. K. was slain. Jo. Weever before quoted tells (s) us otherwise. viz. That

2. Elizabeth sent very secretly Capt. Peter Gwinne with some others, to perswade Kelly to return back to his Native Country; which he was willing to do; and thinking to escape away in the night, by stealth, as he was clambering over a wall in his own House in Prague, (which bears his name to this day, and which sometimes was an old Sanctuary,) he fell down from the battlements, broke his Legs, and bruised his Body, of which hurts within a while after he dyed, &c. Thus Weever before-mentioned, a Lancashire man born, educated in Queens coll. in Cambrige, under the tuition of Dr. Rob. Pearson Archdeacon of Suffolk, afterwards a great traveller beyond the Seas, and collector of several Epitaphs of English-men that he met with in his rambles. Soon after his return, he travelled through most parts of England, for the obtaining of English Antiquities, and through some of Scotland, being encouraged thereunto by those excellent Antiquaries Sir Rob. Cotton and Joh. Selden. At length after he had arrived to the 56 year of his age, his little body being then in a manner worn out with continual motion, he yielded to nature in his house in Clerkenwell close near to London, an. 1632. Whereupon his body was buried towards the west end of the Church of St. James in Clerkenwell. As for Edw. Kelley before-mention'd you may see more of him before, in Franc. Puccius, and afterwards (under the year 1651.) in Arth. Dee.

ROGER WILLIAMS Son of Tho. Williams of Penrose in Monmouthshire, by Elianour his Wife, daughter of Sir Will. Vaughan Knight, was born in that County, of a Family rather ancient than wealthy, and being from his childhood more given to Military, than Scholastical, matters; yet for form sake he was sent to the University; but to what house therein, unless to Brasenose, whereof one of both his Names, and a Welsh-man, was a Student in 1554. (2. of Q. Mary) I know not. Soon after he left Oxon, became a Souldier of Fortune under the Duke of Alva, ran through all the degrees of Military Offices, was a Colonel in the French and Belgick Wars, and might have been sided with the best of those times, if his discretion could have but well tempered his hot furious valour, which was the reason that Q. Elizabeth would not commit any place, or Employment, of great trust to his care. In 1586. he had the Honour of Knighthood conferr'd upon him, was then beloved of all Souldiers, and so much noted for his martial prowess, that he went beyond the commendation of Panegyrick, which was specified in the said year, when at midnight he assaulted the Camp of the Prince of Parma near Venlow, slew some of the Enemies, and pierced the Tent of the General, as a noted (t) author tells us. He hath written,

The Actions of the Low Countries. — Printed at Lond. in time of Q. Eliz. as it seems, and 1618. qu. The author being unlearned, and only tutored by experience, hath penn'd the said History with very exquisite judgment, he being an actor in the said Actions or Wars.

A brief discourse of War, with his opinion concerning some part of martial discipline. Lond. 1590. qu. In this excellent book the author defends the military art of his, against that of former, days; but to the great envy then, and discontent of some old-beaten Souldiers, and the Lovers of Archery. He paid his last debt to Nature in his House in the Parish of St. Benedicth, near to Pauls Wharf in London, in the month of Decemb. in fifteen hundred ninety and five, and was buried on the 23. of the same month, by the care of Tho. Powell of Usk in Monmouthshire, and Gellie Merick of the Parish of St. Clements without Temple-Bar, Gent. (his Kinsmen) within the Cath. Ch. of St. Paul; at whose Funeral Rob. Earl of Essex, and all the warlike men of the City of London mourned. Whether any Epitaph was ever set over his grave, I know not: Sure it is that one (u) who knew him, hath commended to Posterity a learned Epigram on him, the beginning of which is,

You may be pleased to satisfy your self concerning this valiant Colonel, in a Book intit. A true discourse historical of the succeeding Governors of the Netherlands, and the Civil Wars there began in the year 1565. &c. Translated and collected by Tho. Churchyard Esq; and Rich. Ro. out of the reverend E. M. of Antwerp his 15 books of his Historia Belgica, &c. Lond. 1602. I find another Rog. Williams later in time than the former, an inhabitant of Providence in New England, and author of (1) A Key to the Language of New England. Lond. 1643. oct. (2) The hireling Ministry none of Christs: or, a discourse of the propagation of the Gospel of Christ Jesus. Lond. 1652. qu. &c. But of what University the said Williams was, if of any, I know not; or whether a real Phanatick or Jesuit.

HENRY UNTON was born of an ancient and ^{284.}gentile Family at Wadley near Faringdon in Berkshire, educated in Oriel coll. under Mr. Rich. Pygot one of that Society, left it without a degree and travelled. After his return, being esteemed a Person well qualified, had some Employment under Sir Christopher Hatton L. Chancelour, who quickly finding him to be a man of business and experience, commended him to the Queen, who in 1586. not only conferred on him the Honour of Knighthood, but sent him afterwards twice in the quality of an Ambassador to the King of France, where he behaved himself right stoutly in behalf of his Mistress, particularly for some injury done to her by the Duke of Guise, an. 1592. This person, who was actually created M. of A. of this University, before he went into France, hath written,

An account of his Embassy: or, a Diary containing his Commission, Instructions, Expences, and Transactions; as also Letters from, or to, him, from July 13. an. 1591. to June 12. an. 1592. — MS. in bib. Bod. He also made a Diary for his last Embassy, which continued to the time of his Death, but that I have not yet seen. He gave way to Fate in the King of France's Camp, lying before Lafore, on the 23. March in fifteen hundred ninety and five; whereupon his Body being conveyed into England, ^{1596.} was buried on the 8. July following, in a Chappel joyning to the North side of the Church of Faringdon before-mentioned. Soon after was a noble Monument set over his grave, with this inscription, containing certain matters relating to him, which I have not yet mentioned. Virtuti & honori Sacrum. Henrico Untono Eq. Aurato, Edovardi Untoni Eq. Aur. filio, ex Anna Comitissa Warwici, filia Edovardi de Sancto Mauro Ducis Sommersetti & Anglia Protectoris, qui optimarum artium studiis a primâ aetate in Academia Oxon institutus, magnam orbis Christiani partem per-lustravit, ob virtutem bellicam in Zutphania obsidione, dignitate equestri donatus, propter singularem prudentiam, spectatum fidem, & multiplicem rerum usum iterum Legatus à Sereniss. Anglia Regina ad Christianiss. Regem missus in Galliam, è qua ad celestem patriam migravit 23. Mart. an. 1596. &c. The Muses of Oxon had so great a respect for the memory of this most worthy Person, that a book of Verses on his death, came out soon after under their name, intit. Funebria nobiliss. ac prestantiss. Eq. D. Henrici Untoni ad Gallos bis legati regii, &c. à Musis Oxon apparata.

WILLIAM MIDDLETON, the third Son of ^{285.}Rich. Middleton of Denbigh, (by Jane his Wife, Daughter of Hugh Dryhurst of the same place,) fourth Son of Foulk Middleton of Denbigh before-mentioned, the third Son of Dav. Middleton of Gwenoek, Recorder of North-Wales, was born in Denbighshire, and educated for a time among the Oxonians, but whether in Jesus coll. at its first foundation, as probably it might be so, or whether he took more than one degree, I know not. Afterwards he travelled into various parts of the World, exercised himself in feats of Arms, became the most noted Bard of his Country; and tho a Souldier and a Captain by profession, (having had the command of a Ship for several years,) yet all the time he got, was bestowed in exercising his Poetical fancy. The Works of him that I have seen are these.

Bardoniaeth: or, the Art of Welsh poetry. Lond. 1593. qu. in 3 sh. and half. This book which is written in Welsh, he styles the first book, or part, as if there was a second to be published. He also translated into the Welsh tongue the Psalms of David, running in excellent Meter. Which noble work he performed apud scutum insulam occidentaliū Indorum, and finished it there 24. Jan. in fifteen hundred ninety and five. This translation ^{Clar.} coming into the hands of his Country-man Tho. Salisbury, ^{1595.} was, with the help of his Friend Tho. Middleton Citizen of London, and kinsman to the author, published at Lond. 1603. qu. Before which time the author, as it seems, was dead, dead. In my searches I find another Will. Middleton Bach. of Divinity and Minister of Hardwick in Cambridgeshire, author of Papisto mastix: or, the Protestants Religion defended, &c. Lond. 1606. qu. and of other things, but what relation there was between the former and this (who seems to have been educated in Cambridge) I know not.

JOHN SMYTHE, or Smith, Son of Sir Clem. Smythe of Little Badew in Essex, by Dorothy his Wife, Sister to Edw. Seymour Duke of Somerset, (whose Sister Jane Seymour was the third Wife of K. Hen. 8.) was born as it seems, in Essex, and laid the foundation of Literature in Oxon, but in what house, 'tis difficult to find, because both his Names are very common. Afterwards being martially inclined, he travelled into various countries, exercised himself in feats of arms, and became as well a compleat Souldier, as Gentleman. At length he was made a Knight by Qu. Elizabeth, and by her sent Embassador into Spain, in 1576, as being a person of a Spanish port and demeanour, and well known to the Spaniard, who held him, as their King did, in high value, and especially for this reason, that he was first cousin to K. Ed. 6. His works are,

Discourse concerning the forms and effect of divers Weapons, and other very important Matters Military; greatly mistaken by divers of our men of War in their days, and chiefly of the Musquet, Calyver and Longbow, &c. Lond. 1589. and 1590. qu.

Certaine Instructions, Observations, and Orders Military, requisite for all Chieftains, Captains, higher and lower Officers. Composed 1591. Lond. 1594. 95. qu.

Instructions for Enrolling and Mustering—Printed with Certain Instructions, &c. What other books of his are published, I cannot yet find, nor exactly when he died, only that he was living and in great esteem among Souldiers and learned men in fifteen hundred ninety and five. Besides this, was another Sir Job. Smyth equal in time with him, eldest Son of Tho. Smyth of Ostinganger in Kent Esq. and brother to Sir Thomas of Bidborough in the same County, whom I shall mention elsewhere. Which Sir John dying in the beginning of 1609. was buried in Ashford Church in the said County, leaving Issue, as it seems, Tho. Smyth of Ostinganger, afterwards Knight of the Bath and Viscount Strangford in Ireland; who dying 30. June 1635. was buried in his Chappel joyning to the said Church of Ashford. But this Sir John was no writer, nor of the same Family, because he was descended from the Smyths of Corsham in Wiltshire; whereas Sir John who was the Writer and Souldier, was Grandson to Tho. Smyth of Ravinhall in Essex, and he a Discendant from John Carrington, who fled for a time from England, and changed his Name to Smyth, for adhering to the deposed King Rich. 2. Further also I find another John Smyth commonly called Captain Smyth, who wrote (1.) A Map of Virginia, with a Description of the Country, the Commodities, People, Government, and Religion. Oxon. 1612. qu. (2.) New Englands Trials, &c. Lond. 1620. qu. (3.) General History of Virginia, &c. Lond. 1624. qu. (4.) Travels in Europe, &c. Lond. 1630. with other things, but this Captain Smyth was a Cheshire man, and whether he had received any Education in this University of Oxon, I cannot say to the contrary.

JOHN PRIME, Son of Rob. Prime, a Fletcher, was born in the Parish of Halwell in the North Suburb of Oxford, received his Grammatical Literature in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New Col. in 1570. took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders and became a noted puritanical Preacher in the City of his Nativty, and much favoured by Dr. Cooper Bishop of Winchester. In 1589. he proceeded in Divinity, being at that time Vicar of Adderbury alias Eabburbury in Oxfordshire, where he became much followed for his edifying way of preaching. He hath written,

A short treatise of Sacraments generally, and in special of Baptism, and of the Supper. Lond. 1582. oct.

Treatise of nature and grace. Lond. 1583. oct.

Sermon briefly comparing the State of King Solomon and his Subjects together with the condition of Queen Elizabeth and her People, preached at S. Maries in Oxon. 17. Nov. 1585. on 1 Kings 10. 9. Oxon. 1585. oct.

Exposition on the Galathians. Ox. 1587. oct.

The consolations of David applied to Queen Eliza- beth, in a Sermon at S. Maries in Oxon. 17. Nov. 1588. on Psal. 23. 4. Oxon. 1588. oct. These, as I think, were all the books and Sermons that he hath published, tho he intended more had he not been cut off in his middle Age. At length after he had been Vicar of Adderbury about 7 years, he concluded his last day there about the 12 of April in fifteen hundred ninety and six, and was 1596. buried in the Church of that place, but hath neither Epitaph or Inscription over his Grave.

FRANCIS KNOLLIS, Son of Robert Knollis of Rotherfield-Gray, commonly called Grays, near to Henley in Oxfordshire, did receive for a time his Grammatical and Dialectical Education in this University, particularly, as it seems, in Magd. coll. Afterwards he retired to his patrimony, and at length to the court, and became one of the Gentlemen Pensioners to K. Hen. 8. in the latter end of his reign. When a reformation was set on foot by King Ed. 6. he was so zealous for the religion then professed, as that, when Qu. Mary began to reign and grow severe towards the Reformed party, he (*) fled into Germany, where he sorted himself for a time among several of the English Divines that went away about the same time for conscience sake. After the death of that Queen, he returned, and became so much in esteem by Q. Elizabeth (who stood totally affected to the reformation) as that in the first year of her reign, he was made choice of, for one of her privy Council, and shortly after that, she made him Vice-chamberlain of her household, and employed him in matters of concern beyond the Seas. In 1566. he was actually created Master of Arts, being then chief Steward of the City of Oxon, Captain of the Halbertiers, and about that time (†) Treasurer of the Queens Chamber in the place of Sir John Mason deceased. Afterwards he was trusted with the custody of Mary Qu. of Scots, while she was a prisoner in Bolton-castle in Yorkshire, and in the 29. Elizab. being then a Knight, he was one of those, who by commission sate in judgment upon the said Queen at Fotheringey. At length he was made Treasurer of her Majesties Household, and Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, being always by many accounted a faithful subject, an honest and learned man, and a person of great prudence and wisdom; and by others so a great a friend to Calvin in his heart (whose principles he embraced while he lived at Geneva) that he was never a cordial friend to Episcopacy, but rather a patron of the Non-conformists, which appeared by several of his actions while he was a privy Counsellour. His writings are these.

Treatise against the usurpation of Papal Bishops—Printed 1608. in oct. some attribute it to Jo. Rainolds the famous Divine.

A General Survey of the Isle of Wight, with all the Castles and Fortresses near adjoining—This is a MS. in fol. and was sometimes in the Lib. of Arthur E. of Anglesey: From whence we may suppose that the author had some office in, or relating to, the said Isle, but what, in truth I cannot tell. I have seen also several of his speeches spoken in Parliaments, letters of state, and letters written by him to the said Jo. Rainolds, between whom there was great amity and intercourse, but few or none, of those letters or speeches, I think, are printed. At length paying his last debt to nature in the Summer time (before Septemb.) in fifteen hundred ninety and six, was, as I presume, buried at Grays before mentioned. By his Wife Catherine daughter of Will. Cary Esq; by Mary his Wife, daughter of Thom. Bolein Earl of Wiltshire, as also Sister to the Lady Anne Bolein second Wife to K. Hen. 8. he had issue Henry his Eldest Son, bred in the Free-School joyning to Magd. College under the care, as it (*) seems, of Tho. Robertson. Afterwards he went with his Father and others into Germany, and at his return, if not happily before, became a Commoner of the said College, where he obtained so much literature as afterwards to gain the character by a learned (†) Author of homo virtute & animi dotibus non infimus, and of homo religionis studiosissimus & liberalissima literatura egregie ditatus, &c. But he dying without issue, the estate went to the next Son called William, afterwards Earl of Barbury. He had another Son named Francis, a Knight, whom I shall mention elsewhere, as also a fourth, who was a member of the said College; and all four admired by some, and envied by others, for their great virtue and towardliness.

289. JOHN SMITH was a Berkshire man born as it seems, became Fellow of St. Johns coll. in the Founders time, Master of Arts in 1569. and afterwards Schoolmaster at, and Vicar of the Church of St. Laurence in Reading in the aforesaid County. He hath written,

The Doctrine of Prayer in general for all men, that is universally for all Mankind, &c. Lond. 1595. qu. What else he hath published I know not, being a difficult matter to distinguish his Works from others of both his names and time: And whether he was author of The use of the Gospel, printed 1580. in qu. which is said to be written by Jo. Smith, I cannot tell. The said Joh. Smith of Reading, did give way to Fate there, and was buried in his Church of St. Laurence; but when, it appears not; leaving then behind him a Son of both his Names, Scholar of St. Johns coll. an. 1600. which he left after he was M. of A. to prevent expulsion. I find another John Smith, who hath published, (1) The bright Morning Star; or, the resolution and exposition of the 22 Psalm. Cambr. 1603. in tw. (2) A pattern of true Prayer, being an exposition or commentary on the Lords Prayer, &c. Lond. 1605. and 1624. oct. besides other things. But in his Epistle Dedicatory, before the said Exposition, it appears that he was then (1605, and before) a Lecturer in the City of Lincoln, and that he had received part of his education in Cambridge. I shall make mention of another Joh. Smith of St. Johns coll. under the year 1616.

290. PETER BALES (Balesius) a most dextrous Person in his profession, to the great wonder of Scholars and others, spent several years in Sciences among the Oxonians, particularly, as it seems, in Gloucester hall. But that study which he used for a diversion only, proved at length an employment of profit. His Works are these.

The art of Brachygraphy, that is to write as fast as a man speaketh treatably. Lond. 1597. in tw. 2 edit.

The order of Orthography.

The Key of Calygraphy; } Printed with the former.
that is of fair Writing.

Before these Treatises are 18 copies of Verses made in praise of them; four whereof, or more, were made by the Students of Glouc. hall, (among whom Edw. Mychilbourne a most noted Poet of his time hath two) and three, or more, by the Students of St. Johns Col. who are proprietaries of that hall. What afterwards became of the said Balesius, (who was engaged in the Earl of Essex his treasons, An. 1600.) I cannot tell, nor whether he published any other matters. I find one of both his Names, a Divine, who published (1.) The Lords prayer pleading for better entertainment. Lond. 1643. qu. 'Tis a Sermon as it seems, on Luke 11. 2. (2.) Infirmities inducing to Conformity, on Jam. 3. 2. Printed 1650. qu. and other things. Whether this Peter Bales was Son or kinsman to the former, I cannot tell.

291. FRANCIS CLERKE, or Clarke, was originally of Oxon, but making little stay there, he retired to Doctors Commons in London, and for about 40 years practiced the Civil Law in the most famous Courts in England, as in the Court of Arches, Admiralty, Audience, Prerogative, and Consistorial of the Bishop of London, besides his employment divers times in the Ecclesiastical Causes of the delegated Power of the King, and chief Commissioners. In 1594. he having then practiced his Faculty 35 years at London, had the degree of Bach. of Civil Law conferred upon him, by the venerable Convocation of Doctors and Masters, not by way of creation, but, as the Register saith, by admission to the reading of the imperial institutions, tho no exercise he did for it in this University. The reason for this their Civility, was, that he had performed the part of chief Proctor for the said University, by virtue of Letters and their common Seal, in all their concerns in the aforesaid Courts. He hath written,

Praxis tam jus dicentibus, quam aliis omnibus, qui in foro Ecclesiastico versantur, apprime utilis. This book was finished by the Author, and made ready for the press, in April 1596. but what diverted him from the publication thereof (unless death) I know not. Afterwards several imperfect Copies of it flying abroad, one, supposed to be true, came into the hands of Tho. Bladen, D. D. Dean of Ardort in Ireland and Chaplain to the Duke of Ormond, who caused it to be printed at Dublin in 1666. qu.

Praxis curie Admiralitatis Anglie. Dubl. 1666. qu. published by the said Doctor. But the Copy from whence that Edition was published, being, as 'twas pretended, false in many matters, a better Copy was published at London, 1667. in 8vo. by E. S. One Sir Franc. Clerke of Bedfordshire Knight, was a benefactor to Sydney Col. in Cambridge, tho not educated there, whom I take to be the same with Sir Francis Clerke of Merton Priory or Abby in Surrey (Son of Barthol. Clerke mentioned in the Fasti under the year 1574.) quite different from the Writer.

JOHN MARTIAL, a zealous man for the R. Cath. Cause, was born at Dalysford in Worcestershire, near Chippingnorton in the County of Oxon; educated in Grammatical learning in Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. after he had served two years of probation, an. 1551. took the degree of Bach. of the Civil Law five years after, about which time he was made Usher, or second Master, of the aforesaid School under Tho. Hide, whom I shall anon mention. In the beginning of Q. Eliz. he left his Employment, Fellowship, and at length the Kingdom, and going beyond the Seas to Lovaine, he made proficiency there in the studies of Divinity, and at length by the procurement of Lewis Owen Archdeacon of Cambray, (afterwards Bishop of Cassano) he was made Canon of St. Peters Church at L'isle in Flanders. Which place he keeping eight years, resigned it, (being then D. of D.) to the end that he might give himself solely up to his devotions, and prepare himself for another World. He hath written,

A Treatise of the Cross, gathered out of the Scriptures, Councils, and ancient Fathers of the primitive Church. Antw. 1564. in oct. Whereupon Jam. Calfhill of Ch. Ch. making an answer to it, our Author came out with a reply intit.

A reply to Mr. Calfhills blasphemous answer against the Treatise of the Cross. Lov. 1566. qu. Afterwards he wrote, Treatise of the tonsure of the Clerks.—Left imperfect and therefore never printed. He departed this mortal Life at L'isle beforementioned, (to the great grief of the R. Catholicks,) in the Arms or Embraces of Will. Gifford Dean of that Church, on the 3. of Apr. (a) in fifteen hundred ninety and seven, and was buried in the Collegiate Church of St. Peter before-mentioned. At his death he bequeathed a rich ring, with a stone in it, to adorn a piece of our Saviour's Cross, in the Cathedral there. Whose Will being performed by the said Gifford, that bequest was esteemed as a Trophy of Victory over Calfhill, and is at this day, as I have been informed, preserved as a choice relic there.

THOMAS HIDE, a noted Rom. Priest of his time, was born at a Market Town called Newbury in Berks. Descended from the ancient and gentile Family of his Name in that County, educated in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual fellow of New Col. 1543, took the degrees in Arts, that of master being completed 1549. In the year after he left his Fellowship, was made Prebendary of Winchester, and in 1552. succeeded Will. Everard in the chief mastership of the said School, where continuing till Qu. Elizab. came to the Crown, he left all he had, and all he pretended to, for Conscience sake, and going beyond the Seas, spent the remainder of his time partly at Doway and partly at Lovaine. He was a Person of a strict life and conversation, as those of his (b) Perswasion say, of great gravity and severity, and a lover of virtue and vertuous men. He hath written,

A consolatory Epistle to the afflicted Catholicks. Lov. in oct. and other things as I have been told, but such I have not yet seen: which if printed, few or no copies come into England. He dyed at Doway in Flanders in the house of Alice Fowler, the Widdow of John Fowler an Englishman, on the 9. May in fifteen hundred ninety and seven, and was buried in the Chappel of the Virgin Mary within the Church of St. James there, near to the horn of the Gospel; leaving then behind him this character, that he was a most fierce hater of Vice and a capital Enemy to Sects and Heresies.

194. CHRISTOPHER JOHNSON, a most excellent Latin Poet, Philosopher and Physician of his time, was born at Kidderley in Derbyshire, educated in Wykeham's School before-mentioned, made perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1555. (2. and 3. of Ph. and Mar.) left it. after he was M. of Arts, and in 1560. became chief Master of the said School, in the place of Tho. Hyde; where, by his industry and admirable way of teaching, were many good Scholars sent to the Universities. All the time that he could get at vacant hours, he spent upon his beloved study of Physick, which he practiced in the City of Winchester, but not to the neglect of his School. At length taking the degree of Doctor of that Faculty, did shortly after resign his School, and repairing to London practiced with good success in the Parish of St. Dunstons in the West, where being accounted eminent, was admitted, as it seems, a Member of the Coll. of Physicians. He hath written and published, Ortus atque vita Gul. Wykehami Winton Episcopi. Written in 140 long and short Verses, 14. Dec. 1564. — Printed (1) on the broadside of a sheet of Paper, with Wykeham's Arms encompassed with the Garter before them. (2) At the end of the Latin Poems of Rich. Willelmus, Lond. 1573. And (3) in a Book intit. A brief view of the State of the Church of England, as it stood in Queen Elizabeth's and King James's Reign, &c. Lond. 1653. oct. p. 37, 38. Written by Sir Jo. Harrington Knight, an. 1608. and made publick by Joh. Chetwind his Daughter's Son, then no Friend to the Church of England.

Custodum five Præsidum Coll. Winton. Series. Written in Verse also, and put at the end of the said Lat. Poems.

Didasculorum Coll. Wint. omnium Elenchus. In Verse also, at the end of the said Poems.

Counsel against the Plague, or any other infectious Disease. Lond. 1577. oct.

Question, Whether a man for preservation may be purged in Dog-days or no? — Printed with the Counsel, &c.

Ranarum & murium pugna, Latino versu donata ex Homero. Lond. 1580. in about 3 lh. in qu. with other things as it is probable, but such I have not yet seen. See more of him in Rich. White, under the year 1612. This Dr. Johnson died in the beginning of July, in fifteen hundred ninety and seven, within the Parish of St. Dunstan before-mentioned; whereupon his Body was buried in the Church there, (as it seems,) situated and being in Fleetstreet. He dyed wealthy, left several Sons and Daughters behind him, and Mr. Joh. Heath his Son in Law, a Student in Physick, his Executor, who had all his Physical and Philosophical Books, and succeeded him in his Practice.

295. JASPER HEYWOOD a quaint Poet in his younger days, Son of Joh. Heywood the Famous Epigramatist of his time, was born in London, sent to the University at about 12 years of age, an. 1547. educated in Grammar, as well as in Logic, there, took a degree in Arts in 1553. and forthwith was elected Probationer-Fellow of Merton coll. where remaining about 5 years, (in all which time he bare away the Bell in disputations at home and in the publick Schools,) did, upon a third admonition from the Warden and Society of that house for several misdemeanors, (for he and his Brother Ellis Heywood were for a time very wild, to the great grief of their Father,) resign his Fellowship, to prevent expulsion, on the 4. Apr. 1558. In June following he took the degree of Master, and in Nov. ensuing, he was elected Fellow of All. coll. where abiding for a little while, left the University, and soon after England, and entered himself into the Society of Jesus. But before he left us he wrote and translated these things following.

Various Poems and Devises. — Some of which are Printed in a Book intit. The Paradise of dainty Devises. Collected and Printed by Hen. Disle of London Printer, an. 1573. in qu. He also translated into English Verse (1) Thieftes, the second Tragedy of Seneca. Lond. 1560. oct. Published again with other Tragedies of that author, by Thom. Newton. — Lond. 1581. qu. as I shall tell you when I come to him, in an. 1607. (2) Hercules furens, another Trag. of Seneca: And (3) Troas a third, published also by the said Newton, 1581. qu. In 1561. our Poet left England, and was made a Priest after the R. Cath. fashion, and in 1562. being then at Rome, he was entered into the Society of Jesus 21. May, in the then professed house of the Jesuits there. After he had spent two years in the study of Divinity among them, he was sent to Diling in Switzerland, where he continued about 17 years in explaining and discussing controverted questions among those he called Hereticks, in which time he was promoted to the degree of D. of Divinity, and of the four Vows. At length P. Gregory 13. calling him away in 1581. he sent him, with others the same year, into the mission of England, and the rather, because the Brethren there told his Holiness, That the Harvest was great, and the Labourers few. Being settled then in the Metropolis of his own Country, and esteemed the Chief or Provincial of the Jesuits in England, it was noted (c) by all that knew him, That he kept many Men, Horses, and Coaches, that also his port and carriage was more Baron-like than Priest-like, &c. At length going into France about publick matters relating to the Order, was, when ready to land in Normandy, drove back by a contrary wind on the English shore; where being taken and examined, was, with 19 more R. Priests put into a Ship, and set on shore in France, in Feb. 1584. Upon his being taken and committed to Prison, and the Earl of Warwick's offer thereupon to relieve his necessity, he made a copy of verses, mentioned by a noted (d) Poet of his time, concluding with these two:

— Thanks to that Lord that will me good;
For I want all things saving Hay and Wood.

Afterwards he went to the City of Dole, where he was troubled much with Witches, thence to Rome, and at length fixed in the City of Naples, where, as at Rome, he became familiarly known to that zealous R. Catholick Joh. Pissens, who speaks by the by very honourably of him. What he wrote or published after he became a Jesuit, I know not. Sure it is, if one (e) says true, that this our author was most critical in the Hebrew Language, and that he did make and digest an easie and short method (reduced into Tables) for Novices to learn that Language; which I suppose was a Compendium of a Hebrew Grammar. He paid his last debt to Nature at Naples on the 9. of Jan. according to the accompt there followed, in fifteen hundred ninety and eight, which is 97 with us, and was buried, as I have been informed, in the college of the Jesuits there. He left behind him several of his Labours in writing, some of which are preserved as rarities; but whether any of them have been since printed, I cannot justly tell. His elder Brother Ellis Heywood, I have mentioned before, under the year 1272. num. 180.

HENRY PERRY a Welsh-man born, was educated in Gloucester hall, took the degrees in Arts, was benefited in his own Country, and as a Member of Jesus coll. took the degree of Bach. of Div. 1597. He hath written,

A Brittain Dictionary. MS. — Involved in Dictionary Clav. Britannico-Latinum, published by Dr. Joh. Davies, who 1597. faith in the Preface to that Book, that this our author Perry was Vir Linguarum cognitione insignis, which is all I know of him.

CHARLES PINNER an eminent Preacher in 297. the time of Q. Elizabeth, received his first breath in the ancient Borough of Southampton in Hampshire, educated in Wykeham's School, made perpetual Fellow of New coll. 1575. took one degree in the Civil Law, and soon after became Minister of Wooten-Basset in Wiltshire, where being much resorted to for his edifying way of Preaching, (especially by the Puritan,) did, for the satisfaction of the neighbourhood and others, publish Several Sermons, as (1) Sermon upon the Words of St. Paul the Apost. unto Tim. Ep. 1. 4. 8. Oxon 1597. oct. (2) Honour all Men, love brotherly Fellowship, on 1 Pet. 2. 17. Oxon 1597. in oct. (3) Serm. at Marlborough in Wilts. on 1 Tim. 4. 16. — Printed in oct. about the same time. Besides these, it is said he hath published more, but such I have not yet seen, nor do I know any thing else of the author, only that he was much in esteem in the latter end of Q. Elizabeth.

(c) See in Tho. Bell's Anatomy of Popish Tyranny. Lond. 1603. lib. 1. p. 9. and in lib. 2. p. 25. (d) Sir Jo. Harrington in his Epigrams, lib. 3. Epig. 1. (e) Hen. Morus in Hist. Trov. Angl. Soc. Jesu. lib. 4. nu. 11. sub an. 1585.

298. PHILIP FERDINANDUS, a Polonian born originally (as it seems) a Jew, afterwards a R. Catholick, and at length a Protestant, entered into this University in a poor and obscure condition, initiated in Academical learning by the exhibition of certain Doctors, of whom Dr. Ayres and Dr. Rainolds were of the number, who perceiving that his excellency lay in the Hebrew Language, put upon him the Office of teaching it privately in several colleges and halls. At length being registred among (f) the Students of the University, after he had taken the Oath of Supremacy, and the usual Oath to the University, did translate into Latin, Hæc sunt verba dei, &c. præcepta in Monte Sinai data Judæis sunt 613, quorum 365 negativa, & 248 affirmativa; collecta per Pharisæum Magistrum Abrahamum filium Kattani; & impressa in bibliis Bombergiensibus, anno à Mundo creato 5288. Venetiis, ab autore Vox Dei appellata. Afterwards Ferdinandus went to Cambridge, where the said translation was printed in qu. 1597. he being then about 42 years of age, and an instructor, as I suppose, of the Hebrew Language, which is all that I know of him and his Works.

299. WILLIAM SHEPREVE, or Shepery, (who writes himself in Latin Scepreus.) Nephew to John Shepreve, mentioned under the year 1542. num. 68. was born near Abendon in Berkshire, admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. in Feb. 1554. aged 14 or thereabouts, Probationer in Nov. 1558. and Bach. of Arts the year following, which was the highest degree he took in this University: For being a zealous Catholick he left it before he was Master, went beyond the Seas; and at length, settling in Rome, was exhibited to by Cardinal Gabr. Paleot Archb. of Bononia, in whose Family he lived several years. He had the degree of D. of Div. conferred upon him at Rome, as it seems, where he was accounted the most skilful person in divers Tongues of his time, and the worthy ornament of the English Exiles. He hath written,

Commentarii in Epist. D. Pauli ad Rom. ex Latino, Græco, Syriaco, Æthiopico. vol. 1. MS.

Nota in omnes Epistolas D. Pauli & canonicas, de differentiis textus Latini & Græci & Syriaci. vol. 1. MS.

Expositio locorum difficilium in officio B. Mariæ. vol. 1. MS.

Connexio literalis Psalmorum in officio B. Mar. Virg. & eorum corroboratio ex variis linguis Græc. Hebr. Syriac. Chald. Arab. Æthiop. &c. Rom. 1596. qu. What else this curious, most critical and learned person hath written I know not, nor any thing more of him, only that dyed at Rome, in adibus S. Severiani, to the very great reluctance of those that knew him, in fifteen hundred ninety and eight, and was buried, 1598. as I presume, either in the Church of that Parish, wherein the said house was situated, or in the Chappel of the English coll. there. The Reader is now to know that one Will. Shepreve, or Shepery, who was elected Probationer of Exeter coll. 17. Octob. 1559. was admitted perpetual Fellow thereof 16. Nov. the next year: And being admitted Bach. of Arts in the beginning of Dec. 1561. took no higher degree, but left his Fellowship in 1568. This William Shepreve I take to be quite different from the former, and tho of kin to him, and a good Scholar, yet I know nothing that he hath published.

300. THOMAS STAPLETON, the most learned R. Catholick of all his time, Son of Will. Stapleton, was born of a gentile Family at Henfield in Sussex, obtained the first rudiments of Grammar at Canterbury, under John Twyne a noted Master there, compleated them at Wykeham's School near Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1554. made Prebendary or Canon of Chichester a little before Q. Mary dyed, being then but Bach. of Arts. But when Q. Elizabeth came to the Crown, and Religion thereupon began to put on another Face, our author not only, but his Father and Family, left the Nation, and went to Louvain; where being settled, our author (the Son) applied himself with great zeal to the study of Theology, and in short time making great proficiency therein, he went to Paris to compleat his knowledge in the sacred Tongues. Afterwards for devotion sake he journeyed to Rome, and in short time after returning to Louvain he settled himself there for a time, to answer Bishop Jewel, and to translate Bede's

Ch. History into English, to the end that Q. Elizabeth (to whom he dedicated it) might see and understand the ancient Faith and Religion of our Ancestors, with other things. A little before that time an University being erected at Doway, he hastned thither at the desire of Dr. Will. Allen; and for a time performed the Office of Catechist Reader at Anchin near to that place. Afterwards taking the degrees in Divinity, as Bachelaur, Licentiat, and Doctor, under Matthew Gallen Provost of the Church of St. Amoure, and Chancellor of the University at Doway, had a Canonry bestowed on him in the said Church by Gallen; and was made the King's Professor of Divinity of the said University. Afterwards being minded to put himself into a Religious Order, he renounced his Canonry and Professorship, and entered into the Society of Jesui at Doway. But after a long and diligent probation, finding that Order not to agree with his genie and course of Life, he left it and returned to his former way of teaching, to the great joy of many, and became a Canon once more of the said Church of St. Amoure. At length being called to Louvain, he was made the King's Professor of Divinity, and wrote there several matters against Dr. W. Whittaker of Cambridge: so that his Fame in short time being over all those parts, and he in great esteem with the King of Spain, had the Deanry of the Church of Hilverbeck in Kampenland in Brabant bestowed on him, little enough, God wot, for such a rare and most learned Clerk as he was. In all kind of literature he obtained such perfection that he was numbred among the most learned men of that age. And it was generally thought that he deserved a Cardinals cap before Allen; but so it was that his ability being eclipsed by the activity of the other, he did not rise higher than a Dean. Pope Clement 8. was so much delighted with his learned Works, that he commanded them to be read dayly at times of his refection, and invited him to Rome with a desire to confer on him the place of Apostolical Protonotary, and, as some say, to make him a Cardinal. Cardinal Perron also, who was very knowing in the controversies of his time, was wont to postpone all Writers of controversies in comparison of those of Stapleton, which he took to be the best of his time, and before. To pass by all commendations given of him by men of his persuasion, I shall conclude with those of his Antagonist Whittaker, who (b) saith, Stapletonus hanc causam (de traditionibus) omnium acutissime ac accuratissime tractavit, &c. And elsewhere (*) speaking of the opinion as well of Papists as Protestants in divers matters, saith modestly that he (Whittaker) differed as much from Stapleton in many things as to knowledge, as Troilus from Achilles. He hath written and translated many things, most of which were printed in four large volumes in fol. at Paris 1620. The Titles of them are these.

De principiis fidei doctrinalibus, lib. 12. Par. 1579. and 82. &c.

Relectio principiorum fidei doctrinalium. Antw. 1592.

When the learned Usher of Ireland was Bach. of Arts, he read over this book several times, and mistrusting the quotations of ancient authors therein, did put (†) him upon reading the Fathers.

He also translated from Lat. into English, The History of the Church of England. Antw. 1565. qu. written by Ven. Bede. Which translation (with some notes added in the margin by Stapleton) is (1) censured by the learned Selden as not altogether true. He translated also Fred. Staphyles large vol. De fidiis Hæreticorum. Antw. 1565. but this I have not yet seen. At length after our author Stapleton had arrived to the sixty third year of his age, did end his days at Louvain, to the great grief of all learned Catholics, on the 12. Oct. (according to the account there followed) in fifteen hundred ninety and eight, and was buried in the Church of St. Peter there. Soon after was put over his grave a monument, with a large inscription thereon, containing in brief the succession of his Employments in the Universities and Church, here and beyond the Seas; a copy of which you may see (m) elsewhere. The next, according to time, that is to crave a place among these Writers, was a learned Sage of the Law.

301. THOMAS OWEN Son of Rich. Owen Gent. by Mary his Wife, one of the Daughters and Co-heirs of Tho. Oteley of Shropshire Esq; was born at, or near to, Condover in that county, and for some time was conversant among the Muses either in Broadgates hall, or in Ch. Church. From thence (having first taken a degree in Arts as it seems) he retired to Lincoln's Inn, where by his unwearied industry, advanced by a good natural genie and judgment, he became a noted Councillour, and much resorted to for his advice. In 25. Elizab. dom. 1583. he was elected Lent-Reader of that house, in 1590. he was by Writ called to the degree of Serjeant at Law, and about that time made the Queen's Serjeant, and at length one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, and not of the King's Bench as one (n) falsely tells us; which last place he executed for 5 years with great integrity, equity, and prudence. He was a learned man, and a great lover of learning and those that professed it; but all the Writings which I have seen of his that are extant, are only

Reports in the Common Pleas, wherein are many choice Cases, most of them thoroughly argued by the learned Serjeants, and after argued and resolved by the grave Judges of those times, with many Cases, wherein the differences in the Year-books are reconciled and explained. Lond. 1656. fol. What else is published under his Name I know not, nor any more of him, only that he dying 21. Decemb. in fifteen hundred ninety and eight, was buried on the S. side of the Choir of St. Peter's Church in Westminster. Over his grave was soon after erected a noble monument of Alabaster, Marble, and divers coloured stones, adorned with Arms, and gilt with Gold, with his Image in scarlet robes lying thereon, which remains to this day. He left behind him a Son named Roger, who was a Knight, and (o) for his manifold learning, a right Worthy Son of so Good a Father. This Sir Roger, who had been a Gent. Com. of

Ch. Church, and a great Friend to the Clergy, by vindicating them when aspersed in open Parliament, 11 Jac. 1. dyed in a distracted condition, to their great reluctancy, 29. May, being Holy Thursday, in 1617.

MICHAEL MASCHIART, a most excellent 302. Latin Poet of his time, was born in the Parish of St. Thomas within the City of Salisbury, educated in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. 1562. became Vicar of Writtle in Essex in 1572. being then Bach. of the Civil Law, and two years after proceeded Doctor of that Faculty, at which time he was not only esteemed an able Civilian, but also excellent in all kind of Humane learning. He hath written, Pœmata varia. This book I have not yet seen, and therefore know not whether that be the true title. Nor indeed should I have known that he had written any thing, had not the learned Camden told me so in his Britannia, wherein are by him inserted several Verses taken from Maschiart to adorn his discourse of Clarindon Park in Wiltshire. This learned Doctor dyed at Writtle before-mentioned, in the latter end of the year (about Christmas) of fifteen hundred ninety and eight, and was buried in the Church there, as I have been informed. In that Vicarage succeeded a learned Doctor of Divinity named John Lloyd, whom, and his Works, I shall mention among these Writers under the year 1603.

STEPHEN GOSSON, a Kentish man born 303. was admitted Scholar of C. Ch. coll. 4. Apr. 1572. aged 16. or thereabouts, took one degree in Arts four years after, left the University without completing that degree by Determination, and went to the great City, where he was noted for his admirable penning of Pastorals, being so excellent therein, that he was ranked with Sir Ph. Sidney, Tho. Chaloner, Edm. Spencer, Abrah. Fraunce, and Rich. Bernfield, noted Poets of their time. Thence, as he saith, he went to a worshipful Gentleman in the Country to teach his Sons, where he continued till he shewed his great dislike of Plays, having his mind then quite alienated from them. So that the Gentleman being weary of his company, Gosson left him, took Orders, and at length became Parson of Great Wigborow in Essex. He hath written and published,

The School of abuse, containing a pleasant invective against Poets, Pipers, Players, Jesters, and such like Caterpillars of the Common-wealth, &c. Lond. 1579. and 1585. in oct. dedicated to Sir Ph. Sidney.

Plays confuted in five actions; proving that they are not to be suffered in a Christian Common-wealth: By the way, both the cavils of Tho. Lodge, and the Play of Plays, written in their defence, and other objections of Players Friends, are truly set down, and directly answered.—Dedicated to Sir Franc. Walsingham, but when printed it appears not.

The Trumpet of War, Serm. at Pauls Crofs 7. May Clar. 1598. on 2 Chron. ch. 20. ver. 20. Lond. 1598. oct. As for 1598. the Pastorals, Comedies, Tragedies, or Poetry, (some of which he hath written,) I have not yet seen, either printed, or in Manuscript.

JOHN LYLIE, or Lylly, a Kentish man born, be- 304. came a Student in Magd. coll. in the beginning of 1569. aged 16. or thereabouts, and was afterwards, as I conceive, either one of the Demies or Clerks of that house; but always averse to the crabbed studies of Logic and Philosophy. For so it was that his genie being naturally bent to the pleasant paths of Poetry, (as if Apollo had given to him a wreath of his own Bays, without snatching or struggling,) did in a manner neglect Accademical studies, yet not so much but that he took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being completed 1575. At which time, as he was esteemed in the University a noted Wit, so afterwards was he in the Court of Q. Elizabeth, where he was also reputed a rare Poet, witty, comical, and facetious. His Works are these.

Gallathea.

Love's Metamorphosis.

Midas.

Endimion, or the man in the Moon.

Mother Bomby.

Maids Metamorphosis,

Sapho and Phao.

Woman in the Moon.

All which are Comedies, and most of them having been published in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, six were re-printed at London in oct. an. 1632. by the care of Hen. Blount Esq; afterwards a Knight, under the title of Court Comedies, which before had crowned the author with applause, and the Auditors of them with pleasure.

Euphues and his England; containing his voyage and adventures, mixed with sundry pretty discourses of honest love, the description of the Country, the Court, and the manner of that Isle, &c. Lond. 1580. and 82. in two parts, in a large oct. The first part is dedicated to Edw. Vere E. of Oxon, a noted Poet, and encourager of learning in his time, and the last to the University of Oxon. These two parts were published again with corrections and amendments at Lond. 1606. and 1636. qu.

Euphues: The Anatomy of Wit, or the delights of Wit in Youth, &c. Lond. 1581. qu. corrected and amended Lond. 1606. 1623. and 30. qu. To these books of Euphues, 'tis said, that our Nation is indebted for a new English in them, which the Flower of the Youth thereof learned. All the Ladies then were Scholars to them and their author, and that Beauty in Court which could not parly Euphuism, was as little regarded, as those now there that cannot speak French. What other Books, Comedies, or Trag. our author hath written, I cannot find, nor when he dyed, or where buried, only that he lived till towards the latter end of Q. Elizabeth, if not beyond, for he was in being in 1597. when the Woman in the Moon was published. It is said also that he wrote something against Mart. Marprelate, in defence of Dr. Cooper Bishop of Winton, but what, I cannot tell, unless it be any of those answers, which I have mentioned in John Penry, alias M. Marprelate, under the year 1593. Quere.

305. RICHARD HAYDOCK was born at Grewel in Hampshire, educated in Grammar learning in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1590. took the degrees in Arts, and travelled for some time beyond the Seas. At his return he studied Physick, took one degree in that Faculty, and in 1605. left the college, and settling in the City of Salisbury practiced Physick there many years. He hath translated from Italian into English, A Treat containing the Arts of curious Painting, Graving, and Building. Oxon. 1598. fol. Written originally by Job. Paul Lomatius. This translation, which hath in the title page the picture of Ric. Haydock, is by him dedicated to Tho. Bodley Esq; a favourer of his Muse, as Dr. Job. Case, and other chief men of the University then in being were; not only for his learning, but for his great curiosity in painting and engraving, for which among many he was esteemed eminent. This is that Rich. Haydock, whom a certain (*) author reports, that he would practice Physick in the day-time, and Preach in his sleep in the night, about the beginning of the Reign of K. James 1. The whole story of which, being too large for this place, I shall refer the Reader to him, who errs in several particulars of it, especially in that, that when Haydock had ingeniously confessed the cheat to the King, (who made a discovery of it,) his Majesty thereupon gave him preferment in the Church. He was not in Orders, but lived always a Physician of good repute at Salisbury, and retiring for a time to London, dyed and was buried there, a little before the Grand Rebellion broke out, as I have been informed by those that knew the Man. The Reader is now to note that one Ric. Haydock translated from Italian into English, An ample declaration of the Christian Doctrine. Doway 1604. intw. written by Card. Rob. Bellarmine. But this person, who was a Doctor of Divinity, a Rom. Catholick, and had spent most of his time beyond the Seas in the English Seminaries, must not be taken to be the same with the former, who was a Physician, as some have done.

306. REYNOLDE SCOT, a younger Son of Sir John Scot of Scots-hall, near to Smeeth in Kent, by his Wife, Daughter of Reynolde Pimp of Pimps-court Knight, was born in that County, and at about 17 years of age was sent to Oxon, particularly, as it seems, to Hart hall, where several of his Country-men and name studied in the latter end of K. Hen. 8. and in the Reign of Ed. 6. &c. Afterwards he retired to his native Country without the honour of a degree, and settled at Smeeth, where he found great encouragement in his studies from his kinsman Sir Tho. Scot. About which time taking to him a Wife, he gave himself up solely to solid reading, to the perusing of obscure authors that had by the generality of Scholars been neglected, and at times of leisure to husbandry and gardening, as it may partly appear from these books following.

A perfect platform of a Hop-garden, and necessary instructions for the making and maintenance thereof, with notes and rules for reformation of all abuses, &c. Lond. 1576. qu. the 2. edit. as it seems.

The discovery of Witchcraft; wherein the leud dealing of Witches, and Witchmongers is notably detected, the knavery of Conjurers, the impiety of Inchantors, the folly of Southsayers, &c. With many other things are opened, which have long been hidden, howbeit very necessary to be known. Lond. 1584. qu. in 16 books.

Discourse upon Devils and Spirits. — In this, and the former, both printed together, it plainly appears that the author was very well versed in many choice books, and that his search into them was so profound, that nothing slip'd his Pen that might make for his purpose. Further also in the said Discovery and Discourse, though he holds that Witches are not such that were in his time, and before, commonly executed for Witches; or that Witches were, or are not; yet they, which were written for the instruction of all Judges and Justices of that age, (being the first of that nature that were published in the Mother tongue,) did for a time make great impressions in the Magistracy and Clergy, tho afterwards condemned by James King of Scots (the same who succeeded Qu. Elizabeth in the Monarchy of England) in his Preface to Demonology, printed under his Name at Edinburgh in 1597. qu. and by several others since, among whom was Rich. Bernard of Batcomb, in his Epist. Ded. before his Guide to Grand Jurymen, &c. Lond. 1627. in oct. What else our author Scot hath written, I cannot yet tell, nor any thing else of him, only but that he dyed in Sept. or Oct. in fifteen hundred 1599. ninety and nine, and was buried among his Ancestors in the Church at Smeeth before-mentioned. In the time of the said Reynold Scot and before, have been conversant among the Muses in Hart hall, the Sackvilles of Sussex, the Colepepers of Kent and Sussex, the Sedlies of Kent, and the Scots before-mentioned, with others of inferiour note of the said Counties.

ROBERT TURNER was born at Barnstaple in 307. Devonshire, (to which place, if I mistake not, his Father came from St. Andrews in Scotland;) and educated for a time in Exeter coll. But leaving the University without a degree, (wherein he (a) saith he spent his time in trifles and toys,) and afterwards his Country and Parents for Religion sake, went first into France, afterwards into Italy, and at length to Rome, where he spent some time in the Liberal Arts in the German coll. there. Afterwards being made Priest he applyed himself more severely to the study of Divinity, and in fine was made Doctor of that Faculty. This person hath several times confessed that he had been Scholar to Edm. Campian the Jesuit, but whether in St. Johns coll. or in that of the English at Rome, is yet uncertain. Sure it is, that for the great respect he had to his memory, he published not only several of his Works after his death, but also his Life. At length, after many travels, and services done for the Cause, he was made Professor of Eloquence and Ethicks in, and afterwards Rector of, the University of Ingolstadt in Bavaria, and in short time after one of the Privy Council to William Duke of that place, but falling into his displeasure, he left him, and retired for a time to Paris. About an year or two after, he returned into that Country again, was made Canon of Breslaw in Silesia, and afterwards Secretary for the Latin Tongue to Ferdinando of Gratz, who had an especial esteem for him, as all others of his persuasion had. His Works are these.

Nov. in fifteen hundred ninety and nine, and was buried there. I find one Rob. Turner who (among several things) wrote A description of the little World, or Body, of Man; which being printed in oct. an. 1654. must not be taken as written by the former Robert, because there is 54 years distance between them.

308. JOHN CASE, more esteemed beyond, than within, the Seas, was born at a Market-Town in Oxfordshire called Woodstock, educated there in the English, but in the Latin Tongue partly in New college School, and partly in that at Ch. Church, of both which places he was successively a Choirister. In 1564. he was elected Scholar of St. Johns coll. and was afterwards Fellow, Master of Arts, and the most noted Disputant and Philosopher that ever before set foot in that college. But so it was, that being Popishly affected, he left his Fellowship and married, and with leave from the Chancellour and Scholars of the University, he read Logic and Philosophy to young men (mostly of the R. C. Religion) in a private house in St. Mary Magd. Parish, particularly in his latter days in that large tenement situated on the North side of the Inn called the George; wherein, having had disputations, declamations, and other exercises, as in colleges and halls, many eminent men issued thence. He wrote several Treatises for their use, which afterwards he published, as commentaries on Aristotle's Organon, Ethicks, Politicks, Economicks, and Physicks, which were taken into the hands also of most of the Juniors of the University, tho since slighted and looked upon as empty things. As for his knowledge in the Faculty of Medicine, (of which he became Doctor, 1589. he being made that year Prebendary of North-Aulton in the Ch. of Sarum) he was much respected, and by his practice therein and reading to Scholars obtaining a fair Estate, he bestowed much of it on pious uses, as I have elsewhere told (c) you. He was a man of an innocent, meek, religious, and a studious Life, of a facete and affable conversation, a lover of Scholars, beloved by them again, and had in high veneration. His Works are,

Summa veterum interpretum in Universam Dialecticam Aristotelis. Lond. 1584. Ox. 1592. and 98. qu.

Speculum moralium questionum in Univers. Ethicam Aristot. Ox. 1585. qu.

Sphaera civitatis sive de politia. Ox. 1588. &c. qu. in eight books. It was then printed by Joseph Barnes Printer to the University of Oxford; but the said book undergoing several impressions afterwards beyond the Seas, Barnes put up (d) a Petition to the University in 1590. desiring that every Bachelour of Arts that should hereafter determine, should take off one copy of the said book from his hands, which was granted.

I have a book in my Library, intituled, The praise of Musick; wherein, besides the Antiquity and Dignity, &c. is declared the sober and lawful use of the same in the Congregation and Church of God. Ox. 1586. oct. It was written by an Oxford Scholar then lately deceased, but what was his Name, I cannot in all my searches find. 'Twas printed and published by the said Joseph Barnes, who putting a Dedic. Epist. before it to Sir Walt. What other things he hath written or published, it doth not yet appear to me, tho there is no doubt but something in MS. hath escaped my sight. At length our author, after he had attained to about the sixtieth year of his age, surrendered up his last breathings in his house in Magd. Parish before-mentioned, 23. January in fifteen hundred ninety and nine; whereupon his Body was solemnly interred in the Chappel of St. Johns coll. before-mentioned, and had soon after a comely Monument set over his Grave the inscription on which, you may read in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 312. b. The said Dr. Case (whose picture did hang many years after in that house, where he dyed) married Elizabeth, the Widdow of one Dobson the Keeper of Bocardo Prison, 30. Dec. 1574. whose Daughter Ann Dobson (for Dr. Case had no Children by her) was married to Barthelm. Warner Doctor of Physick of St. Johns coll. 30. Sept. 1583. who having none but Daughters by her that surviv'd, one was married to Tho. Clayton Dr. of Physick, and Master of Pemb. coll. another to John Speed, Dr. of the said Faculty, of St. Johns coll. (Son of Joh. Speed the Chronologer,) a third to Will. Taylor Dr. of Physick of the said coll. and a fourth to Anthony Clopton D. D. of C. C. coll. and Rector of Childrey in Berks.

GEORGE PEELE was, if I mistake not, a Devonian born, whence being sent to Broadgates hall, was after some time, made Student of Ch. Ch. 1573. or thereabouts, where going through the several forms of Logic and Philosophy, took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1579. At which time, as he was esteemed a most noted Poet in the University, so afterwards in the Metropolis, where he knew also what belonged to the Stage part as well as any there. His Comedies and Tragedies were often acted with great applause, and did endure reading, with due commendation, many years after their author's death. Those that I have seen are only these following.

Life of Llewellyn Rebel in Wales.

The sinking of Q. Elinor at Charing-cross, and of her rising again at Potters-Hith, now named Queen-Hith. Lond. 1593. qu. This, and a Ballad of the same subject, are now usually sold by Ballad-fingers or Ballad-mongers.

The love of K. David and fair Bethsheba, with the Tragedy of Absalon, &c. Lond. 1599. qu.

Alphonfus Emperor of Germany, Trag.—Besides these Plays, he hath several Poems extant, as that entit.

A farewell to Sir Joh. Norrys and Sir Fr. Drake. Lond. in qu. and some remnants of Pastoral Poetry extant in a collection intit. Englands Helicon, but such I have not yet seen, nor his book of Jests or Clinches, which at length was sold on the stalls of Ballad-mongers. This person was living, in his middle age, in the latter end of Q. Elizabeth, but when, or where he dyed I cannot tell; for so it is, and always hath been, that most Poets dye poor, and consequently obscurely, and a hard matter it is to trace them to their Graves.

FABIAN à NIPHO, Son of James à Nipho, was born in Italy, left his Country for Religion sake, went to London, where obtaining Letters of recommendation (e) from Robert Earl of Leicester, Chanc. of this Univ. dat. 19. Oct. 1581. he retired to Oxon for relief. So that by virtue of those Letters, wherein the Members thereof found, that he was a person recommended to them for his great skill in Physick and Philosophy, they were pleased to confer on him the degree of Bachelour of Physick in January following, and permitted him to read a Shagling Lecture in that Faculty, to gain contributions from the Students thereof. How long he continued with us, I know not, nor how long he read that Lecture. Sure it is (if you'll believe him) That he having suffered oppression by the wickedness of certain People in England, (upon what account he tells us not, unless we suppose that they suspected him to be a Papist, and so dealt with him accordingly,) he retired to Leyden in Holland; where, (as it farther appears) after he had made himself to be believed, that he was an honest man, the States encouraged his Studies, and forthwith he wrote a book, which he dedicated to them, bearing this title:

Clar. 1599. Ophius, seu de celesti animarum progenie divinitio. Lugd. Bat. 1599. qu. There is no doubt but that he hath published other things, but such I have not yet seen; neither do I yet know to the contrary, but that he made a return again to this University.

311. THOMAS WILCOCKS, or Wilcox, a grave and reverend Divine in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, was originally of St. Johns coll. but whether ever Fellow thereof, their Register shews not. His Name stands in the (*) Matriculæ of the University, sub tit. coll. S. Jo. Bapt. in the year 1564. but I cannot find him Graduated in the publick Register, of that time, belonging to the University. One Tho. Wilcocks a Kentish man, was, as a Member of St. Albans hall, admitted Master of Arts in Febr. 1589. But this I cannot affirm to be the same with the former, unless we suppose him to be about 40 years of age when he took that degree, as many did in those times at that age, after they had been Parsons or Dignitaries many years. As for Tho. Wilcocks, whom we are farther to mention, he retired to London, after he had left the University, where he became a very painful Minister of God's Word, a frequent Writer and Translator, and was much reformed to, by wavering and dubious Persons, for relief and settlement of their Consciences. His Writings are, Exposition on the book of Canticles, or Solomon's Song. Lond. 1585. qu.

Exposition on certain Verses of the 8. Chap. of the Rom. namely upon Vers. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23. Lond. 1587. oct.

Short and found Commentary on the Prov. of Solomon. Lond. 1589. qu.

Expof. on the whole book of Psalms, wherein is contained the division and sense of every Psalm, &c. Lond. 1591. qu. All these were reprinted in one fol. at Lond. 1624. by the care of Dr. Jo. Burges, who married the author's Daughter, and had this general Title put to them, The Works of the Reverend Divine Mr. Tho. Wilcocks.

Summary and short meditations touching certain points of Christian Religion. Lond. 1579. oct.

Concordance, or Table, containing the principal words, and matters, which are comprehended in the New Testament. Lond. 1579. oct.

Answer to Banister the Libertine. Lond. 1581. oct.

Glas for Gamesters, and namely for such as delight in Cards and Dice, wherein they may see not only the vanity, but also the vileness of those Plays, plainly discovered and overthrown by the Word of God. Lond. 1581. oct.

Form of preparation to the Lord's Supper. Lond. in oct.

On the substance of the Lord's Supper, shortly and soundly set forth, together with, &c. Lond. 1581. oct.

Comfortable Letter for afflicted Consciences, written to a godly man greatly touched that way. Lond. 1584. in tw.

Three large Letters for instruction and comfort of such as are distressed in Conscience, &c. Lond. 1589. oct.

Narration of a fearful Fire at Wooburn in Bedfordsh. Lond. 1595. oct.

He also translated into English, (1) A Catechism. Lond. 1578. oct. originally written by Joh. Fountein. (2) Three propositions, the first on the 1. Chap. of St. Joh. ver. 1. to 5. &c. Lond. 1580. written by Jo. Calvin. (3) Treatise of the Church, wherein the godly may discern the true Church from the Romish, &c. Lond. 1582. oct. written by Bertrand de Loques. (4) Discourse of the true visible marks of the Cath. Church. Lond. in oct. written by Theod. Beza. (5) Two Sermons on the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Lond. 1588. oct. written by the said Beza; whereunto is added, The substance of the Lord's Supper, mentioned before. (6) Bertram the Priest concerning the Body and Blood of Christ, &c. Lond. 1582. oct. See more in Will. Hugh under the year 1549. (7) Meditations on Psal. 101. Lond. 1599. oct. written in French by Phil. Mornay Lord of Plessis. What else our author hath written and translated I know not, nor any thing of him beside; only that he was living and much in esteem in fifteen hundred ninety and nine. Two or more of his Surname (g) studied in Broadgates hall in the time of K. Ed. 6. whose Christian Names being not in a possibility to be discovered, I cannot judge farther of them.

Clar. 1599.

RICHARD HOOKER, that rare and admirable Theologist, was born in, or near to, the City of Exeter, about the time of Easter, an. 1554. (of which City some of his Name and Family have been Mayors,) was exhibited to while a School-boy by John Jewel B. of Sarum; became one of the Clerks of C. C. coll. in 1567. Scholar 24. Dec. in 73. Fellow and Master of Arts in 77. Deputy-Professor of the Hebrew Language in the University 14. July 1579. entred into Orders, and became a frequent Preacher, married a clownish silly Woman and withal a meer Xantippe, became Rector of Drayton-Beauchamp in Bucks. an. 1584. Master of the Temple in the year following, in the place of Rich. Alvey Bach. of Div. deceased, (who was the first Canon of the fifth stall in the collegiat Church of St. Peter in Westminster,) Rector of Boscomb in Wiltshire, Sub-dean of the Church of Salisbury, and Prebendary of Netherhaven in the same Church, (both which he obtained by the resignation of Dr. Nich. Balgay, in July 1591.) and at length Rector of Bishops-Bourne near Canterbury, by the presentation thereunto of the Queen, in 1595. There hath been no learned college in the World, that hath yet yielded at one time almost, and from one County three such Divines as Jewel, Hooker, and Rainolds, of the second of which hear I pray what the learned (b) Camden saith. In this year (meaning 1599. which is false,) dyed too many in that one Rich. Hooker, born in Devonshire, and bred in C. C. coll. in Oxford, a Divine very moderate, temperate, and meek, and vertuous even to the best imitation; and besides very famous for his learned works, as his Books of Ecclesiastical Policy, set forth in the English, but worthy to speak Latin, do testify of him, &c. At Boscomb he continued till he had finished four of his eight proposed books of the Laws of Ecclesiastical Policy, which were entred into the Register in Stationers hall, 9. March 1592. and afterwards came out with this Title.

The Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity, in four books. Lond. 1594. fol. To which he added a fifth book, (which is larger than the first four,) printed by its self at Lond. 1597. fol. Part of the first four being read by Dr. Tho. Stapleton, in Latin, to P. Clement 8. who before had heard much in their commendation, he the said Pope in conclusion said thus, There is no learning that this Man hath not searched into, nothing too hard for his Understanding: This man indeed deserves the Name of an Author. — His books will get reverence by age, for there are in them such seeds of Eternity, that if the rest be like this, they shall last till the last Fire shall consume all learning, &c. At the same time K. James of Scotland (afterwards of England) did put an high esteem upon the said books, and usually said, They were the pictures of a Divine Soul in every page of Truth and Reason. King Ch. 1. had read them over several times, was well vers'd in, and commended, them to be read by the Prince, (afterwards K. Ch. 2.) and his other Children, next to the Bible. The learned Usher Primate of Ireland, Morton B. of Durham, Hales of Eaton, &c. had the same high opinion of the author and his Works, and Gauden Bishop of Worcester said, he had been highly esteemed of all prudent, peaceable, and impartial Readers. But before the fifth book had been extant two years, was published a Pamphlet intit. A Christian Letter of certain English Protestants, unfeigned Lovers of the present state of Religion, authorized and professed in England, unto that reverend and learned man Mr. Hooker, requiring resolution in certain matters of Doctrine expressly contained in his five books of Ecclesiastical Polity. — Printed 1599. in qu. which matters of Doctrine, as they say, seem to overthrow the foundation of Christian Religion, and of the Church among us. But therein it doth appear, that their ignorant malice hath done him great honour; who in an argument so distastful by them, and coming with a proud confidence to reprehend, have only carped fillily at some things, neither of moment or importance, whereof humility and charity would have craved no answer. But these being willing and desirous to find something to oppose, have only discovered Mr Hookers great, mature, and grave judgment, and their own small, undigested and shallow learning. Soon after came out an answer to the said letter, intit. A just and temperate defence of the 5 books of Ecclesiastical polity, &c. against an uncharitable letter of certain English protestants, &c. Lond. 1603. qu. written and published by Will. Covel D. D. born in Lancashire near the place where Dr. Chaderton B. of Lincoln received his first breath, bred in Christs and Queens coll. in Cambridge, and a writer of other books that came out soon after. As for the other three books of Ecclesiastical Policy, which our author Hooker compleated before his death, they with the consent of his unucky Widdow, were seized on in his study soon after his decease, by Will. Charke a noted Puritan, and another Minister that lived near to Canterbury; who making the filly Woman believe that they were writings not fit to be seen, did either burn them in the place, or convey them away secretly: So that the foul copy being only remaining, with many interlinings, Dr. Joh. Spenser of C. C. coll. in Oxon, his ancient and entire Friend, got it into his hands, who using the assistance of Hen. Jackson of the said coll. as an Amantissis, and otherwise, did compleat it as much as could be, and kept it by him till his latter end, with an intent that it should be published, but upon what account he was hindred I cannot tell. Sure it is, that when he lay on his death-bed, he bequeathed the said copy, (containing the three last books) fairly transcribed by the hand of the said H. Jackson, to Dr. Jo. King B. of London. After his death the copy rested in the hands of his Son Henry (who became B. of Chichester 1641.) till Dr. Abbot Archb. of Canterbury commanded them out of his custody, authorizing Dr. Joh. Barcham to require and bring them to him to Lambeth, which accordingly was done. The said Archbishop esteeming them as rarities, did put them into the Library there, where remaining till the decollation of Archb. Laud, were then by the Brethren of the predominant Faction, given, (i) with the Library, to that most notorious Villain Hugh Peters, as a reward for his remarkable service in those sad times of the Churches confusion. And though they could hardly fall into a fouler hand, yet there wanted not other endeavours to corrupt and make them speak that Language for which the Faction then fought, which was to subject the Sovereign Power to the People. From the said copy several transcripts were taken, not only, I presume, while it remained in the said Library, but while it continued in the hands of Peters, differing much in words. There was a copy of the sixth and eighth books published at London in 1648. in qu. and said by the Editor of them to be collected and compared with five copies, viz. with that in Bodley's Library, that at Lambeth, that in Bish. Andrews's, that in Archb. Usher's Library, and in that of the Lord Edw. Conway at Ragley; but whether the publisher may be believed I know not. Sure I am that the said three last books, which are said to be true and genuine, (but from whence obtained I cannot tell,) were published by Dr. Joh. Gauden under this title.

The Works of Mr. Rich. Hooker (that learned, godly, judicious, and eloquent Divine) vindicating the Church of England as truly Christian and duly reformed, in eight books of Ecclesiastical Polity, now compleated, as with the sixth and eighth, so with the seventh, &c. out of his own MSS. never before published, with an account of his holy Life and happy Death. London, 1662. fol. But whether the said MSS. were of his own hand-writing, we have good reason to question, as also the greater part of his Life, which he the said Gauden hath falsely written; who with great confidence hath used divers arguments to satisfy the World, that the before-mentioned three books were pen'd by Mr. Hooker, notwithstanding those poysonous assertions against the Regal Power, which are to be found in them. Now altho this is generally confessed, that the said three books are not genuine, yet some Nonconformists, and among these chiefly Mr. Rich. Baxter, do (k) urge seemingly probable reasons to induce a belief that these posthumous books, as published by Dr. Gauden, are to be accounted the true and authentick Writings of Mr. Hooker; yet this must be known, that the reason why the said Mr. Baxter contends so eagerly for their genuineness, is because the said three books, but more especially the eighth, do contain certain popular and false Principles, concerning the true Nature of the Legislative Power, the Original of Government, and the Office of Kings it self, as derived from the People. And on this account it is, that he seems to take a more than ordinary delight in so often telling the World, that the Abettors of these seditious positions have so great a Church-man, (l) as our author was justly esteemed, on their side. It was these and such like Prelatist's principles as he (m) saith (meaning, I guess, Bish. Jewell, but chiefly Bish. Bilson in his book of Christian Subjection, &c. which he frequently cites as defending the resistance of Superiours in some cases, and such like pernicious tenets, and whom he usually joyns with Mr. Hooker in quotations of (n) this kind) that led him to what he did, and wrote in the book of Holy Commonwealth, which he hath retracted. And that he may charge these destructive Assertions home on our author, he (o) saith, if any do causlessly question whether the eighth imperfect book be in those dangerous passages above-mentioned his own, let them remember that the sum of them is in his first book, which is old, and highly honoured by the Prelatists: And after all this, to shew himself an Enemy to the above-named Principles, he examines and confutes (p) the first and eighth books so far, as they make for popularity, (with some strictures intermixed on Bishop Bilson's false Notes of subjection,) whereby he makes but a scanty satisfaction for the malignant influence those many traiterous opinions, with which his Political Aphorismes are fraught, have had on the minds of many giddy People, towards the withdrawing them from yielding cheerful obedience to their lawful Superiours; and this, notwithstanding he hath sometime since, called this piece in. The eighth book is commonly supposed to have been first published, together with the sixth and seventh, by Bish. Gauden, yet Mr. Baxter (q) affirms that the said eighth book was in print long before that time; which is true, for the sixth and eighth were printed at London, 1648. in qu. nay all the eight books, with certain Tractates and Sermons, together with the author's Life, were published in two vol. in fol. 1617. As for the other Books and Sermons, that our author Hooker hath written, are these following.

Answer to a supplication preferred by Mr. Walt. Trauers to the H. H. Lords of the Privy Council. Oxon. 1612. qu.

Causes of contention concerning Church-Government. Oxon. 1641. qu.

As for his Sermons they are these, (1) Discourse of Justification, Works, and how the foundation of Faith is overthrowen, on Abak. 1. 4. Oxon. 1612. qu. (2) Of the Nature of Pride, on Abak. 2. 4. Oxon. 1612. qu. (3) Remedy against Sorrow and Fear: Fun. Sermon on Joh. 14. 27. Ox. 1612. qu. (4) Of the certainty and perpetuity of Faith in the Elect, on Abak. 1. 4. (5) Two Sermons upon part of St. Jude's Epistle, viz. ver. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. Oxon. 1614. qu. All which Sermons (with Wickliff's Wicket) were published by Henry Jackson Fellow of C. C. coll. reprinted at London (the Wicket excepted) an. 1622. fol. at the end of the five books of Ecclesiastical Policy, &c. and again at the end of the eight books, London. 1682. fol. (6) Serm. on Matth. 7. 7. Found in the study of Dr. Andrews Bishop of Winchester, and published by Isaac Walton, at the end of Dr. Sanderson's Life. London. 1678. oct. What other things our most renowned author Hooker hath extant, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that paying his last debt to Nature on the second of Nov. in sixteen hundred, (leaving then behind him the character of Schismaticorum Mallens.) was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Bishops-Bourne in Kent before-mentioned. Over his Grave was, 35 years after, a Monument erected by Will. Comper Esq; with the Statua or Bust of the Defunct to the middle part of his Body. From which Statua was taken the picture of him, set before his Life, written by the said Isaac Walton, of whom by the way I desire the Reader to know, that he was born in the ancient Borough of Stafford, in Aug. 1593. that he was by Trade a Sempster in Chancery-lane in London, where continuing till about 1643. (at which time he found it dangerous for honest men to be there,) he left that City, and lived sometimes at Stafford, and elsewhere, but mostly in the Families of the eminent Clergy-men of England, of whom he was much beloved. He hath written the lives of Dr. Joh. Donne, Sir Hen. Walton, Mr. Rich. Hooker, Mr. George Herbert, and of Dr. Rob. Sanderson sometimes B. of Lincoln: All which are well done, considering the education of the author; as also The compleat Angler, or the contemplative Man's recreation, &c. He ended his days (in the great Frost) at Winchester, in the house of Dr. Will. Hawkins, Prebendary of the Church there, (who had married his Daughter,) on the 15. Dec. 1683. and was buried in the Cath. Ch. at that place.

313. GEORGE CRANMER, a Gent. sometimes of singular hopes, eldest Son of Tho. Cranmer, Son of Edm. Cranmer Archdeacon of Canterbury, (who died in the beginning of 1571.) Brother to Tho. Archb. of that place, was born in Kent, admitted Scholar of C. Ch. coll. 10. Jan. 1577. aged 13. or thereabouts, and was then, or soon after, put under the tuition of the famous Mr. Rich. Hooker; who found him afterwards very useful to him when he was compiling the books of Ecclesiastical Policy. In 1583. he was admitted Probationer-Fellow of that house, and six years after was licensed to proceed in Arts. About which time he betook himself to the service of Will. Davison Esq; one of the Secretaries of State: After whose removal he went in place of Secretary with Sir Hen. Killebrew in his Embassy into France, and after his death he accompanied that worthy and learned Gent. Sir Edwyn Sandys in his travels into France, Germany, Italy, and other parts, for the space of three years. After his return he was sought out by the most Noble Charles Blount, Lord Mountjoy, with whom he went into Ireland in the quality of Secretary, where he remained until his unfortunate Death. He hath written,

Letter to Mr. Richard Hooker concerning the new Church-discipline, Feb. 1598. Lond. 1641. 42. qu. Remitted into the Life of R. Hooker, written by If. Walton. —Lond. 1670. p. 123. Our author Cranmer hath written other things, as I have heard Mr. Walton say, but are kept private to the great prejudice of the publick. He was slain in a Battle near Carlingford in Ireland, between the English and the Rebels there, on the 13. of Nov. in sixteen hundred, as it is attested by (r) Camden, speaking of the said Battle, thus—Cecidit tamen ex Anglis, præter alios, Cranmerus Prorege ab Epistolis, vir eruditissimus, & ipsi eo nomine longè charissimus. I find another George Cranmer, who was born at Wingham in Kent, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1559. and died in 1563. but he hath written nothing.

314. JOHN RASTELL, a most noted Enemy in his writings to B. John Jewell, was born within the City of Gloucester, trained up in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1549. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1555. and about that time Sacred Orders. In 1560. he left his coll. (wherein he had always been accounted an excellent Disputant,) his Friends, and native Country, and went to Louvain, where, and at Antwerp, he published certain books against B. Jewell, being then a candidate of the Fac. of Theology. Afterwards he went to Rome, and in 1568. he was, with his Brother, or near Kinsman, admitted into the Society of Jesus. Whereupon, because a way had not then been opened for the Jesuits into England, he went into Germany to perform offices pertaining to his Order. But being initiated in the Priesthood before his ingress into the Society, and having performed the office of Confessor in the place of one Hall, was sent to Auspurg, and at length became Rector of the coll. of Jesuits at Ingolstadt. He hath written, Confutation of a Sermon pronounced by Mr. Jewell at Paul's Cross. Antw. 1564.

Copy of a challenge taken out of the confutation of Mr. Jewell's Sermon. Antw. 1565. oct.

Reply against an answer (falsly intit.) A defence of the Truth. Antw. 1565. oct.

Brief view of the false waies packed up in the nameless Apology of the Church of England. Lov. 1567. oct.

Treatise intit. Beware of Mr. Jewell. Antw. 1566. oct. This Jo. Rastell, who perhaps hath written other things; died in a good old age at Ingolstadt about the year sixteen hundred, and was buried in the coll. of the Jesuits there. Several of these books before-mentioned, are attributed by a certain (s) author to Will. Rastell a Judge, but false. See more under the year 1565. where you will justly find what belongs to him.

HENRY PRICE was born in London, became 315. Scholar of St. John's coll. in 1584. aged 18. afterwards Fellow, M. of A. and Chaplain to Sir Hen. Lea of Oxfordshire. At length taking the degree of Bac. of Div. became Rector of Fleetmarston in Bucks, a noted Preacher, and an elegant Lat. Poet. His Works are, Epicedium in obitum Henrici Comitiss Derbeiensis. Oxon. 1593. qu.

The Eagles flight; Sermon at Pauls Cross, on Luke 17. 37. Lond. 1599. oct. He died at Woodstock in Oxfordshire, 2. Feb. in sixteen hundred, aged 34. or thereabouts, and was buried in St. John's coll. Chappel. Over his Grave was a Mon. soon after erected, at the charge of the President and Society, who were his Heirs; a copy of the inscription on which you may read in Hist. & Antiq. Univers. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 312. He left behind him several Sermons, which were esteemed by some, worthy of the Press, one of which I have (t) seen, written on Rom. 7. 24. Preached an. 1594.

THOMAS WILLIAMS, a Welsh-man born, 316. did spend several years among the Oxonians, but whether in Brasenose coll. where one of both his Names took the degree of Master of Arts in 1573. I cannot tell. Afterwards he entred on the Physick line, but took no degree in that Faculty, retired into his Country and practiced there. This person who was also a curious Critick in his mother-tongue, wrote, Dictionarium Latino-Britannicum. A work of many years labour; which being left imperfect in some places, was reviewed and corrected by Dr. Jo. Davies, and by him published in 1632. who tells us that the said Williams was much encouraged in his studies by the Father of Sir Rich. Wynne Knight and Baronet, to whom he did intend to dedicate, had he lived to have finished, it. He tells us also that the said Th. Williams was living and in great renown in his own Country in sixteen hundred, but when he died he adds not. I find another Tho. Williams who was elected Prob. Fellow of Merton coll. in 1562. studied Physick several years, took the degree of Bach. of that Faculty in 1575. and died in his coll. 1579. being then accounted a learned Physician. But this person was no author, and whether a Welsh-man, I cannot yet find. A third Tho. Williams was of Broadgates hall, and as the eldest Son of an Esq; took the degree of Bach. of Arts, in the beginning of July in 1592. besides several others of a later date, and another before, who wrote Rules of the Italian Grammar. Lond. 1567. &c.

HENRY CUFF a most excellent Grecian, is said by 317. an Historian (u) of no great note, to be base by Birth; meaning, I presume, that his birth was mean. If so, then let it be known from the (w) Records in the Coll. of Arms, that his birth was gentile in Somersetshire, that his Predecessors for 4 Generations before him lived at Creech near to Taunton in the said County in good esteem, and that his Ancestor Joh. Cuff, who lived sometimes at Ilchester, and sometimes at Creech, where he had good inheritances, had a Coat of Arms granted to him and his posterity by Christop. Barker Garter King of Arms, 36. Hen. 8. and so consequently was made a Gentleman. At 26 years of age, in 1586. he the said Hen. Cuff was chosen Prob. Fellow of Merton coll. (having a little before been forced to resign his Fellowship of Trin. coll. for speaking certain matters (tho true) that redounded to the great discredit of the Founder Sir Tho. Pope,) and two years after, was not only made Master-Fellow, but also M. of A. In which time he occasionally shewed himself a rare Grecian, Philosopher, and Disputant. Afterwards he was Greek Professor, and Proctor of the University, and at length Secretary to that unfortunate Count Robert Earl of Essex. As he was a person of good parts, so was he ambitious withal, and pretended to be well seen in the rules of Policy, believed by many that he was so, (because smothered under the habit of a Scholar,) especially by his great Patron, which brought him the sooner to the block. He wrote in the year 1600,

The differences of the ages of man's life. Lond. 1607. and 1633. in oct.

(t) In bib. D. Tho. Barlow, MS. (u) Will. Sanderfon in The lives of Mary Q. of Scots and K. Jam. Printed 1656. p. 238. (w) In the Visitation Book of Somersetshire, made 1573.

The original, causes, progress, and end of Man's life. — Printed with the former book, and other things which he left fit for the Press, but never published. Afterwards he being found guilty of Treason for conspiring with the said Rob. E. of Essex, to seize on the Queen and change the Government, he was hang'd at Tyburn near London, 30. March in sixteen hundred and one: So that his body being afterwards buried obscurely without a Memorial or Epitaph, be pleased to take this for him, made by (x) one that knew him well.

Doctus eras Græcè, felixque tibi fuit Alpha?

At fuit infelix Omega, Cuffe, tuum.

The execution of which person, and his unhappy end, is brought in by a certain author (y) as a very proper and suitable instance to verifie the great reasonableness of one of his advices to his Son, thus, — Mingle not your interest with a great Man's, made desperate by debt, or Court-injuries, whose breaking out prove fatal to their wisest followers and friends: averred in the last Earl of Essex but one, where (z) Merick his Steward, and Cuff his Secretary, tho of excellent parts, were both hanged. For such unconcocted Rebellions turn seldom to the hurt of any, but the parties that promote them; being commonly guided by the directions of their Enemies, as this was by (a) Cecil, whose creatures persuaded Essex to this inconsiderate attempt, &c. that is, to seize the Queen and change the Government. Thus far Francis Osborn here quoted, of whom and his Works the Reader may please by the way (if not too tedious) to know these things, That he was younger Brother to Sir Pet. Osborn, and both the Sons of Sir John Osborn of Chickland near Shefford in Bedfordshire; which Sir John and his Father did both enjoy a quiet, happy, and plentiful Fortune under Q. Elizabeth: That he was bred mostly at home, not so much as in a Free-School or University, being altogether void of such kind of Faculties that Universities afford. At ripe years he frequented the Court, became a Servant in the Pembroke Family, and at length Master of the Horse to that most Noble Count William Earl of Pembroke. In 1641. he ran with the times, having been Puritanically educated, had publick employments then, and under Oliver, conferr'd upon him; and in his last days lived in Oxon purposely to Print certain books of his composition that then laid by him, and to have an eye on his Son John, whom he got by the favour of the Parliamentary Visitors, to be Fellow of All Souls coll. 1648. Those things of his, which I have seen extant, are these, (1) A seasonable expostulation with the Netherlands, declaring their ingratitude to, and the necessity with their agreement with, the Commonwealth of England. Ox. 1652. qu. in two sh. and half. (2) Persuasive to mutual compliance under the present Government. Ox. 1652. qu. in two sh. (3) Plea for a Free State compared with Monarchy. — Printed with the former, in 4 sh. qu. (4) The private Christians non ultra; or, a plea for the Lay-man's interpreting the Scriptures. Ox. 1656. in 3 sh. and half, in qu. There is no name to it, only strongly reported to be Fr. Osborn's. (5) Advice to a Son, in two parts. The first was printed at Ox. in oct. an. 1656. and within 2 years after were five more impressions of it. The second part was printed at Ox. 1658. oct. but being not so well liked as the first, I cannot justly say whether it had a second impression. Both, especially the first, being greedily bought up, and admired in Oxon, especially by young Scholars, it was then noted among the Godly Ministers, that they did instill principles of Atheism into them. Whereupon a publick complaint being put up against the said books to the then Vicechanc. Dr. Jo. Conant, there was a proposal made to have them publicly burnt. But it taking no effect, it was ordered 27. July 1658. that no booksellers, or any other persons should sell the books; which afterwards made them sell the better. (6) Political reflections upon the Government of the Turks; to which are added in the same book or vol. A discourse upon Nich. Machiavell. — Observations upon the K. of Sweden's descent into Germany. — Discourse upon Piso and Vindex, who both conspired the death of Nero. — The greatness and corruption of the Court of Rome. — Discourse upon the election of P. Leo XI. — Political occasions of the defection from the Church of Rome. — Discourse in vindication of Mart. Luther. All these were printed at Ox. in oct. at least 3 times. (7) Traditionall Memoires on the Reign of Q. Eliz. Lond. 1658. oct. (8) Trad. Mem. on the Reign of K. James. Lond. 1658. oct. (9) Miscellany of sundry Essays, Paradoxes, and Problematical Discourses, Letters, and Characters. Lond. 1659. oct. (10) Deductions from the History of the Earl of Essex, who was executed for Treason under the Reign of Q. Eliz. Lond. 1659. oct. These are all that I have seen, and whether he hath any others published, I cannot say. After his death appeared in publick a book intit. A modest plea for an equal Commonwealth against Monarchy, &c. with other things added to it, as, An Apology for younger Brothers, and A list of Tythes. All printed twice in 1659. in qu. and oct. These three Treatises, tho they were published by another person as his, yet some Scholars, more envious than prudent, did not stick to say, that the publisher found them among the papers of Fr. Osborn (with whom he had intimate acquaintance) after his death, and disguising the Language, or making some alterations in, published, them as his own. However all that knew him well and were intimate with him, (as the writer of these matters was,) knew him able to write such a book as that was. As for Fr. Osborn he died at Nether-worton near to Deddington in Oxfordshire, in the house of Will. Draper Esq; (an Oliverian Colonel) whose Sister he had married, on the eleventh of Feb. 1653. aged 70. or thereabouts, and was buried in the Church there. Over his Grave is a Monument, with an inscription, but the contents I know not yet.

RICHARD LATEWAR, a Londoner born, 319. educated in Merchant-Taylors School, became Scholar of St. Johns coll. 1580. and eight years after M. of Arts, and a noted Preacher. In 1593. he was elected one of the Proctors of the University, being about that time Rector of Hopton in Suffolk. Afterwards he became Rector of Finchley in Middlesex, D. of D. and at length Chaplain to the illustrious Heroe, Charles Lord Mountjoy, Lieutenant of Ireland. He was a most ingenious Latin Poet, as his Epigrams, and copies of Verses, occasionally printed in books published in his life-time, do shew. He composed, Carmen apostolicum Coll. S. John Bapt. Which was restored and augmented by Rich. Andrews, M. D. and Fellow of the said coll.

Conc. Lat. ad Academicos Oxon. 1594. It was Preached when he was admitted Bac. of Div. but upon what subject, or when printed, I know not, for I have not yet seen it. What other things of his are published I cannot find; neither is there any need to be said more of him, than what the learned (b) Camden hath delivered of the overthrow of the Rebels in Ireland, near to Carlingford, given by the L. Mountjoy before-mentioned, thus, On the English side (saith he) there were slain Latewar D. of Div. and Chaplain to the Deputy, and Cranmer his Secretary, both most learned men, and for that much beloved of him, besides some others also, &c. But the time that he appoints for his death is false, for whereas he saith it was in 1600. it was not till the year following, being then buried in the Church at Armagh. Soon after 1601. was erected an honorary Monument for him in St. Johns coll. Chappel, with a handsome inscription thereon; (a copy of which you may see (c) elsewhere.) But whereas it is said, that he died on the 27. July 1601. aged 41. is false, as it seems; for (d) one that was upon the place when he received his death's wound, tells us, that he was shot at Benburb, July 16. and died the day following, an. 1601. See more in the Affania of a celebrated Lat. (e) Poet of his time, named Fitz-Geffry, wherein, among the Cenotaphs, at the end, you will find one upon this Latewar, which without flattery, was justly written.

HUGH LLOYD, a most admired Grammarian 319. of the age he lived in, was born at Llyn in Caernarvonshire, educated in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1564. promoted to the Chancellourship of Rochester in 1578. being then Bach. of the Civil Law. Afterwards he was made chief Master of Wykeham's School near Winchester before-mentioned, was admitted Doctor of his Faculty in 1588. being then noted to be not only eminent in Divinity and the Civil Law, but also for his admirable sufficiencies in the Greek and Lat. tongues. He hath written several books, but all that I have seen are only these following, viz.

Phrases Elegantes ex Caesaris Commentariis, Cicerone aliisque, in usum Scholæ Winton. Oxon. 1654. in a large oct.

Dictata. Printed with the former. Both which were published by John Lamphire M. of A. sometimes Fellow of New coll. afterwards Dr. of Physick, History Professor and Principal of Hart hall. The said Dr. Lloyd departed this mortal life, on the 17. Octob. in sixteen hundred and one, and was buried in New coll. outer Chappel. See his Epitaph in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 153. He had a Brother named Joh. Lloyd who was Fellow of All. coll. Doctor of the Civil Law, and Judge of the Admiralty; but whether he was of any kin to Hugh Lloyd D. D. of Barton-Segrave in Northamptonshire, who succeeded Dr. Will. Swadon in the Archdeaconry of Worcester, 18. Aug. 1623. and died in July 1629. I know not.

EDWARD GRANT or Graunt the most noted Latinist and Grecian of his time, was educated in Grammar learning in the coll. School at Westminster, spent several years in the study of Logick and Philosophy, either in Ch. Ch. or Broadgates hall, took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being completed in 1572. and about that time became the learned Master of the said School; whence, by his sedulous endeavours, many persons went away well grounded in learning, who were afterwards eminent in Church and State. In 1577. he was made Canon or Prebendary of the twelfth and last Stall in the collegiate Ch. at Westminster, in the place of Tho. Wats D. D. (who had succeeded in that Stall Gabr. Goodman 1561. in which year the said Goodman was made Dean,) and about that time being admitted Bach. of Div. of Cambridge, was incorporated in that degree with us, in the year 1579. He was afterwards Doctor of that Faculty, but not of this University, was esteemed a most noted Latin Poet, as several of his copies of verses, printed in various books, shew, and was well skill'd in all kind of humane literature. He hath written,

Greca lingua specilegium, &c. Lond. 1575. qu. Contracted by his learned Usher Will. Camden. He also collected, viewed, and received and corrected all Rog. Aschams Epistles and Poetry, and at the end added of his (Graunt's) composition, Oratio de vita & obitu Rogeri Aschami, ac dictionis Elegantio, cum adhortatione ad Adolescentulos. Lond. 1577. oct. What else he hath published I know not, nor any thing material of him besides, only (1) That here resigning his Mastership of Westm. School about the Month of Feb. 1592. was succeeded therein by Will. Camden. (2) That dying in Sept. or Octob. in sixteen hundred and one, was buried in St. Peters Church at Westminster; whereupon his Canonry was bestowed on Will. Barlow D. D. Now I am got into the Name of Graunt, I cannot without the guilt of concealment, but to let you know some things of the most ingenious person (considering his education and employment) that his time hath produced. His name is Joh. Graunt, born at the sign of the Seven Stars in Birch-lane, within the Parish of St. Michael-Cornhill in London, between 7 and 8 of the clock in the morn. of the 24. of Apr. 1620. (Son of Hen. Graunt a Hampshire man,) educated while a boy in English learning, bound an Apprentice to a Haberdasher of small wares, which Trade he mostly followed, tho free of the Drapers company. Afterwards he went through all the Offices of the City, as far as a Common-Council-man, bearing that Office two years. He was also Captain of the Trained-band several years, and Major of it two or three, and then laid down his Trade, and all publick Employments upon account of Religion. Fortho he was Puritannically bred, and had several years taken Sermon-notes, by his most dextrous and incomparable faculty in short-writing, and afterwards did profess himself for some time a Socinian, yet in his latter days he turned Rom. Catholick; in which Persuasion he zealously lived, for some time, and died. He hath written, (1) Natural and Political Observations, made upon the Bills of Mortality, &c. Lond. 1661. and 62. in qu. afterwards in oct. with several additions; done upon certain hints and advice of Sir Will. Petty. (2) Observations on the advance of Excise. And (3) something about Religion, but these two are not yet printed. He died on the 18. of April (being Easter-Even) 1674. and was buried four days after in St. Dunstons Church in Fleetstreet, in the body thereof, under the Pews, towards the Gallery on the North side, London. At which time his body was attended with a great number of ingenious persons; and among others (with tears) was that great Vertuoso Sir Will. Pettie before-mentioned. The said Joh. Graunt was an ingenious and studious Person, generally beloved, was a faithful Friend, a great Peace-maker, and one that had often been chosen for his prudence and justness an Arbitrator: But above all his excellent working head was much commended, and the rather for this reason, that it was for the publick good of learning, which is very rare in a Trader or Mechanick.

JOHN HOOKER alias Vowell, sometimes written ^{321.} Vowell alias Hooker, was born within the City of Exeter, educated in Grammar and Logick for a time in this University, either in Exeter, or C. C. coll. but whether he took a degree, our Registers, which are in the time of K. Ed. 6. very imperfect, shew not. Afterwards retiring to his Native place, he became the first Chamberlain thereof, an. 1554. about which time applying himself to the study of Astronomy, and English History, became noted in his time for them; especially after he had published his labours for the benefit of Posterity in these books following.

Order and usage of keeping the Parliaments in England. Lond. 1572. qu.

The Events of Comets, or blazing Stars, made upon the sight of the Comet Pagonia, which appeared in the month of Nov. and Dec. 1577. Lond. in oct.

An addition to the Chronicles of Ireland from 1546. where they ended, to the year 1568. Lond. 1587. fol. This addition is in the second vol. of the Chronicles, first collected and published by Raphael Holinshead, Will. Harrison and others. The said Chronicles of Ireland did begin, an. 1186. about which time Giraldus Cambrensis concluded his Irish History, and were continued by several hands to the said year 1546.

A Catalogue or History of the Bishops of Exeter, from Werestan (as he calls him) to John Woolton, an. 1579. Remitted into the third vol. of Ra. Holinshead's Chronicles, Lond. 1587. fol. pag. 1300. He also translated into English the Irish History of Giraldus before-mentioned, and put Scholias to the same; which being by him dedicated to Sir Walt. Raleigh with a large Epistle, were remitted into the second vol. of the Chronicles of Ra. Holinshead, Will. Harrison and others. Lond. 1587. fol. He also took great pains in augmenting and continuing to the year 1586. the said first and second vol. of Chronicles, which were also printed at London 1587. fol. The first impression of the said Chronicles were made at Lond. 1577. in fol. by the said R. Holinshead, descended from those of his name that lived at Boseley in Cheshire, educated in one of the Universities, was a Minister of God's Word, as I have heard, and died at Bramcote in Warwickshire, towards the latter end of 1580. Whereupon all or most of his notes, collections, books, and MSS. came into the hands of Thom. Burdet Esq; an inhabitant, if not Lord, of the said Town of Bramcote. As for our author John Hooker, he lived to a fair age, and dying in Nov. in sixteen hundred and one, was buried at Exeter. ^{1601.} He gave up his Chamberlains place about a quarter of a year before he died, and was succeeded therein by Will. Tickell. There hath been two of the Hookers that have been Mayors of Exeter, viz. Joh. Hooker in 1490. and Rob. Hooker in 1529. from one, or both, of which, I presume, our author Joh. Hooker was descended, as also Rich. Hooker the eminent author of Eccles. Policy.

CROMWELL LEA a younger Son of Sir Anth. ^{322.} Lea or Lee of Burston in Bucks. Knight, (by his Wife the Daughter of Sir Thomas Wyat Knight,) descended from the Lees of Quarendon in the said County, was educated in all inferiour Arts in this University, and afterwards travelling and spending several years in Italy, he attained to so great knowledge in the common Language of that Country, that at his return he wrote,

A Dictionary in Italian and English. — Which tho it reaches but to the Word Tralinguato, and so consequently wanteth the following Letters to the end of the Alphabet, yet it is as big as a Church-Bible. This book the author giving in MS. to the Library of St. Johns coll. in this University, (of which coll. he had been sometimes a Commoner, about its first foundation,) the Society did so highly value it, that one of them named Tho. Poticarie, M. of A. and Bach. of the Civil Law, did transcribe it in a very fair fair character. Which being so done, it was reposed in their Library as a choice thing, and is at this day among the printed books, B. 31. This Crom. Lea, who had married Mary, the Relict of Rich. Taverner, mentioned under the year 1555. died at his house in Halywell, in the North Suburb of Oxon, about the beginning of Winter in sixteen hundred and one, but where buried I know not. Whereupon this Epitaph was made on him by an Oxford Scholar,

Here lyeth old Cromwell,
Who, living, lov'd the Bum well.
When he dy'd he gave nothing to the poor,
But half to his Bastards, and half to his Whore.

323. JOHN CHARDON or Charlton a Devonian born, became a Sojourner of Exeter coll. in 1562. or thereabouts, made Probationer thereof, 3. March 1564. perpetual Fellow in Octob. two years after, entred into Holy Orders in Aug. 1567. being then Bach. of Arts, and resigned his Fellowship on the 6. Apr. in the year after. About that time being beneficed in his own Country, particularly within the City of Exeter, he proceeded soon after in Arts, became a noted Preacher, and wonderfully followed for his edifying Sermons. In 1581. he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, (or the Epistles of St. Paul, as it was then among the Puritans stiled,) proceeded in Divinity five years after, and in 1596. in May, he was consecrated Bishop of Down and Connor, in the Church of St. Patrick at Dublin in Ireland. All that are extant of his writing, are only,

Several Sermons, Preached in the Churches of St. Peter in Exeter, St. Maries in Oxon, and at S. Pauls-Cross in the City of Lond. viz. (1) Sermon of the World, on Luke 21. 25. Lond. 1580. oct. (2) Serm. at S. Mar. in Ox. on Joh. 9. 1, 2, 3. Ox. 1586. oct. (3) Serm. at S. Mar. Ox. 11. Dec. 1586. on Joh. 9. 4, 5, 6, 7. Lond. 1587. oct. (4) Serm. at Pauls-cross 29. May 1586. on Matth. 6. 19, 20, 21. Lond. 1586. oct. (5) Fun. Serm. on 1 Thes. 4. from 13. to 18. verse. Ox. 1586. oct. He hath another Sermon extant on Isay 1. ver. 1, 2. Lond. 1595. but this, and others, which he hath printed, as I conceive, I have not yet seen nor do I know any thing of him besides, save only that he died in Ireland, in sixteen hundred and one; but where buried, unless in his own Cath. Church, I cannot tell. The next in order, according to time, to be mentioned, is a most reverend and learned Divine, and an ornament to his profession in the long Reign of Q. Elizabeth.

324. ALEXANDER NOWELL, the second Son of John Nowell of Great Moorley in Lancashire, was born in that County in 1511. and at 13 years of age became a Commoner of Brasnose college, where profiting much in Grammar, Logick, and Philosophy, took the degree of Bach. of Arts in 1536. He was afterwards Fellow of that house, Master of Arts, and grew very famous for Religion and Learning. In the Reign of Ed. 6. and perhaps before, he taught School at Westminster, where he very zealously trained the Youth up in Protestant principles; but when Q. Mary began to Reign, he, among other Divines, much averse to the R. Cath. Religion, did leave the Kingdom for Conscience sake, and lived, as opportunity served, in Germany. Upon the coming of Q. Elizabeth to the Crown, he returned, and was made the first Canon of the seventh Stall in the collegiate Church of St. Peter in Westminster, an. 1560. and soon after about the beginning of the year 1561. he was made Dean of St. Pauls Cathedral in the place of Will. May, L. L. D. Master of Trin. coll. in Cambr. (the same, who in 1549. had a hand in compiling the first Edition of the Common Prayer, and in correcting the third Edit. in 1559.) So that Nowell, being settled in the Deanry of Pauls, resigned Westminster, and afterwards became a frequent and painful Preacher, and a zealous writer against certain English Catholics that had fled their Country upon account of Religion. For 30 years together he Preached the first and last Sermons in the time of Lent before the Queen, wherein he dealt plainly and faithfully with her, without dislike. In 1594. Apr. 28. he was installed Canon of Windsor, in the place of Rich. Reue Bach. of Div. deceased, in the year after, Sept. 6. he was elected Principal of Brasnose coll. and in Oct. following he was actually created D. of Divinity, with allowance of Seniority over all the Doctors then in the University, not only in regard had to his age, but Dignity in the Church.

He was, in the time he lived, a learned Man, charitable to the poor, especially if they had any thing of a Scholar in them, and a great comforter of afflicted Consciences. His Works are,

A reproof of a book intit. A proof of certain Articles in Religion, denied by Master Jewel, set forth by Tho. Dorman Bach. of Div. Lond. 1565. qu.

Reproof of Mr. Dormans proof continued, with a defence of the chief authority of Princes, as well in causes Ecclesiastical, as Civil, within their Dominions, by Mr. Dorman maliciously impugned. Lond. 1566. qu.

Confutation as well of Mr. Dormons last book intit. A defence, &c. as also of Dr. Saunders Causes of Transubstantiation. Lond. 1567. qu.

Catechismus, sive prima institutio disciplinae pietatis Christianae, Latine explicata. Lond. 1570, 71, 74, 76. qu. There again 1590. 1603. &c. oct. Translated into English by Tho. Norton, Lond. 1571. and into Greek by Will. Whittaker an. 1575. &c.

Catechismus parvus pueris primum, qui ediscatur, proponendus in Scholis. Lond. 1574. 78. oct. &c. Written in Lat. and Greek. Translated also into English by another person. — Lond. 1587. oct. &c. and into Hebrew by Anon, but this last I have not yet seen.

Conference had with Edm. Campian Jesuit, in the Tower of Lond. ult. Aug. 1581. Lond. 1583. qu. See more in Joh. Redman under the year 1551. This reverend Dr. Nowell died in a good old age, on the 13. Feb. in sixteen hundred and one, and was buried in the Chappel of the Virgin Mary within the Cathedral of St. Paul. Soon after was a comely Monument set over his Grave, with an inscription thereon in Prose and Verse, a copy of which you may see in Joh. Stow's Survey of London, and elsewhere: And of his benefaction to Brasnose coll. and other matters you may read in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Ox. lib. 2. p. 214. b. 225. b. In his Deanry of St. Paul succeeded Joh. Overhall, the King's Professor of Div. in Cambridge, a general learned Scholar, preferred to it by the commendations (to the Queen) of Sir Fulk Grevill his Patron.

325. HARBERT WESTPHALING, Son of Harbert Westphaling, Son of Harbert a Native of Westphalia in Germany, from whom, by a popular Error, the Son who lived mostly in Lond., and this his Grandson, were called Westphaling. At 15 years of age, in 1547. which was the year after K. Hen. 8. had put his last hand to the foundation of Ch. Church, he was made one of the Students thereof, took the degrees in Arts, (that of Master being compleated in 1555.) applied his studies to the Supreme Faculty, was admitted to the reading of the Sentences in Dec. 1561. and in the beginning of March following he was installed Canon of the said Church, being about that time Rector of Brightwell near Watlington in the County of Oxon. In 1565. he was licensed to proceed in his Faculty, in the year following he learnedly (a) disputed before Q. Elizabeth in S. Maries Church, and in the beginning of 1577. he was installed Canon of Windsor, in the place of Dr. Ant. Russh deceased. In 1585. Dec. 12. he was consecrated Bishop of Hereford, (in which County he had several Lands and Inheritances,) where, as throughout the Nation, he was esteemed a person of great gravity, integrity, and most worth of his Function. He hath written,

Treatise of Reformation in Religion, divided in seven Sermons, Preached in Oxford, on Matth. 21. 12, 13. Lond. 1582. qu.

Two Sermons touching the Supper of the Lord, on 1 Cor. 11. 28, 29. and on Matth. 26. v. 26, 27, 28. Lond. 1582. qu. and perhaps other things, but such I have not yet seen. He paid his last debt to Nature on the first day of March in sixteen hundred and one, and was buried in the North transept of the Cath. Ch. at Hereford. In his Will he bequeathed the Mannour of Batche in Herefordshire to Jesús coll. for the maintenance of two Fellows and two Scholars, conditionally that his kindred be preferred to the said places before all others. His picture is painted on the Wall in the School-Gallery at Oxon, next to that of Dr. Eedes, as having in his time been a famous Theologist.

326. CHRISTOPHER GOODMAN was born in Cheshire, particularly, as I conceive, within the City of Chester, became a Student in Brasnose coll.

(a) See Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 305. b.

1536. aged seventeen or thereabouts, took one degree in Arts, but was never, as I can yet find, Fellow of that House. In 1544. he proceeded in that faculty, and three years after was constituted one of the Senior Students of Ch. Church, being then newly founded by K. Hen. 8. In the year 1551. or thereabouts, he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, at which time he was (as 'tis said) Reader of the Divinity Lesson in the University, but whether of that founded by the Lady Margaret, or by K. H. 8. seems as yet doubtful. In the beginning of Q. Mary he left the University, and went with several Academians beyond the Sea for Religion sake, but dissenting from the chief body of them assembled at Frankfort, he did with Whittingham, Knox, Gilby, &c. retire to Geneva, as may be farther seen in a book intit. A brief discourse of the troubles began at Frankfort, &c. printed 1575. qu. wherein, as in other places, the turbulent spirit of this person may be discern'd. A noted (b) author tells us that he was a most pernicious fellow, for that he not only practiced against the life of Q. Mary, but wrote also that most seditious known Libel against the regiment of Women, &c. This Goodman (I say) being a furious hot spirit, and guilty in conscience of wicked attempts (but especially, as was thought, of the conspiracy with Will. Thomas, that would have killed Q. Mary) ran out of England to Geneva, in the beginning of Q. Maries reign, and there joined with Joh. Knox (as quiet a spirit as himself) that was the firebrand of his country of Scotland, &c. The truth is, Goodman was a most violent Nonconformist, and for rigidness in opinion, he went beyond his friend Calvin, who remembers, (c) and mentions, him in his Epistles, 1561. There was no man more ready than he, (as Knox was for Scotland) to oppose in the beginning of Q. Eliz. the settlement of the Ch. of England according to the way used in the time of K. Ed. 6. What his preferments were, when the said Queen came to the crown, and where (if any) they were, unless at Chester, or in the county, I know not. Sure I am that when Sir Hen. Sydney was Deputy of Ireland, and had much to do with the popish rebels there, Goodman shewed his faithful diligence in that service. His works are these:

How superiour powers ought to be obey'd of their subjects, and wherein they may be lawfully by Gods word, be disobey'd and resisted. Genev. 1558. in tw. &c. W. Whittingham hath a preface to it.

The first blast of the trumpet against the monstrous regiment of Women—Printed beyond Sea 1558. oct. wherein Qu. Mary is called a wicked woman, traitress, bastard, Proserpine, &c. But most of his doctrines in the said two books, being destructive to the sacred persons of princes, and their state and government, were not only (d) condemned by the Episcopal Clergy of England in the time of Q. Elizab. and after, but also by the judgment and decree of the University of Oxon. past in their convocation held 21. Jul. 1683. Nay, The first blast of the trumpet, &c. was esteemed by all, especially the R. Catholics, a wicked, seditious and base book, and not fit to be taken into the hands of a Christian, and the rather for this reason, because as a (e) Poet of that time saith,

No Queen in her Kingdom, can or ought to sit fast,
If Knocks or Goodmans books blow any true blast.

He hath also written,

A commentary on Amos—This I have not yet seen: Nor can I say any thing else of him, only that when he laid on his Death-bed at Chester, in sixteen hundred and two, he was visited by Mr. Jam. Usher (afterwards Archb. of Armagh) at what time he came from Ireland into England to buy books for Dublin Library; several of whose stories he heard with great delight, which he would afterwards, when an ancient man, repeat to his friends. He the said Goodman died that year, and was, as I have been informed by some of his relations, buried in the Church of St. Werberg in Chester. His sometimes friend and crony Joh. Parkhurst hath an (f) Epigram upon him, which you may take instead of an Epitaph.

Nemo bonus, Servator ait, sed solus Olympum

Qui regit, is bonus est: Gudmane, nemo bonus.

Yet an English Presbyterian (g) who saith that Goodman was a learned Scotch Divine; was according to his name good and holy.

WILLIAM HARRYS became Fellow of Lin. 327. coll. about 1567. being then Bach. of Arts: Afterwards taking the degree of Master, he left the Coll. his friends, religion, and the little all he had, and went to the English College then newly erected at Doway, where spending divers years in the study of Theology, was at length made a Priest. Afterwards returning to his native country to serve the afflicted Catholics and gain Profelytes, lived there several years, and composed a large volume intit.

The Theatre or Mirrour of the most true and ancient Church of Great Britaine, founded by Apostolical men, and propagated from generation to generation, even to our time, by most holy Doctors and Catholics, in 10 books—What else he wrote I find not, nor any thing material of him besides, only that he died in England in sixteen hundred and two. Contemporary with him was Thomas Marshall, Bach. of Arts 1562. and about that time Fellow of the said college; but soon after leaving his Fellowship, he went to Louaine, where he entred into the Society of Jesus. Afterwards he went to Doway, where he spent 9 years in reading and explaining Philosophy, and at length became Confessor to the English coll. at Rome, where he died in 1589. leaving behind him the character of a learned person.

HAYWARD TOWNSHEND eldest Son 328. of Sir Hen. Townshend Knight, Justice of Chester, by Susan his first Wife, daughter of Sir Rowland Hayward of London Knight, was a Shropshire man born, became a Gentleman Commoner of St. Maries Hall, about the beginning of the year 1590. took one degree in Arts, being about that time a Student in the Municipal Law in Lincolns-Inn, and was afterwards a Barrester. In 1601. he was elected a Burgess for Bishops Castle in his own country, to serve in that Parliament which began at Westminster 27. Oct. the same year, where shewing himself an observing man, made an Historical collection of the proceedings therein, to which adding other collections for three Parliaments preceeding, viz. (1.) For that which began 4. Feb. 1588. (2.) For that which began 19. Feb. 1592. and thirdly, for that which commenc'd 9. Feb. 1597. he made a compleat collection in folio. At length when the press was open, and the author had been dead many years, his labours were published under this title:

Historical collections: or, an exact account of the proceedings of the four last Parliaments of Q. Elizabeth, wherein is contained the compleat Journals both of Lords and Commons, taken from the original records of their Houses. As also the more particular behaviours of the worthy Members, during all the last notable sessions, &c. Lond. 1680. fol. In the title of which book the publisher hath set down Heywood, instead of Hayward, Townshend: whose time of death tho unknown to me, yet sure I am that he died without Issue, some years before 1623. See more in Will. Monson under the year 1606. In 1681. was published in octavo a book intit. The connexion, being choice collections of some remarkable passages in K. James his reign, &c. which may supply the vacancy between Townshend and Rushworths collections; but who the author of it was I cannot tell. 'Tis a trite thing.

WILLIAM FULBECK a younger Son, if I 329. mistake not, of Thom. Fulbeck who died in his Mayoralty of the City of Lincoln 1566. was born in that City, particularly, as it seems, in the parish of St. Benedict, wherein his Father lived and died, became a commoner of St. Albans Hall in 1577. aged 17. admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. 23. January 1579. took the degree of Bach. of Arts two years after, and then translated himself to Gloucester Hall: Where continuing a severe Student till he had taken the degree of M. of Arts, and had compleated it by standing in the Aet 1584. he went to Greys-Inn in Holbourn near to London, where he addressed himself to the study of the Municipal Laws; and as 'tis said, had the degree of Doctor of the Civil Law conferr'd on him elsewhere, but at what place, or by whom, I cannot yet find. He hath written,

Christian Ethicks: or, Moral Philosophy, containing the difference or opposition of vertue and voluptuousness. Lond. 1587. oct.

An historical collection of the continued Factions, Tumults and Massacres of the Romans and Italians, during the space of 120 years, before the peaceable Empire of Augustus Cæsar, &c. Lond. 1600. oct. and 1601. in qu.

A parallel or conference of the Civil Law, the Canon Law, and the Common Law of this Realm; wherein the agreement and disagreement of these three Laws, and the causes and reasons of the said agreement are opened and discussed in sundry Dialogues. Lond. 1602. qu. in 2 parts. But this book lying dead on the Bookfellers hands, he put a new Title to the first part, as if the whole had been reprinted at London 1618. but to the second not, leaving the old Title bearing date 1602.

The Pandects of the Laws of Nations; or, the discourses of the Matters in Law, wherein the Nations of the World do agree. Lond. 1602. qu. What else he hath written I know not, nor when, or where, he died. One ^{Clar.} ^{1602.} Henry Fulbeck, related to the said William, hath published, A direction or preparation to the study of the Civil Law; wherein is shewed what things ought to be observed, and what ought to be eschewed and avoided. Printed at Lond. in oct. much about the time that the former was.

^{330.} SAMPSON ERDESWICKE, Son of Hugh Erdeswicke Esq; was born at Sandon in Staffordshire, studied in the condition of a Gent. Com. in Brasnose coll. (b) in 1553, and 54. (1. and 2. of Q. Mary,) where he laid the foundation of some learning that advanced him to greater in future times. Afterwards he retired to his Patrimony at Sandon, where applying his Muse to that kind of learning which his genie led him to, became at length a Gentleman well accomplished with many vertuous qualities. He was very well vers'd in Histories, but more in Antiquities, especially in those of his own County; and therefore stiled by the learned Camden, (i) A very great Lover and diligent Searcher of venerable Antiquity, adding, that in this regard he is no less worthy of remembrance, than for that he is directly in the Male-line descended from Sir Hugh Vernon, Baron of Shipbrook, the name being changed, by the use of that age, according to sundry habitations, first into Holgrave, and afterwards into Erdeswicke. At length for the tender respect he had to his Native Country, and desiring much the honour of it, wrote,

A short view of Staffordshire, containing the Antiquities of the same County.—MS. The beginning of which is, Sir, having disposed with my self to take a farther view of the Shires of Staffordshire and Chester, &c. It was began about the year 1593. and continued by him to his death, from ancient Evidences and Records, with brevity, clearness, and truth. The original of this, or at least a copy, is in the hands of Walt. Cherwind of Ingestre in Staffordshire Esq; who is, and hath been several years, in the collecting of the Antiquities of that County.

Collections of Genealogies, Monuments, Arms, &c.—MSS. Some of which are in the hands of the said W. Cherwind, and elsewhere, and have been used by divers Antiquaries. It is said also that our author Erdeswicke wrote a book intit. The true use of Armory, published under the name of Will. Wyrley, an. 1592. (as I shall more at large tell you hereafter,) but let that report remain with its author, while I tell you that Erdeswicke submitted to the stroke of death on the eleventh of Apr. in sixteen hundred and three, and was buried under a goodly Monument of Free-stone, with his proportion thereon, erected by himself in his life-time, in the Church of Sandon before-mentioned. Which Church was, a little before, new glazed and repaired by him. See more of him in William Wyrley among these Writers, under the year 1617.

^{331.} THOMAS D'OYLIE descended from a right ancient Family of his name living in Oxfordshire, was born in that County, elected Probationer-Fellow of Magd. coll. an. 1563. and after he had taken the Magisterial degree, entred on the Physick line, travelled and became Doctor of his Faculty in the University of Basil. Afterwards settling in London, he became one of the College of Physicians, and much frequented for his successful Practice in his Faculty. He had a chief hand in a book intit.

Bibliotheca Hispanica; containing a Grammer with a Dictionary in Spanish, English, and Latin. Lond. 1591. qu. in two parts. This book was published by one Rich. Percyvall Gent. who had another hand in it, yet with the advice and conference of Dr. D'oylie, who dying in the beginning of the year sixteen hundred and three, was buried in the Church of Little S. Barthelmew in London, leaving then behind him a Son named Francis, born 8. Feb. 1597. and a daughter married to Hugh Cressy a Counsellour, Father to Hugh Cressy a Benedictine Monk.

(b) Reg. 1. coll. Anean. fol. 91. a. (i) In Britannia, in com. Staff.

WILLIAM GILBERT, Son of Hierom Gilbert of Colchester in Essex, was born there, and educated in both ^{332.} the Universities, but whether in Oxon first or in Cambridge, I cannot justly tell. Afterwards he travelled beyond the Seas, where, I presume, he had the degree of Doctor of Physick conferred upon him, and at his return being famed for his learning, depth in Philosophy, and admirable skill in Chymistry, became one of the Coll. of Physicians in Lond. and Physician in Ord. to Q. Elizabeth, who had so high a value for him, that she allowed him an annual Pension to encourage his studies. He hath written,

De magnete magneticisque corporibus & de magno magnete tellure; Physiologia nova. Lond. 1600. fol. To which book the author added an Appendix of 6 or 8 sheets, but whether printed I cannot tell.

De mundo nostro sublunari, Philosophia nova. Amstel. 1651. qu. Published from a MS. in the Library of the Famous Sir Will. Boswell Knight. He also was the first that invented the making, description, and use of the two most ingenious and necessary instruments for Sea-men, to find out thereby the Latitude of any place upon the help of the Sun, Moon, and Stars. Which invention was published by one Tho. Blondeville,—Lond. 1602. qu. This Dr. Gilbert gave way to fate in the Summer time in sixteen hundred ^{1603.} and three, having always lived a single life: Whereupon his body was buried in the Parish Church of the Holy Trinity in Colchester, in which Parish he was born, and accounted the chief person thereof. By his last Will and Test. he gave all his books in his Library, his Globes, Instruments, and Cabinet of Minerals to the Coll. of Physicians; which part of his Will was exactly performed by his Brethren, viz. William (so he is written in his Will) a Proctor in the Arches, Hierom, Ambrose, and George, who participated of his Estate. The picture of this famous Doctor, drawn to the life, is hanging in the School-Gallery at Oxon, which shews him to have been of stature tall, and of a cheerful complexion.

JOHN LLOYD, or Lhwyd, nearly related to ^{333.} Humph. Lhwyd, mentioned under the year 1570. was born in the ancient Borough of Denbigh in Denbighshire in Wales, educated in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1579. took the degrees in Arts, was Junior of the Art in 1585. and soon after became an eminent Preacher. In 1595. he proceeded in Divinity, became Vicar of Writtle in Essex, on the death of Dr. Maschiart, 1598. and was in high esteem there, in the Neighbourhood, and the University, for his rare Learning and excellent way of Preaching. He hath published, Interpretatio Latina, cum Scholiis in Flav. Josaphum de Macabæis, seu de rationis imperio, &c. Oxon. 1590. oct. Done by the help of an excellent Exemplar, more corrected and compleat than ever before. He also was the first that published Barlaamus de Papa Principatu, Græcè & Latine. Oxon. 1592. What other things he hath written and published, I know not, nor any thing else material of him, only this, that he paid his last debt to Nature at Writtle before-mentioned, in sixteen hundred and three, and was buried ^{1603.} in the Church there. He was succeeded in that Vicaridge by Matthew Davies Doct. of Div. by the gift of the Warden, and the Society of New college, of which he was Fellow, and continued there to the time of his death, an. 1624. Soon after succeeded Dr. Joh. South the King's Professor of the Greek Tongue in this University.

EDWARD PHILIPS was entred a Student ^{334.} into Broadgates hall (now Pembroke coll.) in 1574. took the degrees in Arts, and became a Preacher at St. Saviours in Southwark near to London, where he was by those of his large Auditory (mostly zealous Puritans) esteemed A person zealous of the truth of God, powerful in his calling, faithful in his message, powerful in his Speech, careful of his flock, peaceable and blameless in his life, and comfortable and constant in his death. While he lived, it doth not appear that he published anything, but after his death a certain Gentleman of of Greys-Inn named Hen. Yelverton (afterwards a Judge) Son of Judge Christopher Yelverton, published,

Two and thirty godly and learned Sermons. Lond. 1605. qu. The first of which is on Matth. 1. ver. 1. (2.) On Matth. 1. 18, 19, 20, 21, &c. All which Sermons were taken from the authors mouth by the pen of the said Yelverton. This Edm. Philips who was a zealous Calvinist (as Yelverton then was, and both bitter enemies to popery) died, as I guess, in sixteen hundred and three, or thereabouts, and received sepulture in the Church before mention'd. Whether any thing else, besides the said Sermons were published after Philips his death, that were of his speaking or writing, I cannot tell.

335. HUMPHREY ELY brother to Will. Ely sometimes president of S. Johns coll. was born in Hersfordshire, and from being a Student in Brasnose, was chose Scholar of S. Johns coll. before mention'd, in 1566. But before he took a degree, or (as I think) was made Fellow, he left that place, and giving a farewell to his friends, country, and religion, he crossed the Seas, settled at Doway, studied the Civil Law and became Licentiat therein. Afterwards he went to Rome, with his great friend Dr. Will. Allen, where being made Doctor of his faculty, he returned into France, and settling at Rheimes, was wholly taken up for a time in the correcting and printing the said Allens books. At length upon the breaking out of the civil dissentions in that country, he was called into Lorraine in 1588. About which time he was made the publick and the Dukes professor of the Civil Law in the University of Pont à Mousson, where he continued till the day of his death. He was by those of his religion esteemed a wise and learned Priest, of sincere honesty, void of dissimulation, full of zeal to the truth, and equity, &c. But that which is mostly to be noted of him, is that upon a controversie that (k) arose among the English popish Clergy concerning the receiving of an Archpriest into England, and the power that was to be allotted to him, he wrote, with a long preface to it, Certain brief notes upon a brief apology set out under the name of the priests, united to the Archpriest. Paris about 1602-3. in tw. and oct. which book (written against Fa. Persons) I once saw among many other rarities of the like nature in Balliol coll. Library, given thereunto by that curious collector of choice books Sir Tho. Wendy of Haselingsfield in Cambridgeshire, Knight of the Bath, sometimes Gentleman commoner of the said House. Our author Ely hath written other books, as 'tis said, but such I have not yet seen, nor can I say any more of him at this time, only that he dying at Pont à Mousson on the Ides of March in sixteen hundred and three, was buried there in the church of the Nuns called Clarisse, that is of the order of S. Clare. Over his grave was soon after a monument put, with a large inscription thereon, which for brevity sake I shall now omit.

336. THOMAS FLOYD a Welsh-man became a Butler or Commoner of New Inn in the beginning of 1589. took one degree in Arts, which being compleated by Determination, he translated himself to Iesus coll. and as a member and fellow of that house took the degree of Master, and afterwards wrote,

The picture of a perfect Commonwealth, describing as well the offices of Princes and inferiour Magistrates over their Subjects, as also the duties of Subjects towards their Governours, &c. Lond. 1600. in tw. He hath written, as 'tis probable, other things, but what, I cannot tell, only certain Latine Poety scattered in several books, particularly in that intit. Academia Oxoniensis pietas erga Jacobum Regem an. 1603. I find three or more of both his names, his contemporaries, and Welsh-men also of Iesus college, but whether either of them hath any thing extant I cannot tell.

337. JOHN CHAMBER a person for his life and learning worthily honoured by all that knew him, was born in Yorkshire, and in the year 1569. was, tho Merton coll. had then no Lands in that county, chosen purely for his merits, by the consent of all the Society, Probationer-Fellow of the said house. In which place, as also in that of Bach. fellow, he went beyond all of the same election for subtile disputations, and knowledge in the Greek tongue. After he had taken the degree of Master, in 1573. he applied his Muse to the study of Medicine and Astronomy; about which time he read publicly on the Almagest of Ptolomy. In the year 1582. he became fellow of Eaton coll. near to Windsore, being then in holy orders, and two years after supplicated the congregation of Ven. Regents, that he might be admitted to the reading of any of the books of Hypocrates: But whether he was admitted, it appears not in any of the registers of that time. In 1601. he being then fam'd for his learning, he was made canon of Windsore in the place of Rog. Browne B. D. (sometimes of Kings coll. in Cambridge) deceased; which, with Eaton, he held to his dying day. He hath written,

Scholia ad Barlaami Monachi Logisticam Astronomiam. Par. 1600. qu. Which book he also translated from Greek into Latin,

Treatise against Judicial Astrology. Lond. 1601. qu. In which book having done no less than a christian learned man ought to have done, he had reason to look for another reward of his labours than he found. For instead of thanks and commendation for his labours so well placed, he was roughly entertain'd by Sir Christop. Heyden Knight (sometimes of Cambridge University, afterwards High-Steward of the Cath. Ch. of Norwyck) in his Defence of judicial Astrology. Cambr. 1603. qu. a work full of no common reading, and carried on with no mean arguments. But our author not living to see his reply published, he was some years after defended by his friend George Carleton, as I shall tell you under the year 1628. As for Sir Cristop. Heyden, who was a man of parts, and had been Knighted at the sacking of Cadiz by Rob. Earl of Essex in 1596. was of Baconsthorpe in Norfolk, and died (in the winter time as it seems) in 1623. The reply which our author wrote, but could not live to put it in the press, hath this title:

A confutation of Astrological Dæmonology, or the Devils School, in defence of a treatise intit. Against judiciary Astrology; and oppugned in the name of Sir Ch. Heyden Knight.—This is a MS. very fairly written in fol. richly bound and gilt, dedicated by the author to K. James, with an Epistle dated from Windsor Chappel 2 Feb. 1603. The beginning of which is, In the midst of all my pains and labours (most puissant and renowned Prince) &c. and the beginning of the work it self is, In the setting down and delivery of Arts, Galen, in his book intit. Ars Medicinalis, &c. 'Twas the very same book, as it seems, that was given to the King, which coming into the hands of Sir Hen. Savile, he gave it to his Mathematical Library in Oxon.

Astronomia encomium, ante annos 27. peroratum, quo tempore Ptolomei Almagestum, in Universitate Oxon enarravit. Lond. 1601. in Lat. and Engl. These I think are all the things that our author Jo. Chamber hath either written or published; and therefore I have nothing more to say, only that he yielding up his last breath at Windsore on the first of August, in sixteen hundred and four, was buried on the north side of the entrance into the Chaire of S. Georges Chappel there. Over his grave was soon after a plain marble laid, whereon is insculpt'd the figure of a man in a mantle, bearing an Escutcheon of S. Georges arms, with this inscription under him. Johanni Chamber, Socio primum collegii Mertonensis, an. 1569. dein Etonensis, an. 1582. postremum canonico hujus Ecclesie, an. 1601. Theologo, Medico, Mathematico insigni. Henricus Nevill & Henricus Savile Milites posuere. Natus apud Swillington in Com. Ebor. an. 1546. Mense Maio, obiit Etona an. 1604. ineunte Augusto; corpus hoc marmore humatum jacit. Prater alia Legavit moriens collegio Mertonensi Mille Libras. The said thousand pounds were by him given to Merton coll. to purchase Lands in Yorkshire, on this condition, that two Scholarships of the said college should be supplied out of Eaton School by the nomination and election of the provost of Kings coll. in Cambridge, and the provost of Eaton. This gift was soon after settled, and the two Scholars were successively added to the number of the 12 Postmasters of the said house of Merton.

MEREDITH HANMER Son of Tho. Hanmer, commonly called Ginta Hammer, of Porkington in Shropshire, was born in that county, but descended from the Hammers of Hanmer in Flintshire, became chaplain of C. C. coll. in Apr. 1567. took the degrees in Arts, and after some yeas spent in that house, was made Vicar of S. Leonards Shoreditch in London: Among the inhabitants of which place he left an ill name, for that he converted the brass of several ancient monuments there, into coin for his own use, as an observing (a) author tells us. In 1581. and 82. he took the degrees of Divinity; about which time he went into Ireland, and at length became Treasurer of the Church of the Holy Trinity (now called Ch. Church) in Dublin, which he kept to his dying day. He was esteemed an exact Disputant, a good Preacher, Grecian, and excellent for Ecclesiastical and Civil Histories. He hath written, Confutation and answer of the great braggs and challenge of Mr. Campion the Jesuit, containing 9 articles, by him directed to the Lords of the Privy Council. Lond. 1581. oct.

The Jesuits banner, displaying their original and success, their vow, and other their hypocrisie and superstition, their doctrine and positions. Lond. 1581. qu.

A confutation of a brief censure upon two books, written in answer to Mr. Campion's offer of disputation—Printed with The Jesuits banner, &c. soon after came out A defence of the Censure, &c. See more in Rob. Persons under the year 1610.

The Chronicle of Ireland, in two parts—The second of which was printed at Dublin in 1633. fol.

Sermon at the baptizing of a Turk, on Math. 5. 15. Lond. 1586. oct.

An Ephemeris of the Saints of Ireland.

A Chronography, with a supputation of the years from the beginning of the World unto the birth of Christ, and continued from the birth of Christ (where Eusebius chiefly, Socrates, Evagrius and Dorotheus, after him do write) unto the twelfth year of the reign of Mauritius the Emperour, being the full time of 600 years, wanting five, after Christ. All chiefly collected out of Eusebius, Socrates and Evagrius, Lond. 1585. 8c. fol. Besides these, he hath translated from Greek into English (1) The ancient Ecclesiastical histories of the first six hundred years after Christ, originally written by Eusebius, Socrates and Evagrius. Lond. 1577. 85. 8c. fol. (2) The lives, ends and Martyrdoms of the Prophets, Apostles, and 70 disciples of Christ, originally written by Dorotheus Bishop of Tyrus—Printed with the former translation. This Dr. Hanmer, as it appears, had translated all the Church Historians except Eusebius his four books concerning the life of Emperour Constantine, and the two orations subjoined thereunto, which were afterwards done by Wye Saltonstall, and printed in a fifth edition of Hanmers translation—London 1650. fol. At length Dr. Hanmer being suddenly bereft of his life by the plague raging in Dublin, before he attained to the sixtieth year of his age, in sixteen hundred and four, was, as I presume, buried in the Church of the Holy Trinity there. Joh. Weever, whom I have here quoted, tells us (b) that he ended his days in Ireland ignominiously, but what his meaning is to say so, I cannot tell, unless the plague came upon him as a judgment for the sacrilege he committed while he was Vicar of S. Leonards Church before mentioned. Qu.

339. RICHARD EDES whose name, and brothers posterity did lately, if not still, live at Sewell in Bedfordshire, was born perhaps in that county, and being made full ripe for the University in Westminster School, was elected Student of Ch. Church in 1571. where going thro the usual Classes of Logick and Philosophy, proceeded in Arts in 1578. being then Junior in comitiis, or, of the Act that year. About the same time taking the sacred function on him, he became a most noted and celebrated preacher, was admitted to the reading of the sentences in 1584. (being that year installed Preb. of Yatminster prima in the Church of Sarum) made chaplain to Q. Elizabeth, Canon of Ch. Ch. in the latter end of 1586. and in 89. Doct. of Divinity. In the latter end of 1596. he was made Dean of Worcester in the place of Dr. Franc. Willys deceased, being then and ever after, to his death (for he was also chapl. to K. James 1.) held in great admiration at Court, not only for his preaching, but most excellent and polite discourse. His younger years he spent in poetical fancies and composing of plays, (mostly Tragedies) but at riper, he became a pious and grave Divine, an ornament to his profession, and a grace to the pulpit. No two men were ever more intimate than he and Tob. Mathews Dean of Ch. Ch. for they intirely loved each other for vertue and ingenuity sake: and when Mathews was to remove to the Deanery of Durham in 1584. our author Eedes intended to have him on his way thither for ones days journey; but so betrayed were they by the sweetness of each others company, and their own friendship, that he not only brought him to Durham, but for a pleasant pennance (c) wrote their whole journey in latin verse, intit. Iter boreale, several copies of which did afterwards fly abroad. Then also, and before in their youthful acquaintance, passed so many pretty apothegms between, that if a collection had been made of, them, they would have fill'd a manual. His works are,

Iter boreale. MS. The beginning of which is Quid mihi cum Musis? quid cum borealibus oris? A copy of this written by an unknown hand, I have in my little Library.

Various Poems—MS. in Lat. and Engl.

Six learned and godly Sermons, preached some of them before K. James, and some before Q. Elizabeth. Lond. 1604. oct. The two first are called, The duty of a King, on Micah. 6. 8. (3) A fruitful Meditation upon the sickness, on Micah. 6. 13. (4) The principal care of Princes to be nurses of the Church, on Isay 49. 23. (5) Of the difference of good and evil, on Isay 5. 20. (6) Of heavenly conversation, on Phil. 3. 20, 21.

Three Sermons. Lond. 1627. qu. One of which is on Ephes. 2. ver. 19. to 33. Another on Eph. 5. 15, &c. This learned Doctor dyed at Worcester, on the nineteenth of Nov. in sixteen hundred and four, and was buried in the chappel at the east end of the choir, leaving behind him a Widdow named Margaret, daughter of Dr. Harb. Westphaling Bishop of Hereford; who soon after was at the charge of putting a monument over his Grave, with an inscription thereon, containing a dialogue in verse between the Passenger and the Monument; a copy of which, you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 266. b. In his Deanery of Worcester succeeded James Mountague D. D. of Cambridge, who being made Bishop of B. and Wells, was succeeded in the said Deanery by Arth. Lake D. D. 23. Apr. 1608. who succeeded him also in B. and W. as I shall tell you elsewhere.

THOMAS STORER Son of John Storer a 340.

Londoner, was elected Student of Ch. Ch. 1587. or thereabouts, took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1594. at which time he was had in great renown for his most excellent vein in poesie, not only expressed in verses printed in several books, made occasionally by the members of the University, but for that writ in English verse intit.

The life and death of Tho. Wolsey Cardinal. Divided into 3 parts; his aspiring, triumph and death. Lond. 1599. in ten sheets in qu. Which book being perused by the learned Dr. Alberic. Gentilis, he doth occasionally make (d) this mention of Wolsey and our author—Atq; o utinam &c. quod Wolso, edificatori magnificentissimi collegii Christi, praestitum ab ingenioso poeta est, &c. The truth is Storer obtained from the then Academians great credit for that work, (particularly from his friend Ch. Fitzgeoffry (e) the poet of Broadgates hall) but more among others for his Pastoral Aires and Madrigalls—which were afterwards remitted into a book called Englands Helicon. What other things this ingenious person hath extant, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he died in the parish of St. Michael Basinghaugh within the City of London, in November, in sixteen hundred and four, and was, as I conceive buried in the Church there. Divers copies of verses were made on his death by his acquaintance in this University and elsewhere, but are not, as I conceive, printed.

RICHARD TURNBULL was born in 341.

Lincolnshire, admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. 9. Nov. 1566. aged 16. or thereabouts, and was afterwards made Fellow, M. of Arts and a Priest. At length being beneficed in London, where he was much followed for his edifying way of preaching, wrote and published,

An exposition on the canonical Epistle of St. James. Lond. 1591. oct. in 28 Sermons.

(a) Joh. Weever in his Ancient funeral Monuments, &c. printed 1631. p. 427. (b) Ibid. ut Sup.

(c) See A brief view of the State of the Church of England, &c. by Sir Joh. Harrington—Lond. 1653. oct. p. 197. (d) In lib. cui tit. est. Laudes Academiae perusinae & Oxoniensis—Hannon. 1605. p. 41. (e) In Affanis, &c. Oxon. 1601. lib. 2.

Exposition on the Canon. Epist. of St. Jude.--- In 10 Sermons. Printed there the same year in oct.

Four Sermons on Psal. 15.--- Which Sermons, with the former Expositions, were printed in quarto at Lond. 1606. the author being then dead. I find that one Will. Turnbull L. L. Bac. was installed Preb. of Worcester 1557. which he resigned in 1558. being then Parson of Fladbury in Worcester-shire, and that he died in Jul. or Aug. 1573. Whether this William was a writer, or had any relation to Richard before-mentioned, it doth not yet appear to me.

342. WILLIAM HUBBOCKE was born in the County Palatine of Durham, elected from Magd. hall to be Scholar of Corp. Ch. coll. in the Month of Octob. 1581. aged 21 years, took the degrees in Arts, and was afterwards benefited, and in great repute for his learning. He hath written and published,

An Oration gratulatory to K. James 12. of Febr. when his Majesty entered the Tower of London in order to his Coronation, &c. Oxon. 1604. qu. The Title is in English, but the Oration is in good Latin.

Clar. 1604. Several Sermons. --- One of which is on 1 Pet. 3. 21, 22. What other things he hath published, I know not, nor the time, or place, when, and where, he died.

343. EDMOND ANDERSON a Cadet of a gentle Family living in the Parish of Broughton in Lincoln-shire, as being a younger Son of Thomas Anderson (descended from the Addersons of Scotland,) who lived first in Northumberland, and afterwards at Broughton before-mentioned, did spend some time in Oxon, (in Linc. coll. as it seems,) from whence being sent to the Inner Temple, did, by his indefatigable study, obtain great knowledge in the Municipal Laws. In the 9. of Q. Eliz. he was either Lent, or Summer, Reader of that House, in the 16. Double Reader, and in the 19. of the said Queen's Reign Serjeant at Law. In 1582. he was made L. Ch. Justice of the Common Pleas, in the place of Sir Jam. Dyer deceased; and in the year following he was made a Knight, being then esteemed a zealous promoter of the established discipline of the Church of England, as afterwards a severe prosecutor, in his Circuits, of the Brownists. In 1586. he sat in judgment on Mary Q. of Scots, at which time he was Chief Justicer of the Bench, as a certain (f) author styles him, being then a learned Man of the Law. He wrote much, but nothing is printed under his name, only,

Reports of many principle Cases argued and adjudged in the time of Q. Elizabeth in the Common Bench. Lond. 1664. fol.

Resolutions and judgments on the cases and matters agitated in all the Courts at Westminster in the latter end of the Reign of Q. Elizabeth.--- Collected by Joh. Goldefburg Esq; and by him published at Lond. in qu. This Sir Edm. Anderson died at London on the first of August in sixteen hundred and five, and on the 5. of Sept. following, his Funerals were solemnized (g) at Eymouth or Eworth in Bedfordshire, (where he had an Estate,) leaving issue several Sons, whose Posterity remaineth there, and elsewhere, to this day. In the place of Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas (h) succeeded Sir Francis Gandy of the Inner Temple.

344. RALPH WARCUPP, Son and Heir of Cutbb. Warcupp of English in Oxfordshire Esq; descended from those of Warcupp in Yorkshire, became a Student of Ch. Ch. in 1561. or thereabouts, took one degree in Arts, went to travel, and became in time the most accomplished Gentleman of the age he lived in, and Master of several Languages. Afterwards settling in his Native Country, he became Justice of Peace, and a Parliamentary Knight for Oxfordshire, in that Convention met at Westminster 43. Eliz. In the beginning of K. James's Reign, he was by him designed Ambassador either to France or Spain, and had gone, but was prevented by death. He hath written and translated several things, as 'tis said, but I have only seen his translation of Prayers on the Psalms. Lond. 1571. in sixteens, written originally by August. Marlorat. He died much lamented in the sixtieth year of his age, on the Ides of Aug. in sixteen hundred and five, and was buried in the Chancel of Nuffield near to English before-mentioned. Soon after came out a little (i) book of verses on his death, made by sixteen of the Members of New coll. (of which Will. Kingmill his Kinsman was one, and the chief,) from whence may be collected that the said R. Warcupp was the most compleat Esquire of his time.

FRANCIS TRESHAM Esq; Son of Sir Tho. 345. Tresham Knight, (who died 11. Sept. 1605.) and he the Son of Sir John Tresham of Rushton in Northamptonshire, was born in that County, where his Family was ancient, gentle, and knightly, educated either in St. Johns coll. or Gloc. hall, or both; in which he laid the foundation of some learning, that he afterwards improved by experience. He hath written, as 'tis supposed,

A Treatise against Lying and fraudulent Equivocation.--- MS. among those given by Dr. Laud Archb. of Canterbury to Bodlies Library. See more in George Blackwell under the year 1612. After the Gunpowder Treason was discovered, the said book was found by Sir Edm. Coke in a Chamber in the Inner Temple where Sir John Tresham used to lie, 5. Dec. 1605. The said Fr. Tresham wrote.

De Officio Principis Christiani. In which he maintains the lawfulness of deposing Kings, an obstinate Heretick having no right to Dominion. At length this person, who was a strict R. Catholick, being deeply engaged in the Gunpowder-Treason, (as he had before been in that of Robert Earl of Essex, in 1600.) was taken and committed Prisoner to the Tower of London, where he died of the Stranguary say some, others, that he murdered himself; yet a venerable (*) author tells us, that he being sick in the Tower, and Dr. Will. Butler the great Physician of Cambridge coming to visit him, as his fashion was, gave him a piece of very pure Gold to put in his mouth; and upon taking out of that Gold, Butler said he was poisoned. He died on the 20. of Nov. in sixteen hundred and five, aged 38. or thereabouts. Whereupon his head being cut off, and set with the rest of the heads of the Conspirators on London Bridge; his body, I suppose, was buried within the Precincts of the Chappel of St. Peter ad vincula within the Tower of London. Quere. This Francis Tresham was the person who (†) wrote the Letter to the Lord Mount-Eagle, who lived then at Bednall green near Algate, who communicating it to the Secretary of State, and he to the King, the Plot for blowing up the Parliament House was thereupon discovered. See in Tho. Habington under the year 1647.

CHARLES TURNBULL, a Lincolnshire man 346. born, was admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. 24. Dec. 1573. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1581. about which time he was made Fellow of the said coll. and became Famous for his admirable knowledge in the Mathematick Science. He hath written,

A perfect and easie Treatise of the use of the Celestial Globe, written as well for an introduction to the unskilful in Astronomy, as for the use of such as be exercised in the art of Navigation. Lond. 1597. oct. Which I think was the second Edition. He also built and made those several sorts of Dials that stand upon a Pillar in the middle of C. C. coll. Quadrangle, an. 1605. What other things he wrote, or when he died, I cannot yet find. See more in Rob. Hegge, an. 1629.

ÆGEON ASKEW, a person as well read in the 347. Fathers, Commentators, and Schoolmen, as any man of his age in the University, was born in Lancashire, became a Student in the University in 1593. aged 17. or thereabouts, Chaplain of Queens coll. in 98. being then Bach. of Arts. Afterwards proceeding in that Faculty he became a noted Preacher, and a great admirer of Dr. Jo. Raynolds, and Ric. Crakenthorpe. In the beginning of the Reign of K. James he left the college, and retiring to Greenwich in Kent, became Minister, I think, of that place. His works are,

Of brotherly reconciliation, in several Sermons Preached in Oxon. Lond. 1605. qu. The author then lived at Greenwich.

An Apology, of the use of the Fathers and secular learning, in Sermons.--- In which two books is shewed much

(i) Printed at Oxon. 1605. (*) Godf. Goodman Bish. of of Gloc. in his Review of the Court of K. James by Sir A. W.--- MS. in bib. Bodl. 75. 76. (†) Ibid. p. 73.

clar. 1605. reading in ancient authors of the Church, and indeed beyond his age. What became of him, when he left Greenwich, I know not, for he died not there, as I have been informed by an ingenious person (i) who lives in those parts.

348. THOMAS KINGSMILL born of, and descended from, an ancient and gentle Family of his name, living at Sidmanton in Hampshire, became a Student in this University in 1555. or thereabouts, and Fellow of Magd. coll. in 1560. being then Bachelaur of Arts. In 1565. he was elected Publick Orator, and in 69. he was made Hebrew Professor of the University. In 1572. he was a candidate for the degree of Bachelaur of Div. but whether he was really admitted, I find not. Soon after being distempered in brain by too much lucubration, the famous Mr. Rich. Hooker of C. C. coll. supplied his place of Professor in 1579. and for some years following. What became of him afterwards, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he recovering his Senses, wrote and published, clar. 1605. Traictatus de Scandalo. Printed with the Classicum. There was another Tho. Kingsmill who was M. of A. Preacher of God's Word at Hyth, one of the Cinque Ports in Kent, an. 1631. and the publisher of a Sermon called The Drunkard's Cup, on Prov. 23. 21. Lond. 1631. oct. but whether he hath published any thing else, or was of this University, I cannot justly say it.

A complaint against Security. Lond. 1602. oct.

Classicum Penitentiale. Ox. 1605. qu.

349. THOMAS CAREW descended from an ancient and gentle Family of his name living in Devonshire and Cornwall, was educated for a time, either in Broadgates hall, or Exeter coll. but took no degree here: Afterwards taking upon him the Sacred Function, became a Minister of God's Word, a frequent Preacher, and a publisher of,

Several Sermons, as (1) Serm. on Psal. 90. 12. (2) Serm. on S. Jo. 3. 3. called Necessity of Mans renovation. (3) Serm. on 1 Tim. 3. 16. (4) On 1 Pet. 3. 3. 4. (5) On Jam. 5. from ver. 1. to 5. Which five Sermons were published in oct. an. 1603.

clar. 1605. Four godly Sermons, viz. (1) Against Popery, or false Religion, on Matth. 16. 18. 19. (2) Against Atheism, the Enemy to Religion, on Psal. 53. 1. (3) Against Hypocrisie, the counterfeite of Religion, on Matth. 7. 5. (4) Against Apostasie, the falling from Religion, on Matth. 12. 31. 32. Which four Sermons were published at Lond. in oct. an. 1605. and dedicated by the author to Sir George Carew Baron of Clopton, Lord President of Mounster, Vice-Chamberlain and Receiver-general to the Queen's Majesty, and Lieutenant of the Ordinance.

350. FRANCIS TRIGGE, a noted and godly Preacher, did first begin to be conversant among the Oxonian Muses in University coll. an. 1564. aged 17. or thereabouts, took the degrees in Arts, entered into the Sacred Function, and at length became Rector of Welbourne near to Beekingham in Lincolnshire; in which County, if I mistake not, he was born. His Works are,

An Apology shewing that the days wherein we live are more good and blessed, than those of our Forefathers. Lond. 1589. qu.

Analysis capituli 24 Evangelii secundum Matthaeum, &c. Oxon. 1591.

Comment. in cap. 12. ad Rom. Ox. 1590.

Comment. in Rev. S. Joh. Printed 1590.

Serm. Preached at Grantham, an. 1592. on Isay 24. 1. 2. 3. Ox. 1594. oct.

Touchstone of Cath. Faith. — Printed 1599. qu.

1606. The true Catholick formed, according to the truth of the Scriptures. Lond. 1602. qu. At length paying his last debt to Nature at Welbourne before-mentioned, was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, on the 12. of May, in sixteen hundred and six. He was the first Founder of the Library at Grantham in Lincolnshire, on the wall of which are these Verses written, which you shall have instead of his Epitaph.

Optima Franciscus donavit Biblia Triggus, Welbournia quondam concionator amans.

(i) Joh. Evelyn of Sayer Court Esq.

*Plurima permultis largitus munera Sanctis, Thesaurum nobis condidit usque Sacrum.
Sic pie talis opus voluit, sic pignus amoris,
Sic Christum coluit, sic docet esse piwm.*

Beside the said Benefaction, he, and his Wive's Mother named Elizab. Hussey of Hunnington, gave to the poor of Grantham, 3. lib. 6. fol. 8. den. per an. and for so doing they are entred among the Benefactors. There goes about those parts a memorable story, concerning the prediction of the death of this our author, (a very strict Puritan in his times;) but whether any credence may be given to it, forasmuch as 'tis propagated by dissenting Brethren, I doubt it, and therefore I shall now pass it by.

JOHN ARGALL, third Son of Thom. Argall by 351¹⁴ Margaret his Wife, Daughter of John Talkarne of the County of Cornwall, was born in London, entred a Student in Ch. Ch. in the latter end of Q. Mary, took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1565. and was Senior of the Aet, celebrated the 18. of Feb. the same year. Afterwards he studied the Supream Faculty, was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, and at length became Parson of a Market Town in Suffolk called Halesworth. He was always esteemed a noted Disputant during his stay in the University, was a great Actor in Plays at Ch. Ch. (particularly when the Queen was entertained there 1566.) and when at ripe years a tolerable Theologist and Preacher. But so much was he devoted to his studies, that being wical unmindful of the things of this World, he lived and died like a Philosopher. He hath written and published, De vera penitentia. Lond. 1604. oct.

Introductio ad artem Dialecticam. Lond. 1605. oct. In which book (very facete and pleasant) the author faith of himself in the Postpredicaments (a) under Simul tempore, that whereas the great God had raised many of his Cronies and Contemporaries to high dignities in the Church, as Dr. Tho. Bilson to the See of Winton, Mart. Heton to Ely, Hen. Robinson to Carlile, Tob. Mathews to Durham, &c. yet he an unworthy and poor old Man, was still detained in the chains of poverty for his great and innumerable sins, that he might repent with the Prodigal Son, and at length by God's favour obtain Salvation. What other things he hath written, I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he was reputed, by the neighbouring Ministers of Halesworth, a great Scholar, and that being at a Feast at Cheston (a mile distant from that Town) he died suddenly at the Table. Afterwards his body being carried to Halesworth, it was buried in the Church there 8. Octob. in sixteen 1606. hundred and six. Now I am got into the name of Argall,

I must let the Reader know, that in my searches I find one Rich. Argall to be noted in the Reign of K. Jam. 1. for an excellent divine Poet, having been much encouraged in his studies by Dr. Jo. King Bishop of London, but in what house educated in Oxon, where he spent some time in study, I cannot now tell you. He wrote and published, (1) The Song of Songs, which was Solomons, metaphrased in English heroicks, by way of dialogue. Lond. 1621. qu. dedic. to Hen. King, Archd. of Colchester, Son to the Bishop of Lond. (2) The Brides ornament; Poetical Essayes upon a Divine Subject. In two books. Lond. 1621. qu. The first dedic. to Jo. Argall Esq; the other to Philip, Brother to Henry, King. (3) Funerall Elegy consecrated to the memory of his ever honoured Lord John King late B. of London, &c. 1621. He also wrote a Book of Meditations of Knowledge, Zeal, Temperance, Bounty, and Joy. And another containing Meditations of Prudence, Obedience, Meekness, God's Word, and Prayer. Which two books of Meditations were intended by the author for the Press, at the same time with the former Poetry: But the ever lamented loss of his most honoured Lord (which did change all his Joys into Sorrows, and Songs to Lamentation) did deferr their publication, and whether they were afterwards published, I know not.

HENRY BILLINGSLEY, Son of (b) Roger Billingsley of the City of Canterbury, did spend some time among the Muses in this University, as others did who were afterwards Traders in London, particularly (*) Benedict Burnham of St. Albans hall, afterwards a rich Citizen, Sheriff, and Alderman of London. But before our author Billingsley had continued there three years, (in which time, as 'tis probable, he became known to an eminent Mathematician called Whytehead, then, or lately, a Fryer of the Order of St. Augustine in Oxon;) he was taken thence and bound an Apprentice to an Haberdasher, as it seems, in London. Afterwards setting up for himself, he became so rich, that he was made successively Sheriff, Alderman, one of the Queen's Customers in the Port of London, and at length 1596. Lord Mayor thereof, and a Knight. But the chief matter which I am to let the Reader know concerning him, is, that when the said Whytehead was put to his shifts, after the demolition of his house in the latter end of Hen. 8. he was received by Billingsley into his Family, and by him maintained in his old age in his house in London. In which time he learned Mathematicks of him, and became so excellent in them, that he went beyond many of his time, whether Lay-men, or profess'd Scholars. When Whytehead died he gave his Scholar all his Mathematical observations that he had made and collected, together with his notes on Euclid's Elements, which he had with great pains drawn up and digested. Afterwards our author Billingsley translated the said Elements into English, and added thereunto plain Declarations and Examples, manifold additions, Scholias, annotations, and inventions from the best Mathematicians, both in time past, and in the age he lived in. Which being done, he published them under this title.

The Elements of Geometry of the most ancient Philosopher Euclide of Megara, faithfully translated into the English tongue: Whereunto are added certain Scholias, annotations, &c. Lond. 1570. fol. To which book Dr. Joh. Dee did put a large Mathematical Preface, containing a great deal of Learning pertaining to that Science. As for Billingsley he departed this mortal life in a good old age, 22. Nov. in sixteen hundred and six, and some weeks after his body was buried in a little Vault under his Pew in the Church of S. Catherine Colman in London. What, or where, was the end of Whytehead, I cannot tell, yet thus much I know, that what I have said relating to him and Billingsley concerning Mathematicks, I had from the Mathematical observations (c) of our Antiquary Brian Twyne, and he from the information of that noted Mathematician Mr. Th. Allen of Glowe hall, and he from an eminent Physician called Rob. Barnes M. D. who was elected Fellow of Merton coll. 29. Hen. 8. dom. 1537. and remembred, and had some acquaintance with, Whytehead and Billingsley. I find also one Rob. Billingsley, who was not long since a teacher of Arithmetick and Mathematicks, and author of a little book of Arith. and Algebra, called An Idea of Arithmetick, &c. Whether he was descended from, or related to, Sir Henry, I know not.

553. JOHN SAVILE, (elder Brother to Sir Henry) Son of Henry Savile of Over-Bradley in Staneland near to Eland (not far from Halifax) in Yorkshire, Esq; was born in that County, particularly, as it seems, at Over-Bradley, became a Commoner of Brasnose coll. in 1561. or thereabouts; where laying a considerable foundation of Acad. learning, was taken thence before he could attain to a degree in the University, and sent to the Middle-Temple, where making great proficiencie in the Municipal Laws, was called to the Bar, fell into considerable Practice, became Autumn-reader of that house, 28. Elizab. dom. 1586. Steward of the Seigniorie or Lordship of Wakefield in his own Country, called to the degree and honour of the Coif in 1594. made one of the Barons of the Exchequer, 58. and about that time one of the Justices of Assize. When K. James came to the Crown, he not only continued him in his Barons place 4. Apr. but also conferred on him, just before his Coronation, the honour of Knighthood, 23. July following, an. 1603. being then one of the Judges that was to attend that Solemnity. He left behind him, at his death, certain things fit for the Press, of which only this following is as yet made publick.

1607. Reports of divers special Cases, as well in the Court of Common Pleas, as of the Exchequer, in the time of Q. Elizabeth. Lond. 1675. in a thin fol. Printed in old French in a black character, and published by John Richardson of the Inner-Temple. Sir Jo. Savile paid his last debt to nature at London on the 2. of Feb. in sixteen hundred and six, aged 61. whereupon his body was buried in the Church of St. Dunstons in the West in Fleetstreet, London, and his heart carried to Medley in Yorkshire, where it was buried in an Isle joyning on the South side of the Church belonging to that place. Soon after was a very fair Monument erected over it, with the Effigies thereon of the Defunct in his Judges Robes, (cut out from stone,) laying thereon. The Reader is to know, that there was one John Savile a great pretender to Poetry, in the beginning of the Reign of K. James 1. patronized in his studies by his kinsman, (a young Spark,) called George Savile, Son of Sir George Savile Knight: which John wrote among several things, K. James his entertainment at Theobalds, with his welcome to London, and a salutary Poem. Lond. 1603. qu. This I thought fit to let the Reader know, lest Posterity may take him to be the same with Sir Jo. Savile before-mentioned. The Name and Family of the Saviles are numerous in Yorkshire, and pretend to be descended from the Savelli in Italy, a Family accounted by some to be the ancientest in the World; having been in Italy about 3000 years; some of which have been Consuls before, and after, the time of our Saviour. But how any of our Saviles in England can make it out, that they are descended from the said Family of the Savelli, I cannot in the least conjecture, (being the name of a Town,) nor can I believe it, no more, than that the Corbets of Shropshire are descended from the Corvini, another ancient Family in Italy.

GEORGE CORYAT received his first being in this World in the Parish of St. Thomas within the City ³⁵⁴ Salisbury, educated in Grammaticals in Wykehams School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1562. took the degrees in Arts, and in June 1570. became Rector of Odcombe in Somersetshire on the death of Tho. Reade, and at length Bach. of Divinity. In 1594, he was made Prebendary of Wartbill in the Church of York, and had some other Dignity, but what I cannot tell. He was a person much commended in his time for his fine fancy in Latin Poetry, and for certain matters which he had written, quoted by John (d) Case the Philosopher, Jam. (e) Middendorp, Joh. (f) Cay and others. All that I have seen of his composition, are only these things following.

Poemata varia Latina. Lond. 1611. qu. Published by his Son Thomas after his death, and by him intit. Posthuma fragmenta Poematum.

Descriptio Anglia, Scotia, & Hibernia. Written in Lat. verse as it seems, and dedicated to Q. Elizabeth. He died in the Parsonage house at Odcombe, on the fourth of March in sixteen hundred and six: whereupon his Son Tom, upon some design, preserving his body from stench above ground, till the 14. of Apr. following, was then buried in the Chancel of the Church at Odcombe; at which time one Gibbs Gollop M. A. who was admitted to that Rectory, 23. Mar. 1606. did officiate. Gertrude Widdow of the said G. Coryat lived many years after at Odcombe, and near to it, where dying, was buried near to the Reliques of her Husband, on the 3. Apr. 1645. (21. Car. 1.) as I have been informed by the searches, by Mr. Humph. Hody M. A. of Wadham coll. a Native of Odcombe. At the same time that George Coryat was elected Prob. Fellow of New coll. was elected also one John Munday, born at Maperton in Dorsetshire, who being a Civilian, and not conforming himself to the Protestant Religion, was ejected thence by the B. of Winchester in his Visitation of that coll. 1566. Afterwards he went beyond the Seas, was made a Seminary Priest, and sent into the Mission of England: But being taken on Hounslow-heathe, in his journey from Winchester to London, was by Sir Fr. Walsingham Secretary of State committed to Prison. Afterwards being convicted according to the Law against Seminaries, was (with 4 other Priests) executed at Tybourne 12. Feb. 1582. See more in a book intit. Concertatio Eccles. Catholica in Anglia. Printed at Trier 1594. fol. 140, 141.

WILLIAM BURTON, a Native of the City ³⁵⁴ of Winchester, was educated in Wykehams School there, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. 1563. and left that house after he had taken one degree in Arts. This person I take to be the same Will. Burton who was a Minister in Bristow, and afterwards at Reading in Berks. And author of these things following.

An Abstract of the Doctrine of the Sabbath, briefly, yet fully and plainly, set forth. Lond. 1606. oct. These are all, and enough, which I have seen published by Will. Burton a Minister in Bristow, and afterwards in Reading. Whether he be the same Will. Burton of the Parish of St. Sepulchre without Newgate in Lond. Clerk, who (h) died in that Parish in Oct. or Nov. in 1612. (16. Jac. 1.) and left behind a Widdow called Dorothy, I know not.

356. WILLIAM MONSON, a Lincolnshire Man born, a Knight's Son, and of the same Family with those of South Carleton in that County, was a Gent. Com. or at least a Commoner of Balliol coll. where he continued for at least two years. But his mind being more Martial than Mercurial, he applied himself to Sea-service, wherein he attained to great perfection, was a Captain (i) in several Expeditions against the Spaniard, Vice-Admiral and Admiral. In 1594. he was actually created Master of Arts, and in 1596. he received the Honour of Knighthood from Robert Earl of Essex at the Sacking of Cadix. In 1602. when Ireland was cleared of the Spanish Forces, he was appointed Vice-Admiral under Sir Rich. Levison Admiral to carry on the War by Sea against the Spaniard, lest they should invade England, wherein he performed most admirable Service, especially in the taking of a great Carack of 1600 Tun from them at Cezimbria against Barbarum, the Promontory of Portugal. This heroical person left behind him at his death, written with his own hand,

A true and exact account of the Wars with Spain, in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, being the particulars of what hapned between the English and Spanish Fleets, from the year 1585. to 1602. shewing the expeditions, attempts, &c. Lond. 1682. fol. dedicated to his Son John Monson. In some copies of this book the Title runs thus, A particular and exact account of the last xvii. years of Q. Elizabeth's Reign, both Military and Civil. Lond. 1682. fol. The first written by Sir Will. Monson, the other by Heywood Townshend. This worthy Knight was in great renown in the beginning of the Reign of K. James 1. and the last time I find him mentioned in his Sea-service, is in 1605. in which year he conveyed over Sea Edward the old Earl of Hertford, when he was sent Embassador to the Archduke for the confirming of a Peace: In which Voyage, it is observed by a certain (k) person that the Royal Ships of England did then (being the first time as he saith) suffer an indignity and affront from a Dutch Man of War, as he passed by them without vailing. Of the same Family was Will. Monson a Knight or Esq; (Father to Will. Monson Visc. Castlemaine) who died

EDWARD FORSET, a Gentlemans Son of 357. Lincolnshire, and of the same Family with the Forsets of Billesby in that County, became a Commoner of Line. coll. in 1590. or thereabouts, aged 18. but leaving that house without the honour of a degree, retired at length to his Patrimony, and wrote,

A comparative discourse of the bodies natural and polittick. Wherein, out of the principles of nature, is set forth the true form of a Common-weal, with the duty of the Subjects, and the right of the Sovereign, &c. Lond. 1606. oct. qu. and other things as 'tis probable, but such I have not yet seen. The next person that must begin the year of 1607. was in his time esteemed a most excellent Latinist and Poet, as was by all acknowledged.

THOMAS NEWTON, the eldest Son of Edw. 358. Newton of Butley in the Parish of Presbury in Cheshire (descended originally from the Newtons of Newton) by Alice his Wife, was born in that County, educated in Grammaticals under John Brownswerd, (whom I have mentioned under the year 1589.) sent while very young to Oxon, but making little stay there, he went to Cambridge, where he settled in Queens coll. and became so much renowned for his Latine Poetry, that he was numbred by Scholars of his time among the most noted Poets in that Language. Afterwards taking Oxon in his way, (where he continued for some time,) he retired to his own Country, taught School at Macclesfield, or near it, with good success, practiced Physick, and was encouraged in his undertakings by Robert Earl of Essex. At length being benificed at Ilford in Essex, taught School there also, as it seems, and continued at that place to the time of his death. This person hath written several things, and translated more, the titles of which, such that have come to my hands, you shall have, tho' he is rather to be numbred among the writers of Cambridge than of Oxon.

Stanbridge, and was author, as a certain (m) writer saith, of two Tragedies, viz. of the first and second parts of Tamerline the great Scythian Emperor, but false: For in Tho. Newtons time the said two parts were performed by Christop. Marlo, sometimes a Student in Cambridge; afterwards, first an actor on the stage, then, (as Shakespeare, whose contemporary he was,) a maker of Plays, tho' inferior both in fancy and merit. This Marlo, by the way it must be known, was author (besides the said two Tragedies) of (1) The rich Jew of Malta. Trag. published at Lond. by Tho. Heywood. (2) The tragical History of the life and death of Dr. Jo. Faustus, several times printed. (3) Lusts dominion, &c. Trag. Lond. 1661. oct. then published by Franc. Kirkman, Junior, a Bookseller, and a great Trader in Plays. From which Tragedy was another stolen, or at least the better part, intit. Abdelazer, or the Mores revenge. Lond. 1677. published under the name of Mistris Aphora Behn. (4) Trag. of K. Ed. 2. (5) Trag. of Dido Qu. of Carthage. In the compofure of which Tom Nash joyned with him. But in the end, so it was, that this Marlo giving too large a swing to his own wit, and suffering his lust to have the full reins, fell to that outrage and extremity, as Jodelle a French tragical Poet did, (being an Epicure and an Atheist,) that he denied God and his Son Christ, and not only in word blasphemed the Trinity, but also (as 'twas credibly (n) reported) wrote divers discourses against it, affirming our Saviour to be a deceiver, and Moses to be conjurer: The holy Bible also to contain only vain and idle stories, and all religion but a device of policy. But see the end of this person, which was noted by all, especially the Precisian. For so it fell out, that he being deeply in love with a certain Woman, had for his Rival a bawdy serving man, one rather fit to be a Pimp, than an ingenious Amoretto as Marlo conceived himself to be. Whereupon Marlo taking it to be an high affront, rush'd in upon, to stab him, with his dagger: But the serving man being very quick, so avoided the stroke, that with all catching hold of Marlo's wrist, he stab'd his own dagger into his own head, in such sort, that notwithstanding all the means of surgery that could be wrought, he shortly after died of his wound, before the year 1593. Some time before his death he had began and made a considerable progress in the Poem called Hero and Leander, which was afterwards finished by George Chapman, who fell short (as 'tis said) of the spirit and invention of Marlo in the performance thereof. It was printed at Lond. 1606. in qu. and whether before that time, I know not. But all this I speak by the by. Our author Tho. Newton, whom and his works I am further to mention, hath also translated from Latine into English. (1) A direction for the health of magistrates and students, namely, such as be in the consistent age, or near thereunto. Lond. 1574. in tw. written by Gul. Gratarolus. (2) Commentary or exposition upon the two Epistles general of S. Peter and that of S. Jude; gathered out of the lectures and preachings of Dr. Martin Luther by Anonymus. Lond. 1581. qu. (3) Touchstone of Complexions, containing most easie rules, and ready tokens, whereby every man may know as well the exact state, habit, disposition and constitution of his body outwardly, as also the inclinations, &c. of the mind inwardly. Lond. 1581. oct. written by Levinus Lemnius. (4) Third Tragedy of L. Ann. Seneca, entit. Thebais. Lond. 1581. qu. in old verse, and printed in an English character. Note that the fourth, seventh, eighth (o) and tenth Tragedys, of the said author, were in the like manner translated by John Studley of Trin. coll. in Cambridge, a noted Poet in Qu. Elizabeth's time. The fifth called Oedipus was translated by Alex. Nevill of Cambridge, the same person I mean, who was author of Kettus, sive de furoribus Norfolciensium, &c. lib. 1. an. 1582. The 9th Trag. was translated by Tho. Nuce, contemporary with Studley and Nevill, and three more by Jasp. Heywood, as I have told you elsewhere. (5) Of christian friendship, &c. with an invective against Dice-play and other prophane games. Lond. 1586. oct. written by Lamb. Danaus. (6) Trial and examination of a mans own self, &c. Lond. 1587. tw. by Andr. Hiperius. (7) Herbal of the Bible, containing a plain and familiar exposition of such similitudes, parables, &c. that are borrowed and taken from Herbs, Plants, &c. Lond. 1587. oct. by Levinus Lemnius. These are all the translations, as I conceive, that Tho. Newton hath made. At length having gotten a considerable estate by his endeavours, concluded his last day at Little Ilford in Essex in the month of May in sixteen hundred and seven, and was buried in the Church belonging to that Village, leaving behind him a Son named Abell, and a Legacy to the parishioners of the said place to buy ornaments for their Church.

59. JOHN RAINOLDS, called by Latine writers Reginaldus, the fifth Son of Rich. Rainolds, and he (who was younger Brother to Thom. Rainolds D. D. and Warden of Merton coll.) the third Son of another Richard, was born at Pinhoe, alias Pinhawes near to the City of Excester in Devonshire, became a Student in Merton coll. 1562. aged 13. or thereabouts, admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. 29. Apr. 63. Prob. Fellow 11. Oct. 66. and six years after proceeded in Acts, being then Senior of the Art, and about that time Greek reader in his college. In 1579. he was admitted to the reading of the sentence, and six years after proceeded in Divinity, being then in great esteem for his profound learning. In 1598. he was made Dean of Lincoln in the place of one Ralph Griffyn; about which time he lodged and studied in Queens coll. But being unwilling to part with an Academical Life, he changed that Deanery in the year following, with Will. Cole for the Presidency of C. C. coll. where being settled he had more leisure to follow his studies and have the communication of learned men, than at Lincoln. So temperate then were his affections, notwithstanding of very severe conversation, that he made choice rather to be Head of that House, than to be made a Bishop, which Queen Elizabeth offered to him. He was a person of prodigious reading (p) and doctrine, and the very treasury of erudition: and what Tully spoke of Pompey's noble exploits in War, that they could not be matched by the valiant acts of all the Roman Commanders in one year, nor in all years, by the prowess of one Commander; so it might be truly said of Jewell, Hooker and this our author Rainolds that they could not be parallel'd by the Students of all countries, brought up in one college, nor the Students in all Colleges, born in one County. The two former mainly opposed the enemies of the doctrine, the third, of the discipline, of the Church of England with like happy success, and they were all three in several kinds very eminent if not equal. As Jewell's fame grew from the Rhetorick Lecture, which he read with singular applause, and Hooker's from the Logic, so Rainolds from the Greek, in C. C. coll. The Author that he read was Aristotle, whose three incomparable books of Rhetorick he illustrated with so excellent a Commentary so richly fraught with all polite literature, that as well in the Commentary, as in the Text, a man may find a golden river of things and words, which the Prince of Orators tells us of. As for his memory also, it is most certain (q) that he excelled to the astonishment of all that were inwardly acquainted with him, not only for S. Augustins Works, but all classick Authors. So that in this respect, it may be truly said of him, which hath been applyed to some others, that he was a living Library and a third University. I have heard it very credibly reported, that upon occasion of some Writings which passed to and fro, between him and Dr. Gentilis then Professor of the civil Law, in the University of Oxon, that he publicly avow'd that he thought Dr. Rainolds had read and did remember more of the civil and canon Law, than himself, tho' they were his profession: Dr. Hall also Bishop of Norwich reports (r) that he alone was a well furnish'd Library, full of all faculties, of all studies, of all learning; — the memory and reading of that man were near to a Miracle, &c. The truth is he was most prodigiously seen in all kind of Learning, and had trun'd over all Writers Profane, Ecclesiastical, and Divine, all the Councils, Fathers and Histories of the Church. He was also most excellent in all Tongues, of a sharp and nimble wit, of mature judgment, indefatigable industry, exceeding therein Origen surnamed Adamantius, and so well seen in all Arts and Sciences, as if he had spent his whole time in each of them. The learned Cracanthorp tell (s) us also, that for vertue, probity, integrity, and which is above all, piety and sanctity of life, he was so eminent and conspicuous, that as Nazianzen speaketh of Athanasius, it might be said of him, to name Rainolds is to commend virtue it self. In a word, nothing can be spoken against him, only that he with Tho. Sparke were the pillars of Puritanisme, and grand favourers of Nonconformity, as the general part of writers say, yet (t) one of late date reports that Rainolds professed himself a Conformist, and died so. His works are,

JOHN POPHAM, ſecond Son of Edw. Popham³⁵¹ Eſq; of the ancient and gentle Family of his Name living at Hunworthy in Somerſetſhire, ſpent ſome time in ſtudy among the Oxonians, particularly, as it ſeems, in Balliol coll. being then obſerved to be given at leiſure hours to many Sports and Encounters. Afterwards he retired to the the Middle-Temple, lived a loose life for a time, but taking up soon after, his juvenile humour was reduced to gravity. So that making great proficiency in his studies, became a Barrester, Summer or Autumn-reader of the said Inn, an. 1568. Serjeant at Law soon after, Solicitor General in 1579. Attorney General two years after, and Treasurer of the Middle-Temple. In 1592. he was made L. Ch. Justice of the Kings Bench, as (a) Camden tells us, (tho' others (b) say of the Common Pleas) in the place of Sir Christop. Wray deceased, and the same year hereceived the honour of Knight-hood from her Majesty. While he held that honourable office of L. Ch. Justice, he administred it towards Malefactors with such wholsome and available severity, that England was beholding unto him a long time for a part of her private Peace and home Security. For the truth is, the Land in his days did swarm with Theeves and Robbers, (whose ways and courses he well understood when he was a young Man,) some of whom being condemned by him to die, did gain their Pardons, not from Qu. Elizabeth, but from K. James; which being soon discovered to be prejudicial to Justice, and the Ministers thereof, this our worthy Judge complained to the King of it: Whereupon granting of Pardons were not so often afterwards issued out. His works that are extant are these.

Reports and Cases adjudged in the time of Q. Elizabeth. Lond. 1656. fol. To which are added Remarkable Cases and Reports of other learned Pens since his death. These Reports were afterwards printed again.

Resolutions and Judgments upon Cases and Matters agitated in all Courts at Westminster in the latter end of Qu. Elizabeth. Lond. in qu. collected by John Goldeshurg Esq; one of the Protonotaries of the Common Pleas. At length our author Popham dying on the 10. of June in sixteen hundred and seven, aged 76 years, was buried in the South Isle of the Church at Wellington in Somersetshire: Which Town, he had, for several years before, graced by his habitation. By his last Will and Test. dated 21. Sept. 1604. and proved 17. June 1608. (wherein he styles himself Chief Justice of the Pleas;) he makes provision for an Hospital to be at Wellington for 6 Men, and 6 Women, and for other works of Charity. Afterwards was a noble Monument erected over his grave; with a short inscription thereon, wherein he is said to have been Privy Councillor to Queen Elizabeth and King James.

362. HENRY LYTE Esq; Son of John, Son of Tho. Lyte, was born of, and descended from, an ancient Family of his name living at Lytes-Carey in Somersetshire, became a Student of this University in the latter end of Hen. 8. about the year 1546. but in what coll. or hall, I know not as yet, or whether he took a degree, the Registers of that time, and in Ed. 6. being very imperfect. After he had spent some years in Logick and Philosophy, and in other good learning, he travelled into Foreign Countries, and at length retired to his Patrimony, where, by the advantage of a good foundation of literature made in the University and abroad, he became a most excellent Scholar in several sorts of learning, as by these books following it appears, most of which I have seen and perused.

Records of the true original of the noble Britains that sprang of the remains of the Trojans, taken out of Oblivions treasure—MS. The beginning of which is Isis the principal river of Britaine, &c. The copy of this that I saw, was written with the authors own hand very neatly, an. 1592, the character small, lines close, some words in red Ink, and others only scored with it.

The mystical Oxon. of Oxonford, alias a true and most antient record of the original of Oxford and all Britaine. Or rather thus. Certain brief conjectural notes touching the original of the University of Oxon; and also of all Britaine called Albania and Calydonia Sylva.—MS. The beginning of which is, The antient City and famous University of Oxford in Britayne, &c. The copy also of this that I saw was written with the authors own hand in 1592. like the former. The said two books being written in a small character and very close, are contain'd but in a little quantity of Paper. In the last of which, are many pretty fancies which may be of some use as occasion shall serve, by way of reply for Oxon, against the far fetch'd antiquities of Cambridge. They were both sometimes in the library of Miles Windfore formerly fellow of C. C. coll. after whose death they came into the hands of Br. Twyne, and after his, to the University of Oxon.

The light of Britaine, being a short summe of the old English History—Dedicated to Qu. Elizabeth. He also translated from French into English, The History of Plants, wherein is contained the whole discourse and perfect description of all sorts of Herbs and Plants, &c. Lond. 1578. fol. written by Rembert Dodonaus. It was then printed with Sculptures from wooden cuts; and without Sculptures by Ninion Newton—Lond. 1589. qu. printed the third time in fol. at Lond. 1619. This book which hath been taken into the hands of curious Physicians, had an Epigram (*) made on its first edition by that noted Poet Tho. Newton, friend to the Translator. What else our author Hen. Lyte hath written and translated I know not, nor any thing of him besides, only that paying his last debt to nature in sixteen hundred and seven, aged 78. was buried in the north Isle of the Church of Charlton-Makerel in Somersetshire; which Isle belongs to the Lytes of Lytes Carey. He left behind him two Sons, (or more) one was named Thomas, of whom I shall speak elsewhere, and the other Henry Lyte Gent. a teacher sometimes of Arithmetick in London, who published a book entit. The art of Tens and Decimal Arithmetick, Lond. 1619. oct.

GABRIEL POWELL, Son of Dav. Powell men³⁶³. tioned under the year 1590. was born at Ruabon in Denbighshire (of which place his Father was Vicar) and baptized there 13. Jan. 1575. educated in Grammar learning in those parts, entred into Jesus coll. in Lent term 1592. took the degree of Bach. of Arts, and then departed for a time. It must now be known that Gabr. Goodman Dean of Westminster having founded a Free School at Ruthyn in Denbighshire, in 1595. he appointed one Rob. Griffith to be the first Master thereof. To him succeeded Rich. Parry, afterwards Dean of Bangor and B. of St. Asaph, and to him, as 'tis said, Gabr. Powell our author, but in what year, I find not. Sure 'tis, that while he remained in the Country, he did exercise himself much in the reading of the Fathers, and in the studies of Philosophy, and laid a foundation for several books that he intended afterwards to publish. But being not in a possibility of completing his endeavours where he remained, he therefore retired to Oxon, became a Commoner of St. Maries hall, published certain books while he was there, and supplicated to be Bach. of Divinity, but whether really admitted, it appears not. So that his name being famous for those things he had published, especially among the Puritans, Dr. Rich. Vaughan B. of London called him thence, and made him his domestick Chaplain, gave him a Dignity, and would have done much for him had he lived, but he dying in 1607. our author lived not long after. He was esteemed a Prodigie of Learning in his time, being but a little above 30 years of age when he died; and 'tis thought, had he lived to the age of man, he would have gone beyond Jo. Rainolds or any of the learned Heroes of that age. His works are these.

The resolved Christian, exhorting to resolution, &c. Lond. 1602. oct. third edit. There again 1616. &c.

Disputationes Theologicae de Antichristo & ejus Ecclesia, lib. 2. Lond. 1605. 66. oct. In the Preface to this book, dedicated to the University of Oxford, the author doth enumerate all those of the said University that have wrote or acted against the Pope and Court of Rome. But therein having fixed most of them on certain colleges and halls, as if they had studied and been educated in them, hath committed many errors. Among them are, (1) That Gualo Britannus studied in the Kings hall in Oxon, before 1170. (2) That John Baconthorpe was of Oriel college, which cannot be, because he was a Carme, and was in great renown before that coll. was founded. (3) That Cardinal Philip Repington was of Merton coll. whereas it appears from Record that he was of Broadgates hall, now Pemb. coll. (4) That Pet. Payne and Hen. Parker were of Alls. coll. whereas they were in great renown, and far in years before that coll. was erected, &c.

De Adiaphorisis theses Theologicae & Scholasticae, &c. Lond. 1606. Translated into English by T. J. of Oxon.—Lond. 1607. qu.

Rejoinder unto the mild defence, justifying the consideration of the silenced Ministers supplication to the Parliament.

Comment on the Decalogue.— Printed in oct. This I have not yet seen, and other things, which probably he hath written. He departed this mortal life at London, in sixteen hundred and seven, but where buried, I know not yet. His Patron Dr. Vaughan Bishop of London died in the beginning of that year, and Gabr. Powell died very shortly after, as I have been informed by one or more ancient Divines that remembered him.

364. JAMES BISSE, a Somersetshire Man born, was elected Demy of Magd. coll. in 1570. aged 18. made Fellow when Bach. of Arts, in 74. and proceeding in that degree three years after, became a noted Preacher here and at London, Subdean and Canon Residentiary of Wells, where he was much followed for his fluent and eloquent way of Preaching, and well benefited in that Diocess. This person who proceeded D. of D. in 1596. hath published several Sermons, and perhaps other things, but all that I have hitherto seen are only,

Two Sermons: One at Pauls Cross, on John 6. 27. The other at Ch. Ch. in London on the same subject. Lond. 1585. oct. He died about the beginning of Dec. in sixteen hundred and seven, and was buried, as I presume, at Wells. He had a Son, or near Kinsman, of both his names, who became Rector of Crocombe in the said Dioc. 1623. on the death of Will. Rogers.

365. RICHARD PARKS, a Lancashire Man born, was chosen Scholar (Kings Scholar) of Brasnose coll. 1574. aged 16. entered into Holy Orders when Bach. of Arts, and proceeding in that degree 1585. became a godly Divine, a noted Preacher, and admirably well read in Theological and Polemical authors. His works are,

An Apology of three Testimonies of Holy Scripture, concerning the Article of our Creed, [He descended into Hell] first impugned by certain objections sent in writing by a Minister unto a Gent. in the Country, and lately seconded by a printed Pamphlet, under the name of Limbo-mastix. Lond. 1607. qu. Answered by Andr. Willet of Cambridge in his Loidromastix.

A second book containing a Rejoinder to a reply made against the former book, lately published in a printed Pamphlet intit. Limbo-Mastix. Lond. 1607. qu. The same year was published at Cambr. in qu. A Scourge for a Railer, written by the said Willet, against our author Parks. What else he hath written, it appears not, nor any thing besides.

366. THOMAS LEYSON, an eminent Poet and Physician of his time, received his first breath at Neath in Glamorganshire, was educated in Grammaticals in the famous School of Will. of Wykeham, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. 1569. took the degrees in Arts, entered on the Physick line, and in 1583. was Proctor of the University, in which year he shewed himself an exact Disputant before Alb. Alaskie Prince of Sirad, when he was entertained by the Oxonian Muses. About that time taking one degree in Physick, he settled within the City of Bath, where he became as much noted for his happy success in the practice of Physick, as before he was for his Lat. Poetry in the University. He wrote in Lat.

Poem describing the site and beauty of St. Donats Castle in Glamorganshire.— Which Poem coming to the sight of Dr. John David Rhese his worthy acquaintance, who styles it Veneratum Poema, he turned it into Welsh, and gave the author of it this character, Vir cum rei medica, tum Poetices meritisissimus. I have seen much of his Poetry scattered in several books; which, if gathered together, might make a pretty Manual. Sir John Harrington the famous Epigrammatist, had an especial respect for his learning, and so had Sir Edw. Stradling of St. Donats Castle, who never failed in all his life-time to encourage learning and ingenuity. Job. Stradling also, whom I shall anon mention, hath several Epigrams written unto him, one (*) especially, upon the sending to him a Poem of a Crott, which was paraphrased by Charles Thynne. This Mr. Leyson died at Bath, and was buried in St. James's Church there, near to the body of his Wife; but the year when, I cannot tell. I have been credibly informed by several Scholars of Wales, that he hath written divers other things, but what, they could not justly tell me.

SIMON HARWARD, whose native place is 367: to me as yet unknown, became one of the Chaplains of New coll. in 1577. was incorporated Bach. of Arts the same year, as he had stood elsewhere, but in what Univ. or Academy, it appears not. Afterwards he proceeded in Arts as a Member of the said coll. left the University soon after, and became a Preacher at Warrington in Lancashire. Thence he removed to Bansted in Surrey about the latter end of Q. Elizabeth, and thence, having a rambling head, to Tanridge in the same County, where I find him in 1604. to be a Schoolmaster, and, as it seems, a practitioner in Physick. His works are these.

Two godly Sermons Preached at Manchester in Lanc. The first containeth a reproof of the subtle practices of dissembling Neuters, and politick Worldlings, on Rom. 10. 19. The other, a charge and instruction to all unlearned, negligent, and dissolute Ministers, on Luke 20. 2. Lond. 1582. oct.

Exhortation to the common People to seek their amendment by Prayer with God.— Printed with the two Sermons before-mentioned. He purposed then also to write the second part of the aforesaid Text on Rom. 10. 19. but because he had occasion to intreat more at large of that article of Justification in another work, which he did determine to publish, he then thought good to omit it for that time.

Sermons, viz. one Preached at Crowhurst, on Psal. 1. ver. 1.— Lond. 1592. oct. and another on 1 Sam. 12. 19.— Printed 1590. in octavo. &c.

Solace for a Soldier and Sailor, containing an Apology out of the Word of God, how we are to esteem of the valiant attempts of Noblemen and Gent. of England, which incur so many dangers on the Seas to abridge the proud Power of Spain. Lond. 1592. qu.

Phlebotomy: or, a Treatise of letting Blood. Lond. 1601. oct.

Discourse concerning the Soul and Spirit of Man, wherein is described the Essence and Dignity thereof, &c. Lond. 1614. oct.

Discourse of the several kinds and causes of Lightning: Written by occasion of a fearful Lightning, 17. Nov. 1606. Which in short time burnt the Spire-steeple of Blechingley in Surrey, and in the same, melt into infinite fragments a goodly ring of Bells. Lond. 1607. in three sh. in qu.

A most profitable new Treatise from approved experience of the art of propagating Plants. Lond. 1623. qu. This was published after the authors death (as it seems) by one Will. Lawson, at the end of his New Orchard and Garden, &c. What other things our author S. Harward hath written, I cannot yet find; nor do I know how to trace him to his grave, because he died not at Tamridge, as a worthy Knight of that Town (Sir W. Hayward) hath informed me, but removed thence to another place, which I think was Blechingley before-mentioned.

368. THOMAS SACKVILE, a person born to good Letters, received his first being at, or near, Withyham in the County of Sussex, educated in this University in the time of Q. Mary, (in Hart hall, as it seems,) where he became an excellent Poet. Afterwards he retired for a time to Cambridge, where he had the degree of M. of A. conferred upon him. About the same time, being a Student in the Inner Temple, he became a Barrister, travelled into Foreign parts, and was detained (c) for a time a Prisoner in Rome; whence, his liberty was procured for his return into England, to possess the vast inheritance left to him by his Father, an. 1566. The next year he was advanced to the degree and title of the Lord Buckhurst; and after he had been employed in several Embassies, (particularly into France 1571.) he was incorporated M. of A. of this University in Jan. 1591. having a little before been chosen Chancellor thereof. In the 41. of Q. Elizabeth he was constituted Lord Treasurer of England, and in the beginning of K. James was created Earl of Dorset. From his puerile years to his last, he was a continual favourer and furtherer of learning: And having been in his younger days poetically inclined, did write, while he continued in Oxon, several Latin and English Poems, which tho published, either by themselves, or mixed among other Mens Poems, yet I presume they are lost or forgotten, as having either no name to them, or that the copies are worn out. He had also an excellent faculty in composing Tragedies, and was esteemed the best of his time for that part of the Stage. But what remains of his labours in that way, that are extant, I could never see but this following.

The Tragedy of Ferrex and Porrex Sons to Gorboduc King of Brittain. — Acted before the Queen by the Gentlemen of the Inner Temple, at White-hall, 18. Jan. 1561. It was printed at Lond. without the consent of the authors, and so consequently very imperfectly, an. 1565. Afterwards being made perfect, it was printed there again in 1570. or thereabouts, and after in qu. In the composition of this Tragedy (written in old English rhyme) our author Sackvile had the assistance of Tho. Norton, who made the three first Acts, I mean the same Norton who made some of the Psalms of David to run in rhyme, as I have told you before. However Sackvile being afterwards a noted Man in the Eye of Q. Elizabeth, (to whom he was an Allie,) and in the State, the composition of the whole was attributed to him, and the ingenious men of that age did esteem the said Tragedy to be the best of its time, even in Sir Philip Sidney's judgment, who tells (d) us, that it is full of statey Speeches, and well sounding Phrases, climbing to the height of Seneca's stile, and as full of notable morality, which it doth most delightfully teach, and so obtain the very end of Poetrie; yet in truth it is very defective in the circumstances, &c. Our author Sackvile also wrote, Induction to the Mirror of Magistrates. — Not to that Mirror published by Will. Baldwin, but to that, I suppose, which was published by Job. Hicens an eminent Poet of his time, whom I shall farther mention in Rich. Nicolls, an. 1615. Which Induction, with the Mirror it self, were highly valued by Scholars in the time of Q. Elizabeth. What else this Noble Person hath made publick, I know not, nor any thing besides material of him, only that dying suddenly at the Council board (being one of the Privy Council to K. James) on the 19. of Apr. in sixteen hundred and eight, was buried in the Church of Withyham before-mentioned. From him is lineally descended Charles Sackvile, now Earl of Dorset and Middlesex, a person that hath been highly esteemed for his admirable vein in Poetry, and other polite learning, as several things of his composition, while Lord Buckhurst, shew,

369. LAURENCE TOMSON was born in Northamptonshire, elected Demy of Magd. coll. 1556. aged 17. and soon after being a great proficient in Logick and Philosophy was admitted Probationer, 11. Sept. 1559. and the year after perpetual fellow of the said coll. In 1564. he proceeded in Arts, was with Sir Tho. Hoby in his Embassie to France; and in 1568. he resigned his fellowship. What became of him afterward, let his Epitaph following speak, while I tell you that he translated from Lat. into English (1) Sermons on the Epistles to Timothy and Titus. Lond. 1579. qu. written by John Calvin. (2) Version and annotations on the New Test. Lond. 1589. in oct. Which version and annot. were made in lat. by Theod. Beza. He also translated from French into English (1) A Treatise of the excellency of a Christian man. Lond. 1576. and 85. in oct. written by Monsieur Peter de la Place one of the Kings Council, and chief President of the Court of Aides in Paris. (2) The life and death of Per. de la Place, &c. Lond. 1576. and 85. in oct. What other things he hath translated, or what he hath written, I cannot tell. He concluded his last day in sixteen hundred 1608. and eight, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church at Chertsey in Surrey. Over his grave was this Epitaph soon after fastned on the east wall of the said chancel. *Laurentio Tomsono honesta Tomsoniorum familia in agro Northamptoniensi oriundo, in collegio Magdal. Oxon. educato, perigrinatione Suevia, Russia, Dania, Germania, Italia, Gallia nobilitato: duodecem linguarum cognitione instructo; Theologia, juris civilis & municipalis nostri, totiusque literatura politioris scientie claro: ingenii acumine, disputandi subtilitate, eloquenti suavitae & lepore, virtute omni pietateque insigni: lingua Hebraica publica Geneva professione celebri: accurata Novi Testamenti translatione notabili: In politicis apud Walsinghamum Elizabethae Reginae Scribam principum diu multumque exercitato: post cujus mortem vita privata umbratilisque jucunditate annos XX. (e) continuos Lalamia Middlessexia perfuncto, & septuagenario placidissime religiosissimeque defuncto quarto calendis Aprilis an. 1608. Uxor Jana, & Jana filia ex quinque una superstes filiabus amoris ergo posuerunt & pietatis. The report at Chertsey is, that he built the House which now stands on the top of S. Anns-hill in Chertsey parish, out of the ruins of S. Anns-chappel, and on the very place where that chapel stood; having a prospect into several Counties: In which House, the Inhabitants of the neighbourhood will tell you that this learned author died.*

WILLIAM WARFORD received his first 370. breath in that part of Bristow which is in Somersetshire, was admitted a Scholar of Trinity coll. 13. June 1576. probationer two years after, being then Bach. of Arts, Fellow 1579. and Master of Arts in 82. But having more a mind to the Ro. Cath. religion, in which he was partly educated, than to Protestancy, he left the college, his friends and the nation, went to Rome, and obtaining entrance into the English coll. there, profited very much in Divinity. At length being ordained Priest, he was sent into the mission of England, where making but little stay, he returned to Rome, and in the year 1594. he was entred into the society of Jesuss. Afterwards being sent by his Superiors into Spain, he spent the remainder of his time in the English Seminaries there. He hath written,

A short institution containing the chief mysteries of Christian religion, collected from the holy Scriptures and Fathers. Sevil 1600. and at S. Omers in 1616. Translated into Latine by Tho. More a Jesuit, descended from the famous Sir Tho. More, sometimes L. Chancellor of England; — Printed at S. Omers in 1617. The said Warford also translated into English several of the Histories of Saints, written by Pet. Ribadeneira, but died, before he could finish them, at Valladolid in Spain on the 3. Nov. (according the accompt there followed) in sixteen hundred and eight, and was buried 1608. in the college of the Jesuits there, leaving behind him other matters, which were in a manner fit for the Press, and the character among those of his profession of a godly and learned man.

WILLIAM WILKES, a most excellent preacher 371. in the Court of K. James 1. was born within the diocess of Lichfield and Coventry, elected Probationer-fellow of Merton coll. in 1572. entred into the sacred function when Master of Arts, and in 1580. became Vicar of the Church of S. Peter in the East, within the City of Oxon, by the presentation thereunto of the Warden and Society of the said coll. where for his excellent Sermons he was much frequented by Scholars and Citizens. Afterwards taking the degrees in Divinity he resigned the said Church, being well beneficed in Wiltshire, and dignified. After K. James came to the English Crown, he was made one of his Chaplains in ordinary, preached often before him to his great content, and wrote

(e) Sir Fr. Walsingham died 1590. and therefore he lived not there 20. years.

Of obedience or Ecclesiastical union: Lond. 1605. oct.

A second memento for Magistrates, directing how to reduce all offenders; and being reduced, how to preserve them in the Unity and Love both in Church and Commonwealth. Lond. 1608. (oct.) As for the first memento I have not yet seen, unless it be meant of the book Of Obedience, &c. He died at Barford S. Martins in Wiltshire, of which he was Rector, leaving behind him one only daughter named Mary, who was married to John Marston of the City of Coventry, Gentleman. Which John dying 25 June 1634. was buried in the Church belonging to the Temples in London, near to the body of John Marston his Father, sometimes a Councillour of the Middle Temple.

JEREMY CORDEROY, a Gentlemans son of Wiltshire, of the same family with those of Chute in that County, became a Commoner of S. Albans-hall, in 1577. or thereabouts, took the degrees in Arts, studied Divinity many years, and being a frequent preacher in Oxon, was made one of the Chaplains of Merton coll. in 1590, at which time, and during his stay in Oxon, (which was at least 13 years after) his life and conversation was without exception. He hath written,

A short dialogue, wherein is proved, that no man can be saved without good works. Oxon. 1604. in tw. sec. edit. The dialogue is between a Gallant and a Scholar. He wrote another book also, intit.

A warning for worldlings, or a comfort to the godly and a terror to the wicked, in a dialogue between a Scholar and Traveller. Lond. 1608. in tw. At which time tho the author was a deserving person, yet he was not preferred to a living, and whether he was afterwards, (he being scrupulous of taking one) I know not, nor of any other books that he hath published.

BARNABE BARNES, a younger son of Rich. Barnes Bishop of Durham, was a Yorkshire-man born, and at about 17. years of age 1586. became a student in Brafn. coll. but left the University without a degree, and what became of him afterwards I know not. His works are these.

A divine Century of spiritual Sonnets. Lond. 1595. dedicated to Tob. Matthews B. of Durham.

Four books of Offices; enabling private persons for the special service of all good Princes and policies. Lond. 1606. Fol.

The Devils charter: a Trag. containing the life and death of P. Alex. 6. Lond. 1607. oct. One Barnabe Barnes of the City of Coventry died in the time of the civil War (about 1644.) leaving behind him a widow named Margery, but what relation there was between this and the former Barnabe, or whether the same, I cannot tell.

WILLIAM OVERTON, one of the prime preachers in the reign of Q. Elizabeth, was born in London, became Demy or Semicommoner of Magd. coll. 25. Jul. 1539. aged 15, Perpetual-fellow in 1551. being then Bach. of Arts. Afterwards proceeding in that faculty, he took holy orders, left the coll. and absented himself during the reign of Q. Mary. In 1565 he took the degrees in Divinity, being then well beneficed and dignified, and in 1579. was made Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, where he was much commended for his hospitality to the poor, and the good reparation he kept of his house, which a married Bishop, as he was, seldom did, or doth. He hath published, Sermon against discord, on Rom. 16. vers. 17. Lond. in oct.

Oratio doctiss. & graviss. habita in domo capitulari Lichfield ad Præbendarios & reliquum clerum in visitatione Ecclesie sue cathedralis congregatum, an. 1600. Lond. 1600. He died in a good old age in the beginning of April, in sixteen hundred and nine, and was buried in the Church of Eccles-hall in Staffordshire, near to the bodies of his two Wives. In the See of Lichfield succeeded Dr. Rob. Abbot, as I shall tell you elsewhere.

EDWARD STRADLING, son of Sir Tho. Stradling Knight by Cath. his Wife, Daughter of Sir Tho. Ga-

mage of Coyty Knight, was born of, and lineally descended from, an antient and Knightly family of his name living at S. Donates castle in Glamorganshire, educated in several sorts of learning in this University, but before he took a degree, he left it, travelled into various Countries, spent some time at Rome, returned an accomplished Gentleman; and retiring to his Patrimony, which was large, did build a firm structure upon that foundation of literature that he had laid here and elsewhere. In 1575. or the year after, he received the Honour of Knighthood, was made a Justice of Peace, became a very useful Man in his Country, and was at the charge of such Herculean (a) works for the publick good, that no Man in his time went beyond him. But above all he is to be remembered for his singular knowledge in the British Language and Antiquities, for his eminent encouragement of learning and learned Men, and for his great expence and indefatigable industry in collecting together several Monuments and ancient Manuscripts of Learning and Antiquity. All which with other books were reduced into a well ordered Library at St. Donates, to the great credit and renown of that place and his Family. He hath written,

A Welsh Grammar. — When or where printed I know not. Of which book, written mostly in Latin, one of his (b) Country-men gives this character. He institutiones Grammaticæ admodum concinnæ sunt compositæ, & omnibus suis numeris absoluta, ut nec eis addi quicquam, nec ab eis demi (meo judicio) quicquam poterit; nisi secundam hujus operis author in posterum editionem maturet. He hath also written,

The winning of the Lordship of Glamorgan or Morgannwe out of the Welsh-mens hands, &c. — Of which book you may see more in The History of Cambria, now called Wales, &c. Printed 1584. p. 122. and 141. This learned and worthy person hath written other things, but such I have not yet seen, nor can I say more of him, only that he paid his last debt to nature in the Summer time, in sixteen hundred and nine, aged 80. or more, and was buried in a Chappel built by his Father, (dedicated to the Virgin Mary.) joyning to the Parish Church of St. Donate, between the bodies of his Great-Grandfather and Grandmother on the North side, and the body of his Father on the South side. He died without Male Issue, whereupon the Estate went to his next Kinsman Sir John Stradling Knight, who was soon after made a Baronet: From whom was descended Sir Edm. Stradling Baronet, (a Colonel in the Army of K. Ch. 1.) buried in Jesus coll. Chappel, 21. June 1644.

MICHAEL RENNIGER, commonly called 376. Rhanger, received his first being in this World in Hampshire, became perpetual Fellow of Magd. coll. in 1547. afterwards Master of Arts, and a Preacher in the Reign of K. Ed. 6. being then esteemed by those that knew him a person truly pious, and of singular erudition. But when Q. Mary came to the Crown, he, with others of the said coll. voluntarily left the Land for Religion sake, and lived mostly at Strasburg in Germany. After her death he returned, was made one of the Chaplains to Q. Elizabeth, became a zealous assertor of the Protestant Religion, but refusing considerable preferments that were then offered to him, he accepted only of a Prebendship in the Church of Winchester for the present, as also the Rectory of Cramley near to the said City. In the year 1573. he took the degrees in Divinity, and in 75. was upon the resignation of Dr. Joh. Ebdon made Archdeacon of Winchester. His Works are,

Carmina in mortem duorum fratrum Suffolciensium Henrici & Caroli Brandon, &c. Lond. 1552. qu.

De Pii V. & Gregorii XIII. furoribus contra Elizabetham Reginam Angliæ. Lond. 1582. oct.

An Exhortation to true Love, Loyalty, and Fidelity to her Majesty. Lond. 1587. oct.

Treatise against Treasons, Rebellions, and such Disloyalties. — Printed with the Exhortation to, &c.

Syntagma hortationum ad Jacobum Regem Angliæ. Lond. 1604. oct. and translated from English into Latin, An apology or defence of Priests Marriages, written by Joh. Poynt or Ponet B. of Winchester. The other Works, done by him, may be seen in a certain (*) author who knew

Rhenniger well, which made him therefore say of him, —
In omni bonarum literarum ac linguarum genere ita se exercuit, ut famam non vulgarem inde meruit. He died on the 26. of 1609. Aug. in sixteen hundred and nine, aged 89 years. and was buried in the Chancel of his Church at Crawley before-mentioned, under the Communion Table. Over his Grave was soon after a Marble Stone laid, with an inscription thereon in prose and verse; a copy of which you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 197. b. This Dr. Rhenniger died rich, left a fair Estate, (some of which laid in Lincolnshire;) and a Son named Samuel to enjoy it.
 In his Archdeaconry of Winchester succeeded Dr. Ranulph Barlow of Cambridge.

377. THOMAS SMITH was born of sufficient Parents in a Town called Abendon in Berkshire, educated in Grammar learning there, (in the Free School founded by Joh. Royse, Citizen and Mercer of London, an.
 1563.) became a Student of Ch. Ch. in 1570. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 78. and six years after was elected one of the Proctors of the University. About that time, he being esteemed a religious and a discreet Gentleman, was made Secretary to that popular Count Robert Earl of Essex, who had an especial respect for him. So that being thereupon introduced into the Court, raised himself meely by his own merits to considerable eminency, as first to be Clerk to the High Court of Parliament, afterwards to be one of the Clerks of the Council, a Knight in 1603. Secretary of the Latin Tongue, and one of the Masters of the Requests. 'Tis supposed by some, and confidently reported by others that are learned, that tho he lived not to publish any thing, yet several matters he left behind him fit for the Press, but of what Subject or Faculty they treat, I could never learn. He deceased in the prime of his years (whereby a stop was given to his farther promotion) at his house called Parsons Green near to London, 28. Nov. in sixteen 1609. hundred and nine; whereupon his body was buried in the Parish Church of Fulham in Middlesex on the 7. of Dec.
 following. Over his grave was soon after erected a comely monument by his disconsolate Widdow Frances the Daughter of William Lord Chandois, (afterwards the Wife of Thom. Earl of Exeter;) by whom he had a Son named Robert, who was entred a Gent. Com. of Ch. Ch. in Mich.
Term, an. 1620. aged 15. and became an Inheritor for a time several Lands which his Father left to him, particularly the Mannor of Barnwick upon Tease in Yorksh. The said Sir Thomas (a) bequeathed a considerable sum of Money to this University to buy books for the new or East part of the Publick Library, as also a Mathematical instrument gilt, besides 100 l. to the poor of Abendon for their relief. All which was accordingly done and fetled by his younger Brother Rich. Smith, sometimes a Member of Ch.
Ch. also, who had been prime Mourner at his Brother's Funeral.

I find another Sir Tho. Smyth to have been of Bidborough in Kent, second Son of Tho. Smith of Ostentanger in the same County Esq; (who dying (b) 7. June 1591. was buried in the Church of Ashford adjoining) Son of John Smith of Corsham in Wilts. Gent. Which Sir Thomas (who had (c) farmed the Customs in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, and therefore by some called Customs Smith) was so much in favour with K. James that he sent him Embassador (d) to the Emperour of Russia 19. Mar. 1604. From whence returning he was made Governour of the Society of Merchants trading to the East-Indies, Muscovie, the French and Summer Islands, and Treasurer for the Colonies and Companies of Virginia. There goes under this Man's name a book intit. Sir Thomas Smith's voyage and entertainment in Russia, with the tragical ends of two Emperours, and one Empress, within one Month, during his being there, &c. Lond. 1605. qu.
 But him I take not to be the author, because it was published unknown to him, and without his consent. What else I find of him is, that his fair and magnificent house at Deptford near to London was burnt (e) on 30. Jan. 1618. and that upon several complaints against him for certain frauds used by him, in withdrawing sums of Money in his Rectorship, and place of Treasurer, before-mentioned, he was (f) removed from those employments, in Apr.

 (e) Ib. sub an. 1619. (f) Ib. eod. an.

1619. His eldest Son, Sir Joh. Smith, married Isabel Daughter of Rob. Earl of Warwick, and another the Natural Daughter of Charles Blount Lord Mountjoy, without the consent of his Father, in Nov. 1618. but in the middle of July following, he, upon some discontent, left (g) England without taking leave of his Father or Wife.

Besides these two, I find another famous Sir Tho.
Smith, who went before them, not only in time, but eminence. His native place was Saffron-Walden in Essex, his Parents John Smith of the same place, and Agnes the Daughter and Heir of one Charnock Gent. and the place of Academical education, Queens coll. in Cambridge, where at riper years he was made choice of (such was his proficiency in learning) to be sent into Italy at the King's charges, and there to be educated in certain kinds of learning, which our Universities at home could not then yield, or rather for the compleat polishing of his parts and studies. After his return he became so eminent for his acquired learning, that he was not only made the publick Orator of Cambridge, but also the King's Professor of the Greek Tongue, and at length the King's Professor of the Civil Law, in which Faculty he was incorporated Doctor at Cambridge, in 1542. and afterwards at Oxon, but the particular time when, it appears not, through the imperfectness of the Registers of that time. In the Reign of Ed. 6. he found so much favour with the Duke of So- merfet, that he was made one of the Secretaries. (Sir Will.
Cecil being the other) to that King, a Knight, Steward of the Stanneries, and Dean of Carlisle in the place of one Lancelot Salkeld then ejected. About the same time also he (h) became Provost of Eaton coll. whereof he had very well merited, but when Q. Mary came to the Crown she deprived him of those dignities, assigning him an 100 l. per an.
 Pension for his Life, howbeit on condition that he should not depart the Realm. In the beginning of Q. Elizabeth, he was called again to the service of the Commonwealth, was restored to his Deanery, was present with the Divines at the correcting of the English Liturgy, and afterwards with great commendations performed several Embassies.
 At length being one of the Secretaries of State again, and Chancellour of the Order of the Garter, and several times a Parliament-man, became very beneficial to the Commonwealth of learning, by procuring the Laws concerning Corn for the colleges of Students in both the Universities. This person who was a noted Orator, Grecian, and Civilian, and worthy to be remembered for other learning, hath written, (1) The Commonwealth of England, and the manner and government thereof, in 3 books. Printed in an old Engl.
 character at Lond. 1583. 94. in qu. and several times in
 oct. notwithstanding it was left unfinished by the author.
 Translated into Lat. by Dr. Jo. Budden, who caused it to be printed at Lond. in oct. 'Twas also published in Lat. by Joh. Laet of Antwerp, at Leyden 1630. in tw. (2) De recta & emendata lingue Græcæ pronuntiatione, ad Gardinerum Ep. Winton. Epistolæ. Lutet. 1568. qu. (3) De recta & emendata lingue Anglicæ scriptione. Printed dialogue ways with the former book. (4) De re nummaria. (5) The Authority, form and manner of holding Parliaments. This book being lately (1685.) published, may be doubted whether Sir Tho. Smith was the author of it. He hath also extant
Many Letters in the Compleat Embassador, &c. collected by Sir Dudley Digges. He departed this mortal life in the cli-metrical year of his age, in the month of July 1577. and was buried in the Church of Theydon-Mount, or Theydon at Mount in Essex. All his Latin and Greek books he gave to Queens coll. in Cambridge, as also a great Globe of his own making, besides maintenance for two Scholars to come from Saffron-Walden to that house. There was a very fair monument ordered to be put over the bodies of him and his Wife, and no doubt there is but that it was done accordingly, yet what the Inscription on it is, I cannot yet learn, nor any thing else of him, only that Jo. Leland doth highly extol him, in his (i) Encomia of illustrious and learned men of England.

JOHN SANSBURY, or Sandsbury, an eminent 378. and ingenious Latin Poet, was born in London, educated in Merchant-Taylors School, became Scholar of S. Johns coll.

in Midfomer Term, an. 1593. aged 17. took the degrees in Arts, became Vicar of the Church of S. Giles in the North Suburb of Oxon, 1607. and the year after was admitted Bach. of Divinity. He hath written, Illum in Italiam. Oxonia ad protectionem regis sui omnium optimi filia, pedi sequa. Oxon. 1608. oct. In the said book are the Arms of each coll. and verses under them.

Tragedia diversa. MS. Acted several times by the Scholars of the aforefaid coll. in their common refectory in the time of Christmas. He was buried in the Church of S. Giles before-mentioned, in the month of Jan. in sixteen hundred and nine. The next writer, according to time, that is to be mentioned is one, that had learning enough to be a Dean or Bishop, yet could never rise higher than a Vicar and Pedagogue. His name is,

379. THOMAS PYE, born at Darlaston near Wednesbury in Staffordshire, educated for the most part in Logicals and Philosophicals in Merton coll. of which he became one of the Chaplains in 1581. being then esteemed among the learned to be one of them. Afterwards taking the degrees in Divinity as a Member of that house, he became Vicar and Schoolmaster of Bexhill near Hastings in Sussex about 1590. being then, and before, accounted an eminent Linguist, excellent in Sacred Chronology, in Ecclesiastical Histories and Polemical Divinity. His works are,

A computation from the beginning of time to Christ, by ten Articles. Lond. 1597. qu.

A confirmation of the same for the times controverted before Christ: As also that there wanteth a year after Christ in the usual computation.— Printed with the former book, and both under the general title of An Hour-glass.

Epistola ad ornatiss. virum D. Joh. Howsonum S. T. D. Acad. Oxon. Procancelarium, qua dogma ejus novum & admirabile de Judaeorum divortio refutatur & suis SS. Scripturae nativus sensus ab ejus glossematibus vindicatur. Lond. 1603. qu.

Epistola responsoria ad clariss. virum D. Alb. Gentilem. MS. 'Tis on the same subject with the former, and are both answered by Rob. Burhill.

Scholastical determination of Usury. Lond. 1604. qu.

Answer to a Treatise written in defence of Usury.— Printed there the same year. He gave way to fate at Bexhill, in the latter end of sixteen hundred and nine, at which time, he by his Will (dated 20. Dec. and proved 20. March, an. 1609.) desired that his body might be buried in the School house at Bexhill before-mentioned, lately repaired and new paved by him. In his said Will he leaves certain Monies to the poor of Brightling near Battle in Sussex, at which place, as 'tis probable, he had a Cure. About two years before his death he bestowed much money in building the Campanile or Tower at Darlaston before-mentioned, which before was built of timber.

380. JOHN AGLIONBY was born of a gentile Family in Cumberland, became a Student in Queens coll. in 1583. where, after he had gone through the servile duties several years, was made Fellow; whereupon entering into Holy Orders became a most polite and learned Preacher. Afterwards travelling, he was introduced into the acquaintance of Cardinal Bellarmino, who shewing to him the picture of the profound William Whittaker of Cambridge, which hung up in his Library, told him, pointing to the picture, that he was the most learned Heretick that ever he read, or to that effect. After his return he was made Chaplain in Ordinary to Q. Elizabeth, took the degree of D. of D. in 1600. was made Principal of S. Edmunds hall the year after, being about that time Rector of Islip near to, and in the County of, Oxon, and soon after Chaplain in Ord. to K. James 1. He was a person well accomplished with all kind of learning, profoundly read in the Fathers, and in School-Divinity, an exact Linguist, and of an aquiline acumen, as one (a) who is profuse in his praise tells you. What he hath published I find not; however the reason why I set him down here, is, that he had a most considerable hand in the translation of the New Testament, appointed by K. James, in 1604. which is all that I know material of him, saving only that he dying at Islip, to the very great reluctance of all learned and good men, on the 6. Febr. in sixteen hundred and nine, aged 43. was buried in the Chancel of the Church there. Soon after was set up an Inscription, to his memory, on the East wall of the said Chancel, (by his Widdow I think,) wherein being nothing of him, but what I have mentioned already, I shall pass it by for brevity sake.

JOHN DAVID RHESE, or Jo. David or 381. Davis, was born at Lanvaethley in the Isle of Anglesey, elected Student of Ch. Ch. after he had been conversant among the Oxonians for 3 or more years, in the month of Dec. 1555. aged 21. travelled beyond the Seas before he took a degree in this University, became Doctor of Physick of Senes or Sienna in Tuscany, and publick Moderator of the School at Pistoia in that Country, whose Language there, which is Italian, he understood as well as any native. Afterwards he returned to his Country, where he practised his Faculty with admirable success, and was held in high esteem by learned men, for his exquisite knowledge in all kind of literature, especially for Physick, Poetry, the Grammatical part of the Welsh Tongue, and curiosity in various Criticisms; yet by the generality, he being not understood, his rare parts and curious learning was in a manner buried where he lived. He hath written in the Florentine Language, Rules for the obtaining of the Latin Tongue.— Printed at Venice: And in Latin these two books following.

De Italica lingua pronuntiatione. Printed at Padua. Both which were, in their time, held in great repute by the Italians, and the last by Strangers that occasionally travelled into Italy.

Cambro-Britannica Cymraecae lingua institutiones & rudimenta, &c. ad intelligend. Biblia sacra nuper in Cambro-Britannicum sermonem eleganter versa. Lond. 1592. fol. Written to Sir Edw. Stradling of S. Donats Castle in Glamorganshire, a great favourer and furtherer of learning, as I have elsewhere told you. Before which book is a large Preface, written by Humph. Prichard of Bangor in North Wales, sometimes an Oxford Scholar. Our author Rhese hath also written in the Brittish Language.

Compendium of Aristotles Metaphysics.— MS. formerly in Jesus coll. Library. In which book the author faith that the Brittish Language is as copious in expressing congruous terms, as the Greek, or any Language whatsoever. He hath written other excellent things, but are lost, as I have been assured by Olor Iscannus, and therefore I cannot say any thing else of him, only that he died a Rom. Cath. (as he had lived) at, or near, Brecknock, (where he mostly dwelt and practised Physick) in the Reign of K. James 1. Scil. about sixteen hundred and nine, and that he is much celebrated by (b) Stradling, the Epigrammatist for his learning, while he lived, who stiles (c) him Novum antiquae linguae lumen, and by Camden who calls him, (d) Clariss. & eruditissimus linguae vir D. Johannes David. See more of him in Tho. Leyson under the year 1607.

ROBERT PERSONS, or Parsons, a most noted and learned writer of his time, and the ornament of the English Nation in the opinion of those of his Society, must according to time have the next place to be mentioned. Concerning whom several R. Priests and others, who have written bitterly against, and scurrilously of, him, have peremptorily said, (as Tho. (e) Bell and Tho. (f) James from them hath done the like,) that he was basely born of mean parentage at Stokersley in Somersetshire, that his supposed Father was a Blacksmith, his right, the Parish Priest of Stokersley; by means whereof he was binominous, sometimes called Rob. Parsons, sometimes Rob. Cowbuck, &c. that he was (g) one of the dregs of the Commonalty, a Fellow of a most seditious disposition, a Sycophant, an Equivocator, and one that would set Kingdoms to sale, &c. But these things, with many other, not now to be named, having been written out of malice against him, I shall by no means follow, or embrace them for truths, but recede to that collection of his life, which I have made partly from his own writings, partly from records, and partly from impartial Writers. Born therefore he was (n) at Stowey commonly called Nether-Stowey near to Bridgewater in Somersetshire, an. 1546. His Father was a Plebeian of honest repute, and an enemy to the Church of Rome, but by Alex. Bryant reconciled thereunto. His mother was a known grave Matron living divers years in flight and banishment for Religion, dyed therein at London, very aged, about 1599. The Son Robert being a child of very great towardliness and exceeding apt to learn, was by his Fathers endeavours trained up in the English tongue, and having a good memory, could repeat what he had read once or twice, very readily. About that time it hapned that one John Hayward a vertuous good Priest, who before had been a Canon Regular in Devonshire, became Vicar of Nether-Stowey, who perceiving that Robert had pregnant parts, did teach him the Latin tongue, and after had a special affection for him; for he living to the beginning of the year 1575. endeavoured to get him into Balliol coll. did exhibit unto him, as 'tis said, and was not against the resignation which he made of his fellowship. In the latter end of 1563. our author R. Parsons being fitted for Academical learning was sent to the said coll. but whether he was at his first coming a Servitour, or Scholar, I know not. Sure it is, that by the help of good natural parts, accompanied with unwearied industry, he became in short time a smart Disputant, not only in the coll. but publick Schools, as occasion served. In the latter end of May 1568. he was admitted Bach. of Arts, and the same year Probationer-Fellow of the said college; which being terminated, he was made Chaplain-Fellow, and so consequently (I presume) went into Orders, being then a noted Tutor in the coll. In Michaelmas-Term 1572. he was admitted Master of Arts, stood in the MT celebrated 12. Oct. 1573. and on the 13. of Feb. following he resigned his Fellowship of his own accord (as the Register of Bal. coll. (o) saith, tho certain authors tell us, that he resigned to prevent Expulsion) being then, if not before, about to change his Religion. In June 1574. he left England, went to Calis and thence to Antwerp; at which place after he had continued for some weeks, he diverted himself for a time with a journey to Louvaine, where being no sooner arrived, but he fell into the company of Father Will. Good his Country man, by whom he was kindly received, and with him spent some days in spiritual exercise. So that whereas then, and before, he had addicted his mind to the study of Physick, and did intend to prosecute it at Padua, (to which place he had then intentions to go) he, by Goods advice, made some doubt of that matter. At length he went there, and was for some time not only conversant in that faculty, but also in the Civil Law. Upon second thoughts he relinquished those studies, went to the English coll. at Rome, was there admitted into the Society of Jesus 4. July 1575. went thro the several Classes of Divinity, and in 1580. journeyed into England with Edm. Campian and others to advance the Romish affairs, with power then given by P. Greg. 13. for moderating the severe Bull of P. Pius 5. While he continued there, which was in the quality of a Superior, he travelled up and down in the Country to Gentlemens houses, disguised in the habit sometimes of a Souldier, sometimes like a Gentleman, and at other times like a Minister and an Apparator. And being a person of a seditious and turbulent spirit and armed with a confident boldness, rampered (p) so far with the R. Catholics about deposing Qu. Elizabeth that some of them (as they afterwards confessed) thought to have delivered him up into the Magistrates hands. About which time Campian being seized and committed, he made haste out of England for fear of being snap'd also, and forthwith went to Rome, where making profession of the four vows, he was constituted Rector of the English coll. there, an. 1587. Afterwards he went into Spain, where by his great learning expressed in disputing, writing, and promoting the Cause, he became known to, and respected by, the King of that place. About 1597. he returned to Rome, in hopes of a Cardinals Cap, but missing it, died, as 'tis said, with grief. He was a restless active man, and tho of a violent fierce nature and rough behaviour, yet he was more zealous for the promoting of the Jesuits interest than any of, and perhaps before, his time; witness his unwearied endeavours of instituting Novices of the Society at Sevill, Valladolid, Cadiz, Lisbon, Doway, S. Omers, and at Rome. Also his continual publishing of books, as well in the Latin, as in the English, tongue, which did no great good to the Church of England, and the noted professors thereof. And lastly his endeavours of keeping Spain and England in difference, and of his inciting the Spaniard to invade England or Ireland again, of breaking the lawful Succession of the Crown, by confirming the right of it to a Daughter of Spain, and what not to promote the interest of that Country and his Society. As for those books which he hath written (published either without a name, or else in the names of other persons,) I shall here give you the titles of as many that have come to my hands, and they are these.

A brief discourse containing the reasons, why Catholics refuse to go to Church—Said to be Printed at Doway, but really at London, 1580. in oct. Published under the name of Jo. Howlet, and dedicated to Q. Eliz. with a large Epist. subscribed by the said J. Howlet. See more in the Fasti, 1569. I have seen a book in Bodlies Lib. (being one of the Copies which was seized before the title page was printed) intitled in the first page of the book it self, thus, Reasons that Catholics ought in any wise to abstain from heretical conventicles. The running title at the top of every leaf of the book is A Treatise of Schisme. Printed at London by Will. Carter, (executed for Treason in the year 1584.) who confessed, when that book came to be seized on in his house on Tower-hill near London, that there had been printed 1250. Copies of the said book. At that time the Searchers found the original, sent from Rheimes, and allowed under Dr. Will. Allens own hand to be truly Catholic and fit to be published. This book without doubt is the same which a certain (q) author stiles Nine reasons why Catholics should abstain from heretical Conventicles, said by him to be written by Rob. Parsons. The same year that the Brief discourse containing, &c. was published, came out an answer to it intit. A check to Mr. Howlets Shreechings to her Majesty, &c. but whether any reply followed I know not. The next books that F. Parsons wrote were,

Reasons for his coming into the mission of England, with a proffer or challenge to dispute with the Protestants.—This book or Treatise, tho afterwards put under the name of Rob. Parsons in the Bib. Soc. Jesu, yet in the answer to it made by Mer. Hammer and Will. Charke, it is by them said to be written by E. Campian.

Brief Censure given upon the two books of W. Charke and M. Hanmer, written against the Reasons and Proffer. London, 1581. (oct.) To which W. Charke made a reply, Printed in oct.

A discovery of Joh. Nichols Minister, misreported a Jesuit—Printed 1581. in octav. Answered by Tho. Lupton in a book intit. Answer against a Jesuits book, entit. A discovery, &c. London, 1582. qu. See more in Joh. Nicholls an. 1583.

A defence of the Censure, given upon two books of Will. Charke and Meredith Hanmer Ministers, which they wrote against Mr. Edmund Campian Priest, of the Society of Jesus and against his offer of disputation—Printed 1582. oct. Taken in hand since the death of Campian. Against this book came out another intit. A treatise against the defence of the censure, &c. Cambr. 1586. oct.

De persecutione Anglicanâ Epistola. Quâ explicantur afflictiones, arumna & calamitates gravissima, &c. Rom. & Ingolst. 1582. Printed also in a book intit. Concertatio Ecclesie Catholica in Angliâ, &c. Aug. Trev. 1583. in oct. p. 79. Both which editions, the former I am sure, were published under the name of the English coll. at Rome. See more in Joh. Bridgewater, an. 1594.

A Christian directory or exercise guiding men to eternal Salvation, commonly called The Resolution—First published in 1583. in oct. From which edition and book, were framed two more, published An. 1584. One of (n) Rob. Parsons in his Manifestation of Folly. Printed 1602. fol. 89. b. cap. 7. (o) Reg. Actor coll. Ball. p. 125. See the whole story of his expulsion, which was no other than an resignation in Fa. Parsons Brief Apology, fol. 192, 193, 194. &c. (p) Camden in Annal. Reg. Eliz. Sub an. 1580.

which was done by a catholick Gent. living at Roan in Normandy, full of errors, but in sense the same. Another by Edm. Bunny of Merton coll. in Oxon, but all altered to the Protestant use, as may be seen in the Preface to Rob. Persons's edition of the same book in the year 1585.

The second part of a Christian directory or exercise, &c. Lond. 1592, 92. in tw: Printed also in 1650. in a large oct. But these two parts, as it seems, being falsly printed at London, the author came out again with them, bearing this title,

A Christian directory, guiding men to their Salvation; divided into three books. The first thereof pertaining to Resolution, is only contained in this volume, and divided into two parts, and set forth now again with many corrections and additions by the author himself, with reproof of the falsified edition lately published by Mr. Edm. Bunny. Louvaine 1598. in a thick oct. &c. These books of Resolution, won our author (Persons) a great deal of praise, not only in the judgment of R. Catholics, but of very learned Protestants. Yet not to heap more praises upon him than he justly deserves, his Enemies, and those of the Protestant party, say, that he was but a Collector or Translator at most, and that the book was not of his own absolute invention, but taken out of other authors. They say farther also, that his praise was for well translating, close couching, and packing it up together in a very smooth stile, and singular good method; and add, that the platform of the said Resolution was laid to his hand, by L. de Granada, who gave him the principal grounds and matter thereof, and the penning by one Brinkley, &c.

Responsio ad Elizabethæ Regine edictum contra Catholicos. Rom. 1593. in oct. &c. Published under the name of Andr. Philopater.

A conference about the next succession of the Crown of England, in two parts. — Printed 1593, 94. in oct. under the name of N. Doleman, and is known by the name of The book of titles. The first part is for chastising of Kings, and proceeding against them, &c. and was reprinted before the time that K. Ch. 1. was beheaded, by Rob. Ibbotson living in Smithfield, under this title, Several Speeches made at a conference, or Several Speeches delivered at a conference concerning the power of Parliament to proceed against their King, for misgovernment. The second part was to prove that the Infanta of Spain was the legal Heir to the Crown of England; the penning whereof did much endear him to the K. of Spain. But so soon as this book peeped forth, which was accounted a most hainous and scandalous thing, the Parliament enacted 35. Elizab. that whosoever should be found to have it in his house should be guilty of High Treason. And whether the Printer of it was hang'd, drawn, and quartered (as some say he was) I cannot affirm it. K. Charles 1. in his (a) Messages for Peace, doth mention and insist upon that book called Several Speeches, &c. and Mr. W. Pryne in his Speech to the Committee 4. Dec. 1648. affirmed (b) that he himself and others did complain of it, but nothing was done to vindicate the houses from that gross imputation, &c. The said Conference about the next Succession, &c. put out under the name of Doleman, was answered by Sir Joh. Hayward Knight, LL. D. an. 1603. under this title, The right of Succession asserted, &c. Which answer was reprinted for the satisfaction of the zealous promoters of the Bill of Exclusion. — Lond. 1683. oct. The Conference it self also was reprinted at Lond. 1681. oct. purposely to lay open the author's pernicious Doctrines in that juncture of time when the Parliament was zealously bent to exclude James D. of York from the Imperial Crown of England. And how much some of the then Fanatical applauded pieces in Politicks have traded with, and been beholding to, that Conference, written by Doleman alias Persons, (notwithstanding their pretendedly great hatred of, and seeming enmity to, Popery,) by asserting many of the self same most damnable and destructive Principles, laid down therein, is at large, by a just and faithful comparing of them together, made apparent in a piece intit. The Apostate Protestant, in a Letter to a Friend occasioned by the late reprinting of Doleman. Lond. 1682. in 8 sh. in qu. Said to have been wrote by Edw. Pelling Rector of S. Martins Church near Ludgate in London, Chaplain to the Duke of Somerset, and a Wiltshire man born. Among the said Fanatical applauded pieces in Politicks before-mentioned, must be reckoned a Pamphlet intit. A brief History of Succession, collected out of the Records, and the most authentick Historians. Written for the satisfaction of George Earl of Halifax, in 5 sh. in fol. To which, tho no place or time was set, to shew when or where 'twas printed, yet, as I then observed, 'twas published in 1680. It was answered by Rob. Brady Doctor of Physick, Master of Gonvil and Caius coll. and the Kings Professor of Physick in the University of Cambridge, and Burgefs for that University to sit in the Parliament that began at Oxon. 21. March. 1680. in a book intit. The great point of Succession discussed, &c. Lond. 1681. in a thin fol. and by another excellent tract written by Anon, called Religion and Loyalty supporting each other. Another Pamphlet also, which was mostly borrowed from Doleman alias Persons was that intit. The great and weighty considerations relating to the Duke of York, or Successor of the Crown, &c. considered. Lond. 1680. in 9 sh. in fol. which is quoted also in the Brief History of Succession, before-mentioned. Which Great and weighty considerations, &c. considered, were reprinted at Lond. 1682. in oct. and annexed to the second edition of the Postscript, written by Thom. Hunt of Grays Inn Esq; who, therein, tho he makes use of Doleman's Principles, yet in a new Epistle before the said second edition of the Considerations, he owns them to be his. This person (Tho. Hunt) who had an ingenious Pen, and was commonly called Postscript Hunt, was forced to leave England in the Fanatical Plot, which broke out 12. June 1683. Afterwards settling at Utrecht in Holland, we heard no more of him till Sept. 1688. and then an express coming to my hands, dated 13. of that month, I was thereby instructed that he then died lately at Utrecht before-mentioned, being big with expectation of returning shortly after to his native Country, under the conduct of the Prince of Orange, then about to make his expedition into England. But to return, I find other noted Pamphlets, which were about that time published by some ill designed Scriblers, who are shewn to have taken many of their dangerous tenets thence, I mean from Doleman alias Persons, which is a well furnished common-place-book for such turbulent authors to enlarge on, as their respective projects and interests should suggest. Also that John Bradshaw's long Speech spoken at the condemnation of K. Ch. 1. and also the Treatise concerning the broken Succession of the Crown of England (c) &c. to make way for Oliver the Usurper, were mostly taken out of Doleman alias Persons, may be seen in Dr. George Hick's Sermon (d) on the 30. Jan. 1681. before the L. Mayor of London. The truth of this, as to the last, a note placed at the end of the said Treatise, hath put beyond all doubt. At length several positions in the said Conference written by Persons, being looked upon as dangerous and destructive to the Sacred Persons of Princes, their State and Government, by the University of Oxford, particularly that which saith, Birthright and Proximity of Blood do give no title to Rule or Government, &c. the Members thereof condemned them, and that in particular, by their judgment and decree passed in Convocation 21. July 1683. Which being so done, they caused the book it self to be publicly burnt in their School-quadrangle. As for the other books that our author Rob. Persons hath written, are these following.

A temperate Wardword to the turbulent and seditious Watchword of Sir Franc. Hastings Knight, &c. — Printed 1599. qu. under the name of N. Dolman, that is Vir dolorum, in respect of the grief and sorrow that Fa. Persons bore in his heart for the affliction and calamity of his Country, as a certain author tells me, tho (e) others say that the reason why he put the name of Doleman to some of his books, was because he bore great malice to, and hated him, Card. Allen, and Sir Fr. Inglesfield as bitter Enemies. Of this Nic. Dolman, who was a grave Priest, and of a mild disposition, you may read in a book intit. A relation of a Faction began at Wisbich, 1595, &c. p. 12, 13, 14, &c. 32. 47, &c.

A copy of a Letter written by a Master of Arts of Cambridge, to his Friend in London, concerning some talk passed of late between two worshipful and grave men, about the present state, and some proceedings of the Earl of Leicester and his Friends in England, &c. — Written in 1584. but the certain year when printed, unless in 1600.

(c) Printed at Lond. 1655. qu. (d) Printed at Lond. 1682. first edit. p. 28. (e) Vide Camdenum in Annal. Reg. Elizab. sub an. 1584.

(a) Printed by R. Royston, p. 125. (b) p. 108, 109.

I cannot tell. It was also printed in oct. (as the other was) in 1631. and hath this running title on the top of every leaf of the book, A Letter of State of a Scholar of Cambridge. The first edit. and perhaps the second, was printed beyond the Seas, and most of the copies being sent into England bound, with the outside of the leaves coloured with green, the book was commonly called Father Persons Green-coat. 'Tis the same book with that intit. Leicesters Common-wealth, being a dialogue between a Scholar, a Gent. and a Lawyer. Lond. 1641. qu. This book, tho' commonly reported to be Persons, (and that he had most of his materials for the composition thereof from Sir Will. Cecil Lord Burleigh,) which, I presume, did arise from Dr. Tho. James his affirmation (f) that he was the author of it, yet Persons himself saith in his Preface to the Warnword to Sir Franc. Hastings Wastword, that he did not write Leicesters Common-wealth. And certainly if he had been the author it, Pitfeus, and Ribadeneira with his Continuators, would have mentioned it in their respective Catalogues of our author's works, whereas they are altogether silent in that matter.

Leicesters Commonwealth. Lond. 1641. oct. written in verse. This is a small thing, and containeth not the same sense with the former.

Leicesters Ghost. — in verse also. To both which, tho' the name of Rob. Persons Jesuit, is set in the title, yet I cannot any where find that he was the author.

Apologetical Epistle to the Lords of her Maj. Council, in defence of his Resolution in Religion. — Printed 1601. oct.

Brief apology or defence of the Catholick Ecclesiastical Hierarchy and Subordination in England, erected these later years by P. Clem. 8. and impugned by certain Libels printed and published of late, &c. S. Omer 1601. in oct. Soon after were certain notes wrote on this by Humph. Ely.

Manifestation of the folly and bad spirit of certain in England, calling them Secular Priests — Printed 1602. qu. This is called a Libel in a Reply made to it by W. C. printed 1603. qu. And it was animadverted upon by A. C. in his Second Letter to his dis-jesuited Kinsman, concerning the appeal, state, Jesuits, &c. Printed 1602. qu.

A Decachordon of 10 Quodlibetical Questions, about the contentions between the Seminary Priests and the Jesuits. — Printed 1602. qu.

De perigrinatione lib. 1. Printed in tw. This I have not yet seen, and therefore know not whether it be in Lat. or Engl.

The Warnword to Sir Franc. Hastings Wastword. — Pr. 1602. in oct.

Answer to O. E. whether Papists or Protestants be true Catholicks. — Pr. (1603.) in oct.

Treatise of the three conversions from Paganism to Christian Religion — Published under the name of N. D. that is Nic. Doleman, in three Volumes in oct. The first Vol. which containeth two parts of the said treatise, was printed at S. Omers an. 1603. The second Vol. which containeth the third part of the treatise, and an Examen of the Kalender or Catalogue of Protestant Saints, Martyrs, and Confessors, devised by Job. Fox, &c. for the first six months, was printed at the said place in 1604. And the third Vol. which containeth also the third part of the treatise, and an Examen of the said Kalender of John Fox for the last six months, was printed at the same place in the same year, under the initial Letters of N. D. When the said three Volumes were first published, they were sold in Oxon for 20 shillings, but some years after the Restoration of K. Ch. 2. I bought them for 3 sh. The same year (1604) came out Around answer to Parsons, alias Doleman the Noddy, in qu. but whither to any of the former treatises, I know not.

A relation of a trial made before the K. of France, upon the year 1600. between the Bishop of Eureux and the Lord Plessis Morhay; about certain points of corrupting and falsifying authors, whereof the said Plessis was openly convicted. S. Omers 1604. in oct. Published under the initial Letters of N. D.

A defence of the precedent relation of a conference about Religion — Printed with the Relation of a Trial, &c.

Review of ten publick disputations or conferences, held within the compass of four years, under K. Ed. and

Q. Mary, concerning some principal points in Religion, especially of the Sacrament and Sacrifice of the Altar. S. Omer 1604. in oct. under the name of N. D.

Fore-runner of Bells downfal; or an answer to Tho. Bells downfal of Popery. — Pr. 1605. in oct.

An answer to the fifth part of Reports lately set forth by Sir Edw. Coke Knight, the Kings Attorney Gen. &c. S. Omer 1606. in qu. Published under the name of a Cath. Divine.

De Sacris alienis non aduendis, quæstiones due: Ad usum praximq; Angliæ breviter explicata. Audomar 1607. in oct.

Treatise tending to mitigation towards Cath. Subjects in England, against Tho. Morton — Pr. 1607. qu. The said Morton was afterwards Bishop of Durham.

The judgment of a Catholick Gent. concerning K. James his Apology for the oath of Allegiance. S. Omer 1608. in qu. Answered by Will. Barlow Bishop of Lincoln.

Sober reckoning with Mr. Tho. Morton — Pr. 1609. qu.

Discussion of Mr. Barlowes answer to The judgment of a Catholick Englishman concerning the Oath of Allegiance. S. Omer 1612. This book being almost finished before Persons's death, was afterwards compleated and published by Tho. Fitzherbert. See more in Tho. Fitzherbert under the year 1640.

The Liturgy of the Mass, of the Sacrament of the Mass — Pr. 1620. in qu.

A memorial for reformation: or, a remembrance for them that shall live when Catholick Religion shall be restored in England, in 3 parts. — 'Tis the same, I suppose, that is called The high Court or Council of Reformation for England. The author of it, tho' twenty years (as 'tis said) in compiling it, (all which time and after, it was secretly kept) yet it was never printed in his time. 'Twas finished by him 1596. and, as I have been informed, 'twas published some years after his death. At length a copy of it coming into his hands of Edw. Gee Rector of S. Benedict, near Paul's Wharf in Lond. and Chaplain in Ord. to K. Will. and Qu. Mary, he published it under this title: A Memorial of the Reformation of England; containing certain notes and advertisements, which seem might be proposed in the first Parliament, and National Council of our Country, after God of his mercy, shall restore it to the Catholick Faith, for the better establishment and preservation of the said Religion. Lond. 1690. oct. To which the said Edw. Gee hath put before it an Introduction, and added some Animadversions.

Controversia nostri temporis in Epitomen redacta. MS. in Baliol coll. Library, written with the authors own hand. In the front of which is this written: Compiler hujusce Epitomes est Robertus Personius, ut patet ex Johanne Rainoldo in censura librorum Apocryphorum, prælectione secunda, pag. 22. ex editione Hieronimi Galleri in nobili Openhemio. He also translated from English into the Spanish tongue, A relation of certain Martyrs in England. Madrid 1590. oct. At length after he had spent his life in continual agitation for the cause, gave up the ghost at Rome 15 Ap. according to the accompt there followed, which is the fifth day of the same month with us, in sixteen hundred and ten, and was buried in the Church or Chappel belonging to the English coll. there. Soon after was a monument put over his Grave, with a large inscription thereon, which for brevity sake I shall now pass by. In the Rectorship of the said English coll. succeeded Tho. Owen a Welsh-man.

RICHARD KNOLLES of the same family 31: with those of his name, living at Cold-Ashby in Northamptonshire, made his first entry into this University, in 1560. or thereabouts, took one degree in Arts four years after, and then was elected Fellow of Lincoln college, where, after he had proceeded in that faculty, did purpose to perform (if God granted him life) something that might be profitable to the Christian Commonwealth, as in time God should give him means and occasions. In the mean while Sir Peter Manwood of S. Stephens near to Canterbury, Knight of the Bath, minding to be a favourer of his studies, called him from the University, and was by him preferred to be Master of the Free-School at Sandwich in Kent, where being settled, he did much good in his Profession, and sent many Young men to the Universities. And tho' he was there in a world of troubles and cares, and in a place that afforded no means of comfort to proceed in great works, yet he performed much for the benefit of History at his vacant hours, upon the desire of the said Sir Peter, as it doth appear by these his works following.

The history of the Turks, Lond. 1610. &c. fol. which book

book he composed in about 12 years time. And tho it all goes under his name, yet some there be that think he was not the sole author of it, because therein are found divers translations of Arabick Histories, in which Language he was not at all seen, as some that knew him have aver'd. In other editions of this book, for there have been at least five, it beareth this title, The general History of the Turks, from the first beginning of that Nation, to the rising of the Ottoman Family, &c. It hath been continued from Knolles's death by several hands; and one continuation was made from the year 1628. to the end of the year 1637. collected out of the dispatches of Sir Pet. Wyche Kt. Embass. at Constantinople, and others, by Tho. Nabbes a writer (for the most part comical) to the English Stage in the Reign of K. Ch. 1. A continuation of the Turkish Hist. from 1623. to 1677. was made by Paul Rycaut Esq; late Consul at Smyrna—Lond. 1679.

The Lives and Conquests of the Ottoman Kings and Emperours, to the year 1610. Lond. 1621. Continued from that time (1610.) to 1621. by another hand.

A brief discourse of the greatness of the Turkish Empire, and where the greatest strength thereof consisteth, &c.

Grammat. Latine, Græcæ & Hebr. compendium, cum radicibus. Lond. in oct. He also translated from the French and Lat. copies into English, The six books of a Commonwealth. Lond. 1606. fol. written by Joh. Bodin a famous Lawyer. At length this our author Knolles dying at Sandwich; before he had quite attained to the age of Man, in sixteen hundred and ten, was buried in St. Maries Church there, on the second of July the same year, leaving behind him the character of an industrious, learned, and religious person.

384. FRANCIS HASTINGS, fifth Son of Francis Earl of Huntingdon, was born, as it seems, in Leicestershire, where his Father mostly lived, educated in Madg. coll. under the tuition of Dr. Laur. Humphrey, in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's Reign, from whom sucking in many Calvinistical Opinions, proved, when he was ripe in years, a severe Puritan and Predestinarian, (as his elder Brother George was, who was trained up at Geneva under Theod. Beza;) and a most zealous Man for the reformed Religion. Two other Brothers also were as zealous for the Church of Rome, yet all for a time lived friendly together. Afterwards our author Francis was Knighted by Q. Elizabeth, and being several times chosen a Parliament-man in her Reign, became a frequent Speaker in them, and at first a violent Man against the Papists, tho afterwards a favourer, especially at that time when he and Sir Rich. Knightly of Northamptonshire presented a Petition to the Parliament for favour, or a toleration to be given to them. Whereby it appeared then to the observer, that the Puritan could joyn with the Papist against the Church of England. He was a learned Gentleman, well read in authors, especially in those relating to the controversies between the Protestants and Papists, as it appears by his works, the titles of which follow.

The Watchword to all true-hearted English-men. Lond. 1598. oct. Which title did imitate that belonging to a book printed at Lond. in qu. an. 1584. running thus, A Watchword to England to beware of Traitors, and treacherous practices, &c. But the Watchword of Sir F. Hastings being answered by Nic. Doleman alias Rob. Persons in his Temperate Wardword, our author came out with,

An apology or defence of the Watchword, against the virulent and seditious Wardword, published by an English Spaniard under the title of N. D. Lond. 1600. qu. In which year came out also another book in defence of Hastings, intit. A brief reply to a certain odious and scandalous Libel, lately published by a seditious Jesuit calling himself, N. D. &c. intit. A temperate Wardword.—Printed at Lond. in qu. but who the author of it was, I know not. Another also who writes himself O. E. published a second reply the same year against the said Temperate Wardword. Against which, or another book relating to the said controversy, came out, A confutation of a vaunting challenge made by O. E. unto N. D. Pr. 1603. in oct. written by W. R. a Rom. Catholic. Our author Sir Francis also wrote,

The Watchword, &c.—Pr. at Lond. 1601. oct. Answer'd by Persons's book called The Wardword, an. 1602.

Meditations.—Printed several times in 160.

Several Speeches in Parliament.—Some of which are printed in H. Townshends Collections.

Remonstrance to his Majesty and Privy Council on the behalf of persecuted Protestants, setting forth his Maj. interest, laying safely in protecting them, and encouraging the preaching of the Gospel, and in being more watchful against the Papists.—MS. in qu.

Discourse of Predestination.—MS. in the hands of the present Earl of Huntingdon, with other things. All or most of which books were written at North-Cadbury in Somersetshire, where he mostly lived after he was married, being also a Justice of Peace for that County. He died in the month of Sept. in sixteen hundred and ten, and was buried 1610. on the 22. of the said month in the Chancel of N. Cadbury Church, near to the body of his Lady, who died 14. June 1596. To the memory of whom, Sir Francis put up a Monument in the wall over her grave, with an inscription thereon, engraven on a Brass plate, leaving then a blank for his own Name to be put after his death, but was never performed.

NATHANIEL POWNOLL, a Kentish Man, 385. born, (in, or near, Canterbury;) was entred a Butler of Broadgates hall in Michaelmas-Term, an. 1599. aged 15. and two years after was made a Student of Ch. Ch. where being an indefatigable plodder at his book, and running through with wonderful diligence all the forms of Philosophy, took the degree of M. of Arts, an. 1607. His life, as it deserved well of all, so it was covetous of no Man's commendation, himself being as far from pride, as his desert was near it. He lived constantly in the University 10 years, in which time he learned eight Languages, watched often, daily exercised, always studied, insomuch that he made an end of himself in an over fervent desire to benefit others. And tho he had, out of himself, sweat all his Oyl for his Lamp, and had laid the Sun a-bed by his labours, yet he never durst adventure to do that, after all these studies done and ended, which our young Novices, doing nothing, count nothing to do; but still thought himself as unfit, as he knew all men were unworthy, of so high an Honour, as to be the Angels of God. And since in him so great examples of piety, knowledge, industry, and unaffected modesty have been long since fallen asleep, there is no other way left but to commend the titles of his Monuments to posterity, which are these.

The young Divines Apology for his continuance in the University.

Meditations on the Sacred Calling of the Ministry.

Comment or Meditation on the first seven Penitential Psalms of David.

His daily Sacrifice.—All which were printed at Cambridge, an. 1612. and the two first at Oxon. 1658. oct. He died in the prime of his years, to the great grief of those who well knew his piety and admirable parts, about the year sixteen hundred and ten, but where buried, unless 1610. in the Cath. of Ch. Ch. I know not. One Nathaniel Pownoll of the City of Bristol Gent. Registrarie of the Diocese of Bristol died 28. March 1611. and was buried in the Chancel of Little S. Austins Church there, but of what kin he was to the former, I know not.

NICHOLAS HILL, a native of the City of 386. London, was educated in Grammaticals in Merchant-Taylors School, in Academics in St. Johns coll. of which he became Scholar in 1587. and in that of his age 17. In 1592. he took a degree in Arts, being then Fellow of that house, left it before he proceeded in that Faculty, and applying himself to the study of the Lukian doctrine, became most eminent in it. About that time he was a great favourite of Edward the poetical and prodigal Earl of Oxford, spent some time with him, while he consumed his Estate beyond the Sea and at home. After that Count's death, or rather before, he was taken into the retinue of that most noble and generous person Henry Earl of Northumberland, with whom he continued for some time in great esteem. At length being suspected to comply with certain Traytors against K. James 1. fled beyond the Seas and there died. He hath written a book intit.

Philosophia Epicurea, Democritiana, Theophrastica, proposita simpliciter, non edocta. Par. 1601. Col. Allobr. 1619. oct. &c. Dedicated to his little Son Laurence Hill. With the last edit. and perhaps with others, is printed, Angeli Politiani prelectio, cui tit. Panepistemon. He left behind him in the hands hands of his Widdow, various matters under his own hand-writing, but nothing that I can learn, fit for the Press. Among them are imperfect papers concerning the Eternity, infinity, &c. of the World, and others of the Essence of God, &c. Some of which coming into the hands of William Backhouse of Swallowfield in Berks. Esq; from the Widdow of the said Nich. Hill, living behind Bow Church in London, about 1836. various copies were taken of them, and Edm. Earl of Mulgrave about that time having a copy, another was taken thence by one Dr. Joh. Everard, part of which I have seen under another hand. This is all, of truth, that I know of Nich. Hill, only that his name is mentioned by (*) Ben. Johnson thus.

Those Atomi ridiculous,
Whereof old Democrite, and Hill Nicholis,
One said, the other swore, the World consists.

There are several traditions going from Man to Man concerning this Nich. Hill, one of which is this, that while he was Secretary to the Earl of Oxford before-mentioned, he, among other accompts, brought in this to him, Item for making a man, 100. — 0 — 0. Which, he being required to explain by the Count, he said he had meerly out of charity given that sum to a poor man, who had several times told him, that ten pounds would make him a man. Another is this, which I had from Dr. Joseph Maynard, sometimes Rector of Exeter coll. (younger Brother to Sir Joh. Maynard Serjeant at Law,) who had it from Mr. Rob. Hues author of the book De Globis, (an intimate acquaintance of Hill,) while he continued in Oxon in his last days, that is to say, That he was one of those learned men who lived with the Earl of Northumberland, that he fell into a Conspiracy with one Bassett, who pretended some right to the Crown. Upon which he was forced to fly into Holland, where he settled at Rotterdam, with his Son Laurence, and practiced Physick. At length his said Son dying there of the Plague, did so much afflict him, that he went into an Apothecaries shop, swallowed poison, and died in the place, &c. which by several is supposed to be about sixteen hundred and ten. But leaving these reports to such that delight in them, and are apt to snap at any thing to please themselves, I shall only say that our author Hill was a person of good parts, but humorous, that he had a peculiar and affected way, different from others, in his writings, that he entertained fantastical notions in Philosophy, and that as he had lived most of his time in the Romish Persuasion, so he died, but cannot be convinced that he should die the death of a Fool or a Madman.

387. WILLIAM GAGER was elected a Student of Ch. Church from Westminster School in 1574. took the degrees in Arts, and afterwards entering on the Law line, took the degrees in that Faculty also, in 1589. About which time, being famed for his excellencies therein, became Chancellour of the Diocess of Ely, and much respected by the Bishop thereof Dr. Martin Heton. He was an excellent Poet, (especially in the Lat. tongue, as several copies of verses, printed occasionally in various books, shew,) and reputed the best Comedian of his time, whether it was Edward Earl of Oxford, Will. Rowley the once ornament for wit and ingenuity of Pembroke hall in Cambridge, Rich. Edwards, Joh. Lylie, Tho. Lodge, Geor. Gascoigne, Will. Shakspeare, Tho. Nash, or Joh. Heywood. He was also a man of great gifts, a good Scholar, and an honest person, and (as it should seem by Dr. Joh. Rainolds's several answers and replies to what this Doctor hath written,) hath said more for the defence of Plays than can be well said again by any Man that should succeed or come after him. The cause for the defence of Plays was very wittily and Scholarlike maintained between the said two Doctors for some time, but upon the rejoinder of Rainolds, Gager did let go his hold, and in a Christian modesty and humility yielded to the truth, and quite altered his judgment. He hath written several Plays, among which are,

Ulysses redux.

Rivales. Both which were several times acted in the large Refectory, of Ch. Ch. but whether ever printed, I cannot yet tell. The last was acted before Albert Alaskie Prince of Sirad, a most learned Polonian, in June 1583. in which year he purposely came into England, to do his devotions to, and admire the wisdom of, Queen Elizabeth. After he had beheld and heard the Play with great delight in the said Refectory, he gave many thanks in his own person to the author.

Meleager, Trag. Written also in Latin, as the two former were, and acted publicly in Ch. Ch. hall, an. 1581. or thereabouts, before the Earl of Pembroke, Rob. Earl of Leicester Chanc. of the Univ. of Ox. Sir Ph. Sidney, and many other considerable persons. This Tragedy giving great delight, was shortly after acted there again, and at length in 1592. 'twas printed at Oxon in oct. to the great content of Scholars. A copy of the said Tragedy, with two letters, being sent by the author to Dr. Jo. Rainolds, (in which letters, as I conceive, were many things said in defence of Theatre fights, Stage-plays, &c.) the said Doctor drew up an answer, dated at Queens coll. 10. Jul. 1592. Whereupon our author Gager making a reply, with a desire to Rainolds to forbear any farther writing against him; yet Rainolds came out with a rejoinder in July 1593. As for Gagers letters and reply, I think they were not printed, for among my searches, I could never see a copy of them. The answer of Rainolds with his rejoinder, I am sure were printed under the title of, The overthrow of Stage-plays, &c. This is all that I know of our author Gager, only that he was living in, or near to, the City of Ely, in sixteen hundred and ten, and that he wrote the Latine Epistle before the book of verses made by the University of Oxon. intit. Exequia D. Philippi Sidnai. Oxon. 1587. qu. In which book also he hath copies of verses on the death of that famous Knight; who, while he was in being, had a very great respect for the learning and virtues of Gager; of whom you may see more in Joh. Rainolds, under the year 1607. and in Will. Heale, who next follows. In 1615. was published a book at London in qu. intit. A refutation of the Apology for Actors, but by whom written I know not, for only the two letters J. G. are set to it.

WILLIAM HEALE, a zealous maintainer of the honour of the Female Sex, was a Devonian born, being originally descended from an ancient and gentile Family of his name, living at South-Heale in the same County, became a Sojourner of Exeter coll. in 1599. aged 18. took the degrees in Arts, and became Chaplain-Fellow of that house, wherein he wrote and compiled,

An apology for Woman: Or, an opposition to Mr. Doctor G. (Gager) his assertion, who held in the Act at Oxon. an. 1608. That it was lawful for Husbands to beat their Wives. Oxon. 1609. qu. What preferment he afterwards had in the Church, or whether he wrote any thing else, I find not. He was always esteemed an ingenious Man, but weak, as being too much devoted to the fem. Sex.

ALBERICUS GENTILIS, the most noted and famous Civilian, and the grand ornament of the University in his time, Brother to the eminent writer Scipio Gentilis, and both the Sons of Matthew Gentilis Doctor of Physick, by Lucretia his Wife, was born at La Chastell St. Genes in a Province of Italy called La Marca d'Ancona, educated mostly in the University of Perugia, where being made Doctor of the Civil Law, in 1572. aged 21. soon after left his Country for Religion sake, with his Father and younger Brother Scipio before-mentioned. The Father and Scipio settled in Germany, but Albericus going into England found relief from several persons in London, and, by recommendations, obtained the patronage of Robert Dudley Earl of Leicester, Chancellour of the University of Oxon. But our learned author being desirous to lead an Academical life, he procured the Chancellours letters for that purpose, dated 24. Nov. 1580. wherein it appears, that he left his Country for Religion sake, and that his desire was to bestow some time in reading and other exercises of his profession in the University, &c. Soon after the date of the said letters, he journeyed to Oxon, and by the favour of Dr. Dan. Donne Principal of New Inn, and his successor Mr. Price, he had a convenient Chamber allowed to him in the said Inn, and not only Monies given towards his maintenance by several Societies, but soon after 6 l. — 13 s. — 4 d. per an. from the common Chest of the University. In the latter end of 1580, he was incorporated Doctor of the Civil Law of this University, as he had stood before in that of Perugia; and after he had continued some years in the said Inn, where he wrote certain books, and laid the foundation of others (of which the Students thereof have gloried in my hearing) he receeded either to C. C. coll. or to Ch. Ch. and became the flower of the University for his profession.

(*) In his Epigrams numb. 134.

In 1587. the Queen gave (a) him the Lecture of the Civil Law for his farther encouragement, which he executed for about 24 years with great applause. As for the books by him published, which speak him most learned beyond the Seas, were all written in the University of Oxon; the titles of which are these.

Comm. in tit. Digestorum & verborum significatione. Hannov. 1614. qu.

Discourse of Marriages by proxy— Written to Eger-ton L. Chancellour of England. These are all, and enough too, that I have seen written by this eminent Doctor Gentilis, and whether any title is omitted, I cannot justly say it. He concluded his last day in the beginning of the year (either in the latter end of March, or beginning of Apr.) in sixteen hundred and eleven, but where buried, unless in the Cathedral of Ch. Ch. in Oxon, is yet uncertain. I have seen a copy of his (*) Will, written in Italian, dat. 14. June 1608. wherein he desires his body to be buried in the place, and in such manner, as his Fathers was, as deep and as near to him as may be, &c. Where his Father Maith. Gentilis died, or was buried, it doth not yet appear to me. Sure it is, if the information of Sir Giles Sweit, LL. D. who well remembred Alb. Gentilis, be right, it is evident, that he the said Alb. Gentilis died in Oxon. He left behind him a Widdow named Hester, who afterwards lived at Rickmansworth in Hertfordshire, where she died in 1648. (wh. Car. 1.) and two Sons Robert and Matthew, the first of which, being afterwards a translator of books, I shall elsewhere remember.

(a) Vide Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 40. (*) In Offic. prerog. in Reg. Cope, part. 2. qu. 12.

RICHARD MULCASTER, Son of Will. 390.

Mulcaster of Carlisle in Cumberland Esq; was born in that City, or at least in the County, educated in Grammaticals in Eaton School near Windfore, elected Scholar of Kings coll. in Cambridge, in 1548. took one degree in Arts there, retired afterwards to Oxon, where he was elected Student of Ch. Ch. an. 1555. and the next year being incorporated Bach. of Arts here, was licensed to proceed in that Faculty in Dec. 1556. Which degree being compleated by his standing in the Art celebrated 5. Jul. in the year following, he became eminent among the Oxonians for his rare and profound skill in the Greek tongue. Afterwards spending more than 4 years in Oxon, in a continual drudgery at his book, made so great proficiency in several sorts of learning, which was exceedingly advanced by his excellencies in Grammar, Poetry, and Philology, that he was unanimously chosen Master of the School erected in London 1561. in the Parish of St. Lawrence Pountney by the worshipful Company of the Merchant-Tailors of that City. In which place exercising his gifts in a most admirable way of instruction, till 1586. (28. Elizab.) in all which time it happily prospered under his vigilancy, St. Johns coll. in Oxon was supplied with such hopeful plants, that it soon after flourished, and became a fruitful Nursery. In 1596. he succeeded one Joh. Harrison in the chief Mastership of St. Pauls School in London, (being then Prebendary of Tatesbury in the Church of Sarum,) and soon after (if not happily before) had the rich Parsonage of Stanford-Rivers in Essex bestowed on him by Q. Elizabeth, which he kept to his dying day. He hath written,

Positions, wherein those primitive circumstances be examined, which are necessary for the training up of Children, either for skill in their book, or health in their body. Lond. 1581. 87. qu.

The first part of the Elementary, which intreateth chiefly of the true writing of the English tongue. Lond. 1582. qu. Whether there was a second part published I know not, for I have not yet seen such a thing.

Catechismus Paulinus, in usum Scholæ Paulinae conscriptus. Lond. 1599. 1601. &c. oct. Written in long and short vers. He died at Stanford-Rivers before-mentioned, 15. Apr. in sixteen hundred and eleven, (having resign'd Pauls School 3 years before,) and was buried 26. of the same month in the Chancel of the Church there, under a stone, which he two years before had laid for his Wife Katherine, on which he caused to be engraven, that she was Wife to Richard Mulcaster, by ancient parentage and lineal descent an Esquire born, who by the most famous Q. Elizabeths prerogative-gift was made Parson of this Church, &c.

JAMES COOK, who writes himself Cocus, received his first breath at Chale in the Isle of Wight, his Grammatical education in Wykehams School, his Academical in New coll. of which he became perpetual Fellow in 1592. being then accounted a good Latin Poet, as several of his copies, which afterwards were printed, testify. In 1608. he proceeded in the Civil Law, being about that time Rector of Houghton in Hampshire, and in good esteem for his profession and excellencies in the Greek tongue. His works are,

Juridicum trium questionum ad majestatem pertinentium determinatio, in quarum primâ & ultimâ processus judicialis contra H. Garnetum institutus ex jure civili & canonico defenditur, &c. Oxon. 1608. qu. Dedicated to Bilson Bishop of Winchester, to whom he was then Chaplain.

Poemata varia. He gave up the ghost in sixteen hundred and eleven, but where buried, unless in his Church of Houghton, I know not. One James Cook of Warwick Chirurgeon, and a pretender to Physick, hath published certain matters relating to Physick and Chirurgery, in the Reign of Oliver and after; and therefore not to be taken for the same with the Civilian.

392. JOHN BLAGRAVE, the second Son of John Blagrove of Bulmarsh Court, near to Sonnyng in Berkshire, by Ann his Wife Daughter of Sir Anth. Hungerford of Downe Ampney in Gloucestershire Knight, was born in Berks. educated in School-learning at Reading, in Philosophical among the Oxonians, particularly, as it seems, in St. John's coll. about the time of its first Foundation. But leaving Oxon without the honour of a degree, retired to his Patrimony which was at Southcote Lodge in the Parish of S. Mary at Reading, and prosecuted with great Zeal his Mathematical Genie to so considerable an height, that he was esteemed the flower of Mathematicians of his age. He hath written and published these books following.

A mathematical Jewel, shewing the making and most excellent use of an Instrument so called: the use of which Jewel, is so abundant, that it leadeth the direct pathway through the whole art of Astronomy, Cosmography, Geography, &c. Lond. 1585. fol.

Of the making and use of the Familier Staff so called, as well for that it may be made usually and familiarly to walk with, as for that it performeth the Geometrical mensurations of all altitudes, &c. Lond. 1590. qu.

Astrolabium Uranicum generale. A necessary and pleasant Solace and Recreation for Navigators in their long journeying, containing the use of an Instrument or general Astrolabe, &c. compiled 1596. — Printed in qu.

The Art of Dyalling in two parts. The first shewing plainly, &c. Lond. 1609. qu. with other things as 'tis probable which I have not yet seen. This worthy Mathematician, who had a most generous love for his kindred, gave way to fate in sixteen hundred and eleven, and was buried in the Church of S. Laurence within the antient Borough of Reading. Soon after was a fair Monument erected in the Wall (with his Bust to the middle) over-against the Desk there, where his Mother was before buried. Part of the Epitaph which is engraven under his said Bust or proportion, runs thus. Johannes Blagravius totus Mathematicus, cum matre Sepultus: Obiit 9. Aug. 1611.

*Here lies his Corps, which living had a Spirit, Wherein much worthy knowledge did inherit.
By which, with zeal, one God he did adore,

From one of the brethren of this Mathematician, was descended Daniel Blagrove a Counsellour at Law, who running with the rout in the beginning of the Rebellion, was chosen a Burgess for Reading, to serve as a Recruiter in the Parliament, began at Westminster 3. Nov. 1640. About the same time he was made Steward of Reading and Treasurer of Berks. and had given to him the Exegenters Office of the Common Pleas, then esteemed 500*l.* per an. Afterwards he was one of the Judges of K. Ch. 1. bought the Kings Fee-Farm of the great Mannor of Sonnyng before-mentioned, and other Estates at very easie rates, was Master extraordinary in Chancery, a constant Rumper, and a great persecutor of the ministers in and near Reading, especially when an Act of Parliament issued out for the ejection of such, whom they then (1654.) called Scandalous, ignorant and insufficient Ministers and Schoolmasters. At length upon the approach of his Majesties Restauration, in 1662 he fled from the justice, retired to Acon in Germany, where living some years under a disguised name, died in an obscure condition, an. 1668. and was buried in a certain piece of ground, somewhat distant from that City, appointed to receive the bodies of such whom they there call Hereticks.

393. RALPH BUCKLAND, an Esquires Son, was born of, and descended from, an antient and gentile family of his name (living at West-Harptre) in Somersetshire, became a Commoner of Mag. coll. in Mich. term, 1579. aged 15 or thereabouts, but before he took a degree, he went to London and studied the municipal Laws for some time. At length being inflam'd with a love to the Rom. Cath. Religion, he left his Parents, Country, and the prospect of a fair Inheritance, (for he was the first Heir to his Father) and went forthwith (by the instigation without doubt of some Priest) to the English coll. at Rheimes; in which place, and at Rome he spent about 7 years in the eager obtaining of knowledge in Philosophy and Divinity. Afterwards being made Priest and sent into the mission of England, lived chiefly, I presume, in his own Country, and spent above 20. years in doing offices belonging to his profession. The things that he hath written and published are these.

Seven sparks of the enkindled Soul.

Four lamentations, which composed in the hard times of Qu. Elizabeth, may be used at all times, when the Church happeneth to be extremely persecuted.

Drawn out of the holy Scriptures after the form of Psalms. — Printed in twelves.

In the Title, or end, of these two little things (with which was printed A Jesus Psalter, but by whom written, or published it appears not) there is no place or time mentioned, where, or when, they were printed, neither is the Epistle dedicatory to his Mother B. B. dated: However that they were printed after K. James 1. came to the Crown of England, appears in the first Psalm p. 12. thus By the hand of thy great Servant James, Shake off our Yoke: that we may find him an honourable Comforter, — Beautifie him with a name, more precious than his Crown: by the true name of a good King, &c. A Copy of the said two little things, which contain Ejaculations very full of most fervent devotion for the reconciliation of England and Scotland to the Rom. Church, coming afterwards into the hands of the most learned Dr. Usher Primate of Ireland, he took occasion in a (*) Sermon preached in S. Maries Church in Oxon, 5. Nov. 1640. to tell the learned Auditor then present, that the said two books having been printed at Rome in 1603. or thereabouts, the Gunpowder-Treason which was discovered two years after in England, was then there known, and Prayers sent up to God Almighty for a prosperous success thereof, from certain passages therein (drawn, as 'tis said in the title, out of the holy Scripture) which he then publicly read before them, some, it not all, of which are these. — Psalm 2. p. 25 confirm their hearts in hope: for the redemption is not far off. The year of visitation draweth to an end: and jubilation is at hand. — Psalm 2. p. 32. But the memory of novelties shall perish with a crack: as a ruinous house falling to the ground. — Ibid. p. 33. He will come as a flame that burneth out beyond the Furnace, &c. His fury shall fly forth as Thunder. — Psalm 4. p. 54. The crack was heard into all Lands; and made Nations quake for fear. — Ibid. p. 66. In a moment canst thou crush her bones, &c. All which passages, delivered from the Pulpit, by that learned and godly Archbishop, being then generally believed, I must make bold to tell the Reader, being an eager pursuer of Truth, that by the several Copies of the said Books which I have seen, it doth not appear at all, that they were printed at Rome, or elsewhere: and if it may really be guessed by the make or mould of the Letter, where-with they were printed, I should rather take them (as one or more Doctors of this University do the like) to have been printed, either at Rheimes or Down, or not unlikely at Antwerp; for at Rome there were seldome before that time, then, or since, such fine or clear letters used, as, by multitudes of Books, which I have seen, that were printed at that place, appears, nor indeed ever were, or are, any English Books printed there. Our author Buckland hath also written,

An Embassage from Heaven, wherein our Lord Christ giveth to understand his indignation against all such, as being catholickly minded, dare yeild their presence to the rites and publick prayers of the Malignant Church — Printed in octavo, but where, or when, it appears not, either in the beginning, or end, of the said Book. He also translated from Lat. into English a Book entit. De persecutione Vandelica. lib. 3. Written by Victor Bishop of Biserte or Benserte in Africa. Which Bishop was in great renown according to Bellarmino (†) an. Ch. 490. Also the six Tomes of Lawr. Surin entit. De vitis Sanctorum. Which translation I have seen often quoted, under the name of Robert (instead of Ralph) Buckland. What else our zealous Author hath written and translated, I find not as yet, nor any thing else of him, only that he dying in sixteen hundred and eleven, was buried, I presume, in his own Country near to the Graves of his Ancestors, who were all zealous R. Catholics, but since not. He left behind him among the Brethren the character of a most pious and seraphical person, a person who went beyond all of his time for fervent devotion.

FRANCIS THYNNE was lineally descended from Thom. at the Inne, otherwise Thynne, of Stretton in Shropshire, Son of Ralph Botevill of the same place, descended from an ancient and gentle Family of his name living elsewhere, was educated in Grammaticals in Tunbridge School in Kent, (in which County, as it seems, he was born,) where being fitted for higher learning by Jo. Proctor Master thereof, (whom I have mentioned elsewhere,) was thence sent to this University, at which time several of his Surname of Wylts, studied there, and one of both his names, and a Knight's Son of the same County, was a Commoner of Magd. coll. in 1577. Whether our author Franc. Thynne went afterwards to Cambridge, or was originally a Student there before he came to Oxon, I cannot justly say it. Sure it is, that his Genie tempting him to leave the crabbedness of Logick and Philosophy, and to embrace those delightful studies of Histories and Genealogies, he became at length one of the Officers of Arms, by the title of Blanch-Lyon, and afterwards Herald by that of Lancaster, which he kept to his dying day. His works are,

The Annals of Scotland in some part, continued from the time in which Ra. Holinshed left, being an. 1571. unto the year 1586. Lond. 1586. fol. There are also the catalogues of the Protectors, Governours or Regents of Scotland during the King's Minority, or the Minority of several Kings, or their insufficiency of Government. There are also the catalogues of all Dukes of Scotland by creation or descent, of the Chancellours of Scotland, Archbishops of St. Andrews, and divers writers of Scotland.

Catalogue of English Cardinals.—Set down in R. Holinshed's Chron. at the end of Q. Mary: Used and followed in many things by Francis Bishop of Landaff, in his Cat. or Hist. of them, at the end of his book De Prasubibus Anglia Com.

Cat. of the Lord Chancellours of England.—MS. From which, as also from the endeavours made that way by Rob. Glover sometimes Somerset Herald, and of Tho. Talbot formerly Clerk of the Records in the Tower of London, John Philpot, Som. Herald, did frame his Cat. of the Chanc. of England, &c. Lond. 1636. qu.

The perfect Embassador, treating of the antiquity, privileges and behaviour of men belonging to that function, &c.—This was published in 12°. in the times of the late Usurpation, and therefore is supposed to be very imperfect.

A discourse of Arms, wherein is shewed the blazon, and cause of divers English, Foreign, and devised Coats, together with certain Ensigns, Banners, Devices, and Supporters, of the Kings of England.—MS. sometimes in the Library of Ralph Sheldon of Beoly Esq. now (by his gift 1684.) among the books of the College of Arms near St. Pauls Cath. in London. The beginning of this MS. written to Sir Will. Cecyll Lord Burghley, is this, I present unto your rare judgment (right honourable and my singular good Lord) no vulgar conceit of Armory, &c. The discourse is dated from Clarkemwell Green, 5. Jan. 1593.

Several collections of Antiquities, notes concerning Arms, monumental Inscriptions, &c.—MS. in Cottons Lib. under Cleopatra. C. 3. p. 62.

Miscellanies of the Treasury.—MS. written to Tho. Lord Buckhurst, an. 1599.

Epitaphia, five monumenta Sepulchrorum Anglicæ & Latinæ, quam Gallicæ.—MS. in a thin fol. in the hands of Sir Henry St. George Clarenceaux K. of Arms. The said Inscriptions, with Arms and Epitaphs, were collected in his travels through several parts of England, and through some of France, and have been ever acceptable to such curious men, and Antiquaries, that have had the happiness to see them. Several of his collections were transferred to obscure hands, which without doubt would be useful if they might be perused; but 'tis feared by some, that they are turned to waste paper. I have seen divers collections of Monuments, made by him from Peterborough Cath. in 1592. several of which Mon. were lost and defaced before Sir Will. Dugdale, or Sim. Gunton made their respective surveys of that ancient Edifice, an. 1640. 41. What other things our author Thynne hath written I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he died in sixteen hundred and eleven. But that which I have forgotten to let the Reader know farther of him, is, that he had several Notes on, and corrections of, Chaucer's Works lying by him; with the helps of which, he did intend to put out that author, with a comment in our English tongue, as the Italians have Petrark and others in their language. But he having been taken off from that good work, he did assist Tho. Speght of Cambridge with his notes and directions, as also with considerable materials for the writing Chaucer's life. Whereupon the said Speght published that author again in 1602. (having in the former edition 1597. had the notes and corrections of Job. Stow the Chronologer for his assistance,) whereby most of Chaucer's old Words were restored, and Proverbs and Sentences marked. See more in Will. Thynne, under the year 1542. from whom, if I mistake not, this Francis was descended.

THOMAS HOLLAND was born at Ludlow 395. in Shropshire, elected Socius Sacerdotalis, commonly called Chaplain Fellow of Balliol coll. 13. Jan. 1573. being then Bach. of Arts, and a most noted disputant in that house, and in 1575. proceeding in that Faculty, he became a solid Preacher. Afterwards he took the degrees in Divinity, left his Fellowship in 1583. succeeded Dr. Humphrey in the Divinity-chair 1589. and Glasier in the Rectory of Exeter coll. an. 1592. In which house continuing almost 20 years, appeared in sight under him at one time these noted Scholars, Edw. Chetwind, Dan. and Samp. Price, Rich. Carpenter, Tho. Winniff, Job. Flemmyng, Job. Standard, Job. Whetcombe, Job. Prideaux, &c. all Doctors of Divinity. Sim. Baskervill, Rob. Vilvaine, &c. eminent Physicians, with others, to the great credit of our common Mother. This learned Dr. Holland did not, as some, only sip of learning, or at the best drink thereof, but was mersus in Libris; so that the Scholar in him, drown'd almost all other relations. He was esteemed by the precise men of his time, and after, another Apollo, mighty in Scriptures, and so familiar with the Fathers, as if he himself was a Father, and in the Schoolmen, as if he had been a Seraphical Doctor. He hath published, Oratio cum Henricus Episc. Sarisburiensis gradum Doctoris suscepisset habita. Oxon. 1599. qu.

Serm. on Matth. 12. 41. Oxon. 1601. qu. He had also a considerable hand in the translation of the Bible, appointed by K. Jam. 1. an. 1604. and left behind him at his death, several things fit for the Press. He departed this mortal life on the 17. of March in sixteen hundred and eleven, and was on the 26. of the said month (an. 1612.) buried in the Chancel of St. Maries Church in Oxon; where being then present all the degrees of the University, Dr. Kilbie Rector of Linc. coll. laid open to them, in a Sermon, the great learning and vertues of him the said Dr. Holland.

JOHN FENNE, a noted translator from Lat. 396. and Ital. into English, and from English into Latin, was born at Mountacute near Wells in Somersetshire, educated in the rudiments of Grammer and Musick, in the condition of a Chorister within the Precincts of the Cathedral there. Afterwards at riper years he was sent by his Relations to Wykeham's School near Winchester, to the end that he might be fitted for the University. Where, in a short time making great proficiency, he was elected Probationer of New coll. in 1550. (4. Ed. 6.) and two years after being made perpetual Fellow, was then appointed one of those that were to study the Civil Law, which the statute of that house stiles Civilista, but whether he took a degree in that Faculty, it doth not appear in the University Registers. In the Reign of Q. Mary he became Schoolmaster of St. Edmundsbury in Suffolk; where, by his excellent faculty in teaching, the boys were advanced very much in Grammatical learning. But upon the alteration of Religion in the beginning of Q. Elizab. he was forced thence by the giddy zeal of two Scots, that were then settled in those parts. At length he gave a farewell to England, went into the Low Countries, and afterwards into Italy, where spending 4 years in study, returned to the Low Countries again, where, partly at Lovaine (at which place he was at length made Confessor to the English Nuns) and partly in the Cities adjacent, he spent about 50 years, as an exil'd person, doing extraordinary benefit in the way he professed. He hath written,

Vita quorundam Martyrum Angliæ.—Which, with other matters by him written, may be seen a book intit. Concertatio Eccles. Catholica in Angliæ, &c. See more in Job. Bridge-water, an. 1594. He also translated from English into Latin several of the Books of Cardinal Job. Fisher, as,

(1) Commentary on the Seven Penitential Psalms. Which book Fisher wrote at the desire of Margaret Countess of Richmond.—Pr. 1509. in qu. (2) Sermon of the Passion of our Saviour. (3) Serm. concerning the justice of the Pharisees and Christians, &c. Also from Lat. into Engl. (1) The Catechism of the Council of Trent. (2) A learned and very eloquent treatise, written by Hieron. Osorius, Bishop of Sylva in Portugal, wherein he confuteth a certain answer, made by Mr. Walt. Haddon, against the Epistle of the said Bishop unto the Queens Maj. Lov. 1568. oct. in 3 books. And lastly from Italian into English, (1) The life of the Blessed Virgin S. Catherine of Siena.—Print. 1609. oct. originally written by Dr. Caterinus Senensis. (2) Treatise of tribulation. Written by Caccia Guerris. (3) The 15 Mysteries of the Rosarie. Written by Gasp. Loart. And, lastly, collected from divers ancient English books, Spiritual Treatises, for the use of the Nuns of the Order of St. Bridgit, and other things which I have not yet seen. He ended his days at Louvaine, after the year sixteen hundred and eleven, and was, as I presume, buried within the precincts of the Monastery belonging to the English Nuns there. He had a younger Brother named Rob. Fenne, who was admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1555. but removed thence, by the Queen's Commis-sioners, for being a R. Catholick an. 1562. having a little before been honoured with the degree of Bach. of the Civil Law. Another Brother also he had, called James Fenne, who was first a Chorister of New coll. and afterwards Scholar of that of C.C. an. 1554. but put aside from the degree of B. of Arts, and from his place in the said coll. for refusing to take the Oath of Supremacy. Afterwards he settled in Glocester hall, where he had several Pupils committed to his charge, and was had in great respect by the Seniors of that house. Thence, being forced, he retired to his native Country, (Somersetshire) where he taught a private School, and soon after married. But his Wife dying, he went beyond the Seas, settled at Rheimes for a time, and was made a Priest. Afterwards returning into England, he settled in his native Country, but being soon after apprehended, was conveyed to London, and there kept in prison several weeks. At length being condemned to die, according to the Statute against Seminaries, was executed at Tybourne with George Haddock, Tho. Emerford, and Joh. Nutter, 12. Febr. 1583. All which are inrolled among the R. C. Martyrs, that suffered during the Reign of Q. Elizabeth.

397. JOHN CARTWRIGHT, who seems to have been descended from the Cartwrights of Washbourne in Glocestershire, received his Academical education in Magd. coll. but whether he took a degree in this University, it appears not. Afterwards he travelled, was, as it seems, in holy Orders, and after his return published these books following.

The Preachers travels: Wherein is set down a true Journal to the confines of the E. Indies through the great Countries of Syria, Mesopotamia, Armenia, Media, Hircania, and Parthia, &c.

A relation of Sir Anth. Sherley's entertainment in the Court of the K. of Persia.

Description of the Port in the Persian Gulf commodious for the East-India Merchants of England.

Rehearsal of some gross absurdities in the Turkish Alcoran.—Which four Treatises were printed in one vol. at London, 1611. in qu. At which time the author of them was living in Southwark near London. Afterwards the said treatises being contracted, were remitted into Sam. Purchas's second part of Pilgrims, lib. 9. p. 1422.—London. 1625. fol.

358. JOHN BOND (Bondius) a most noted critick in Greek and Latin learning of his time, was born in Somersetshire, educated in Grammaticals in Wykeham's School near Winton, became a Student in this University about the nineteenth year of his age, an. 1569. took a degree in Arts 4 years after, being either one of the Clerks or Chaplains of New coll. and much noted for his proficiency in Academical learning. In 1579. he proceeded in Arts, and had soon after the Mastership of the Free-School of Taunton St. Mary's Madg. in his own Country conferred on him by the Warden and Society of New coll. At which place continuing many years, he did exercise such an admirable way of teaching, that many departed thence so excellently well grounded in humane learning, that they proved afterwards eminent either in Church or State. At length being in a manner worn out with the drudgery of a School, he did for diversion, I cannot say profit, practice Physick, tho he had taken no degree in that Faculty in this University, and became at length Chief Secretary to the Lord Chancellor of England (Egerton) if one (*) of his admirers may be credited. As for his writings, which are used by the Juniors of our Universities, and in many Free-Schools, and more admired and printed beyond the Seas, than in England, they are these.

Commentarii in Poemata Q. Horatii Flacci. Printed 1606. oct. and several times after beyond the Sea, and at London.

Comment. in sex Satyras A. Persii. London. 1614. oct. published after the author's death by Rog. Prowse, who married his Daughter Elizabeth. He hath at least written, if not published, other things, but such I have not yet seen. He yielded up his last breath on the third of Aug. in sixteen hundred and twelve, (being then possessed of several lands and tenements in Taunton, Wilton near Taunton, and in Newenton.) and was buried in the Chancel of the Church at Taunton before-mentioned. Over his grave was this Epitaph soon after put.

Qui Medicus doctus prudentis nomine clams,

Eloquii splendor, Pieridumque decus.

Virtutis cultor, pietatis vixit amicus,

Hoc jacet in tumultu spiritus alta tenet.

The Reader is now to know that there was another John Bond, but after the time of the former, Son of Dennis Bond of Dorchester in Dorsetshire, who having been educated in his youthful years under John White, commonly called The Patriarch of Dorchester, and from him sucked in most dangerous principles, was sent to Cambridge, and placed, I think, in S. Johns coll. where he took the degree of Bach. of Civ. Law. Afterwards he was made a Lecturer in the City of Exeter, and carried himself conformable for a season. But when the times turned, in 1641. and he saw that the Puritan began to be uppermost, then did he Preach very seditiously, and published what he had said under this title, A door of Hope: Also holy and loyal activity. Two Treatises delivered in several Sermons in Exeter. The first on Psal. 126. 1, 2. and the other on Exod. 17. 11.—London. 1641. qu. Both which do contain most scandalous and rebellious stuff, besides what he preached in a Serm. in the said City before the Deputy-Lieutenants.—London. 1643. qu. So that having thus began his pranks, and shewed himself a zealous Brother for the Cause, and a rank Covenanteer, he was made Preacher or Minister of the Savoy in the Strand near London, (in the place of Joh. White before-mentioned, when he passed over the water to Lambeth, to take possession of the Rectory there, belonging to Dr. Dan. Featly.) one of the Assembly of Divines, and about that time Doctor of the Laws. This J. Bond, by the way you must know, being scarce warm in the Pulpit, but he began to threaten Heaven with some of his Divinity, by telling the auditory with great zeal, that they ought to contribute, and pray, and do all they were able to bring in their Brethren of Scotland, for the settling of Gods Cause; I say this is Gods Cause, and if ever God had any Cause, this is it; and if this be not Gods Cause, then God is no God for me, but the Devil is got up into Heaven, &c. About the same time he became a frequent Preacher before the Long Parliament, and hath 3 or more Sermons preached before the Members thereof published, as, (1) Salvation in a mystery, &c. on Jer. 45. 25. London. 1644. qu. It was a Fast Serm. pr. before the H. of Commons, 27. Mar. 1644. (2) Ortus occidentalis, or a dawning in the West, &c. on Isa. 25. 9. London. 1645. qu. 'Twas a Thanksgiving Serm. for the Parliament Forces their gaining of Bathe, Bridgwater, Sherborne Castle, &c. preached before the H. of Commons 22. Aug. 1645. and on the eleventh of Dec. following the said J. Bond was made Master of the Hospital called the Savoy under the great Seal. (3) A Thanksgiving Serm. before the H. of Com. on Psal. 50. 23. London. 1648. qu. preached on the 19. Jul. 1648. In which year he had a Serm. published, intit. Grapes among Thornes, preached before the H. of Commons. In all which Sermons, as in others, which he delivered in London and Westminster, are contained many strange positions, rebellious doctrines, religious cantings, (*) Tho. Coryat in his Letters from the Court of the Great Mogul, &c. London. 1616. p. 45.

and I know not what. About that time he was made (*) Master of Trinity hall in Cambridge, which Mr. Jo. Selden refused, and in 1654. he was made an assistant to the Commissioners of Middlesex and Westminster, for the ejection of such, whom they then called scandalous and ignorant Ministers and Schoolmasters. These things I thought fit to let the Reader know, that posterity may distinguish between the said two Bonds, the first a polite and rare crick, whose labours have advanced the Common-wealth of learning very much; and the other an impudent, canting, and blasphemous person; who by his doctrine did lead People to Rebellion, advance the cause of Satan much, and in fine, by his, and the endeavours of his Brethren, brought all things to ruine, meerly to advance their unfatiable and ambitious desires. He lived, as I conceive, to the Restauration of K. Ch. 2. an. 1660. being then about 49 years of age; but when, or where he died, I cannot yet learn. His Father Dennis Bond before-mentioned, who was Son of Joh. Bond of Luton in Dorsetshire, and he the Son of Dennis of the same place, was bred up to the Trade of a Woollendrapery in Dorchester; being then a constant hearer and admirer of Jo. White aforesaid, was elected Burgess (with Denzil Hollis) for the Borough of Dorchester (of which he was then Alderman) to serve in that unhappy Parliament which began at Westminster 3. Nov. 1640. In which, shewing himself an active person, first under the opinion of a Presbyterian, and afterwards of an Independent, was design'd and prick'd down for one of the Judges of K. Ch. 1. an. 1648. but whether he fate, when Sentence was pass'd upon him, I cannot justly say it, notwithstanding one or more authors say, that he did then sit, and was numbred among the Judges. On the 14. Feb. next following the decollation of that King, he was appointed one of the 30 persons for the Council of State, and ever after shewed himself a Devoto to Oliver's interest. On the 30. of Aug. 1658. being then Monday, and the windiest day that had before hapned for 20 years, he paid his last debt to nature, being then tormented with the Strangury and much anxiety of Spirit. At which time, as the then vulgar talk was, the Devil came to take away Oliv. Cromwell, who then lay on his death-bed, but being not prepared for him, he gave Bond for his future appearance, and accordingly on Friday following being the 3. of Sept. he made good his promise. The carcase of Dennis Bond was buried in the Abby Church of St. Peter at Westminster, where continuing about three years, was (with the bodies of other Cromwellians) taken up in the month of Sept. 1661. and buried in St. Margarets Church-yard adjoining, before the back-door of the lodgings belonging to one of the Canons of Westminster. I find one John Bond to be author of a Pamphlet intit. A whip for the Judges, Bishops, and Papists, &c. Lond. 1641. Of another also called, The downfal of the old Common-Counsel-Men.—Pr. there the same year, and of a third intit. The Poets recantation. Lond. 1642. qu. but I take this John Bond to be different from the other Joh. who was a Presbyterian, and afterwards an Independent. I find another John Bond later than all the former, who is now, or at least was lately, a Barrester of Grays-inn, who wrote and published, A compleat Guide for Justices of the Peace, &c. in two parts. Lond. 1685. in oct.

RICHARD WHYTE, or Vitus as he writes himself, the Son of Henry (†) Whyte of Basingstoke in Hampshire, (by Agnes his Wife, Daughter of Rich. Capelin of Hampshire,) the Son of Tho. Whyte, the Son of Jenkin (sometimes called John) Whyte, (who had almost half the Town of Basingstoke in his own possession,) the Son of Tho. Whyte of Purvyle in Hampshire, (which Thomas was Gr. Grandfather to John Whyte sometime Bishop of Winton.) was born in the Town of Basingstoke before-mentioned, trained up in Grammar learning in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1557. took one degree in Arts, but before he had that of Master conferred on him, he absented himself from his college, and the time limited for his absence being spent, his place was pronounced void in 1564. A little before that time he went to Louaine, and afterwards to Padua in Italy, where applying his Muse to the study of the Civil and Canon Law, became Doctor of them. At length going to Doway he was constituted the King's Professor of those Laws, (in which place he continued above 20 years,) married two rich Wives, (of which one was an Inheretrix) grew wealthy, was made by order of the Pope Magnificus Rector, tho out of his ordinary turn, and about the same time was created Comes Palatinus. Which title is commonly conferred by the Imperials on their Professors. At length having buried two Wives, he was by the dispensation of P. Clem. 8. made a Priest, and about the same time had a Canonry in St. Peters Church in Doway bestowed on him. The first thing that made him known to curious Scholars, was his exposition of an ancient enigmatical Epitaph, which was in his time remaining near to Bononia, the title of which is,

Elia Lalia Crispis.—Epitaphium antiquum in agro Bononiensi adhuc videtur; à diversis hætenus interpretatum variè: novissimè autem a Ric. Vito Basingstochio, amicorum precibus explicatum. Patav. 1568. in 6 fh. and a half in qu. dedicated to Christoph. Johnson chief Master of Winchester School. Afterwards he wrote and published, Orationes quinque, de circulo artium & Philosophia—De eloquentia & Cicerone.—Pro divitiis Regum,—Pro doctoratu,—De studiorum finibus, cum notis. Attrebat. 1596. oct. The two first, which were spoken at Louaine, were published by Christoph. Johnson before-mentioned, about 1564. and commanded by him to be read publickly in the said School near Winton. by the Scholars.

After this last was published, all the nine books were bound together, and had this general title put to them. Historiarum Britannica Insula ab origine mundi ad annum Domini octingentesimum, libri novem priores. Duac. 1602. in a thick oct. Before the Preface to the Reader is the author's picture, and before the beginning of the work it self, are his arms, viz. Parted per chevron embatled arg. and gul, three roses, leaved vert, counter-changed of the field, on a chief of the second, a Lyon passant, or; all within a bordure Ermine. The creast is, A Stork or Crane standing, resting its right foot on the top of an hour-glass. With this Motto under all, Pius vigila. Allowed to our author Count Rich. Whyte, with two Dragons for the Supporters, by Sir Will. Dethick, Garter, principal King of Arms, in allusion to the Arms of his Kinsman, Dr. John Whyte sometimes Bishop of Winton, whose Arms are quite different from those of his Brother, Sir Joh. Whyte Lord Mayor of London, an. 1563.

At length this learned person dying at Doway, in sixteen hundred and twelve or thereabouts, was buried in the Parish Church of St. James there. Contemporary with him in New coll. was one Will. Pomerell Chaplain of that house, who taking the degree of Bach. of Arts in 1557. went afterwards to his native Country of Ireland and became beneficed in Drogheda. From thence he went to Louaine, where by continual hearing of Lectures and Disputations, more than by private study he obtained great knowledge in Divinity, gaining thereby (as 'twas usually said of him) all his learning by hearsay. He died at Louaine in 1573. being then Bach. of Div.

400. NICHOLAS FITZHERBERT, second Son of John Fitzherbert, second Son of Sir Anth. Fitzherbert, Knight, (the great Lawyer,) Son of Ralph Fitzherbert of Norbury in Derbyshire Esq; was a Student in Exeter coll. and exhibited to by Sir Will. Petre, about 1568. but what continuance he made there, I know not. Sure 'tis, that his bare name stands in the Register called Matricula, under the title of Coll. Exon, in 1571. and 72. he being then the Senior Under-graduat of that College. About that time he left his native Country, Parents and Patrimony for Religion sake, and went beyond the Seas as a voluntary Exile. At first he settled at Bononia in Italy, purposely to obtain the knowledge of the Civil Law, and was living there in 1580. Not long after he went to Rome, took up his station there, and in the year 1587. began to live in the Court of Will. Alan the Cardinal of England, (whose person and vertues he much adored,) and continued with him till the time of his death, being then accounted eminent for his knowledge in both the Laws, and for humane literature. His works are, Oxonienfis in Anglia Academia descriptio. Rom. 1602. in 3 sh. and a half, in oct.

De antiquitate & continuatione Catholica Religionis in Anglia. Rom. 1608. in oct.

1612. Vita Cardinalis Alani Epitome. He also translated from the Italian, into the Latin tongue, Joh. Casa Galatemi de moribus. Rom. 1595. He was drowned in a journey taken from Rome in sixteen hundred and twelve, but where, or in what Church, buried, I know not, nor what his employment was after the death of the said Cardinal, notwithstanding I have sent more than once to the English coll. at Rome for resolution, but have received no answer.

401. GEORGE BLACKWELL, a Middlesex Man born, was admitted Scholar of Trinity coll. at 17 years of age, 27. May 1562. Probationer in 65. being then Bach. of Arts, perpetual Fellow the year following, and Master of his Faculty in 67. But his mind being more addicted to the Catholick, than Reformed, Religion, he left his Fellowship, and retired to Gloucester hall for a time, where he was held in good repute by Edm. Rainolds and Th. Allen, the two learned Seniors. Afterwards going beyond the Seas, where he spent some time in one of the English Seminaries, newly erected to receive exil'd Catholicks of the English Nation, was at length in the year 1598. constituted by Henry Cardinal Cajetane Protector of the English Nation at Rome, (with leave first obtained from P. Clem. 8.) the Superiour of the of the English Clergy, with the Power and Name of Archpriest of England, and by the said Pope made Notary of the Apostolick Seat. This matter being taken very ill by the Ecclesiastical Papists of our Nation, and the rather for this reason, that Blackwell was altogether at the beck of Henr. Garnet Provincial of the Jesuits of England, they fell (a) together by the Ears in their own Country in a most grievous manner. For the Jesuits against the Secular Priests fought continually with sharp pens, poisoned tongues, and contumelious books, insomuch that they detracted in an high degree from Blackwells authority. Hereupon he degraded them of their Faculties, so that afterwards they appealing to the Pope of Rome, he caused them in a book to be declared Schismatics and Hereticks. This aspersions they soon wiped off, having the censure of the University of Paris approving the same, which was answered by Blackwell, as I shall tell you anon. The office of Archpriest he kept till 1607. at which time George Birket a learned Priest succeeded. And the reason of the change was, because our author having been taken near Clerkenwell by London 24. June the same year, was committed first to the Gatehouse in Westminster, and afterwards to the Clink in Southwark, and consequently deprived of liberty required to act in his Office. Soon after, upon his taking the oath of Allegiance, he was freed from the Clink, and set at liberty. Concerning which matter there was a book published intit. The examination of George Blackwell, upon occasion of his answering a Letter sent by Cardinal Bellarmine, who blamed him for taking the oath of Allegiance. Lond. 1607. qu. As for those things which were written by our author Blackwell, who was by those of his persuasion, and others too, accounted a learned and pious Man, and a good Preacher, the titles of them follow.

Answer to the Censure of Paris in suspending the Secular Priests obedience to his authority.—dat. 29. May 1600. Replied upon by Joh. Dorel or Darrel Dean of Agen, the same year. See more in a book intit. Relation of a Faction begun at Wisbich, in 1595. &c. Printed 1601. in qu. p. 81. Afterwards was a book printed intit. In Geor. Blackwellum quaestio bipartita, written by Joh. Milson.—Lond. 1609. but whether it relates to the said controversie, I cannot tell, for I have not yet seen it.

A Treatise against Lying, and fraudulent Dissimulation.—MS. among those given to Bodlies Lib. by Archb. Land, 40. E. 45. At the end of which is the approbation of the book written by the hand of Blackwell, and subscribed by him as fit for the Prefs. So that no other name being put to it, hath caused our Librarians to insert him in the Catalogue of MSS. as the author of it; whereas he was not, but rather Franc. Tresham, as I have told you elsewhere. He, the said Blackwell died suddenly (having been much troubled with swooning fits) on the 12. of Januar. in sixteen hundred and twelve, and was buried, as I conceive, in some Church in London. This next person according to time and order that must crave place, is one, who, tho no writer worth the remembrance, yet hath he been the greatest promoter of learning that hath yet appeared in our Nation.

402. THOMAS BODLEY, another Protonotary, eldest Son of John Bodley of the City of Exeter (by Joan his Wife, Daughter and Heir of Rob. Hone of Otterie S. Mary in Devon, Esq;) Son of Joh. Bodley of Tiverton, second Son of John Bodley of Dunscumbe near Crediton in Devon. Gent. was born in the said City of Exeter, 2 Mar. 1544. partly educated in Grammar learning in the said City, but mostly in Geneva, while his Father lived there as a voluntary Exile in the time of Q. Mary; where, tho he was then very young, yet he was an auditor of Chevalierius in Hebrew, of Berealdus in Greek, of Calvin and Beza in Divinity, and of some other professors in the University there, (then newly erected,) besides his domestical teachers in the house of Philebertus Saracenus, a famous Physician in that City, (with whom he was boarded,) where Rob. Constantinus, that made the Greek Lexicon, read Homer to him. After the death of Q. Mary he returned into England with his Father, and was sent to Magd. coll. in 1559. where making great proficiency in Logick and Philosophy under Mr. Laur. Humphrey, was admitted Bach. of Arts in Jul. 1563. and soon after being elected Probationer of Merton coll. determined in the Lent following. In 1565. he, by the persuasion of some of the Fellows of that house, and for his private exercise, did read publicly for some years a Greek Lecture in the hall of that coll. without expectation of any reward or stipend for his labour. Nevertheless it pleased the Society to allow him soon after, of their own accord, four Marks by the year. In 1566. he was admitted Master of Arts; which degree being completed, he read Nat. Philosophy for an year in the Pub. Schools then situated on the East side of Schoolstreet. In 1569. he was elected Junior Proctor of the University; which office he performing with great commendations, bestowed some time in the study of sundry Faculties, without any inclination to profess any one above the rest. At length being desirous to travel beyond the Seas, for the obtaining of knowledge of some special modern tongues, and for the increase of his experience in the managing of affairs, (to no other end but to employ himself, and all his cares, in the publick Service of the State,) did with leave from the Warden and Society of his coll. depart England, with the allowance belonging to a traveller, an. 1576. and continued near 4 years in Italy, France, and Germany. Afterwards returning to his coll. he remained there for some time in studying politicks and historical affairs, and in 1583. he was made Esquire of the Body to Q. Elizabeth. At length in 1585. having about that time married Anne the Daughter of . . . Carew of the City of Bristol, (the rich Widdow, as I have heard, of one Ball) was employed by the Queen to Frederick K. of Denmark, Julius Duke of Brunswyke, William Lantgrave of Hesse, and other German Princes. Which employmnet being faithfully performed, he was sent to K. Hen. 3. of France, at what time he was forced by the Duke of Guise to leave Paris. In 1588. he was sent to the Hague for the better conduct of the Queen's affairs in the United Provinces; where making his residence for some years, was admitted one of their Council of State, took place in their Assemblies next to Count Maurice, and gave a suffrage in all that was proposed. In 1593. he returned into England for a time, to look after his private Estate, but was soon after remanded to the Hague again by the Q. where continuing near one year, returned again to deliver some secret overtures to her, and to perform thereupon an extraordinary service. Soon after, (the applauding the fruit of his discoveries, he was presently commanded to return to the States, with charge to pursue those affairs to performance, which he had secretly proposed. At length, all things being concluded, and brought to the desired issue, he procured his last revocation, in 1597. At his return, as before in his absence, Burleigh the Lord Treasurer, did several times tell the Queen, that there was not any Man in England so meet as Bodley to undergo the office of Secretary, by reason of his well-tryed Wisdom in the Low-Country affairs. intending that he should be Colleague with his Son Rob. Cecil. But the Earl of Essex commending him also to the Queen in a higher manner, not without biting calumniation of Cecil, Burleigh found means to divert the Queens mind from him, supposing that Essex endeavoured to gain him to his party against Burleigh and Cecil. So that Mr. Bodley being eased of ever expecting that troublesome office, he retired from the Court, and wholly commended himself to the care and provision for learning, worthy indeed the care of the greatest King. For about that time setting up his staff at the Library door in Oxford, did restore, or rather new found it; the particulars of which I have (*) elsewhere told you. After K. Jam. came to the Crown, he received the Honour of Knight. from him, and a few years before his death, wrote,

His Life,—an. 1609. Which being kept as a choice rarity in the archives of his Library was published at Oxon. 1647. qu. But this little thing, is not the reason that I put him among the Oxford Writers, but because by his noble and generous endeavours, he hath been the occasion of making hundreds of publick Writers, and of advancing in an high degree the Commonwealth of learning; in which respect he should have craved the first place, but I have put him here, according to the time of his death, which is the method I observe.

Letters of State.—Some of which I have seen published, not in one vol. but scatteredly.

Letters relating to Books and Learning. Written to Mr. Tho. James—MS. in his Lib. He paid his last debt to nature 28. Jan. in sixteen hundred and twelve, and was buried with very great solemnity at the upper end of Merton coll. Choire. The manner of which you may see at large in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 320. The Reader may be pleased now to understand that Dr. Joh. Morris Canon of Ch. Ch. did bequeath to the University of Oxon. a Rent-charge of 5 l. per an. to be given to a Master of Arts that should make and speak a Speech in praise of Sir Tho. Bodley, every year on the 8. of Nov. (on which day the Visitation of his Library is commonly made,) to be nominated by the Dean of Ch. Ch. and confirmed by the Vicechancellour for the time being. But the said gift was not to take place till the death of his Widdow. At length upon her decease, which was at Great Wolford in Warwickshire, 11. Nov. 1681. (he being then the Wife of Tho. Keyt of that place Gent.) the said annuity fell to the University. Whereupon the year following, Dr. Fell Dean of Ch. Ch. nominating one of his own house, (Tho. Sparke M. A.) there was a solemn Speech made by him in the Schola Linguarum, on the 8. Nov. 1682. Which Speech is yet continued by Ch. Ch. (c) men, without any regard had to those of Allsoul's coll. wherein Dr. Morris had much of his education, and had been Chaplain thereof, or to any Master of another coll. or hall. The said Sir Thom. Bodley had a younger Brother named Josias Bodley, who having received part of his education in Merton coll. became afterwards a Soldier of note in Ireland, a Knight, and Overseer of the Trenches when the English laid Siege to Kingsale, Baltimore, Berehaven, and Castlehaven in Ireland, holden against them by the Irish, assisted by the Spaniard, an. 1601. at which time Bodley behaved himself bravely both in their Works and Battle. He left behind him to posterity, (1) Observations concerning the Fortresses of Ireland, and the British Colonies of Ulster. MS. fol. sometimes in the Library of Sir Jam. Ware, now perhaps in that of Henry E. of Clarendon. (2) A jocular description of a journey by him taken to Lecale in Ulster. an. 1602. MS. Sometimes in the same Library.

WILLIAM WARMINGTON a Dorsetshire Man ⁴⁰³ born, was, as a Member of Hart hall, (then presided by one, who was always in animo Catholicus,) matriculated, 20. Dec. 1577. aged 21. or more, having been there a Student for some time before. Shortly after he left the Nation, and his Religion, and spending some years in a Seminary, in Philosophical and Theological studies, was made a Priest, and sent into the Mission of England; but being soon after taken, he was with others conveyed on Shipboard in the Month of Feb. 1584. and sent beyond the Seas with great menaces of utter ruine, if they return again. Afterwards being noted in Foreign Countries by those of his own Nation for his learning and piety, he was made Chaplain to Cardinal W. Alan, with whom continuing till about the time of his death, did return again into England, being then, as he styles himself, An Oblate of the holy Congregation of S. Ambrose, and did execute his Function very zealously among the Brethren. At length being apprehended by two Pursevants 24. Mar. 1607. and committed Prisoner to the Clinke in Southwark, the next day, according to the English accompt, by the Bishop of London's order, he entred somewhat more deeply into consideration of the controversie about the Oath of Allegiance, than he had done before, while at liberty. So that in the end making sufficient proof of his Loyalty towards his Majesty, by accepting of the Oath, when it was required of him, he did thereupon premeditate and provide reasons for so doing; and at length reducing into method, for the help of his memory, certain notes in scattered papers that he had collected concerning that matter, did frame thence a compleat discourse. At length, after it had laid by him for some time, did publish it under this title, tho he knew 'twould displease his Holiness, who in his breves had either admonished or prohibited all Rom. Catholicks to take the Oath of Allegiance, or to teach the lawfulness of it.

A moderate defence of the Oath of Allegiance: Wherein the author proveth the said Oath to be most lawful, notwithstanding the Pope's Breves, &c.—Printed by permission of the Superiours, in 1612. qu. Whereunto is added, The Oration of P. Sixtus 5. in the Consistory of Rome, upon the Murther of K. Hen. 3. the French King, by a Fryer.

Strange Reports, or News from Rome.—Printed with the former book. Upon the publishing of these things, the Friends of the author Warmington, and his kindred of the Rom. Perswasion, became his Enemies, and withdrew from him all the benevolence they used to allow him. Warmington therefore being put to his shifts for maintenance, for this his Loyalty and Obedience, petitioned (d) the King for some allowance. His petition thereupon was received, and he commended by his Majesty to Dr. Bilson Bishop of Winchester, with order to take him to himself to his own house, there to provide for him. The Bishop obeyed, Warmington lived with him, wanted nothing, had his liberty as he pleased, and freedom of his Religion.

404. ROBERT WOLCOMBE or Wollocombe born of, and descended from, the antient and gentile family of the Wollocombs of Wollocombe in Devonshire, was educated for a time in Exeter coll. left the University without a degree, and became beneficed in his own Country, where he was much resorted to, especially by the precise Party, for his frequent and edifying way of Preaching. His works are,

A glass for the Godly; containing many comfortable Treatises to perswade man from the love of this World, to the love of the world to come, &c. Lond. 1612. oct. in two Parts. The first dedicated to Sir Edw. Seymour of Bury-pottery in Devon, containeth 7 Treatises, which are no other than the effect of Sermons. The first is entit. The seeking of Heaven, on Mat. 6. 33. The second part dedicated to Sir Edw. Giles Kt. containeth likewise 7 Treatises, the first of which is entit. Spiritual balm for the afflicted, on Joh. 16. 20.

A Letter to a pensive friend — Printed and bound with the former parts. He also translated from Lat. into English The restitution of a Sinner, entit. The restoring again of him that was fallen. Lond. 1581. oct. Written by St. John Chrysostome. What other things he hath written and translated, I cannot tell, nor when he died. I find one of both his names, a Ministers Son of Devonshire, to have been matriculated as a member of Exeter coll. an. 1584. aged 16. which I take to be Son to the Writer.

405. THOMAS TWYNE, Son of Joh. Twyne mention'd under the year 1581. was born in the City of Canterbury, admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. 6. Jul. 1560. and Probationer 9. Nov. 1564. being then Bac. of Arts. Afterwards proceeding in his Faculty, he applyed his Muse to the study of Medicine, retired to Cambridge, where he continued for a time, and then settling at Lewes in Sussex where his Patron Tho. Lord Buckhurst lived, practiced his faculty and became successful therein. In 1593. he was admitted Bac. of Physick of this University, and afterwards being doctorated at Cambridge; was famed not only for Medicine, but Astrology, and much respected by Dee and Allen. He hath written, Almanacks and Prognostications for divers years — Printed in the time of Qu. Elizabeth, and then much valued, as Dee's were.

The garland of godly flowers, carefully collected out of the Garden of the holy Scripture, &c. Lond. 1589. in tw. And did also translate from Lat. into English (1) The breviary of Britayne, &c. containing a learned discourse of the variable estate and alteration thereof. &c. Lond. 1573. oct. written by Hump. Lhuyd. This translation being esteemed very good of its time, was usher'd into the world by the copies of Verses of Thom. Brown Prebendary, and Edw. Grant Schoolmaster, of Westminster, Lodowick Lhuyd, Laurence and Joh. Twyne brethren to the Translator. (2) The dialogue of witches, in fore-time called Lot-tellers, now commonly called Sorcerers. Lond. 1575. oct. written by Lamb. Danaus. (3) Christian natural Philosophy concerning the form, knowledge, and use of all things created, &c. Lond. 1578. qu. written by the said Danaus. (4) New counsel against the Plague. Lond. in oct. written by Pet. Droet. (5) The Tragedies of Tyrants, exercised upon the Church of God from the birth of Christ, to 1572. Lond. 1575. oct. written by Hen. Bullenger. (6) Physick against fortune, as well prosperous as adverse. Lib. 2. Lond. 1579. qu. written by Franc. Petrark. (6) The eleventh, 12. and 13. books of Virgils Aeneids. Lond. 1584. and 1620. qu. Which translation shews him (Tho. Twyne) to be a tolerable English Poet. The nine first Books of the said author were translated by Thom. Phaer, as I have before told you, under the year 1560. the tenth also was began by him, but he dying before he had done half of it, was taken in hand by our author Twyne, and by him finished 23. May 1573. At length after he had obtained a considerable Estate by his practice at Lewes in Sussex before mention'd, died there on the first of Aug. in sixteen hundred and thirteen, aged 70. whereupon his body was buried in the Chancel of the Church, usually called S. Anne, but more properly S. Peter and S. Mary Westont in Lewes.

Over his Grave was soon after a bras fixed to the East wall of the said Chancel, having engraven thereon 14 verses; a copy of which, you may read in Hist. & Amiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 238. a.

JOHN WILLIAMS, A Caermarthenshire man, born, became a Student in the University 1569. was elected Fellow of Allsouls coll. in 1579. being then Master of Arts. Afterwards he was made Parson of Llanderico, Margaret Professor, Dean of Bangor (in the place of Rich. Parry promoted to the See of S. Asaph) Doctor of Div. and at length Principal of Jesus coll. He hath written,

De Christi justitia & in regno spirituali Ecclesie pastorum officio, concio ad clerum Oxon. in cap. 10. Rev. verfi. 1. Oxon. 1597. qu. He also published Rog. Bacon's book De retardandis senectutis accidentibus, & sensibus confirmandis. Oxon. 1590. in oct. He died on the fourth of Sept. in sixteen hundred and thirteen, and was buried, as I suppose, in the Church of S. Michael in Oxon. In his Margaret Professorship succeeded Dr. Seb. Benefield, in his Deanery Edm. Griffith, and in his Principality Griffith Powell, of all whom, mention shall be made in their respective places.

THOMAS OVERBURY, Son of Nich. Overbury of Boorton on the hill near to Morton in Marsh in Gloucestershire Esquire, by Mary his Wife Daughter of Giles Palmer of Compton-Scorsen in the Parish of Ilmington in Warwickshire, was born at Compton-Scorsen in the house of his Mothers Father, and educated partly in Grammar learning in those parts. In Michaelmas Term an. 1595. he became a Gent. Commoner of Queens coll. in the year of his age 14. where by the benefit of a good Tutor and severe discipline, he made great proficiency in Logick and Philosophy. In 1598. he, as a Squires Son, took the degree of Bac. of Arts, which being compleated by Determination in the Lent following, he left the University, and settled for a time in one of the Temples, where he had before been entred in order to study the municipal Laws. Afterwards he travelled for a time, and returned a most accomplished person, which the happiness of his Pen both in Poetry and Prose doth declare. About the time of the Coronation of King Jam. 1. he became familiar with Sir Rob. Carre Kt. of the Bathe, who perceiving him to be a person of good parts and abilities, and withal sober and studious, did take him nearer to, and made, him his bosome friend. Soon after Carre being in great favour with the King, he not only procured Overbury to be Knighted at Greenwich 19. June 1608. but his Father to be made one of the Judges in Wales about that time. But so it was that a familiarity being made between Carre then Viscount Rocheester, and the Lady Frances Daughter of Thomas Earl of Suffolk and Wife of Robert E. of Essex, it did so much distaste Overbury, who knew her to be a Woman of no good reputation, that he endeavoured out of pure affection and friendship to diswade Carre from her company, fearing withal (upon very good grounds then on foot) that he might in the end marry her, and so consequently ruin his honour and himself, adding, that if he went on in that business, he would do well to look to his standing. Which advice Carre taking impatiently, because thereby he had touch'd the Lady in her honour, discovered all to her. Whereupon she thinking that he might prove a great obstacle to their enjoyment of each other, and to the marriage then design'd, she never ceased, till she had procured his overthrow. It happening therefore about that time, that Overbury being designed to be sent Embassador into Russia by the King, which was proposed to him by the Lord Chancellor, and the Earl of Pembroke; Carre, (whose counsel he asked) advised him to refuse the service, by making some fair excuse. Which advice he followed, supposing that it did proceed out of kindness; but for his refusal he was committed to the Tower 21. Apr. 1613. Soon after he being closely confin'd, she by her instruments endeavoured to work his ruine by Poyson, (the particulars of which are now too many to enumerate) but Nature being very strong in Overbury, it was repell'd by breaking out in botches and blaynes on his Body. At length by a poyson'd Clifter given to him under pretence of curing him, he was dispatch'd in Sept. following.

But

But before two Months were past, all being discovered, his death was closely examined, and several persons being found guilty of, and consenting to, it, were afterwards executed, viz. Sir Jervise Elwaies Lieutenant of the Tower consenting, Rich. Weston and James Franklin, who attended Overbury in his Chamber, and gave him the Meats and Broaths wherein the poyson was mingled, and Anne Turner Widdow, the preparer of them, actually concerned in the matter. Some time after, Carre, then Earl of Sommerfet, and his Lady Frances before-mentioned, were brought to their trials for contriving his death, and hiring others to make him away; who being both found guilty, had the sentence of death passed on them, but through the clemency of the King being spared, they were only banished the Court. As for our author Overbury, who in learning and judgment excelled any of his years, (which, as 'twas generally thought, made him while living in the Court to be proud, to overvalue himself, undervalue others, and affected, as 'twere, with a kind of insolence,) hath written,

A Wife. Being a most exquisite and singular Poem of the choice of a Wife, &c.—Printed several times at Lond. while the author lived. In 1614. it was printed there again in qu. being the fourth or fifth impression, bearing this title, A Wife, now the Widdow of Sir Tho. Overbury, being, &c.

Characters: Or, witty descriptions of the properties of sundry persons. — Which Characters, as 'tis observed, were the first that were written and published in England. To them are added, (1) Certain Edicts from a Parliament in Eutopia; written by the Lady Southwell. (2) Newes from any whence; or old truth under a supposal of novelty, occasioned by divers Essays and private passages of Wit, between sundry Gentlemen upon that subject. (3) Paradoxes, as they were spoken in a Mask before his Majesty at Whitehall. (4) The Mountebanks Receipts. (5) Songs.

Observations in his travells upon the state of the 17. Provinces, as they stood, an. 1609.—Printed 1627. qu. This goes under his name, but doubted by some, whether he wrote it.

Observations upon the Provinces united. And on the state of France. Lond. 1651. oct. with his picture before it, an. etat. 32. This also is doubted, whether ever he wrote it.

The arraignment and conviction of Sir Walt. Raleigh at the King's Bench Bar at Winchester, 17. Nov. 1603. &c. Lond. 1648. in 5 sh. in qu. Said to be copied by Sir Tho. Overbury, but doubtful. He yielded up his last breath, occasioned by poyson, as I have before told you, on the 15. Sept. in sixteen hundred and thirteen, and was buried, as some authors say, presently and very unreverently in a pit digged in an obscure and mean place. But the Register of the Tower-Chappel, dedicated to S. Peter ad vincula, faith he was buried in the said Chappel 15. Sept. (being the day of his death) an. 1613. as I have been informed by the Letters of that learned Gent. Sir Edw. Sherburne Knight, late Clerk of his Maj. Ordinance and Armories within the Kingdom of England. Over his Grave tho no memory by writing was ever put, yet Ben. Johnson's Epigram (a) written to him will eternize it, and other verses by the Wits of his time, set before his Poem called A Wife, and in particular that Epigram written by Owen (b) the Welsh Bard, running thus.

*Uxorem angelico describis carmine talem,
Qualem oratorem Tullius, ore potens.
Qualem describis, quamvis tibi nuberet Uxor,
Aequalis tale non foret illa viro.*

Our author Sir Tho. Overbury had a Nephew of both his names, a Knight, and Justice of the Peace for the County of Gloucester, who lived, and enjoyed the inheritance of the Overburys at Boorton on the hill before-mentioned. He wrote, (1) A true and perfect account of the examination, trial, condemnation, and execution of Joan Perry and her two Sons John and Rich. Perry, for the supposed Murder of Will. Harrison Gent. &c. Lond. 1676. in 4 sh. and half in qu. Written by way of Letter to Thom. Shirley Doctor of Physick in London. (2) Queries proposed to the serious consideration of those who impose upon others in things of divine and supernatural revelation, and prosecute any upon the account of Religion; with a desire of their candid and christian resolution thereof. Printed 1677. Answered by George Vernon Rect. of Boorton on the water, the same year, in his Ataxia obstaculum. Whereupon Sir Tho. came out with a reply intit. Ratiocinium vernaculum: or a Reply to Ataxia obstaculum. Being a pretended answer to certain Queries dispersed in some parts in Gloucestershire. Lond. 1678. oct. This Sir Tho. Overbury was not educated in any University, only was a great Traveller in parts beyond the Seas, and afterwards a favourer of Protestant Dissenters; which is all I know of him, only that he sold his Inheritance at Boorton on the hill to Alex. Popham Esq; about 1680. and afterwards retiring to an Estate that he had at Adminton in Queinton Parish in Gloucestershire, died there 28. Feb. 1680. and was buried in Queinton Church.

JOHN HARMAR, a most noted Latinist, Gre-^{408.} cian, and Divine, was born at a Market Town called Newbury in Berks, educated in Grammaticals in Wykehams School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. 1574. took the degrees in Arts, was made the Kings Professor of the Greek Tongue in this University, 1585. (being then in holy Orders,) one of the Proctors thereof two years after, chief Master of Winchester School for nine years, Warden of the coll. there 17 years, and at length Doctor of Divinity, being always accounted a most solid Theologist, admirably well read in the Fathers and Schoolmen, and in his younger years a subtle Aristotelian. The chief actions of his Life, an account of his travels, of his disputing at Paris with the great Doctors of the Rom. Party, and also of the things that he had written and published, his Nephew John Harmar (whom I shall mention under the year 1670.) promised to give unto me a full narration in writing; but sickness, and death soon after, following, prevented him. He hath published, (1) Chrysostomi Archiep. Constant. Homelia sex, ex MSS. cod. in bib. coll. Novi. Oxon. 1586. (2) Chrysostomi Homelia ad populum Antiochenum, omnes, excepta prima, cum Latina versione Homelia decima nona, qua in latinis etiam exemplaribus haecenus desiderata est. Lond. 1590. He also translated from French into English, Sermons on the three first Chapters of the Canticles. Ox. 1587. qu. Written by Theod. Beza: And from Lat. into English, Sermons on the 10. Commandments. Lond. 1581. qu. written by Job. Calvin; and had a prime hand in the translation of the New Testament into English, at the command of K. Jam. I. an. 1604. At length paying his last debt to nature on the eleventh of Oct. in sixteen hundred and thirteen, 1613. was buried at the upper end of New coll. Choir. His Epitaph you may read in a book intit. Historia & Antiquit. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 152. a. He was a considerable Benefactor to the Libraries of both Wykehams colleges.

EDWARD BREREWOOD, Son of Rob. ^{409.} Br. Wet-Glover, thrice Mayor of the City of Chester, was born, and educated in Grammar learning, there; applied his Muse to Academical studies in Brazenose coll. in the latter end of 1581. aged 16. or thereabouts, where continuing an indefatigable Student several years, took the degrees in Arts, and then, as 'tis said, translated himself to St. Maries hall. In 1596. he became the first Astronomy Professor in Gresham coll. in London; wherein, as in Oxon, he always led a retired and private course of Life, delighting with profound speculations, and the diligent searching out of hidden verities. It was also observed, that tho he never published any thing, while he enjoyed this earthly Tabernacle, yet to avoid the fruitless curiosity of that which some take upon them, to know only that they may know, he was ever most ready in private, either by conference or writing to instruct others, repairing unto them, if they were desirous of his resolution in any doubtful points of learning, within the ample circuit of his deep apprehension. The things that he wrote were many, the first of which that was published, was, as I conceive, this.

De ponderibus, & pretiis veterum nummorum, eorumque cum recentioribus collatione, lib. 1. Lond. 1614. qu. Published by his Nephew Rob. Brerewood of Chester, who was Commoner of Braf. coll 1605. aged 17. Remitted into the eighth vol. of the Criticks, and in the Apparatus before the first vol. of the Polyglot Bible. He also wrote, Enquiries touching the diversity of Languages, and Religion, through the chief parts of the World. Lond. 1614. 23. 35. &c. qu. and in 1647. &c. in oct. published by the said Rob. Brenewood, who, if I mistake not, hath written a large and learned Preface to it.

Elementa Logica in gratiam studiosæ juventutis in Acad. Oxon. Lond. 1614. and 15. &c. in oct.

Tractatus quidam Logici de Prædicabilibus & Prædicamentis. Oxon. 1628. 37. &c. oct.

Treatise of the Sabbath. Oxon. 1630. qu. Which coming in MS. into the hands of Nich. Byfield a Minister in Chester, and by him answered, was replied upon by our author in,

A second Treatise of the Sabbath. Ox. 1632. qu. The Puritans, it seems, then (before our authors death 1613.) did verily think there was a Plot against the power of godliness, but could never be pulled down, whilst the Sabbath stood upright, and therefore the Patrons of impiety (as they said) did rightly project to take that out of the way, which stood so much in theirs. Rich. Byfield did vindicate his Brother against Brenewood, and Joh. Ley wrote partly against him in his Sunday a Sabbath. An old and zealous Puritan named Theophilus Brabourne, an obscure Schoolmaster, or, as some say, a Minister of Suffolk, was very stiff for a Sabbath in his books published 1628. and 31. and endeavoured to take off all objections that might be said against one; yet by maintaining the indispensable morality of the fourth Commandment, and consequently the necessary observation of the Jewish Sabbath, did incline several of his Readers to Judaism. Tho. Broad, who was esteemed an Anti-Sabbatarian, did write almost to the same effect that Brenewood did, tho Brenewood's first book did dissent from his opinions in those points, opposed by George Abbot in his Vindicia Sabbathi, wherein are also surveyed all the rest that then had lately written on that subject concerning the Sabbath, viz. Francis White B. of Ely, Pet. Heylyn D. D. and Christop. Dowe, whose several treatises on the said subject, he calls Anti-Sabbatarian.

Tractatus duo, quorum primus est de meteoris, secundus de oculo. Oxon. 1631. Published by Tho. Sixsmith M. A. and Fellow of Bras coll.

Commentarii in Ethica Aristotelis. Ox. 1640. qu. Published by the said Sixsmith, and 'tis called by some Brenewood de moribus. The original MS. of which, written with his own hand, in the smallest and neatest character, that mine eyes ever yet beheld, was by him finished 27. Oct. 1586.

The Patriarchal Government of the ancient Church, declared by way of answer unto four questions, &c. Ox. 1641. qu. He ended his days in Gresham coll. of a Fever, to the great reluctancy of all good men, that knew the learning and the excellencies of the person, on the fourth of Nov. in sixteen hundred and thirteen, and was buried the eighth day of the same month, near to the Readers Pew, in the Chancel of the Church of Great S. Helen, within the City of London. In his Lectureship of Astronomy in the said coll. succeeded Edm. Gunter, as I shall tell you elsewhere.

410. WILLIAM WESTERMAN was entred a Commoner of Gloucester hall, in the latter end of 1583. took one degree in Arts, translated himself to Oriel coll. proceeded in that Faculty, and by continual study and unwearied industry, he became a proficient in Divinity, and Minister of Sanbridge in Hertfordshire. Afterwards his merits introducing him to the knowledge of Dr. Abbot Archbishop of Canterbury, was by him made his Chaplain, so that taking the degree of Doctor of Div. was also by him preferr'd to a Dignity. He hath published, Several Sermons, as; (1) A prohibition of revenge, on Rev. 12. 19. Lond. 1600. oct. (2) Sword of maintenance, on Amos 5. 15. Lond. 1600. oct. (3) Faithful Subject, or Mephibosheth, on 2 Sam. 19. 29, 30. Lond. 1608. oct. (4) Salomons Porch, or a Caveat, &c. on Eccles. 4. 17. Lond. 1608. oct. (5) Jacobs Well, on Joh. 4. 6. Lond. 1613. oct. &c. What other things he hath published, I know not, nor any thing else of the author.

JOHN DUNSTER, born of a Family of his^{411.} name living at Doneat near to Ilminster in Somersetshire, was made Demy of Magd. coll. in 1598. aged 16. perpetual Fellow 1602. afterwards Master of Arts, Proctor of the University 1611. and at length Chaplain to Archb. Abbot, who bestowed on him a Benefice or Dignity about 1613. in which year Dunster resigned his Fellowship. He hath published, Cæsar's Penny, Serm. on 1 Pet. 2. 13, 14. Oxon. 1610. oct.

Prodromus. Or a literal exposition of the 79 Psalm, concerning the destruction of Jerusalem. Lond. 1613. oct. in Clar. his younger days, being esteemed a noted Poet by his^{1613.} Contemporaries, had several copies of verses printed in various books, especially in that made by the Society of Magd. coll. on the death of a noble young Man of that house named Will. Grey, Son of Arth. Grey Baron of Wilton, who died 18. Feb. 1605.

WILLIAM SYMONDS, an Oxfordshire Man^{412.} born, was elected Demy of Magd. coll. in 1573. and perpetual Fellow six years after, but whether he was M. of A. it appears not. About the time that he was made Fellow, he entred into holy Orders, and had a Spiritual Cure bestowed on him at Halton Holgate in Lincolnshire, by Sir Rob. Bertie Lord Willoughby; where continuing several years, was called thence and became at length Preacher at S. Saviours Church in Southwarke, and D. and D. 1613. He was a person of an holy life, grave and moderate in his carriage, painful in the Ministry, well learned and of rare understanding in Prophetical Scriptures. He hath written,

Pisgah Evangelica, according to the method of the Revelation, presenting the History of the Church, and those Canaanites over whom she shall triumph. Lond. 1605. qu.

Virginia. Serm. at White-chappel in the presence of many honourable and worshipful, the Adventurers and^{Clar.} Planters for Virginia, 25. Apr. 1609. on Gen. 12. 1, 2, 3. 1613. Lond. 1609. qu. What other things he published, I cannot yet find, nor to what year he lived.

WILLIAM CHEEKE, who writes and en-^{413.} titles himself Austro-Britannus, became a Student in Magd. coll. in the beginning of the year 1592. took one degree in Arts, as a Member of Madg. hall, in Lent Term 1595. which being compleated by Determination, he left the University, and afterwards wrote and published certain matters, of which, one is intit.

Anagrammata & Chronogrammata Regia. Lond. 1613. oct. Clar. In which book are several copies of Latin and Greek^{1613.} verses, which shew the author to have been a good Poet in the time he lived.

ROBERT HOVEDEN, a Kentish Man born, was elected Fellow of Allsouls coll. in 1565. took the de-^{414.} grees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1570. and in the year following, being then 27 years of age, he was elected and confirmed Warden of the said coll. About the same time entring into holy Orders, he was made Domestick Chaplain to Matthew Archb. of Canterbury, afterwards Prebendary of the Cath. there, Prebendary of Henstridge in the Church of Wells, Prebendary of Clifton in the Church of Lincoln, and at length Doctor of Div. He hath written, Henrici Chicheleii Cantuar. Archiepiscopi, collegiique Omnium Animarum apud Oxonienses fundatoris vita. Written in Dec. 1574. and hath this beginning, Henricus Chicheleius in pago prope Northamptoniam, &c. It is a short thing, and is kept in MS. under the authors hand in Allf. coll. and served as an Apparatus of a larger life, written by Dr. Arth. Duck.

Catalogus Custodum & Sociorum coll. Om. Animarum.—MS. It commences at the foundation of the college, and reaches down to Hoveden's days, and by others continued to these times. This Catalogue, tho it is trite and slender, and now and then faulty, yet it hath instructed me in many things, when I was in composing this and a preceedent work. It is commonly in the custody of the Warden, and hath in the beginning of it the life of the Founder before-mentioned. This worthy Doctor died on the 25. of March in sixteen hundred and fourteen, and was buried towards the upper end of Allf. coll. chappel. A^{1614.} copy copy of his Epitaph you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univers. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 185. a.

415. JOHN SPENSER, a Suffolke man born, was originally one of the Clerks of C. C. coll. and being Bach. of Arts in 1577. was elected Greek Reader of the same, 9. June in the year following, not without great opposition of Mr. Joh. Rainolds whose resignation it was. On the 7. May 1579. he was admitted Fellow, and the year after took the degree of Master of Arts. So that entering into Orders he became a noted Preacher, Chaplain to K. Jam. 1. and a great admirer of Rich. Hooker and Rainolds before mention'd. On the death of the last he was elected President of the said coll. and revered by all good men for his knowledge, learning and piety. At the time of his death he left several things fit for the Press, among which was a Sermon publish'd by Hamlet Marshall his Curate, bearing this title.

A learned and godly Sermon at Pauls Crofs on Esay 5. 2. 3. Lond. 1615. qu. But this is not all that he is to be remembred for, for, for several years before his death, he took extraordinary pains, together with a most judicious and compleat Divine named R. Hooker before mention'd, about the compiling of a learned and profitable work, which he published, (I mean some of the books of Ecclesiastical Policy) yet would not he be moved to put his name to tho he had a special hand in, it, and therefore it fell out that tulit alter honores. Our Author Spenser also, did about four years after Hooker's death publish the five Books of Eccles. Policy together in one Volume, with an Epistle before them, subscribed by J. S. and reprinted at London with some of his smaller works (which had been before published) by Hen. Jackson, an. 1622. fol. He the said Dr. Spenser gave way to fate 3. Apr. it sixteen hundred and fourteen, and was buried in Corp. Ch. coll. Chappel. Over his Grave is a fair Monument, with his bust, and an inscription; a copy of which you may read in Hist. & Antiq. Univers. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 244. b. His Picture is painted on the Wall of the School gallery in Oxon, among our eminent English Divines.

416. WILLIAM BATHE, was born within the City of Dublin in Ireland, Studied several years in this University with indefatigable industry, but whether in any of the three houses wherein Irish men of his time studied, viz. in Univ. coll. Hart, or Glocester-hall, or whether he took a degree, I find not. Afterwards, under pretence of being weary with the Heresie professed in England (as he usually call'd it) left the Nation, the Religion that he was brought up to, and entred himself into the Society of Jesuss, in 1596. being then between 30. and 40. years of age. After he had spent some time in that order, he was sent from Flanders to Padua to increase his studies: which being compleated, he went into Spain, where at Salamanca he presided the Seminary of that Nation ad formationem spiritus. He was endowed with a most ardent zeal for the obtaining of Souls, and was beloved of, and respected by, not only those of his own Order, but of other Orders for his singular vertues and excellencies of good conditions. He hath written

Introduction to the Art of Musick, wherein are set down exact and easie rules, with arguments and their solutions, for such as seek to know the reason of the truth: which rules, he means, whereby any by his own industry, may shortly, easly, and regularly, attain to all such things, as to this Art do belong. Lond. 1584. qu. This book he wrote while he was a young Student in Oxford, being then much delighted in the faculty of Musick.

Janua linguarum: seu modus maxime accomodatus, quo parefit aditus ad omnes linguas intelligendas. Salam. 1611. Published by the care of the Irish Fathers of the Jesuits Order living at Salamanca, and is used at this time there for the instruction of Youth. He also wrote in the Spanish Tongue, Preparation for the administring of the Sacrament, with greater facility and fruit of repentance, than hath been already done. Millan. 1604. Published by Joseph Creswell under the name of Pet. Manrique. He also (W. Bathe) wrote in English, but his name not put to it,

A methodical institution concerning the chief mysteries of Christian Religion.

Method for the performing of general Confession.— At length our author taking a journey to Madrid in Spain about several concerns of the Order, died there 17 June in sixteen hundred and fourteen (according to the account 1614. there followed) and was buried, I presume, among the brethren in their house there, who had a most entire respect for him and his learning, while he was living.

JOHN REINOLDS, the most noted Epigrammatist next to Joh. Owen and Sir Joh. Harrington of his time, 417. received his first being in this world at Tuddington in Bedfordshire, was elected Probationer of New coll. from Wykeham's School near to Winchester, in 1600. and two years after was admitted Perpetual fellow, being then noted for a good Grecian, Orator, and Poet. Afterwards he took the degree of Bach. of the Civil Law, and wrote and published, Disticha classis Epigrammatum, five carminum inscriptorum. Centuria duæ. The first part was printed at Oxon 1611. in oct. and contains an 110. Epigrams concerning the British and English Kings, each Epigram consisting but of two Verses. The other part was printed at the same place in 1612. in oct. Besides which Epigrams, he hath much of his Poetry printed in divers books, particularly in that made by certain fellows of New coll. on the death of Ralph Warcup, Esq; an. 1605, wherein he flourishes in his Greek Poetry. He ended his days in the prime of his years in sixteen hundred and fourteen, and was buried, as it seems, in New coll. Cloyster. I find another of both his names and equal almost in time with him, who was born within the City of Excester, and by the books that he published, had gained a famous name among the vulgar Scholars, Gentlemen, and Women of love and mode. The titles of them are (1) The triumphs of Gods revenge, against the crying and execrable sin of Murder, &c. Lond. 1621. qu. the first book. Five more came out afterwards at several times, mostly taken from French printed copies, which he had gathered in his Travels into France. All the six books, were printed at London in one fol. 1635. and several times after. At length the sixth edition being adorned with Cuts, was published at Lond. 1679. fol. by Sam. Pordage of Lincolns Inn, Son of Joh. Pordage Rector of Bradfield in Berks. and formerly Head Steward of the lands to old Philip Earl of Pembroke. (2) Gods revenge against the abominable sin of Adultery, containing ten several Histories. Lond. 1679. fol. This being never printed before, was illustrated with Cuts, and published by the said Sam. Pordage with the former book. (3) The flower of fidelity: Displaying in a continue history, the various adventures of three foraigne Princes. Lond. 1650. oct. Dedicated to his Father-in-law Rich. Waltham Esq; Justice of Peace of Devon. and other things which I have not yet seen. Among the translations that he hath made from French into English is A Treatise of the Court, written by Monfieur de Refuges, and by the Translator dedicated to Prince Charles, afterwards K. Ch. 1. Whether the said John Reynolds was ever a Student in Oxon, I cannot in my searches yet find. However some of the Antients of Exeter coll. who knew the man, have averred it several times, that he had received some Accademical education, but before he could take a degree, was call'd away to travel into France. He was living in the times of Usurpation, but whether in those of the restauration of K. Ch. 2. I cannot tell.

ARTHUR HOPTON, fifth Son of Sir Arth. 418. Hopton Knight of the Bathe, (by Rachell his Wife, daughter of Edm. Hall of Gretford in Lincolnshire) Son of Sir Owen Hopton, sometimes Leivtenant of the Tower near London, was born in Somersetshire, (at Wytham as it seems) became a Gent. Commoner of Lincoln coll. in Michaelmas Term, an. 1604. aged 15. or more; where falling under the tuition of a noted and careful Tutor, became the miracle of his age for learning. In 1607. he was admitted Bach. of Arts, and then left the University to the great sorrow of those who knew the wonderful pregnancy of his parts. Afterwards he settled in London, in one of the Temples as I conceive, where he was much admired and beloved by Selden and all the noted men of that time, who held him in great value not only for his antient and gentile Extraction, but for the marvellous forwardnets of his Mathematical genie, which led him to perform those matters at one or two and twenty years of age, which others of forty or fifty could not do, as in these these Books following of his composition may appear.

Baculum Geodaticum sive Viaticum. Or, the Geodetical Staff containing eight books. Lond. 1610. in a pretty thick qu.

Speculum Topographicum. Or, the Topographical Glafs; containing the use of the Topographical Glafs, Theodelitus, plain Table and Circumferentor, &c. Lond. 1611. qu.

A Concordancy of years; containing a new, easie, and a most exact computation of time, according to the English accompt. Lond. 1616. oct. To which were additions made by Joh. Penkethman. Lond. 1635. in qu. in one sh. and half. He hath also divers copies of verses scattered in books, which shew that he was a tolerable Poet of his time. He ended his days in the prime of his years, within the Parish of St. Clements Danes, without Temple-Bar near to London, in the month of Nov. in sixteen hundred and fourteen, and was buried (if I mistake not) in the Church there. His untimely death, as I have been informed by those that remember him, was much regretted by all those, who were acquainted with him, and knew his extraordinary worth. His Nephew Ralph Hopton, Son of his Brother Robert, was a Gent. Com. also of Linc. coll. and after the Rebellion brake out in 1642. he was a General of an Army under K. Ch. 1. and by him made a Baron.

ROBERT COOKE, who writes himself Cocus, was born at, or near to, Beefston in Yorkshire, was entred a Student in Brazenose coll. in 1567. aged 17. or thereabouts, where, with unwearied diligence, travelling through the various Classes of Logick and Philosophy, he became the most noted Disputant of his time. On the 2. Dec. 1573. he was unanimously elected Probationer-Fellow of that coll. and three years after took the degree of M. of A. About which time entring into Holy Orders, and being noted for his admirable learning, was therefore elected one of the Proctors of the University: In which office he behaved himself so admirably well, that his house gained credit by it. In 1584. he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, and in the beginning of June 1590. resigning his Fellowship, retired to his new obtained Vicaridge of Leedes in Yorkshire; where making the best advantage of his time, became a Man learned in the Church, singularly well studied in the disquisition of antiquity, especially for the discerning of the proper works of the Fathers from the forged and counterfeit, as it may appear in a book which he wrote, intit.

Censura quorundam Scriptorum quæ sub nominibus Sanctorum, & veterum auctorum, à Pontificiis passim in eorum Scriptis, sed potissimum in questionibus hodie controversis citari solent. Lond. 1614. and 23. qu. Which is all I think he hath published. He gave way to fate at Leedes before-mentioned, on the first of Jan. in sixteen hundred and fourteen, and was buried the day following in the Church there. Alex. Cooke his Brother, whom I shall mention under the year 1632. succeeded him in the Vicaridge of Leedes, and there died.

MATHEW SLADE, second (a) Son of Joh. Slade of the West Country, Son of Joh. Slade of Roughley in Staffordshire, the second Son of Joh. Slade of the ancient and gentile Family of the Slades of Norton-Slade in Lancashire, was born in Devonshire, became a Batler of St. Albans hall in 1584. and in that of his age 17. took a degree in Arts four years after, and about that time was a candidate for a Fellowship of Merton coll. but what put him by, unless the want of Friends, for Philosophy he had sufficient, I know not. Afterwards he retired to his native Country, taught School for a time, and Married, as I shall anon tell you. At length upon an invitation, he went to Amsterdam in Holland, where by the High and Mighty States he became Rector of the learned Academy or Gymnasium, situated and being in the old part of that famous City; where he was esteemed, by all that knew him, an excellent Latinist, a good Grecian, one well read in profound authors, a stiff Enemy to the Socinians, and a walking Library. His works are these:

(a) So I find it in the Pedegree of the Slades (of 17. or more generations,) sent to me from Amsterdam by some of the Slades living there, in Ap. 1690.

Cum Conrado Vorstio S. T. D. de blasphemis, hæresibus, & atheis mis à Jacobo Rege Anglia 1. in ejusd. Vorstii de dei tractatu, &c. Scholastica disputationis pars prima. In qua fides Orthodoxa de verâ immensitate & infinitate triumini dei opponitur, &c. Amstel. 1612. qu.

Appendix prioris disceptationis. Amstel. 1614. qu. Which is set before this book following.

Disceptationis cum Conrado Vorstio S. T. D. pars altera de immutabilitate & simplicitate dei: Qua docetur R. Jac. 1. juste & merito notasse blasphemum Vorsti dogma. Deum esse mutabilem & accedentibus subjectum adferentis. Amstel. 1614. qu.

C. Vorstii & F. Socini concentus, sive Bicinii exemplum: cum rerum, verborum atque testium Syllabo. Printed with the former, viz. Disceptationis altera pars. These things were replied upon by Vorstius, in 1615. but whether our author Slade put out a rejoinder, I know not as yet, or any thing else that he hath published. He took to Wife Alethea Daughter of Rich. Kirford of, or near to, Honiton in Devon. on the 20. of Sept. 1593. by whom he had Issue Cornelius Slade born in Amsterdam 14. of Oct. 1599. and made Rector of the Gymnasium there, (perhaps on the death of his Father) on the 9. of May 1628. who taking to Wife Gertrude the Daughter of Luke Ambrose a Preacher of Amsterdam, begot on her, among other Children, Mathew Slade born 9. of June 1628. and being strictly educated in learning, became a Doctor of Physick and a learned Man, and thereupon often mentioned with honour by Swammerdam, as also by Scrader, who dedicates a book to him. This Mathew Slade did publish, under the borrowed name of Theodorus Aldes (Slade) Anglus, a book intit. Dissertatio Epistolica de Generatione Animalium contra Harveium. Amstel. 1666. in tw. Reprinted with other Anatomical Works at Francfort, twice in the year 1668. in qu. and is extant in the Bibliotheca Anatomica. The Collectors of which have unveiled him, and put him down under his true name Mattheus Sladus Amstelodamensis M. D. He hath also written Observationes in Ovum. Amstel. 1673. in tw. which is also in the said Bibliothèque, and Sciagraphia nutritionis Fœtus in utero; & de ejus urinâ. Ibid. At length coming into England in Sept. or Oct. 1689. retired to Oxon in Dec. following to see it, the Colleges, Libraries, and learned Men there: And after he had tarried at that place about a fortnight, went in the Stage-coach towards London, but being taken suddenly with an Apoplectical fit on Shotover hill, two miles distant from Oxon, died thereof before he came to Wheatley, on Friday the twentieth day of the same month, being the Eve of St. Thomas the Apostle. Whereupon his body being lodged in a common Inn there, was, by the care of James Tyrrell Esq; and Dr. Edw. Bernard one of the Savilian Professors, conveyed thence the next day to the Angel Inn in Oxon, where lying till the day following, was buried in the yard (near to, and behind the West door leading therein,) belonging to the Church of St. Peter in the East; at which time were present certain Doctors of, and Graduates in, Physick, and Masters of Arts.

THOMAS FREEMAN, a Gloucestershire Man ^{411.} born, of the same Family with those of Batsford and Todenham near to Morton in Marsh, became a Student in Magd. coll. an. 1607. aged 16 years, or thereabouts, and Bach. of Arts four years after. At length retiring to the great City, and setting up for a Poet, was shortly after held in esteem by Sam. Daniel, Owen the Epigrammatist, Dr. Joh. Donn, Shakspeare, George Chapman, Tho. Heywood the Playmaker and others. To some of whose judgments he submitted these his two books of Epigrams following.

Rubbe, and a great Cast. In 100 Epigrammes. Lond. 1614. qu.

Runne, and a great Cast. The second bowle, in an 100 Epigrammes.—Printed with the former Epigrams, and both dedicated to Thomas Lord Windfore, who seemed to patronize his studies. The reason for Rubbe and Runne, he gives in these four verses.

*Sphæra mihi; calamus, mundi sunt crimina nodi,
Ipse sed est mundus, Sphæromachia mihi.
Sive manere iubes, Lector, seu currere speram
Lusori pariter, curre mæneque placent.*

THOMAS CHALONER, Son of Sir Thom. Chaloner Knight, by Ethelreda his Wife, Daughter of Edward Frodsham of Elton in Cheshire, was educated in Magd. coll. ^{412.}

coll. where he was held in esteem for his Poetry; but taking no degree, travelled beyond the Seas, and at his return became a compleat Gentleman. In 1591. he received the honour of Knighthood, and being esteemed a learned, prudent, and sober person, when K. James the first came to the English Crown, he therefore by him was appointed Tutor (and afterwards Chamberlain) to his Son Prince Henry the lively joy and delight of Britain, and about that time was actually created Master of Arts, as in the Fasti, under the year 1605. I shall tell you. This person, who was a learned searcher into Nature's Works, did first discover an Allum-mine near to Gisburgh in Yorkshire, (being possessed of Land there,) about the latter end of Q. Elizabeth; but being adjudged to be a Mine-Royal, was rented by several, and little benefit came to Sir Thomas. At length the Long Parliament which began in 1640. voted it a Monopoly, and restored the benefit thereof to the former Proprietaries. He hath written several things, but all that I have seen is only, 1615. The Virtue of Nitre, wherein is declared the sundry cures by the same effected. Lond. 1584. qu. and other matters pertaining to Virtuosity, and something, as it seems, to Pastoral, but whether extant, I cannot tell. He died about the 17. Nov. in sixteen hundred and fifteen, and was buried in the Parish Church of Cheswick in Middlesex, near to the body of Elizabeth his first Wife, Daughter of Will. Fleetwood, sometimes Recorder of London, by whom he had Issue Will. Chaloner of Gisburgh in Yorkshire, soon after his Father's death made a Baronet, Thomas, James, &c. which two last were of the number of Judges that sat in Judgment on King Charles 1. of Blessed Memory, as I shall tell you at large. He had also several Children by his second Wife Judith, Daughter of Will. Blount of London, some of whose Posterity (as I think) liveth at, or near, Steeple-Claydon in Bucks, where Sir Thomas had a fair Estate.

423. JOHN DRUSIUS, or Driesshus, commonly called Vander Driefche the most noted Critick, Linguist, and Theologist of his time, was born at Oudenard a City of Flanders, situated between Gaunt and Tourney, 28. June 1550. educated in Grammar learning in Gaunt, in Academical in the University of Lovaine, where he took the degree of Bach. of Arts. About which time his Father Clement Driefche, being proscribed for Religion, and deprived of his Estate, fled into England, and took this his Son with him. When he came to London he met with Anth. Cevalierius a Professor at Caen in Normandy, exceeding skilful in the Hebrew Tongue, who reading there to several Scholars and Laicks, our author attended him, went also with him to Cambridge, where he read the said Language, and afterwards for a time into France, and by his diligence became an exact proficient in the Hebrew, as well as in the Greek, Language. Soon after he returned to London, and when he purposed to go back into France he heard of the Massacre at Paris, which made him alter his mind. So that turning his course to Oxon, in the beginning of the year 1572. he was entertained by the Society of Merton coll. admitted to the degree of Bach. of Arts, as a Member of that house, in July the same year, and in the beginning of Aug. following had a Chamber set apart (a) for him by the Society; who then also decreed that he should have forty shillings yearly allowed to him, so long as he read a Hebrew Lecture in their common Refectory. For 4 years, at least, he lived in the said house, and constantly read (as he did sometimes to the Scholars of Magd. coll. upon the desire of Dr. Laur. Humphrey President thereof) either Hebrew, Chalde, or Syriack Lectures. In 1573. he was, as a Member of the said house of Merton, licensed to proceed in Arts, and in the year following was (b) recommended by the Chancellour of the University to the Members of Convocation, that he might publicly read the Syriack Language in one of the publick Schools, and that for his pains he receive a competent stipend. Soon after, upon consideration of the matter, they allowed him twenty marks to be equally gathered from among them, and ordered that the same respect be given to him, as to any of the Lecturers. In 1576. he left Oxon, and in the year following the States of Holland chose him to be the Professor in Hebrew, Chalde, and Syriack in the University of Leyden. Soon after, being Married, the States of Friesland, who had erected an University at Franeher, invited him thither to be a Professor; where continuing many years, was held in high esteem of all Scholars and Foreigners, that repaired thither. He was an excellent Hebrician, and well versed in the Rabbines, and hath given great light to a large part of the Scriptures, as these books following shew; most of which are remitted into the several Tomes of the Criticke.

Catechesis

(a) Reg. 2. Act. coll. Merton, p. 27. 35. 47. 53, &c. (b) Reg. Univ. Oxon. KK. fol. 177. b.

Catechesis religionis christiana Heb. Gr. & Lat. pr. 1591. oct. Other things, as 'tis probable, he hath published, but such I have not yet seen. He surrendered up his pious soul to God: on this 12. of Feb. in sixteen hundred and fifteen, and was buried, as I suppose, at Franeker, after he had lived there a most severe student, and in continual labour for the good and benefit of Literature about 31. years. He left behind him a Son of both his names, bred partly in this University, but not to be numbred among most learned men, especially such as was his Father, as also a Daughter named Agnes, the wife of Abel Curiander author of the Latin life of his Father-in-Law Job. Drusius, printed at Franaker. 1616. qu. In which the Reader may see more of his life and works, than are here set down by me.

424. THOMAS ROGERS, a most admirable Theologist, an excellent Preacher, and well deserving every way of the sacred Function, was born, as I conceive, in Cheshire, and came full ripe to the University before 1568. About which time being made one the Students of Ch. Ch. took holy Orders very early, and afterwards the degree of Master of Arts, Scil. an. 1576. before which time, he was a sedulous and constant Preacher of Gods word. What his preferments were successively afterwards, I know not, only that he was Chaplain to Doctor Bancroft Bishop of London, and at length Rector of Horninger near to S. Edmonds Bury in Suffolke, where and in the neighbourhood, he was always held in great esteem for his learning and holiness of life and conversation. His works are these.

A Philosophical discourse, entit. The Anatomy of the mind. Lond. 1576. oct. Before which is a copy of Verses in praise of it, written by his Contemporary Will. Camden of Ch. Ch.

Of the end of the world, and second coming of Christ, &c. Lond. 1577. qu.

The English Creed; wherein is contained in tables an exposition on the articles which every man is to subscribe unto. Where the articles are expounded by Scripture, and the confessions of all the reformed Churches and Heresies are displayed. Lond. 1579. and 85. fol.

General Session, containing an apology of the comfortable doctrine concerning the end of the world and second coming of Christ. Lond. 1581. qu.

The English Creed; consisting with the true ancient Catholique and Apostolick Church in all the points and articles of Religion, which every christian is to know, and believe, that would be saved, &c.—In two parts. The first printed at London in 1585. the second there 1587. and both in fol.

An Exposition on the 39 Articles of the Church of England. Lond. 1586. &c. qu. Which book, at the first appearance, met not with that welcom entertainment, which seemed due to the authors endeavours. For besides the two extreams, Papists and Schismatics, who were highly enraged, many Protestants of a middle temper were much offended thereat. Some conceived it presumption for a private Minister to make himself the mouth of the Church, to render her sense in matters of so high-concernment. Others were (*) offended, that his interpretation confin'd the charitable latitude, formerly allowed in these Articles. Howsoever it was, sure it is, the work in some years, wrought it self in good esteem, as dedicated to, and countenanced by, Dr. Bancroft before-mentioned.

A golden Chaine taken out of the rich treasure house of the Psalms of David. Lond. 1587. in tw.

The Pearles of K. Solomon, gathered into common places—Taken from the Proverbs of the said King, printed with the former book.

Historical dialogue touching Antichrist and Popery; drawn and published for the comfort of our Church, &c. Lond. 1589. oct.

Serm. on 12. Rom. ver. 6. 7. 8. Lond. 1590. qu.

Miles Christianus, Or, a defence of all necessary writings and writers, written against an Epistle prefixed to a Catechism made by Miles Moses. Lond. 1590. qu. This Miles Moses was Bach. of Div. and published besides the former things, The arraignment of Usury in six Sermons. Lond. 1595. qu.

Table of the lawful use of an oath, and the cursed state of vain Swearers. Lond.

Two dealogues. Lond. 1608. He also translated into English. (1) A discourse of the end of the world and second coming of Christ. Lond. 1577. 78. oct. written by Scheltro & Geveren of Emden in Friesland. (2) General discourse of the damnable sect of Usurers, &c. Lond. 1578. qu. written by Philip Casar. To which is added, A treatise of the lawful use of riches: written by Nich. Heming. (3) The profession of the true Church, and Popery compared. Lond. 1578. oct. (4) Exposition on the 84. Psalm. Lond. 1581. oct. written by Nic. Heming for the instruction of the ignorant in the grounds of Religion; and confutation of the Jewes, Turks, &c. (5) S. Augustins heavenly meditations, call'd, A private talke with God. Lond. 1581. in tw. Purified by our Translator T. Rogers, and adorned with annotations of Scripture. (6) Of the foolishness of men and women in putting off the amendment of their lives from day to day. Lond. 1583. and 86. oct. written Job. Rivius. (7) Of the imitation of Christ, Lond. 1584. 89. in tw. written in three books by Tho. de Kempis; and for the worthiness thereof oft since translated into sundry Languages. Now newly translated by Tho. Rogers, corrected, and with most ample Texts and Sentences of holy Scripture illustrated. (8) A method to Mortification, called heretofore The contempt of the World, &c. Lond. 1586. in tw. written by Didac. Stella. (9) S. Augustins Prayers. Lond. 1591. in tw. &c.

Purged by our Translator (T. Rogers) from divers superstitious points, and adorned with manifold places of Scripture. (10) A manual containing special and picked meditations and godly prayers. Lond. 1591. in tw. with corrections by the Translator. (11) Enemy of security; or, a daily exercise of godly meditations. Lond. 1580. and 91. in tw. written by Job. Avenar publick Professor of the Hebrew tongue in the University of Witeberge. (12) Enemy to Atheism: or, christian godly prayers for all degrees. Lond. 1591. in tw. written in the German Language by Jo. Avenar, translated out of Lat. by our author T. Rogers. (13) Soliloquium anime: The fourth book of the imitation of Christ. Lond. 1592. in tw. written by Th. de Kempis before mentioned. What other thing our author hath written and translated, I know not; Nor any thing else of him, only that he was a zealous opposer of the doctrine of the Sabbath, and the first that publickly stood up against Dr. Nich. Bownds opinion of it in his Preface to the Exposition on the 39. Articles, &c. which made the other party, (the Puritan) angry, and so far to be enraged, as maliciously to asperse and blemish him. Whereupon he wrote a vindication of himself in MS. now in the hands of a near relation of his. At length after a great deal of pains taken for the benefit of the Church, he gave up the Ghost at Horninger before mention'd, otherwise called Horninghearth: whereupon his body was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, under a rough, unpolished and broken Gravestone, without name or Epitaph, 22. Febr. in sixteen hundred and fifteen, as the Register of that Church tells us; which, I presume, follows the English account, and not the common, as many country Registers do. I find one Tho. Rogers a Cheshire man born, to have been admitted Student of Ch. Ch. 1547. aged 24. or more, being then Bac. of Arts, and soon after made Master. What relation he had to the former Th. Rogers I know not. Another Tho. Rogers I find, who was born in Glostershire, in, or near to, Tewksbury, lived mostly in his latter days, in the Parish of S. Giles in the fields near London, and published a Poem entituled The tears or lamentations of a sorrowful Soul. Lond. 1612. qu. written by Sir Will. Leighton Knight, one of his Majesties band of Pensioners. To which, the said Tho. Rogers added of his own composition, a Poem called Glosters mite. But this Tho. Rogers is quite different from the Divine before mention'd.

RICHARD NICCOLLS, esteemed eminent 425. for his Poetry in his time, was born of Gentile Parents in London and at 18 years of age, an 1602. was entred a Student in Mag. coll. in Michaelmas-Term, but making little stay there he retired to Mag. hall and took the degree of Bach. of Arts in 1606. being then numbred among the ingenious persons of the University. After he had remained there for some time, he retired to the great City, (*) See Tho. Fulkers Ch. Hist. lib. 9. ar. 1584.

City, obtained an employment suitable to his faculty, and at length honoured the Devoto's to Poetry, with these things following.

The Cuckow, a Poem. Lond. 1607. in qu. Dedicated to Mr. (after Sir) Thom. Wroth a favourer of his Muse.

The fall of Princes. Lond. 1610. qu.

A winter nights Vision. Lond. 1610. qu. being an addition of such Princes, especially famous, who were exempted in the former History, meaning in the History called The mirror of Magistrates, written in Verse by John Hicens of Wincham, an. 1586. qu. This mirror, which was esteemed the best piece of Poetry of those times, (if Albions England, which was by some preferred, did not stand in its way) contained the lives of some of our Kings and Queens, and was exceedingly admired by ingenious Scholars and others.

Clar. 1615. Momodia, Or Walthams complaint upon the death of the most vertuous and noble Lady, late deceased, the Lady Honor Hay. Lond. 1615. oct. I find another Rich. Niccolls who is stiled the Elder, and of the Inner Temple Gent. who wrote (1) A Treatise setting forth the mystrie of our Salvation. (2) A day Star for dark wandring souls: shewing the light by a christian controversie. Both which were published after the authors death, at Lond. 1613. in oct. But whether this R. Niccolls the Elder, was ever of this University, I find not as yet.

426. EDWARD EVANS, a noted preacher of his time in the University, was born in Denbighshire, applied his eager mind to Academical studies in Ch. Ch. an. 1598. aged 16. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1607. and afterwards published, Clar. 1615. Verba dierum: Or the days report of Gods glory, in four Sermons or Lectures upon one text in the University of Oxon. on Psal. 19. 2. Oxon. 1615. qu. Another of both his names I find to have been born at Westmeane in Hampshire, admitted fellow of New coll. 1595. and that he took the degree of M. of A. 1602. But this person leaving his fellowship in 1604. and so consequently the University, he is not to be taken for the same, who published the four Sermons before mention'd.

427. JOHN HEATH, more famous for his Poetry than the former for his preaching, was born at Stalls: (whether a hamlet or House I know not) in Somersetshire, educated in Wykeham's School, admitted Perpetual fellow of New coll. 1607. aged 22. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1613. and three years after left his Fellowship. But before that time, when he was Bach. of Arts, he wrote and published, Clar. 1615. Two centuries of Epigrams. Lond. 1610. in tw. and had verses printed in several books that occasionally were published, particularly in that on the death of Sir Th. Bodley Kt. He hath also made a translation from Spanish into English, which I have not yet seen, and wrote other matters fit for the Press, but whether ever printed I cannot tell.

428. THOMAS BILSON, Son of Harman Bilson, (the same, I suppose, who was fellow of Merton coll. an. 1536) Son of Arnold Bilson, son and heir of Arnold Bilson a Native of High Germany, by his Wife, the Daughter (natural or legitimate, I know not) of the Duke of Bavaria, was born in the City of Winchester, fitted for the University in Wykeham's School there, admitted Perpetual fellow of New coll. after he had served two years of Probation, an. 1565. took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders and became a most solid and constant preacher in these parts and elsewhere. Afterwards he was Schoolmaster, (say some) then Prebendary of Winchester, Warden of the coll. there, Doctor of Divinity, and at length Bishop of Worcester; to which See being consecrated 13. June 1596. was translated thence to Winchester in the year following, and made one of his Majesties Privy Counsellours. He was as reverend and learned a Prelate as England ever afforded, a deep and profound Scholar, exactly read in Ecclesiastical authors, and with Dr. Rich. Field of Oxon. (as Whittaker and Fulke of Cambridge) a principal maintainer of the Ch. of England, while Jo. Rainolds and Tho. Sparke were upholders of Puritanism and Nonconformity. In his younger years he was infinitely studious and industrious in Poetry, Philosophy and Physicks, and in his elder in Divinity. To which last his genie chiefly inviting him, he became so compleat in it, so well skill'd in Languages, so read in the Fathers and Schoolmen, so judicious in making use of his readings, that at length he was found to be no longer a Souldier, but a Commander in chief in the spiritual warfare, especially when he became a Bishop, and carried prelature in his very aspect. His works are,

Of the true difference between Christian subjection and unchristian rebellion, wherein the Princes lawful power to command and bear the Sword, are defended, against the Popes Censure, and Jesuits Sophismes in their Apology and defence of English Catholicks. Also a demonstration that the things reformed in the Church of England by the Laws of this realm, are truly Catholick, against the late Rhemish Testament. Oxon. 1585. Lond. 1586. in 4. parts, in a thick oct. In the third part of which, is answer'd Dr. Will. Allens Defence of Engl. Cath. before mention'd. It must be now noted that whereas in England the interest of the State had a great influence upon the doctrine of Obedience, Qu. Elizabeth therefore conceiving it convenient for her worldly designs to take on her the protection of the Low-Countries against the King of Spain, did employ our author Bilson to write the said book of Christian subjection, &c. In which, to justify the revolt of Holland, he gave strange liberty in many cases, especially concerning religion, for Subjects to cast off their obedience. But this book which served her designs for the present, did contribute much to the ruine of her Successor K. Ch. 1. (which one (*) calls a just judgment of God) For there is not any book that the Presbyterians have made more dangerous use of against their Prince (Ch. 1.) than that which his predecessor commanded to be written to justify her against the King of Spain. However our authors (Bilson) Successor in Winchester, I mean Dr. Morley (a) saith that the Bishop Bilson was in an error, yet he was not so much for the resisting of Kings, as Mr. Rich. Baxter is.

Of the perpetual government of Christ his Church, wherein are handled, the fatherly superiority which God first established in the Patriarks, and after continued in the tribe of Levi, &c. Also the points in question at this day touching the Jewish Synedrion, &c. Lond. 1593. qu. &c. Printed in Lat. at Lond. 1610.

The effect of certain Sermons touching the full redemption of mankind by the death and blood of Ch. Jesus; wherein besides the merit of Christs sufferings, the manner of his offering, the power of his death, the comfort of his Cross, the glory of his Resurrection are handled, &c. Lond. 1599. qu. The clearing of certain objections made against the aforesaid doctrine.—The said Sermons being preached at Pauls Cross, made great alarms among the puritanical brethren. Whereupon they mustering their forces and comparing their notes, sent them to Hen. Jacob an old Dessenter, to have them published, with his collections, under his own name. But the matter of the controversie coming to the Queens knowledge, (he being at Farnham castle belonging to the B. of Winchester) she signified her pleasure to Bilson, that he should neither desert the doctrine, nor suffer the Function, which he had exercised in the Church of England, to be trodden and trampled under foot by unquiet men, who both abhorred the truth and despised authority. Upon which command, the Bishop did set himself upon the writing of that learned Treatise (chiefly also delivered by him in Sermons) entituled,

A survey of Christs sufferings and descent into Hell. Lond. 1604. fol. See more in Hen. Jacob. He also published,

Sermon at Westm. before K. and Qu. at their Coronation S. James day, 28. Jul. 1603. on Rom. 13. 1. Lond. 1603. oct. and wrote,

He also, with Dr. Miles Smith, added the last hand in the translation of the Bible, commanded by K. James 1. At length after he had gone through many employments, and had lived in continual drudgery, as 'twere, for the publick good, surrendred up his pious soul to God on the 18. of June in sixteen hundred and sixteen, and was buried saith (*) one, on the south side of Westminster Abbey Church near to the Monument of K. Rich. 2. or as the Register hath it, near to the entrance into S. Edmunds Chapel. One John Dunbar a Scot, who writes himself Megalobritannus, hath a learned Epigram (b) on him, which may serve for his Epitaph.

439. JOHN PITS. or Pitsons as he writes himself, a grand zealot for the Ro. Cath. cause, Son of Hen. Pitts by Elizabeth his Wife, sister to Dr. Nich. Saunders, was born at a market Town called Antton in Hampshire, educated in juvenile learning in Wykeham's School near to Winton, admitted Probationer-fellow of New coll. in 1578. being then about 18. years of age, but leaving that house before he was admitted perpetual Fellow, which was to be in 1580. he went beyond the Seas as a voluntary Exile, and going to Doway was kindly received there by the learned Tho. Stapleton, who then gave him advice what course to take relating to his studies. Thence he went to Rheimes, and after one year spent in the English college he was sent to Rome and continued in the English coll. there also in the zealous prosecution of the studies of Philosophy and Divinity for seven years, and was made a Priest. Thence he returned to Rheimes where he taught Rhetorick and Greek for two years. But troubles arising in France, he withdrew himself into Loraine, and took the degree of Master of Arts (which before he had neglected) at Pont-a-mousson, and was soon after made Bach. of Divinity. Thence taking a journey into High Germany, he continued at Trier an year and an half, where after he had performed certain exercise, he was made a Licentiat of Divinity. Thence, after he had seen several of the best Cities in Germany, he removed to Ingolstadt in Bavaria; where remaining 3 years, did in that time, after he had performed solemn disputations, take the degree of Doctor of his faculty. So that by that time having viewed several parts of Italy and Germany and had learned their Languages, he returned to Loraine; where, by Charles Cardinal of Loraine he was made Canon of Verdun. After two years spent there, he was called thence by the illustrious Princess Antonia, Daughter to the Duke of Loraine and Wife to the D. of Cleve, and was by her made her Confessor. And that he might be the better serviceable to her, he learned the French Tongue most accurately; so that it was usual with him afterwards to preach in that Language. In her service continuing about 12 years, he had leisure to turn over the Histories of England, whether Ecclesiastick or Republick. Whence making several collections and observations, he wrote and digested four great Volumes. One was of the Kings, another of the Bishops, a third of Apostolical, and a fourth of illustrious and learned, men of this Nation. At 12 years end the said Dutches dying, he went a third time into Loraine, where by the favour of John Bishop of Toul sometimes his Scholar, he was promoted to the Deanery of Liverdun of considerable value; which, with a Canonry, and an Officialship of the said Church, he kept to his dying day. He hath written,

De legibus, Tract. Theologicus. Trev. 1592.

This book is the same with that De illustribus Angliæ Scriptoribus, commonly called Pitsons de Scriptoribus. And hath in the beginning of it certain prolegomina, containing (1) De laudibus Historia. (2) De antiquitate Ecclesiæ Britannicæ. (3) De Academiis, tam antiquis Britonum, quam recentioribus Anglorum. This is the first part. The second part containeth the lives and characters of English Writers. The third containeth an Appendix, of which I shall speak more anon; and the fourth, fifteen indices, which are, as 'twere, the Epitomy of memorable things of the said first tome. Concerning which, I shall make these observations following. (1) That according to the time wherein 'twas written, things are expressed in eloquent Latine. (2) That the most part thereof, especially concerning the Writers is taken from Joh. Bale's book De Scriptoribus majoris Britannicæ, notwithstanding he declares (c) an abhorrence of him and his book. (3) That therein he omitts Wyclave and all the Wyclavists, Irish, and Scotch Writers, which Bale for the most part commemorates; and in their room he gives us an account of R. Cath. Writers, such for the most part, that had left their Country upon the reformation of religion made by Q. Elizabeth, and after, which is the best and most desired part of his book. (4) That several Writers in the Appendix, are taken from a book entit. Ecclogia Oxonio-Cantabrigensis, written by Tho. James of New coll. Of which book also he makes use, when he tells you in what Libraries the MSS. of certain authors, which he mentions, are preserved. (5) That tho he pretends to give you an account only of R. Cath. Writers, especially about the time that reformations were made, or endeavoured to be made, yet he sets down (for want of full information I presume) some that were sincere Protestants, or at least more Protestants than Papiests, as Sir Anth. Cope who died 1551. Joh. Redman who died the same year. Tho. Key or Cay Master of Univ. coll. who died 1572. Joh. Leland the Antiquary, Rob. Record Mathematician, Dr. Alb. Hyll an intimate acquaintance with Jo. Bradford the Martyr, Joh. Cay the Antiquary of Cambridge, Pet. Morwyn or Morwyn of Magd. coll. &c. and in the Appendix George Coriat, rather a Puritan, than a true Son of the Church of England, Robert (for Roger) Taverner, whom I have mention'd in Rich. Taverner, an. 1575. Timothy Bright of Cambridge Doct. of Physick, and Rector of Methley in Yorkshire, by the death of Otho Hunt, in July 1591. Tho. Monffes. a Doctor of Physick contemporary with the former, Joh. Huntington a zealous reformer and the beloved Son in Christ of Joh. Bale. See among the Writers under the year 1556. &c. (6) That whereas he pretends to follow Joh. Leland his Collectanea de Scriptoribus Angliæ, (for very many times he familiarly mentions and quotes them,) 'tis only that he may avoid the naming of Bale, for whom all R. Catholicks, nay zealous Protestants have little or no kindness at all, because his book is stuff'd with revilings and such Language that befits rather a Huckster at Billingsgate, than the meanest or worst of Scholars. The truth is our author Pitts never saw the said Collectanea, he being but 20 years of age, or little more, when he left the Nation, neither was it in his power afterwards, if he had been in England, because they were kept in such private hands, that few Protestant Antiquaries, and none of those of the Church of Rome, could see or peruse them. (7) That in the said tome are very many errors, misnomers, &c. and so consequently in Bale, whom he follows, too many now to reckon; and how he and Bale are most egregiously deceiv'd in what they mention of Amphibalus (d) Junior, and of Gildas Badonicus you may at large see in the learned Usserius, in his book De primordiis Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ, &c. printed in qu. an. 1639. p. 539. 533. 477. 539. 557. and 1144. (8) That whereas Pitts pretends to set down in the said book or tome, only English Writers, he hath mix'd among them some that are out landish; among which are these. Herbertus Lofinga, num. 182. born, as he saith, in Suffolke, but false, for the MS. which I follow in my marginal notes and additions of, and to, the Bishops of Norwich, mentioned by Franc. Bishop of Landaff in his book De Prasulibus Angliæ Commentarius, saith that he was born in Pago Oxinnensi, or Oximensi in Normannia. — Jo. Erigena, nu. 133. said by him, and many others to be born in the City of S. David in Wales, but the generality say in Ireland. &c. At the end of the book of illustrious Writers, our author Pitts hath,

Appendix illustrium scriptorum trecentorum octoginta circiter, ordine alphabetico per centurias continens. Made up mostly from Bale, and partly from Dr. Tho. James his Ecclogia before-mentioned. But therein are many authors put, which are

Greckladesis*, mentioned by Leland in vol. 3. collect. p. 36. where 'tis said that the said Rob. wrote 40 Homilies, and a Tract De connubio Jacob, which makes me think that the said Robert Prior, may be the same with the said *Rob. And as our author Pitts hath repeated many writers in the said Appendix, which were before in the work it self, so hath he mixed a great many outlandish writers among them, supposing them to be English, among whom are, (1) Alacenus, cent. 1. nu. 8. who was an Arabian, as from his works may be gathered. (2) Anonymus Sacerdos, c. 1. nu. 26. who hath written, In Apocalypsim S. Johannis. lib. 8. Which book divers writers do attribute to Peter Scaliger Bishop of Verona. (3) Joh. de Muriis, c. 2. nu. 97. Who was a French man of Paris. (4) Joh. Major, c. 3. nu. 15. he was a Scot born. (5) Joh. Mearus, c. 3. nu. 18. whom I take to be Joh. de Meara an Irish man. (6) Guido Folla Episc. Eliensis, c. 2. nu. 13. He is the same with Guido Elnensis in Majorica, who sometimes writes himself Guido Perpinian Elnensis. No Guido Folla was ever Bish. of Ely. (7) Gilla Lincolnensis, c. 2. nu. 93. He was an Irish Man, was Bishop of Limerick, and died about 1139. (8) Anton. Pacinus, c. 1. nu. 28. he was an Italian, &c. At length after our author Jo. Pitts had spent most of his time in rambling, and but little at Liverdune, he gave way to fate there, on the 17. Octob. according to the account there followed, in sixteen hundred and sixteen, whereupon his body was buried in the collegiate Ch. at that place, and had soon after this inscription put over his grave: Hic jacet D. Pittz, quondam Decanus, Officialis, & Canonicus hujus Ecclesie, Doctor SS. Theologie, qui decessit ex hac vita 17. Oct. an. 1616. As for the other volumes, which our author saith he hath written, viz. a vol. of the Kings, another of the Bishops, and a third of Apostolical men, of England; they were not buried with him, as he desired, in case he should not live to finish them, but were saved, and are to this day preserved as rarities in the Archives of the Coll. or Church at Liverdune. One of the said volumes, if not more, were used and quoted by Edward Maibew a Benedictine Monk, sometimes Scholar to our author Pitts, in a book which he published at Rheims, an. 1619. intit. Congregationis Anglicane Ordinis S. Benedicti Trophaea. Which Maibew was a Salisbury Man born, and a professed Monk of the Congregation at Cassino, called by the French Mount-Cassin, about 48 miles distant from Naples. The other book of Bishops, which our author wrote, and often refers to, in his book De scriptoribus, is chiefly a collection taken from the Catalogue of the Bishops of England, published by Francis Godwin Sub-Dean of Exeter, an. 1601. as I have been informed by one that hath seen and perused the book.

HENRY AIRAY was born in Westmorland, edu-⁴³⁰ cated in Grammatical learning by the care of Bernard Gilpin the northern Apostle, and by him sent to S. Edmunds hall, an. 1579. aged 19. or thereabouts, of whose benefaction he did not only then participate, but also of his Legacies in his last Will, dated 27. Oct. 1582. Soon after our author Airay was translated to Queens coll. where he became Pauper Puer Serviens, that is, a poor serving Child that waits on the Fellows in the Common hall, at Meals, and in their Chambers, and do other servile work about the College. After he was Bachelours standing, in 1583. he was made Pauper Puer, or Tabardus or Tabardarius; that is, a Tabarder or Tabitter, (so called because anciently they wore Coats, or upper Gowns, much according to the fashion of those belonging to Heralds,) and in the year 1586, Master of Arts and Fellow. Which servile work belonging to Pauper Puer Serviens, when Under-graduates, all are to undergo before they can be Fellows. About the time he was Master, he entred into Holy Orders, and became a frequent and zealous Preacher in the University, particularly in the Church of S. Peter in the East, joyning to Queens coll. and taking the degree of B. of Div. in 1594. was four years after chose Provost of his College. In 1600. he proceeded in Divinity, and six years after did undergo the office of Vicechancellor, wherein, as always before, he shewed himself a zealous Calvinist, (e) and a great maintainer of such that were of his mind, which then went beyond the number of those that were true English Ch. men. He is reported by those of his party, especially such that had an admiration for him, that he condemned himself to obscurity, and affected a retired and a private life, but being generally noted and esteemed for his holiness, integrity, learning, gravity, and indefatigable pains in the discharge of his Ministerial Function, &c. he could not hide himself from the eyes of the World. Also that by his singular wisdom and dexterity in the Government of his College, many learned Ministers were sent thence into the Church, and many worthy Gentlemen into the Commonwealth, &c. To pass by other commendations, which are needless now to repeat, I shall only tell you of his writings, which were published after his death, viz.

Lectures upon the whole Epistle of St. Paul to the Philippians. Lond. 1618. qu. Which Lectures having been Preached in the Church of S. Peter in the East in Oxon, were published after his death by Christop. Potter Fellow of Queens coll. with an Epistle before them of his composition.

The just and necessary Apology touching his suit in Law for the Rectory of Charlton on Otmore on Oxfordshire. Lond. 1621. oct. Published also by the said Potter, a great admirer of this author and his doctrine.

Treatise against bowing at the Name of Jesus.—When printed I know not, for I have not yet seen it. Tho. Beacon, an old Calvinist, had long before written on that subject, and about Airay's time Dr. W. Whittaker, and Andr. Willer, did the like. As for our author he died in Queens coll. on the sixth of the Ides of Octob. in sixteen hundred and sixteen, aged 57. and was buried in the inner Chappel of the said coll. Over his grave was soon after put two Monuments, one on the ground, and another in the South wall, with inscriptions on both of them, the copies of which you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 124. b.

FRANCIS TATE, Son of Barthelm. Tate of ⁴³¹ Delapre in Northamptonshire Esq; was born there, or at least in that County, became a Commoner of Magd. coll. in 1577. aged 17. where laying a foundation of learning, for a greater structure to be erected thereon, departed without a degree to the Middle Temple, and in time became a noted Counsellour, a person of great learning in the Law, and eminent for his knowledge in Antiquities, and in the Saxon Language. In the latter end of Q. Elizabeth he was a Parliament Man, and in the 5. Jac. 1. he was Lent-Reader of the Middle Temple, and about that time one of the Justices Itinerant for S. Wales. He hath written several matters relating to Antiquity, which being crept into private hands, the publick is thereby rob'd of the benefit of them. However some of them I have seen, which bear these titles.

Nomina Hydarum in com. Northampton.—MS. much used by Augustine Vincent Son of Will. Vincent of Wellingborough and Thingdon in Northamptonshire, in his intended Survey or Antiquities of Northamptonshire. I have a copy of this lying by me.

Explanation of the abbreviated words in Domsday book.—Used also the by said Vincent, who after he had been Rouge Croix and Windfore Herald, as also had published, A discovery of Errors in two Editions of the Catalogue of Nobility, written by Raphe Brook, did yield to nature on the 11. Jan. in 1625. and was buried in the Church of St. Bennet near to Pauls Wharf in London. The said two MSS. of Franc. Tate were reserved as rarities in the Library of Christop. Lord Hatton of Kirkly in Northamptonshire, but where they are now, I know not.

His opinion touching the antiquity, power, order, state, manner, persons, and proceedings of the High Court of Parliament in England.—See more in Job. Doderidge, under the year 1628.

Learned Speeches in Parliaments, held in the latter end of Q. Elizab. and in the Reign of K. Jam. 1.—with other things which I have not yet seen. He lived a single Man, and dying so on the (f) 16. Nov. in sixteen hundred and sixteen, was buried, I suppose, in the Church belonging to the Temples. He had a Nephew, Son of his elder Brother Sir William Tate of Delapre, called Zouch Tate, who became a Gentleman Com. of Trinity coll. in 1621. aged 15. but took no degree. In 1640. he was chosen a Burgess for Northampton to serve in that unhappy Parliament, which began at Westminster 3. Nov. the same year, where siding with the Factious Crew, took the Covenant, and became a zealous Enemy to the King and his Cause. Two or more Speeches of his are printed, one of which was spoken in a Common Hall at London 3. Jul. 1645. containing Observations on the King and Queens Cabinet of Letters.—Lond. 1645. qu. Which Speech, with that of John Lisle and Rich. Browne, were animadverted upon by Tho. Browne of Ch. Ch. as hereafter it shall be told you. There were also Annotations printed at the end of the said Cabinet of Letters taken at Naseby Battle, where the King was worsted.—Printed at Lond. 1645. qu. but who the author of them was I cannot tell.

^{432.} RICHARD FIELD, received his first being in this World in the County of Hertford, was entred a Student in Magd. coll. in 1577. where continuing in drudging at his book, till he was about Bachelours standing, retired to Magd. hall, took the degrees in Arts, and afterwards for about 7 years was not only a daily Reader of Logick and Philosophy, but also a Moderator, and every Sunday a discusser of controversies against Bellarmino, and other Pontificians, before his Fellow-Aularians and many others. Afterwards being Bach. of Divinity, he became first a Reader thereof in the Cath. Church of Winchester, and afterwards in Lincolns Inn; and when Doctor, Chaplain in Ordinary to Queen Elizab. and after her death to K. James; the last of whom not only gave him a Prebendship of Windfore, on the death of Jo. Chamber, an. 1604. but also the Deanry of Gloucester, in 1609. in the place of Dr. Tho. Morton promoted to the Deanry of Winchester. Both which he kept, with the Rectory of Burcleere or Burrowcleere in Hampshire, and all little enough for the encouragement of so right learned a Man as this our author Dr. Field was, who in his time was esteemed a principal maintainer of Protestantcy, a powerful Preacher, a profound Schoolman, exact Disputant, and so admirable well knowing in the Controversies between the Protestants and the Papists, that few or none went beyond him in his time, as it doth plainly appear in these his labours.

Of the Church, four books. Lond. 1606. fol. To which he added a fifth book.—Lond. 1610. fol. with an Appendix containing, A defence of such passages of the former books that have been excepted against, or wrested, to the maintenance of the Romish Errors. All which were reprinted at Oxon, 1628. fol. He also published,

A Sermon Preached before the King at Whitehall, on Jude ver. 3. Lond. 1604. qu. He surrendered up his pious Soul to the great God that first gave it, on the 21. Nov. in sixteen hundred and sixteen, (being then reviewing the 1616. said books, and about to give answer to such that had opposed them,) and was buried in the outer Chappel of St. George at Windfore, a little below the Chaire. Over his grave was soon after laid a plank of black Marble, and thereon this inscription engraven on a Copper plate fastned thereunto. Richardus Field hujus olim coll. canonicus, & Ecclesia Glocestrensis Decanus, verè Doctor Theologia, & author librorum quinque de Ecclesia. Una cum Elizabetha Harrisia Sanctissima & Charissima conjuge, ex qua sex reliquit filios, filiam unicam. Hic sub communi marmore expectant Christi reditum, qui felicitatem, quam ingressi sunt, adventu suo perficiat, ac consummet. Obierunt in Domino, ille an. sal. 1616. ætatis sue 55. Hac an. sal. 1614. ætatis sue 41. In Dr. Field's Deanry of Gloucester succeeded Dr. William Land, and in his Canonry of Windfore, Edm. Wilson Doctor of Physick and Fellow of Kings coll. in Cambridge.

RICHARD HAKLUYT was born of, and descended from, an ancient and gentile Family of his name ^{433.} living at Yeston in Herefordshire, elected Student of Ch. Ch. from Westminster School, in 1570. took the degrees in Arts, lived for some time in the Middle Temple, where, I presume, he studied the Municipal Law. Afterwards he entred into holy Orders, and at length became Prebendary of the fourth stall in the Church of Westminster, in the place of one Dr. Rich. Webster, an. 1605. and Rector of Wetheringset in Suffolk. But that which is chiefly to be noted of him is this, that his Genie urging him to the study of History, especially to the Marine part thereof, (which was encouraged and furthered by Sir Francis Walsingham;) made him keep constant intelligence with the most noted Seamen at Wapping near London. From whom, and many small Pamphlets and Letters, that were published and went from hand to hand in his time, concerning the Voyages and Travels of several persons, he compiled a book intit. English Voyages, Navigations, Trafficks, and Discoveries. Lond. 1598. 99. and 1600. in three vol. in fol. Which work being by him performed with great care and industry, cannot but be an honour to the Realm of England, because possibly many Ports and Islands in America, that are base and barren, and only bear a name for the present, may prove rich places in future time.

Notes of certain Commodities in good request in the East Indies, the Molucoes, and China.—MS. among those given by Seldens Executors to the Pub. Lib. at Oxon. He also illustrated by diligent observation of time, and with most useful notes, Peter Mart. Anglericus his eight Decades De novo orbe. Par. 1587. oct. and corrected and much amended, and translated into English, The discoveries of the World from the first original, unto the year of our Lord 1555. Lond. 1601. qu. briefly written in the Portugal tongue; by Anth. Galvano, Governour of Ternate, the chief Island of the Molucoes: As also from the said Language into our English tongue, Virginia richly valued, by the description of the main Land of Florida, her next Neighbour. Lond. 1609. qu. He paid his last debt to nature, 23. Nov. in sixteen hundred and sixteen, and was buried in the Abbey Church of West- 1616. minster, dedicated to S. Peter, on the 26. of the same month, leaving behind him a Son named Edmund, begotten on the body of Frances his Wife, to whom he left his Mannor of Bridgeplace, and several tenements in Tuttlestreet within the City of Westminster. Oliver Hakluyt, Brother to the said Richard, was a Student of Ch. Ch. also, and being graduated in Physick had an happy hand in the practice of it. In R. Hakluyts Prebendship of Westminster succeeded Job. Holt of Cor. Ch. coll. as I shall tell you elsewhere.

JOHN SMITH was born in Warwickshire, elected ^{434.} Scholar of S. Johns coll. into a Coventry place, an. 1577. aged 14. and at length was made Fellow, and highly valued in the University for piety and parts, especially by those that excelled in both. Soon after he grew to that note, that he was chosen (being then Bach. of Div.) to be Lecturer in S. Pauls Cathedral in London, in the place of that great Man Dr. Lauc. Andrews, which he discharged not only to the satisfaction, but applause of most judicious and learned hearers, witnessed by their frequency and attention. Not long after he was removed to a Pastoral Charge at Clavering in in Essex, where being fix'd, he shined as a Star in its proper sphere, and was much revered for his Religion, learning, humility, and holiness of Life. He was skilful in the original Languages, an excellent Text-man, well read in writers that were of note in several ages of the Church, which may partly appear from these things following, that he wrote, viz.

The Substance and Pith of Prayer: or, a brief, holy, and heavenly Exposition on the Lord's Prayer, being the Summ and Marrow of divers Sermons, &c. on Matth. 6. 9. Lond. 1629. qu.

The Essex Dove presenting the World with a few of her Olive branches, &c. delivered in three several Treatises, viz. 1. The Grounds of Religion. 2. An Exposition on the Lord's Prayer. 3. A Treatise of Repentance. Lond. 1629. qu.

The poor Penitent: or, the Doctrine of Repentance, Preached in divers Sermons, &c. Lond. 1629. qu. in 14 Lectures, published by John Hart.

Exposition on the Creed. Lond. 1632. fol.

Explanation of the Articles of our Christian Faith. —

Which two last books were delivered in 73 Sermons. He concluded his last day in the month of Nov. in sixteen hundred and sixteen, and was buried in the Church of Claverley before-mentioned, leaving then, by his Will, several books to St. Johns coll. Library. I have mentioned several John Smiths in this work, that were Divines. See under the year 1596. and elsewhere.

435. THOMAS SPARKE received his first breath in Lincolnshire, (at South-Somercote, as it seems,) became perpetual Fellow of Magd. coll. in 1570. in which year he was admitted Bach. of Arts. Soon after, by the favour of Arthur Lord Grey, he was preferred to the Parsonage of Bletchley in Bucks, where he was held in great esteem for his piety. In the year 1575. he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, without ruling in Arts, and about that time was Chaplain to Dr. Cooper Bish. of Linc. who, that year, bestowed the Archdeaconry of Stow on him, in the place of Rog. Kelke Bach. of Div. who had succeeded Joh. Harrison in that Dignity, 1563. In 1581. he proceeded in Divinity, being then in great renown for his learning. But his Dignity being remote from his Cure, and therefore could not well attend it, he gave it up out of Conscience sake, in 1582. and contented himself only with Bletchley; whereupon Joh. Farmer, B. D. succeeded him therein. This Dr. Sparke was the person, who, being noted for a great Nonconformist, and a Pillar of Puritanism, was, by Letters from the King's Council, called to the Conference at Hampton-Court, an. 1603. where appearing in the behalf of the Millinaries, (as 'tis said,) or rather, with Jo. Rainolds, as a Proctor for the precise Party, not in a Priests Gown, or Canonical Coat, but such that Turky Merchants wear, received then so great satisfaction from his Majesty's most ready and apt Answers to the Doubts and Objections there and then proposed, that he (tho he spoke not one word) did not only, for the time following, yield himself in his practice to Universal Conformity, but privately by word and writing, and publickly by his brotherly perswasion. He was a learned Man, a solid Divine, well read in the Fathers, and so much esteemed for his profoundness, gravity, and exemplary life and conversation, that the Sages of the University thought it fit, after his death, to have his picture painted on the wall in the School-gallery among the English Divines of note there, viz. between that of Dr. Joh. Spenser of C. C. coll. whom I have mentioned under the year 1614. and that of Dr. Rich. Eedes of Ch. Ch. He hath written,

A comfortable Treatise for a troubled Conscience. Lond. 1580. oct.

Brief Catechism, with a form of Prayer for Householders. — Taken, as it seems, from the Catechism of Ursinus.

Sermon Preached at Cheyneys in Bucks, at the burial of the E. of Bedford, 14. Sept. 1585. on Apoc. 14. 13. Lond. 1585. oct. &c.

Treatise to prove that Ministers publickly, and Householders privately, are bound to Catechise their Parishioners and Families, &c. Oxon. 1588. oct.

Answer to Mr. Joh. de Albines notable discourse against Heresies. Oxon. 1591. qu.

Serm. at the Funeral of the Lord Grey, on Esay 57. 1, 2. Ox. 1593. oct.

The High-way to Heaven by the clear Light of the Gospel, &c. against Bellarmino, and others, in a Treatise made upon 37, 38, and 39 verses of the 7. of John, &c. Lond. 1597. oct.

A brotherly perswasion to Unity and Uniformity in Judgment and Practice, touching the received and present Ecclesiastical Government, and the authorized Rites and Ceremonies of the Church of England. Lond. 1607. qu. Answered by Anon. in a book intituled, The second part of the defence of the Ministers Reasons for refusal of Subscription and Conformity to the Book of Common Prayer, &c. Printed 1608. qu. And by another Anon. in a book intit. A dispute upon the question of kneeling in the act of receiving the Sacramental Bread and Wine, &c. Pr. 1608. qu. Our author also (I mean Sparke) had in Q. Elizabeth's time wrote a book of Succession. For which being brought into trouble, King James, who before had received intimation of the matter, sent for him the next day after the Conference at Hampton-Court, and talking with him about it, the King at length was so well satisfied with what he had done, that he then gave him his most gracious countenance. He died at Bletchley before-mentioned, in the Winter time, in sixteen hundred and sixteen, and was buried in the Church there, leaving then behind him three learned Sons, which then, or soon after, had been trained up in the Schools of the Prophets, viz. Thomas Fellow of New coll. in Oxon, Andrew of Peter house in Cambridge, and Will. Sparke of Magd. coll. whom I shall mention hereafter.

ROBERT TINLEY, a Kentish Man born, became a Commoner of Magd. hall in the latter end of 1578. aged 17. or thereabouts, was translated soon after to Magd. coll. of which he became Demy, and at length Fellow. In 1595. he was elected one of the Proctors of the University, being then esteemed a Man of parts, and an eloquent Preacher. Afterwards being made Vicar of Wytham or Widham in Essex, as also, if I mistake not, Minister of Glemsford in Suffolk, and at length Archdeacon of Ely, took the degrees in Divinity, and had then the general character of a person well read in the Fathers, but withal, a most bitter Enemy to Papists. He hath written and published,

Of the mischievous subtilty and barbarous cruelty of the Romish Synagogue, on Psal. 124. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. Lond. 1609. qu.

Of the false Doctrines and refined Heresies of the Rom. Synagogue, on Matth. 7. 15, 16. — Printed there the same year. In the first are examined divers passages of that English Libel, written by a certain Fugitive against the Apology of the Oath of Allegiance. In the other are answered many of the arguments published by Rob. Chambers, Priest, concerning Papish Miracles. He hath written other things, as 'tis said, but such I have not yet seen, nor do I know any thing else of him, only that he concluding his last day in sixteen hundred and sixteen, was buried, as I presume, at Wytham before-mentioned, leaving then behind him a Son named Martin Tinley, afterwards a Member of Ch. Ch. in this University.

HENRY PARRY, Son of Hen. Parry, Son of Will. Parry of Wormbridge in Herefordshire Gent. was born in Wils. 20. Dec. or thereabouts, an. 1561. admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. 13. Nov. 1576. and Probationer 23. Apr. 86. being then Master of Arts. Afterwards he was Greek Reader in that coll. Chaplain to Q. Elizabeth, Doctor of Divinity 95. Dean of Chester in 1605. in the place of Dr. Will. Barlow promoted to the See of Rocheſter, and at length through Gloucester, was made Bishop of Worceſter, an. 1610. He was reputed by all of his time an able Divine, well read in the Fathers, a thro-pac'd Disputant, and so eloquent a Preacher, that K. James 1. always professed he seldom heard a better. The King of Denmark also, who was sometimes present at our King's Court, gave him a very rich ring for a Sermon that he Preached before him and K. James at Rocheſter, an. 1606. He hath published, Concio de regno dei, in Matth. 6. 33. Lond. 1606. qu.

Concio de victoria Christiana, in Apoc. 3. 21. Oxon. 1593. 94. Lond. 1606. He also translated from English into Latin, The summe of a Conference between Joh. Rainolds and Joh. Hart, touching the Head and the Faith of the Church. Oxon. 1619. fol. Also from Lat. into English, A Catechism, wherein are debated and resolved the questions of whatsoever moment, which which have been, or are, controverted in Divinity. Oxon. 1591. oct. Which Catechism was originally written by Zach. Ursinus. This worthy Bishop died of a Palsey at 1616. Worcester, 12. Dec. in sixteen hundred and sixteen, and was buried in a little Chappel joyning to the north side of the Door of the Cathedral Church at Worcester. In his Epitaph over his Grave (a copy of which you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univer. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 238.) he is characterized to be trium linguarum cognitione, assidua verbi divini predicatione, provida Ecclesia gubernatione, mentis pietate, morumque integritate spectatissimus, &c.

438. EDWARD HOBY, a person much noted in his time to all learned Men, for his eminent endowments of mind and body, was the eldest Son of Sir Tho. Hoby Knight (mention'd under the year 1566.) by Elizab. his Wife, Daughter of Sir A. Coke Kt. was born in Berks particularly, as I conceive, at Bysham near to Maydenhead, became a Gentleman-Commoner of Trinity coll. in the beginning of 1574. aged 14. years, where, after he had spent 8 Terms in the study of Logick under a noted tutor, he became so great a proficient, that he was admitted in the latter end of the year 1575. Bach. of Arts of the University. The next year he proceeded in that faculty and was the Senior Master in the Comitia (whom we usually call The Senior of the Art) celebrated the same year. Afterwards spending some time in France, and in other Countries, as I suppose, was, some time after his return, honoured with the degree of Knighthood, an. 1582. made Constable of the Castle at Queenburg in the Isle of Shepy, was an Officer at the taking of Cadiz, a Parliament-man several times in the latter end of Qu. Elizabeth, and upon K. James his coming to the Crown (if not happily before) was made one of the Gent. of the Privy-Chamber. He was a person of great reading and judgment, especially in the controversies between Protestants and Papists, a singular lover of Arts, substantial Learning, Antiquities, and the Professors thereof, particularly the Learned Camden, who had sufficiently received of his bounty, as he himself (a) acknowledgeth, having dedicated his Hibernia (b) to him, and publickly told (c) the world that he had polished his excellent wit with learned Studies. He hath written,

A letter to Mr. Theoph. Hyggons late Minister, now a Fugitive, in answer to his First motive, Lond. 1609. qu.

A counter-snarl for Ishmael Rabschach a Cecropedian Lycaonite, being an answer to a R. Catholick, who writes himself J. R. Lond. 1613. qu. In which book, or in another, which I have not seen, our author treating of Purgatory, was answered by Joh. Floyd commonly called Father Fluda a Jesuit, in a book which he published under the name of Daniel à Jesu, printed at S. Omer in 1613. quarto.

Curry-comb for a Coxcombe: Or Purgatories Knell. In answer to a Libel by Jebal Rachel against Sir Edw. Hobies Counter-snarle, intituled Purgatories Triumph over hell. Lond. 1615. qu.

Several motions, speeches and arguments in the four last Parliaments in Queen Elizabeth — Published in the Historical collections of Hayw. Townsend Esq. He translated from French into English, Politique discours upon truth and lying: An instruction to Princes to keep their faith and promises. Lond. 1586. qu. Composed by Sir Mart. Cagnet Knight, one of the Privy-Council to the most Christian King, master of the Requests to his Household, and lately Embassador to the Cantons of Zwiszers and Grisons. And also from Spanish into English, The Origine and practise of War. Lond. 1597. oct. Written by Don Bernard de Mendoza. At length he giving way to fate in Queenburgh Castle on the first day of March (St. David's day) in sixteen hundred and sixteen, his body was conveyed to 1617. Bysham before mentioned, and buried there in a Chappel called Hoby's Chappel on the south side of the Chancel of the Church there, near to the body of his Father Sir Thomas. The said Sir Edward left behind him a natural Son named Peregrin Hoby, born of the body of one Katherin Pinkney, an. 1602. From which Peregrin are the Hobys now of Bysham descended.

THOMAS EGERTON, the natural Son of Sir 439. Rich. Egerton of Ridley in Cheshire, was born in that County, applied his Muse to learning in this University, about 1556. particularly, as 'tis said, in Brasnose coll. of which he was a Commoner, in the year of his age 17 or thereabouts, where continuing about 3 years, laid a foundation whereon to build profounder learning. Afterwards going to Lincolns-Inn he made a most happy progress in the municipal laws, and at length was a Counsellour of note. In 1581. June 28. he was constituted (d) by the Queen her Solicitor General, and soon after he became Lent-reader of the said Inn. In 1592. June 2. the said Queen made him her Attorney General, in 1594. (he being then a Knight) he was made Master of the Rolls, and two years after Lord Keeper of the Great Seal. In which eminent office he continued during the whole remainder of Qu. Elizabeth's happy Reigo. On 21. of Jul. 1603. he was raised to the degree of a Baron of this Realm, by the title of L. Ellesmere, and upon the 24. of the said Month, he was made Lord Chancellor of England. In the beginning of Nov. 1610. he was unanimously elected Chanc. of the University of Oxon. and in 14. Jac. 1. dom. 1616. he was advanced to the dignity of Vicount Brackley. He was a most grave and prudent man, a good Lawyer, just and honest, of so quick an apprehension also, and profound judgment, that none of the Bench in his time went beyond him. He hath written, Speech in the Exchequer Chamber, touching the Post-nati. Lond. 1609. in qu. in 16. sheets.

Certain observations concerning the office of Lord Chancellor. Lond. 1651. oct. and left behind him at his death four MSS. of choice collections, fit to be Printed, concerning (1) The prerogative Royal. (2) Priviledges of Parliament. (3) Proceedings in Chancery. (4) The power of the Starr-chamber. He resigned up his last breath, in York-house in the Strand near London 15. March in sixteen hundred and sixteen, and was buried in the Church of 1617. Dodelston in Cheshire. His memory was much (e) celebrated by Epigrams while he was living, and after his death all of the long Robe lamented his loss. We have his Picture drawn to the life in the habit of Lord Chancellor, setting in a Chair, hanging in the Gallery belonging to the Bodleian Library, called the School-gallery.

WILLIAM MARTYN, Son of Nich. Martyn 440. of the City of Exeter, (by his first Wife Mary Daughter of Leonard Yeo of Hatherley in Devon) Son of Rich. Martyn of the said City, and he the second Son of William Martyn of Athelhampton in Dorsetshire Knight, was born, and educated in Grammar learning, within the said City of Exeter: where making early advances towards Academicall learning, was sent to Broadgates hall (now Pemb. coll.) an. 1579. aged 17. In which place falling under the tuition of a noted Master, laid an excellent foundation in Logick and Philosophy. Afterwards going to the Inns of Court, he became a Baster, and in 1605. was elected Recorder of Exeter in the place of John Hele Serjeant at Law. But his delight being much conversant in the reading of English Histories, he composed a book of the Kings of England, as I shall tell you anon. Upon the publication of which K. James (as 'tis said) taking some exceptions at a passage therein, either to the derogation of his family, or of the Realm of Scotland, he was thereupon brought into some trouble, which shortned his days. He hath written, Youths instruction. Lond. 1612. qu. dedicated to his Son Nich. Martyn then a Student in Oxon. In the said book is shewed a great deal of reading, and consequently that the author was no loser of his time.

The History and Lives of the Kings of England, from William the Conquerour to K. Hen. 8. Lond. 1616. and 28. fol. usher'd into the world with the copies of Verses of Nicholas, William and Edw. Martyn the Sons of the author, and by Pet. Bevis his Son-in-Law. To this History was afterwards added the History of K. Edw. 6. Qu. Mary and Qu. Elizabeth, by B.R. Master of Arts — Lond. 1638. fol. At the end of all the impressions was Printed, (d) Baronag. Tom. 3. p. 414. b. (e) Vide in Epigram. Jo. Stadling, lib. 3. p. 99. lib. 4. 141. & in Epigram. Johannis Dunbari Megalo Brivanni, Cent. 2. Epigram. 52.

The succession of the Dukes and Earls of this Kingdom of England, from the Conquerour, to the 12. of James 1. with the then Viscounts, Barons, Baronets, &c. — which was drawn up by the author, and continued after his death by R. B. before-mention'd. What other books the said Will. Martyn hath either written or published I know not, nor any thing else of him, only that he was buried in the Church of S. Petrock in the City of Exeter 12. Apr. in sixteen hundred and seventeen. The inscription which was on the Stone, supposed to be laid for him, is worn out, and a new inscription cut thereon for one of the same family buried there. The next who must follow according to time was a severe Puritan, as Martyn was.

441. FRANCIS BUNNRY, Younger brother to Edmund, whom I shall anon mention, was born in an ancient House called the Vache in the Parish of Chalfont S. Giles in Bucks, on the 8. of May 1543. became a Student in the University in the latter end of the Reign of Q. Mary, an. 1558. and perpetual Fellow of Magd. coll. in 1562. being then Bach. of Arts. Afterwards proceeding in that faculty he took holy Orders, and began to preach Gods word on the first of Nov. 1567. Whose Sermons being noted among many, he became soon after Chaplain to the Earl of Bedford, but continuing with him not long, he left his Fellowship in 1571. and retiring into the north parts of England, where he preached the word of God very constant, as his brother Edmund did, was inducted into a Prebendship of Durham 9. May 1572. made Archdeacon of Northumberland, on the resignation of Ralph Lever, 20. Oct. 1573. and on the eleventh of Sept. 1578. he was made Rector of Ryton within the Bishoprick of Durham. This person was very zealous in the way he professed, was a great admirer of J. Calvin, a constant preacher, charitable, and a stiff enemy to Popery. He hath written and published, Survey and tryal of the Popes Supremacy. Lond. 1590. qu. Written against Card. Bellarmino.

Comparison between the antient faith of the Romans and the new Romish Religion. Lond. 1595. qu. This is commonly called Truth and Falshood.

Answer to a popish Libel, called A petition to the Bishops, preachers, and Gospellers. Oxon. 1607. oct.

Exposition on the 28. verse of the third Chapt. of the Epistle to the Romans, wherein is manifestly proved the doctrine of justification by faith, &c. Lond. 1616. qu.

Plain and familiar Exposition of the ten Commandments, by questions and answers. Lond. 1617. oct.

In Joelis prophetiam enarratio. Written by the author an. 1595. and by his Epistle dedicated it to Tobie Bishop of Durham, in which he saith he hath preached Sermons at Berwick about 20. years before that time, upon Joel, of which this book is the summ: And if printed, (for 'tis in MS.) would contain about 3 quire of Paper. He departed this mortal life, at Ryton before mention'd, 16. Apr. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, near to the Graves of 4 of his Sons, which he had by Jane his Wife. Daughter of Henr. Priestly. Over his Grave was soon after, set up in the Wall adjoining, a table or plate of Brasse, whereon are engraven certain trite Verses. The first Stanza runs thus.

*My bark now having won the haven
I fear no stormy Seas,
God is my hope, my home is heaven,
My life is happy ease, &c.*

By his will, he bequeathed to the University of Oxon. 100 l. towards their building of the New Schools, and 33 l. to Magd. college.

442. HENRY SAVILE, Sometimes of Shawhill in Yorkshire, commonly called Long Harry Savile, was born of an antient family of his name, living at Banke near Hahfax in that County, entred a Student in Merton coll. (of which his kinsman Mr. Hen. Savile was Warden) in 1587. and was soon after made one of the Portionists, commonly called Postmasters. After he had taken the degree of Bach. of Arts, he left it, and retired to S. Albans hall, and as a member thereof, he took the degree of M. of Arts, in 1595. All which time being under the inspection of his kinsman, he became an eminent Scholar, especially in the Mathematicks, Physick, (in which faculty he was admitted to practice by the University) Chemistry, Painting, Heraldry and Antiquities. Afterwards, for the compleating and advance of his knowledge, he travelled into Italy, France, and Germany, where spending his time very profitable, returned the most accomplished person of his time, and therefore his company was desired, and sought after by all learned and vertuous Men. He had written several things fit for the Press, but whether ever published, I find not as yet. It must be now known that this Henr. Savile being an intimate friend with the learned Camden, he (f) communicated to him the antient exemplar of Affer Menevensis, which contains the story of the discord between the new Scholars that Grimbald brought with him to Oxon, at the restauration of the University by K. Alfred, with the old Clerks that the said Grimbald found when he came to that place. Which exemplar being discovered to be genuine, by the said Camden (who afterwards (g) stil'd it Optimum exemplar Afferii) he did therefore make it publick, an. 1602. But so it was, that as soon as it peep'd forth, certain envious Canabrigians did not stick to report that the said story concerning the diffention between the old, and new Scholars, was foisted into Affer by the said Long Harry Savile, and which is more, that passage also, was put by him into the printed History of Ingulphus, which maketh much for the Antiquity of the University of Oxon. Ego Ingulphus, &c. pro literis addiscendis in teneriore atate constitutus, primum Westmonasterio, postremo Oxoniensi studio traditus sum, &c. But for the clearing of the said vain reports, much hath been (h) said already: and therefore I shall trouble the reader no more, but only tell him, that after the said Long Harry had lived for some years after his return from foreign Countries, within the Parish of S. Martin in the Fields near London, died there, to be the great reluctancy of all learned men, on 29. Apr. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, aged 49. Whereupon his body being buried in the Chancel of the Church of that Parish, had soon after a Monument set over his Grave, on the north Wall, with his bust to the middle, carved out from stone and painted. The reader is now to know that there was one Hen. Savile Esq; who was employed as a Captain in one of her Majesties Ships, called the Adventure, under the conduct of Sir Franc. Drake and Sir John Hawkyns against the Spaniard in the West Indies. Which Henry wrote a book intit. A Libel of Spanish lies found at the Sack of Cales, discouraging the fight in the West Indies between the English and the Spaniard, and of the death of Sir Franc. Drake, with an answer confuting the said Spanish lies, &c. Lond. 1596. qu. But this Capt. Henry Savile must not be understood to be the same with Long Harry, or with Sir Hen. Savile Warden of Merton college, but another of the same House, as I conceive, for three Hen. Saviles of Yorkshire, were articulated as members of that coll. in the time of Qu. Elizabeth, viz. one, who is written the Son of a Plebeian, 1588. a second, the Son of an Esq; in 1593. and a third an Esq; Son also, in 1595. The said Capt. Savile, or else Long Harry, was engaged in the Earl of Essex his treasons; for which, he was forced to abscond and withdrew for a time.

WILLIAM JAMES, Son of Joh. James of Little On in Staffordshire, by Ellen his Wife, Daughter of Will. 443. Bolt of Sanabach in Cheshire, was born at Sanabach, admitted Student of Ch. Ch. in 1559. or thereabouts, and took the degrees in Arts. Afterwards entring into holy Orders, he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences 1571. being then Divinity Reader of Magd. coll. The next year he was elected Master of Univ. coll. and in 1577. Aug. 27. he became Archdeacon of Coventry, on the death of Thom. Lewes. In 1584. he was made Dean of Ch. Ch. in Oxon, and in 96. June 5. he was installed Dean of Durham, after that place had laid void for some time, upon the promotion of Tob. Mathew to the See of Durham. In 1606. he succeeded the said T. Mathew in the Bishoprick of Durham, to which See he was consecrated 7. Sept. the same year. Whereupon Sir Adam Newton, afterwards a Baronet, was installed Dean of Durham 27. of the same month. Which Deanry he keeping till 1620. did for a certain sum of money (i) resign it, and thereupon Dr. Rich. Hunt Prebendary of Canterbury was installed in his room 29. May the same year. Dr. W. James hath published, Several Sermons, as, (1) Sermon before the Q. Maj. at Hampton Court, 19. Feb. 1578. on Ezra 4. 1, 2, 3. Lond. 1578. oct. (2) *Sermon at Pauls Cross, 9. Nov. 1589. on 1 Cor. 12. 25, 26, 27. Lond. 1590. qu. and others, as 'tis said, which I have not yet seen. He died on the 12. of May 1617. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, and was buried in the Ch. of the Cath. Ch. of Durham. He had a younger Brother named Francis James Fellow of All. coll. whom I shall mention in the Fasti 1587. and a Son of both his names by his first Wife, (named Katherine an Abendon Woman,) who was Student of Ch. Ch. and Orator of the University, an. 1601. Another Son also he had, named Francis James, begotten on the body of his third Wife, named Isabel; which Francis was Student of Ch. Ch. also, afterwards a Minister and well beneficed. He published A Proclamation to the King, in a Sermon Preached 15. June 1647. before his Maj. on Jonah 3. 7, 8. Lond. 1647. qu. About which time loosing all his Spiritualities, lived poor and bare, till the Kings return, 1660. There was another Fr. James, whom I shall mention in the Fasti 1612.*

444. EUSEBIUS PAGET was born at Cranford in Northamptonshire, sent to Oxon at 12 years of age in the Reign of Q. Mary, was made Choister, and afterwards, as it seems, Student of Ch. Ch. where making a considerable progress in Logick and Philosophy, departed without a degree, (tho a noted Sophister,) and at length became Rector of the Parish Church of St. Anne and St. Agnes within Aldersgate, in London, where he continued many years a constant and faithful Preacher of Gods word. He hath written and published,

The History of the Bible, briefly collected by way of Question and Answer.— When first printed I know not. Sure 'tis, that one edition of it came out at London 1627. oct. In the title of which, 'tis said, that it was corrected by the author. Another edition came out in 1657. in tw. and one or more afterwards.

Serm. of Tithes, on Gen. 14. 20, 21. Lond. 1583. oct.

Serm. of Election, on Gen. 25. 23. Lond. in oct.

1617. Catechism. Lond. 1591. oct. He also translated from Lat. into English, Harmony on Matth. Mark, and Luke, written by Joh. Calvin. Other things, as 'tis said, he hath either written or translated, but such I have not yet seen. He died in a good old age, either in the latter end of May, or beginning of June, in sixteen hundred and seventeen, and was buried in his Church of SS. Ann and Agnes before-mentioned, leaving then behind him a Son named Ephraim Paget, (whom I shall hereafter mention,) a godly and learned Minister, and one that suffered by the Presbyterians, in the beginning of the Grand Rebellion raised by them.

445. RICHARD KILBY received his first breath from a Plebeian Family in Warwickshire, and his juvenile education there, at the cost and charges of Rob. Olney of Tachbrook in that County. Thence he was sent to Gloucester hall, where he spent near four years in Logick and Philosophy. Afterwards he went to Emanuel coll. in Cambridge, where taking the degrees in Arts, he taught a School in Kent. About that time taking holy Orders, (an. 1596.) he became Curate of Southfleet there, where he was much followed for his familiar way of Preaching. At length he removed, and was first made Minister of S. Aikmonds, then of Allhallows, in the ancient Borough of Derby. He hath written,

The burthen of a loaden Conscience, or the Misery of Sin. Lond. 1608. Camb. 1614. &c. in all, at least six editions, in oct.

1617. The unburthening of a loaden Conscience.—Printed with the former book. With other things which I have not yet seen. He died 21. Oct. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Allhallows in Derby before-mentioned. Over his grave is a brass plate fastned to the midst of the North wall of the said Chancel, with eight home-spun verses engraven thereon, the four first of which, run thus:

Loe Richard Kilby lyeth here,
Which lately was our Minister.
To th' Poor he ever was a Friend,
And gave them all he had at's end, &c.

ROBERT TIGHE was born at Deeping in Lincolnshire, received part of his Academical education, as it seems, in Magd. coll. whence going to Cambridge, he took the degrees in Arts there, and then returning to the said coll. again, was not only incorporated in that degree, but admitted to the reading of the Sentences, in 1596. Afterwards he went to Cambridge again, took the degree of D. of D. being about that time Vicar of Allhallows Barkin near to the Tower of London, and going to Oxon again, was incorporated there, an. 1610. at which time, he was Archdeacon of Middlesex. He was an excellent Textuary, and a profound Linguist, which was the reason (as 'tis said) why he was imployed by King James I. in the translation of the Bible, in 1604. What else he translated, or wrote. I know not, nor any thing besides, only that he died about the beginning of Nov. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, after he had been Vicar of the said Church from 1604. to the beginning of 1616. leaving behind him a Widdow named Mary. In his Archdeaconry succeeded Dr. Will. Goodwin Dean of Ch. Ch. Oxon.

JOHN FLAVELL, a native of Bishops-Liddiard 447. in Somersetshire, was entred a Student in Trinity coll. in 1610. aged 14. and soon after became the forwardest Youth in that house, for his quick and smart disputations in Logick and Philosophy. At length the Foundress of Wadham coll. having been often told of the pregnancy of his parts, she made him one of her first Scholars thereof, in 1613. In the year following, he took the degree of Bach. of Arts, and became very useful among the Juniors by his frequent reading of Logick Lectures, and presiding in Philosophical disputations in the publick Refectory. In 1617. he proceeded in Arts, being then esteemed a good Greek and Lat. Poet, was Senior of the Art that year, and chose publick Professor of Grammar in the University, in which Faculty he was excellent and took great delight. He hath written,

Tractatus de Demonstratione methodicus & polemicus. Oxon. 1619. &c. oct. in 4 books, not intended for the Prefs, only for the use and profit of private auditors. But so it was, that after his death, his notes coming into the hands of Alex. Huish of the same coll. he put them into order, digested, and sent them to the Prefs, which since hath been taken into the hands of all Juniors, and have undergone several impressions.

1617. Grammat. Græc. Enchyridion. in oct. This goes under the name of Joh. Flavell, but whether written by the former, I know not, for I have not yet seen it. He died in the flower of his youth on the 10. Nov. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, and was buried in Wadham coll. Chappel. I find another Joh. Flavell, after the former in time, author of a little thing intit. A Prayer or Treatise of God's mighty power and protection of his Church and People, &c. Lond. 1642. and another (if not the same) author of Husbandry spiritualized, &c. Lond. 1669. qu. of A Saint indeed, &c. Lond. 1670. oct. and of several other things, but whether he was ever of this University, I know not. He occurs Minister of Dartmouth in Devon. 1672. and several years after.

THOMAS CORYATE, Son of George Coryate, 448. mentioned under the year 1606. was born in the Parsonage house at Odcombe in Somersetshire, became a Commoner of Gloucester hall in the beginning of the year 1596. aged 19. where continuing about three years, he attained, by the help of a great memory, to some competency in Logick, but more by far in the Greek tongue, and in humane learning. Afterwards he was taken home for a time, then went to London, and was received into the Family of Henry Prince of Wales. At which time falling into the company of the Wits, who found him little better than a Fool in many respects, made him their Whetstone, and so became notus nimis omnibus. In the beginning of the year 1608. he took a Voyage into France, Italy, Germany, &c. and at his return published his travels under this title.

(i) Camden in Annal Jac. 1. MS. sub an. 1620.

Crudities hastily gobbled up in five Months travels in France, Savoy, Italy, Rhetia, Helvetia, some parts of High Germany and the Netherlands. Lond. 1611. qu. Which book was then usher'd into the world by an Odombian banquet, consisting of near 60 copies of excellent verses made by the Poets of that time: (which did very much advantage the Sale of the book) Among them were Ben. Johnson, Sir Jo. Harrington of Kelston near Bathe, Dudl. Digges afterwards Master of the Rolls, Rich. Martin Recorder of London, Laur. Whittaker, Hugh Holland the traveller, Jo. Hoskyns Sen. Inigo Jones, the surveyour, Christop. Brook, Rich. Corbet of Ch. Ch. John Chapman, Thom. Campian Dr. of Phys. Jo. Owen the Epigrammatist, Sam. Page of C. C. C. Tho. Bastard of New coll. Tho. Farnaby sometimes of Mert. coll. Jo. Donne, Mich. Drayton, John Davys of Hereford, Hen. Peacham, &c. In the year following (1612) after he had taken leave of his Countrymen by an oration spoken at the Cross in Odcombe, he took a long and large journey, with intentions not to return to his native Country, till he had spent 10 years in travelling to and fro. The first place he went to (a) was Constantinople, where he took special notice of all things there observable. In which place he found very great respect and encouragement from Sir Paul Pindar then and there Embassadour. Being there for some time he took his opportunities to view divers parts in Greece; and in the Helespont he took special notice of those two Castles directly opposed each to other, called Sestos and Abydos, which stand on the several banks that bound that very narrow Sea. Which places Musæus makes famous in his very antient Poem of Hero and Leander. He saw Smyrna famous at that time for trade, but not religion, and what then remain'd of the ruins of sometimes great Troy, but the very ruins of that place were almost all gone to ruine. From Smyrna he found a passage to Alexandria in Egypt, and there, near Grand Cairo (antiently called Memphis) he observed what remain'd of the once famous Pyramids. Returning thence back to Alexandria he found a passage by Sea to Joppa, and travelling thence 20 English miles, he arrived at Jerusalem, but found it a very solitary, rocky and uncomfortable way, full of danger, by reason of the wild Arabs, who keep about those passages, to make poor travellers their prey and spoil. In Jerusalem he saw Mount Calvary (where our Saviour suffered) then enclosed within the Walls, Bethlem where he was born, about 5 English miles from Jerusalem; and Mount Olivet, whence he ascended. From Jerusalem he took his way to make a view of the Dead Sea, the place where Sodom and Gomorrhah, and Admah and Zeboim once stood. Thence he went to have a sight of the River Jordan, which dischargeth it self into that most uncomfortable Lake, and from thence he journied north-east through the Ten Tribes, till he came to Mount Libanus. Thence back to Sidon, where he got a passage by Sea unto Alexandretta, now called Scanderoon, which is one of the most unwholesome places in the world. Thence he took his way to Aleppo in Syria, about 70. miles distant from Scanderoon, where he was kindly received by the English Consul, and tarried with him till he could get the benefit of a Caravan, which consists of a great multitude of people from divers parts, which get and keep together travelling in those parts, for fear of the incursions and violences by Thieves and Murderers, which they would undoubtedly meet withal, if they travelled single, or but few together. With these, he after set forward towards, and to that City antiently called Nineveh in Assyria, which we find in the Prophecy of Jonah was sometimes a great and excellent City of three days journey, but then so exceedingly less'n'd and lodg'd in obscurity, that passengers could not say this was Nineveh. From thence he journied to Babylon in Chaldea, situated upon the River Euphrates, once likewise so great, that Aristotle called it a Country, not a City, but now very much contracted. From this place he proceeded through both the Armeniaes, and either did, or else he was made to, believe, that he saw the very mountain Ararat, whereon the ark of Noah rested after the flood. From thence he went forward towards the Kingdom of Persia, and there to Uspahan the usual place of residence for that great King. Thence to Seras, antiently called Shushan, where the great King Ahasuerus kept his Royal and most Magnificent Court. Afterwards to Candahor, the first Province north-east, under the subjection of the Great Mogul, and so to Lahore the chiefest City but one, belonging to that great Empire, of very great trade, wealth, and delight. From Lahore he went to Agra, which is 400 English miles, planted with great Trees on both sides, which are all the year cloathed with leaves, exceeding beneficial unto travellers for the shade they afford them in those hot climes. At Agra he made an halt, being there lovingly received in the English Factory, where he staid till he had gotten to the Turkish, and Morisco or Arabian Languages, some good knowledge in the Persian and Indostan Tongues, in which study he was always very apt, and in little time shewed much proficiency. The first of those two, the Persian, is the more quaint; the other, the Indostan, is the vulgar Language spoken in East India. In both these he suddenly got such a knowledge and mastery, that it did exceedingly afterwards advantage him in his travels up and down the Moguls Territories, he wearing always the habit of that Nation; and speaking their Language. In the first of these, the Persian Tongue, he made afterwards an Oration to the Great Mogul, as I shall tell you anon, and in the Indostan he had to great a command, that he undertook a Landry-woman (belonging to the English Embassador in that Country) who had such a liberty and freedom of speech that she would sometimes scould, brawle and rail from Sun-rising to Sun-set: I say that Tom Coryate undertaking her in her own Language he did so silence her by eight of the clock in the morning, that she had not one word more to speak, to the great wonder and mirth of those present. After he had visited several places in that Country and had been courteously received by Sir Tho. Roe Embassador there for the K. of England, he went at length to Surat, lying on the banks of Swally Road, which is in E. India under the Empire of the Gr. Mogul, where he ended his days as I shall tell you anon. He was a man of a very coveting Eye that could never be satisfied with seeing, tho he had seen very much, and yet he took as much content in seeing, as many others in the enjoying of great and rare things. He had got (besides the Latine and Greek) the mastery of many hard Languages, in which, if he had obtained wisdom to husband and manage them, as he had skill to speak them, he had deserved more fame in his generation. But his knowledge and high attainments in several Languages made him not a little ignorant of himself, he being so covetous and ambitious of praise, that he would hear and endure more of it than he could in any measure deserve; being like a Ship that hath too much sail, and too little ballast. However had he not fallen into the smart hands of the Wits of those times, wherein he lived, he might have passed better. That itch of fame which engaged this man to the undertaking of those very hard, long, and dangerous travels, hath put thousands more (and therefore he was not alone in this) into strange attempts, only to be talked of. 'Twas fame, without doubt, that stirred up this man unto these voluntary, but hard undertakings, and the hope of that glory which he should reap after he had finished his long travels, made him not at all to take notice of the hardship he found in them. That hope of name and repute for the time to come did even feed and feast him for the time present. And therefore any thing, that did in any measure eclips him in those high conceivings of his own worth, did too too much trouble him; which you may collect from these following instances. Upon a time (b) one Mr. Rich. Steel a Merchant, and servant to the East-India company, came to Sir Tho. Roe the Embassador at Mandao, the place then of the Moguls residence, at which time our author Tho. Coryate was there. This Merchant had not long before travelled over land from E. India, through Persia, and so for Constantinople, and so for England, who in his travels homeward had met with T. Coryate as he was journeying towards E. India. Mr. Steel then told him, that when he was in England, K. James (then living) enquired after him, and when he had certified the King of his meeting him on the way, the K. replied is that fool living? which when our Pilgrim Coryate heard, it seemed to trouble him very much, because the K. spake no more nor no better of him, saying that Kings would speak of poor men what they pleased. At another time when he was ready to depart from Mandao, Sir Th. Roe the Embassador gave him a Letter, and in that a Bill to receive ten pounds at Aleppo when he should return thither. The Letter was directed to Mr. Libbens Chapman there Consul at that time, in which, that which concern'd our traveller was thus. Mr. Chapman when you shall hand these Letters, I desire you to receive the bearer of them Mr. Tho. Coryate, with courtesie, for you shall find him a very honest poor wretch; and further I must intreat you to furnish him with ten pounds, which shall be repayed, &c. Our Pilgrim liked the gift well, but the language by which he should have received it, did not at all content him, telling his Chamber-fellow Mr. Terry, that my Lord Embassador had even spoiled his courtesie in the carriage thereof; so that if he had been a very fool indeed, he could have said very little less of him than he did, honest poor wretch! and to say no more of him, was to say as much as nothing. Furthermore also he told him that when he was formerly undertaking his journey to Venice, a person of honour, wrote thus in his behalf to Sir Hen. Wotton then and there Embassador, My Lord, good wine needs no Bush, neither a worthy mans Letter commendatory, because whethersoever he comes, he is his own Epistle, &c. This did so much please the Pilgrim, that there (said he) was some language in my behalf, but now for my Lord to write nothing of me by way of commendation, but honest poor wretch, is rather to trouble me, than to please me with his favour. And therefore afterwards his letter was phras'd up to his mind, but he never lived to receive the money. By which his old acquaintance might see how tender the poor man was to be touched in any thing that might in the least measure disparage him. O what pains he took to make himself a subject for present and after discourse! being troubled at nothing for the present, unless with the fear of not living to reap that fruit, he was so ambitious of in all his undertakings. And certainly he was surprized with some such thoughts and fears (as he afterwards told the company) when upon a time he being at Mandoa with the English, and there standing in a room against a stone-pillar, where the Embassador was, upon a sudden he fell into such a swoon, that they had very much ado to recover him out of it, but at last he came to himself, and told them, that some sad thoughts had immediately before presented themselves to his fancy, which, as he conceived, put him into that distemper; like Fannius — Ne moriere mori. For he told them that there was great expectation in England of the large accounts he should give of his travels after his return home, and that he was now shortly to leave them, and he being at present not very well, if he should dye in his way towards Surat, whether he was then intending to go (which place he had not yet seen) he might be buried in obscurity, and none of his friends ever know what became of him, travelling then, as usually he did, alone. Upon which the Embassador willed him to stay longer with him, but he then thankfully refused that offer, and turned his face presently after towards Surat, which was 300. miles distant from the place where the Embassador was, and he lived to come safely thither. But there being over-kindly used by some of the English, who gave him Sack, which they had brought from England, he calling for, as soon as he first heard of, it, and crying Sack, Sack, is there such a thing as Sack? I pray give me some Sack, and drinking of it moderately (for he was very temperate) it increased his flux which he had then upon him: and this caused him within few days after his very tedious and troublesome travels, for he went most on foot) at that place to come to his journeys end, as I shall anon tell you. What became of his notes and observations, which he had made in his long journeys, I know not, only these following which he sent to his friends in England, who printed them in his absence.

Letters from Asmere, the Court of the Great Mogul, to several persons of quality in England, concerning the Emperor and his Country of E. India. Lond. 1616. qu. In the title of which is our authors Picture, riding on an Elephant. The first letter is written to Sir Edw. Philips of Montague in Somersetshire Kt. Master of the Rolls.

A Letter to his Mother Gertrude, dated from Agra in E. India, ult. oct. 1616. containing a speech that he spoke to the Gr. Mogul in the Persian Language—See in the Pilgrimages of Sam. Purchase, part 1. book 4. chap. 17. and also at the end of his Letters from Asmere before mentioned. 'Tis reported (c) that in an Oration which our author Coryate did speak to the said Mogul he brought in that story of the Queen of Sheba, 1 Kings 10. (in which parts of that sacred History the Mahumetans have some knowledge) and told him that as the Queen of Sheba having heard of the fame of K. Solomon, came from far to visit him; which when she had done, she confessed that tho she had heard very much of him, and many things beyond her belief, yet now seeing what she did, acknowledged that she had not heard half of that which she now saw concerning the wisdom, and greatness, and revenue, and riches of Solomon: So our Orator Coryate told the Mogul, that he had heard very much of him before he had the honour to see him (when he was very far off in his own Country) but now what he beheld did exceedingly surmount all these former reports of him, which came to his Ears at such a distance from him. Then larding his short speech with some other piece of Flattery, which the Mogul liked well, concluded. Afterwards the Mogul gave him one hundred Roopus, which amounts to value of 12 l. 10 s. of our English money, looking upon him as a Dervese, or Votary, or Pilgrim, (for so he called him) and such that bear that name in that Country seem not much to care for money, and that was the reason (I conceive) that he gave him not a more plentiful reward.

Divers Lat. and Greek Epistles to learned men beyond the Seas.—Some of which are in his Cruditities, as those to Gasp. Waserus, Radolp. Hospinian, Hen. Bullinger, descended from the famous Henry Bullinger, Marc. Buelerius, &c. At length our author Coryate giving way to fate, occasion'd by a Flux, at Surat in E. India before-mention'd, in the month of December in sixteen hundred and seventeen, was buried there under a little Monument, like to one of those that are usually made in one of our Chyards. Sic exit Coryatus: (Hence he went off the Stage, and so must all after him, how long soever their parts seem to be. For if one should go to the extremest part of the world East, another West, another North, and another South, they must all meet at last together in the field of Bones, wherein our traveller hath now taken up his lodging, and where) I leave him, to make way for the next, as eminent almost for the Law, as he for his Travels.

FERDINANDO PULTON alias Poulton 419. (Son of Giles Pulton Esq; who died 1560.) was born at Deusborough in Northampton-shire, became (*) commoner of Brasnosc coll. in the beginning of Q. Marys Reign, laid there a foundation of Academical literature, which he found useful to him afterwards when he grew eminent in the common Law. But leaving that house before he took a degree, he went to Lincolns Inn, studied the said Law, took the usual degrees, and became eminent for the knowledge in, and practice of, it, not only in London, but the usual place of his residence in the country, viz. at Borton in the Parish and County of Buckingham. He hath written and published, with marginal Notes, &c. Lond. 1618. 8c. fol. He departed this Life, on the 20. January in sixteen hundred and seventeen, aged 82. and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Densborough, before-mention'd. Over his grave was a large plain Stone soon after laid, with an Epitaph engraven thereon, wherein 'tis said that he was Vir omni virtutis & doctrinarum genere, (&c) quondam illustrissimus necnon sedulus scriptor & propagator legum hujus regni. But if you are minded to read his English Epitaph, see in Sir Joh. Beaumont's Tast of the variety of Poems, at the end of his Bosworth-field. Lond. 1629. oct. The said Ferdinando Pulton left behind him several Sons, whereof two were R. Cath. Priests.

450. WILLIAM WYRLEY, Son of Augustin Wyrley of Netherfeile in Leicestershire (by Mary his Wife, Daughter of Walt. Charnells) Son of Will. Wyrley of Handsworth in Staffordshire, descended from an antient family of his name, sometimes living at Rowley in the said County, was born (a) in Staffordshire; and in those parts educated in Grammar learning. This person, whom we are farther to mention, having from his childhood had an excellent Genie for Arms and Armory was entertained in the family of Sampson Erdeswyke of Sandon Esq; (mentioned under the year 1603.) called then by some the Antiquary of Staffordshire, where making a considerable progress in Heraldical and Antiquarian studies under his inspection, published a book under his own name entitled, The true use of Armory, shewed by History and plainly proved by example, &c. Lond. 1592. qu. Reported by some to be originally written by the said Erdeswyke, but he being then an ancient man, thought it fitter to have it published under Wyrley's name than his. However the reader is not to think so, but rather to suspend his thoughts (being only a bare report that came (b) originally from Erdeswyke's mouth; and to know this, that Wyrley was an ingenious man, and fit to compose such a book, and that Erdeswyke being often times crazed especially in his last days, and fit then for no kind of serious business, would say any thing which came into his mind, as 'tis very well known at this day among the chief of the college of Arms. Soon after the publication of that book, Wyrley left him, and retired to Balliol coll. purposely to obtain Academical learning, where being put under the tuition of a good tutor, and in great hope to obtain the grounds of the said learning, was matriculated in the University (c) as a member of that house in Act term, an. 1595. he being then about 29. years of age. How long he continued there, or whether he took a degree, it appears not. However for diversion sake, he employed his time so admirably well during his abode in that house that he made several (d) collections of Arms from Monuments and Windows in Churches and elsewhere in and near Oxon, which have given me much light in my searches after things of that nature, in order to the finishing the great work that I have been many years drudging in. He also made divers remarks and collections from various Leiger books, sometimes belonging to Monasteries in these parts, and elsewhere. The Original of which, written with his own hand, I have in my little Library, which tho partly perished by wet and moisture, yet I shall always keep them as monuments of his industry. On the 15. May, 2. Jac. 1. dom. 1604. he was (e) constituted Rouge-Croix, Officer or Pursivant of Armes. Which place he holding several years, was always reputed among those of the coll. of Arms, a knowing and useful person in his profession; and might, had a longer life been spared, have published several matters relating thereunto, but being untimely cut off in the midst of his endeavours, about the beginning of Feb. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, we have enjoyed only (besides the printed book and collections already mentioned) various collections of Arms and Inscriptions made in, and from (which several Churches and Gentlemens habitations in his own Countie, Leicestershire have assisted Burton the Antiquary thereof) and in other Counties, and from Churches in, and near to, London. Some of which I have seen and perused in the Sheldonian

Library, I mean in that Library which belonged sometimes to that most worthy and generous person, (my friendly acquaintance never to be forgotten) Raphe Sheldon of Boely Esquire, the same Raphe (for there are several of his family of both his names) who died on Midsummer-day, an. 1684. aged 61. or thereabouts. Which Library, the MSS. only, to the number of about 300. besides very many Parchment rolls and Pedegrees, he bequeathed to the Coll. of Arms situated on Bennet-hill near to St. Paul's Cathedral in London, where they yet remain. As for the body of Wyrley, 'twas buried, as I have been informed, in the Church of S. Bennet near to Pauls Wharff.

EDMUND BUNNEY, elder brother to Francis 451
Bunney before mentioned, was the Son of Rich. Bunney of Newton, otherwise called Bunney-hall in the Parish of Wakefield, and of Newland in the Parish of Normanton, in Yorkshire Esq; by Bridget his Wife, Daughter and coheir of Edw. Restwold of the Vache near to Chalfont St. Giles in Bucks. (who died 1547.) descended from Richard and Philipp de la Vache, Knights of the illustrious Order of the Garter in the time of K. Rich. 2. These Bunneys (by the way it must be known) pretend that their Ancestours, descended from the Bunneys of Bunney, a Town so called, near to the ripe of the River Loir by Orleans in France, came with William the Conquerour into England, and settled themselves at a place in Nottinghamshire called from them Bunney rise; but how they can make that out, seeing their name is not in the original and genuine Copy of Battle-Abbey roll, I cannot yet understand. This our author Edm. Bunney, whom I am farther to mention, was born at a house called the Vache before mention'd, (being then imparted) an. 1540. sent to this University at 16 years of age in the fourth year of Q. Mary, and about the time he took the degree of Bach. of Arts, he was elected Probationer Fellow of Madg. coll. being then noted to be very forward in Logick and Philosophy. Soon after he went to Staple Inn, and thence to Greys Inn, in either of which he spent about two years, for his Father, intended him for the Common-Law, being his eldest Son, but he resolving for Divinity, was cast off by his Father, (tho a good man, as he the Son (f) saith, and one that fled for his Religion in Qu. Mary's days) so that returning to Oxon, he took the degree of Master in the latter end of 1564. and in the year following was elected fellow of Merton coll. at which time Hen. Savile was elected Probationer. For which a act, tho the Society had no precedent, yet there was a necessity for it, because there was not one then in that Society, that could, or would, preach any publick Sermon in the college turn, such was the scarcity of Theologists, not only in that House, but generally throughout the University. In the year 1570. he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, and about that time became Chaplain to Dr. Grindall Archb. of York, who gave him a Prebendship of that Church and the Rectory of Bolton Percy, about six Miles distant thence. Which Rectory after he had enjoyed 25. years, he resigned, and maintaining himself with the profits of his Prebendship, (being also Subdean of York) and other Dignities, mention'd in his Epitaph following, he preached and catechized where there was most need. I have heard Dr. Barten Holyday say, that when he was a Junior in the University, this our author Bunney (who had a bulkey body and a broad face) did several times come to Oxon, accompanied with two men in black Liveries with horses, and did preach or catechize in some Churches there, and near to it, where was none to do that office, particularly in Allsaints Church, to whom many resorted and took Notes. Also that whatsoever he had given to him by way of gratuity, he would bestow on his men; and farther added that by his seeming holiness of life and soundness of doctrine, many Scholars (particularly himself) were induced afterwards to take holy Orders. He would travel over most parts of England like a new Apostle, and would endeavour to act as the Apostles did. So that being blamed for it by many, as if there were none to be found to do that office but he, and looked upon by others as a forward, busie and conceited man, he therefore wrote his Defence of his labour in the work of the Ministry, and dispersed several copies of it abroad among his friends and acquaintance. The truth is he was the Necessary admonition out of the Prophet Joel, con-cerning that hand of God that of late was upon us, and is not clean taken off as yet, &c. Lond. 1588. oct. The Reader is to understand that Rob. Persons a Jesuit did put out a book intit. Christian Exercise appertaining to Resolution, &c. in two parts. The first of which coming forth be-fore the other, our author Bunney did correct, alter, and made it fit for the use of Protestants, adding thereunto of his own composition,

A Treatise of Purification. Lond. 1584. or thereabouts, in oct. But the Jesuit in the next edit. of the said Refo-lution, did much complain of our author for assuming to himself the labours of another person, and of spoiling his work and the impression thereof. Whereupon our au-thor put out another book intit.

A brief answer unto those idle and frivolous quarrels of R. P. against the late edition of the Resolution. Lond. 1589. oct. He hath also written,

Of Divorce for Adultery, and Marrying again, that there is no sufficient Warrant so to do. Oxon. 1610. qu. At the end of which is a note to shew that Rob. Persons was many years since answered.

The corner Stone: Or, a form of teaching Jesus Christ out of the Scriptures. Lond. 1611. fol.

A defence of his labour in the work of the Ministry. — MS. written 20. Jan. 1602. He also translated, as some say, into the English tongue, or as others, perverted it, that excellent book of Joh. Gerson, or rather of Tho. de Kempis, intit. Of the imitation of Christ; but whether true I know not, for I have not yet seen such a thing. He ended his days at Camood in Yorkshire 26. Febr. in sixteen hundred and seventeen, and was buried in the south Isle joyning to the choir of York Cathedral. Over his grave is a fair Monument in the wall, with his Effigies carved from stone, and this inscription by it. Edmundus Bunneus ex nobili Bunnaorum familia oriundus, S. Th. Bac. coll. 452. ROBERT ABBOT, the eldest Son of Maurice Abbot Sherman, (who died 25. Sept. 1606.) by Alice March his Wife, was born at Guildford in Surry, in an house now an Ale-house, bearing the sign of the Three Mariners, by the Rivers side near to the Bridge, on the North side of the Street, in St. Nicholas Parish; educated in the Free School there, (founded by K. Ed. 6. 1551.) under Mr. Franc. Tayler Schoolmaster thereof, became a Student in Balliol coll. 1575. aged 15 years, elected Socius Sacerdotalis of that house 16. Jan. 1581. took the degree of M. A. in the year following, became a noted Preacher in the Uni-versity, and a constant Lecturer at St. Martins Church in the Quadrivium, and sometimes at Abendon in Berks. Afterwards being made Lecturer in the City of Worcester and Rector of Allsaints Church there, he resigned his Fel-lowship 8. March 1588. and not long after became Rector of Bingham in Northamptonshire by the favour of Joh. Stanhope Esquire, and afterwards took the degrees in Divinity, that of Doctor being compleated in 1597. In the begin-ning of the Reign of K. James 1. he was made Chaplain in Ordinary to him, in the year 1609. he was unani-mously elected Master of Balliol coll. and in the beginning of Nov. 1610. he was made Prebendary of Normanton in the Church of Southwell. In 1612. he was appointed Doctor of the Theological Chair, usually called the Kings Pro-fessor of Divinity, by his Majesty; and in 1615. he was nominated by him to be Bishop of Salisbury, meerly, as 'tis said, for his incomparable Lectures read in the Divi-nity School concerning the Kings Supream Power, against Bellarmine and Suarez, and for his Antilogia which he a little before had published. So that being consecrated thereunto on the third of Dec. the same year, late there till the time of his death, which was soon after. He was a person of unblameable life and conversation, a profound Divine, most admirably well read in the Fathers, Coun-cils and Schoolmen, and a more moderate Calvinian than either of his two Predecessors (Holland and Hum-phrey) in the Divinity-chair were; which he expressed by countenancing the Sublapsarian way of Predestination. His works are,

The Mirrour of Popish Subtilties; discovering certain wretched and miserable evasions and shifts, which a secret cavilling Papist in the behalf of one Paul Spence Priest, yet living, and lately Prisoner in the Castle of Worcester, hath gathered out of Saunders and Bellar-mine, &c. concerning the Sacraments, &c. In Richardi Thomsoni Angli Belgici deatribam, de amissione & intercessione justificationis & gratiæ, animadversio brevis. The former of which two, viz. Exerc. de gratiâ, &c. was printed at Francfort 1619. under this title, Exercitationes Academicae de gratiâ & perseverantiâ Sanctorum, itemque de in-tercessione justificationis. in oct. As for Rich. Thomson you may see more of him in the Fasti, an. 1596.

De supremâ potestate regiâ, exercitationes habita in Acad. Oxon. contra Rob. Bellarminum & Franc. Suarez. Lond. 1619. qu. He also wrote a most accurate Commentary (in La-tin) upon the Epistle to the Romans, with large Sermons upon every verse, in which he handled, as his Text gave him occasion, all the controverted points of Religion at this day. This Commentary, which is in 4 volumes in MS. was given to Bodlies Library by Dr. Edw. Corbet Rector of Haseley in Oxfordshire, who married Margaret, the Daughter of Sir Nath. Brent Knight, by his Wife (*) Preb. of Oxgate in the Church of St. Paul.

Maria

1617. Martha the only Daughter and Heir of the said Dr. Rob. Abbot. Other matters also he left behind him fit for the Press, but whether they were all printed I know not. At length through a too sedentary life, which brought him to the terrible disease of the Stone in the Kidneys, he gave way to fate on the second of March in sixteen hundred and seventeen, and was buried in the Cath. Church of Salisbury, over against the Bishops seat, having in less than two years before, married a second Wife, for which he gained the great displeasure of his Brother Dr. Geo. Abbot Archb. of Canterbury. I find another Rob. Abbot, who was a frequent writer, but after the former in time. He was originally of Cambridge, and afterwards a Minister of God's Word, first in Kent, then in Hampshire, and at length in London, as I shall more at large tell you in the Fasti, 1607.

453. WALTER WYLSHMAN, a Cornish man born, educated in Exeter coll. took the degrees in Arts, stood as a Member of Broadgates hall in an Act celebrated 1594. to compleat it, being about that time Minister of Dartmouth in Devonshire, and much resorted to for his frequent and practical way of Preaching. He hath written and published, Clar. 1617. The sincere Preacher: Proving that in whom is adulation, avarice, and ambition, he cannot be sincere: Delivered in three Sermons in Dartmouth, upon 1 Thes. 2. 5, 6. London, 1616. oct.

454. THOMAS BASTARD, a most ingenious and facetious person of his time, was born at a Market Town in Dorsetshire called Blandford, educated in Wykeham School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1588. and two years after Bach. of Arts. But this person being much guilty of the vices belonging to Poets, and given to libelling, he was in a manner forced to leave his Fellowship, in 1591. So that for the present being put to his shifts, he was not long after made Chaplain to Thomas Earl of Suffolk, Lord Treasurer of England, by whose favour and endeavours he became Vicar of Beer-Regis, and Rector of Amour or Hamer in his native Country, being then M. of A. He was a person endowed with many rare gifts, was an excellent Grecian, Latinist, and Poet, and in his elder years a quaint Preacher. His discourses were always pleasant and facete, which made his company desired by all ingenious men. He was a most excellent Epigrammatist, and being always ready to versifie upon any subject, did let nothing material escape his fancy, as his compositions running through several hands in MS. shew. One of which made upon his three Wives runs thus,

*Terna mihi variis ducta est aetatibus uxor,
Hac juveni, illa viro, tertia nupta seni.
Prima est propter opus teneris mihi juncta sub annis, Altera propter opes, tertia propter opem.*

The things that he hath written and published are many, but all that I have seen are only these.

Epigrams. — Which being very pleasant to the Reader, that noted Poet Sir Joh. Harrington of Kelston made one (*) or more Epigrams, dedicated to the author of them.

Poema, intit. Magna Britannia, lib. 3. London, 1605. qu. Dedicated to K. Jam. 1.

Five Sermons. London, 1615. qu. The three first on Luke 1. 76. are called, The Marigold and the Sun. The two last on Luke 7. 37, 38. are intit. The Sinners Looking-glass.

1618. Twelve Sermons. London, 1615. qu. The first on Ephes. 4. 26. is intit. A Christian exhortation to innocent anger. The second on Exod. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. is, The calling of Moses, &c. This Poet and Preacher being towards his latter end crazed, and thereupon brought into debt, was at length committed to the Prison in Allhallows Parish in Dorchester, where dying very obscurely, and in a mean condition, was buried in the Church-yard belonging to that Parish, on 19. Apr. in sixteen hundred and eighteen, leaving behind him many memorials of his Wit and Drollery. In my collection of Libels or Lampoons, made by divers Oxford Students in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, I meet with two made by this author. One of which is intit. An admonition to the City of Oxford: or his Libel intit. Marprelates Basterdine. Wherein he reflects upon all persons of note in Oxon that were guilty of amorous exploits, or that mixed themselves with other Mens Wives, or with wanton Huswives in Oxon. Another also, was made after his expulsion, wherein he disclaimeth the aforesaid Libel, beginning thus: Jenkin why Man? Why Jenkin? sie for shame, &c. But the Reader must know that none of these were printed.

JOHN DOVE, a Surrey Man born of Plebeian Parents, was elected from Westminster School a Student of Ch. Ch. an. 1580. aged 18. and after he had taken the degrees in Arts became a Preacher of note in the University. In 1596. he proceeded in Divinity, being at that time well beneficed, if not dignified, but where I cannot yet tell. His works are,

A perswasion to the English Recusants to reconcile themselves to the Church of Rome. London, 1603. (qu.)

Confutation of Atheism. London, 1605. and 1640. oct.

Defence of Church-Government, wherein the Church Government in England is directly consonant to the Word of God, &c. London, 1607. qu.

Defence of the Cross in Baptism, as 'tis used in the Church of England. — Printed with the Defence.

Advertisement to the English Seminaries and Jesuits, shewing their loose kind of writings, and negligent handling the cause of Religion, &c. London, 1610. qu.

The conversion of Salomon. A direction to holiness of life, handled by way of Commentary upon the whole book of Canticles, &c. London, 1613. qu.

Sermons, on Ezek. 33. 11. and S. Matth. 19. 9. London, 1597. 1601. oct. &c. See more in Alb. Gentilis, an. 1611. where you will find him author of another book, but whether printed I know not. He concluded his last day in Apr. (about the 19. day) in sixteen hundred and eighteen, but where buried I know not as yet. I find one John Dove to be author of Polydorian, or a miscellany of Moral, Philosophical and Theological Sentences. Printed 1631. oct. But whether he was the same with the Doctor, or another, I cannot tell, unless I see the book itself, which I have not yet done.

RICHARD MOKET, was born in Dorsetshire, in the Dioc. of Salisbury, elected from Brasnose, to be Fellow of Allsoul, coll. in 1599. being then near four years standing in the degree of Bach of Arts. Afterwards he proceeding in that Faculty, took on him the Sacred Function, became Domestick Chaplain to George Archb. of Canterbury, Warden of Allsoul, Rector of Monks-Risborow in Bucks, and of Newington near Dorchester in Oxfordshire, D. of D. and one of the Kings Commissioners concerning Ecclesiastical Affairs. He published in the Latin tongue,

The Liturgy of the Church of England.

Greater and Lesser Catechisms.

Thirty nine Articles.

Book of ordination of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons. London, 1616. fol.

Doctrinal points extracted out of the Book of Homilies.

To which he added his own book, written in Latin, intituled,

De politia Ecclesie Anglicana. Reprinted at London, 1683. oct. Which collection he published in a pious zeal for gaining honour to the Church of England amongst Foreign Nations. But this his zeal was so little accompanied in the Constitutions of the said Church, or so much byassed towards those of Calvins Platform, that it was thought fit not only to call it in, but to expiate the errors of it in a publick flame. And the true cause which was conceived why the book was burn'd, was, that in publishing the twentieth Article concerning the authority of the Church, he totally left out the first clause of it, viz. Habet Ecclesia ritus & caeremonias statuendi jus, & in controversiis fidei auctoritatem. By means whereof the Article was apparently falsified, the Churches authority disowned, and consequently a wide gap (a) opened to dispute her power in all her Canons and Determinations of what sort soever. He yielded up his last breath, (with grief, as 'tis thought, for what had been done to his book) on the day before the nones of July, in sixteen hundred and eighteen, and was buried at the upper end of Allsouls coll. chappel, just below the steps leading to the high Altar. In his Wardenship succeeded Richard Astley D. of D. who dying in Febr. 1635. was succeeded by Gilb. Sheldon, who was afterwards Bishop of London, and at length Archbishop of Canterbury.

457: JOHN GOLDESBURG, descended originally from those of his name, living at Goldesburg in Yorkshire, was born 18. oct. 1568. spent some time among the Oxonians for form-sake about 1584. went thence to the Middle Temple, where after he had continued in the degree of Barrester, and for some years been resorted to in matters relating to his profession, was made one of the Prothonotaries of the Common Pleas. He wrote and left behind him fit for the Press, Reports, or, collection of cases and matters agitated in all the Courts in Westminster, in the latter years of the reign of Qu. Elizabeth, with learned arguments at the Barr, and on the bench. Lond. 1653. 8c. qu. Published by Will. Sheppard Esq. Upon which cases and matters Sir Edm. Anderson and Sir Jo. Popham, Judges, wrote Resolutions and Judgments. Our author Goldesburg concluded his last day on the 9. oct. in sixteen hundred and eighteen. Whereupon his body was buried near to the high Altar of the Church belonging to the Temples. He left behind him other things, as 'tis said, fit for the Press, but in whose hands they are, I could never learn.

458. WALTER RALEIGH, a person in his time of a good natural wit, better judgment and of a plausible tongue, Son of Walt. Raleigh Esq. by Catherine his Wife Daughter of Sir Philip Champernoon Kt. was born at a place called Hayes in Parish of East-Budeleigh in Devonshire, an. 1552. Which Hayes is a farm, and his Father having had a remnant of a Lease of 80 years in it, came after the expiration thereof to one Duke: unto whom afterwards, our author W. Raleigh having a desire to purchase it, wrote a Letter dated from the Court 26. July 1584. wherein he says that for the natural disposition he has to that place, being born in that house, he had rather seat himself there, than any where else, &c. His Father was the first of his name that lived there, but his ancestors had possessed Furdell in the same County for several Generations before, where they lived in (b) gentile estate, and were esteemed antient Gentlemen. In 1568. or thereabouts he became a Commoner of Oriel coll. at what time C. Champernoon his kinsman studied there, where his natural parts being strangely advanced by Academical learning under the care of an excellent Tutor, became the ornament of the Juniors, and was worthily esteemed a proficient in Oratory and Philosophy. After he had spent about 3. years in that house, where he had laid a good ground and sure foundation to build thereon, he left the University without a degree, and went to the Middle-Temple to improve himself in the intricate knowledge of the municipal Laws. How long he tarried there, 'tis uncertain, yet sure I am, from a Epistle, or copy of Verses of his composition, which I have seen, that he was abiding in the said Temple, in Apr. 1576. at which time his vein for ditty and amorous Ode, was esteemed most lofty, insolent and passionate. As for the remaining part of his life, it was sometimes low, and sometimes in a middle condition, and often tossed by fortune to and fro, and seldom at rest. He was one that fortune had pickt up out of purpose, of whom to make an example, or to use as her Tennis-Ball, thereby to shew what she could do; for she tost him up of nothing, and to and fro to greatness, and from thence down to little more than to that wherein she found him, (a bare Gentleman) not that he was less, for he was well descended and of good alliance, but poor in his beginnings, and for the jest (c) of Edm. Earl. of Oxon. (the Jack, and an up-start Kt.) all then knew it favoured more of emulation, and his humour, than of truth. France was the first School, wherein he learn'd the rudiments of War, and the Low Countries and Ireland (the military Academies of those times) made him Master of that discipline: for in both places he expos'd himself afterwards to Land-service, but that in Ireland was a Militia, which then did not yield him food and raiment, nor had he patience to stay there, tho shortly after (in 1580.) he went thither again, and was a Captain there under Arthur Lord Grey who succeeded Sir Will. Pelham in the Deputy-ship of that Kingdom. Afterwards gaining great credit, he was received into the Court, became a person in favour, and had several boons bestow'd on him afterwards, particularly the Castle of Shireborne in Dorsetshire, taken from the See of Salisbury. In the latter end of 1584. he discovered a new Country, which he, in honour of the Queen, called Virginia, received the honour of Knighthood from her, and was afterwards made Captain of her Majesties Guards, Sencefchal of the Duchies of Cornwall, and Exeter, Lord Warden of the Stanneries of Devon. and Cornwall, Lord Leivtenant of Cornwall and Governour of Fersey. In 1588. he shew'd himself active against the invincible Armada of the Spaniards, and in 1592. being about that time a Parliament man, wherein, as in other Parliaments in the latter end of Q. Eliz. was he a frequent Speaker, he went to America with 15. men of War to possess himself of Panama, where the Spaniards Ship their riches, or to intercept them in their passage homewards, but returned successles, and was out of favour for a time, not only for that but for divirginating a maid of Honour (Elizabeth Daughter of Sir Nich. Tractmorton) whom he afterwards married, and for some few months being kept under custody, was at length set free, but banished the Court. Afterwards to follow the directions of of his own Genie, that was always inclined to search out hidden regions, and the secrets of nature, he undertook a navigation to Guiana that bears Gold, in 1595. purposely for the improvement and honour of his Country, both by getting store of wealth, and by molesting the Spaniard, within the inward coasts of America, which he thought would be more profitable than on the Sea coasts, where there are never any Towns laden with any riches, but when they are conveyed thither to be carried over into Spain. He set out from Plymouth (d) on the 6. of Febr. and arrived at the Island Trinidad 22. March. There he easily took a little City called S. Joseph, and the Governour thereof Don Antonio de Bereo, but found not so much as a piece of Silver there. Having enquired many things of this Antonio about the mines of Gold in Guiana, he left his Ship in Trinidad and entred the vast River Orenoque, with little Barks, and some hundred Souldiers. He searched up and down Guiana for the space of 4 Miles among the crooked and short turnings of the water several ways: where, being parched with the reflecting beams of the Sun, just over his head, and too much wet sometimes with Showers, and having long wrestled with such like difficulties, he yet continued so long, till that it growing wintry cold in Apr. the waters all over-spread the earth; insomuch that now he could pass away in no less danger of the waters, than he came thither in danger of his enemies. After his return he was constituted one of the (e) chief persons in the expedition to Cadiz, where he performed notable service, and obtained to himself at home a great name. In 1603. he presented to K. James at his entrance to the Crown of England a Manuscript of his own writing, containing valid arguments against a peace to be made with Spain, which was then the common discourse. But the King being altogether for peace, was rejected, and the same year, just after he had been deprived of the Captainship of the Guard, (which K. James bestowed on Sir Tho. Erskin Viscount Fenton in Scotland) we find him in a plot against the King, generally called Sir Walter Raleighs Treason, for which being brought to his Tryal (with others) at Winchester in 1603. was at length found guilty and condemn'd to die. But being reprieved, he was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London for life, where he improved his confinement to the greatest advantage of learning and inquisitive men. In Apr. 1614. he (f) published the History of the World, a book, which for the exactness of its Chronology, curiosity of its contexture and learning of all sorts, seems to be the work of an Age. In 1617. power was granted to him to set forth Ships and men for the undertaking an enterprize of a golden Mine in Guiana, in the southern parts of America, and on the 28. March in the year following he left London in order for that Voyage, notwithstanding Didacus Sarmiento de Acuna Earl or Count of Gundamore the Spanish Embassador to the K. of England, endeavoured to hinder him with many arguments proposed to his Majesty. But at length Sir Walter going beyond his Commission in taking and sackling the Town of St. Thome, belonging to the Spaniard, which was much aggravated by Gundamore, the K. on the 9. June 1618. published his Royal Proclamation for the discovery of the truth of Raleigh's proceedings and for the advancement of justice. Whereupon, when Raleigh arrived at Plymouth, Sir Lewis Stenkeley Vice-Admiral of the County of Devon. seized him, and brought him up to London 9. Aug. following. But Raleigh finding the Court wholly guided by Gundamore, as 'tis said, (notwithstanding I find elsewhere (g) that he left England 16 July going before) he could hope for little mercy. Whereupon wisely contriving the design of an escape, was betrayed by Stenkeley, taken on the Thames and committed to a close Prison. Afterwards being often examined by the Lord Chancellor and Privy-Council, was at length on the 24 Oct. warned by them (as they had been commanded by the King) to prepare for death. The particulars of which proceedings, as also of his Voyage to Guiana, you may see at large in a book intit. A Declaration of the demeanour and carriage of Sir W. Raleigh Knight, as well in his Voyage, as in, and since his return; and of the true motives and inducements which occasion'd his Majesty to proceed in doing justice upon him. Lond. 1618. in 8 sh. in qu. On the 28. of the month of Oct. he was conveyed to the Court called the Kings-Bench in Westminster, where it being proposed to him what he had to say for himself, why the sentence of death, pronounced against him in 1603. should not be put in execution, he fell into a long discourse, and vindicated himself so much, that most wise men thought then (and all Historians since) that his life could not be taken away upon that account. Afterwards being conveyed to the Gatehouse, suffered death the next day, notwithstanding David Noion Lord of Chefne acted much to save him. Authors are perplex'd (as some are pleas'd to say) under what topick to place him, whether of Statesman, Seaman, Souldier, Chymist, or Chronologer; for in all these he did excell. And it still remains a dispute, whether the age he lived in was more obliged to his Pen or his Sword, the one being busie in conquering the new, the other in so bravely describing the old, World. He had in the outward men, (as an observing (h) writer saith) a good presence, in a handsome and well compacted person, a strong natural wit, and a better judgment, with a bold and plausible tongue, whereby he could set out his parts to best advantage; and to these he had the adjuncts of some general learning, which by diligence he enforced to great augmentation and perfection; for he was an indefatigable reader, whether by Sea or Land, and none of the least observers both of men and of the times: And I am confident that among the second causes of his growth, that variance between him and the Lord Grey, in his descent into Ireland, was a principal, for it drew them both over to the Council Table, there to plead their cause, where he had much the better in telling of his tale; and so much that the Qu. and the Lords took no slight mark of the man and his parts: for from thence he became to be known, and to have recess to the Qu. and the Lords; and then we are not to doubt how such a man would comply and learn the way of progression, &c. He had gotten the Queens ear at a trice, and she began to be taken with his elocution, and loved to hear his reasons to her demands: And the truth is, she took him for a kind of an Oracle, which nettled them all; yea, those that he relyed on began to take his sudden favour for an allurum, and to be sensible of their own supplantation and to project his.—So that finding his favour declining, and falling into recess, he undertook a new peregrination to leave that Terra infirma of the Court, for that of the Wars, and by declining himself, and by absence, to expect his, and the passion of his Enemies, which in Court was a strange device of recovery, &c. The truth is he was unfortunate in nothing else but the greatness of his wit and advancement: his eminent worth was such, both in domestick Policy, foreign expeditions, and discoveries, Arts and literature, both practive and contemplative, that they seem'd at once to conquer both example and imitation. Those that knew him well esteem'd him to be a person born to that only which he went about, so dextrous was he in all, or most of, his undertakings, in Courts in Camp, by Sea, by Land, with Sword, with Pen: witness in the last, these things following, tho some of them, as 'tis credibly believed, were written by others, with his name set to them for sale sake.

History of the world in 5 books. Lond. 1614. &c. fol. Abbreviated and animadverted upon by Alex. Ross a Scotchman, in a book entit. The marrow of History. Lond. 1662. oct. 2d. edit. But of Raleigh and his History hear what an ingenious (i) writer saith—Hos autem sequi possunt nonnulli ex recentioribus: quos inter, principem locum obtinere meretur Gualterus Raulens nostras, eques auratus, vir clari nominis, & ob singularem fortitudinem ac prudentiam meliori fato dignus. Is universalem historiam ab initio mundi usque Macedonici imperii, sive tertia monarchia occasum, ex probatissimis auctoribus coagmentavit, nostra quidem gentis idiomate vernaculo, sed accurato admodum judicio, metodo, perspicua, stylo eleganti ac virili, &c. He was delivered of that Exquisite Minerva during his tedious imprisonment in the Tower of London; for being clapt up there for Treason during his Life, as I have before told you, did improve his confinement, far better than his enlargement. He had composed a second part, which reached down to the time he lived, but he burnt it a little before his death. Afterward Alex. Ross before mentioned continued it in a book intit. The History of the World, the second part in 6. books, being a continuation, &c. beginning where he left, viz. at the end of the Macedonian Kingdom, and deduced to these later times, that is from the year of the World 3806. or 160. years before Christ, till the end of the year 1640. after Christ, &c. together with a Chronology of those times, &c. Lond. 1652. fol. Here having made twice mention of Alexand. Ross, I desire the reader to observe by the way these things of him: that he was D.D. and a native and minister of Aberdene in Scotland, which Country he leaving, (upon what account I know not) came into England, succeeded Tho. Parker (Son of Robert) author of the book De translatione peccatoris in the Mastership of the free School at Southampton, and was Chaplain in ordinary to K. Ch. 1. a little before the civil war began. He hath written many books in Latine and English, and in Prose and Verse, the titles of which are now too numerous to insert. He died in the Park-house at Bramsell in Hampshire, belonging to one Henley one of the Prothonotaries, in the beginning of the year 1654. aged 64. or thereabouts; at which time he bequeathed many rich legacies by his (k) Will, (dat. 21. Feb. 1653. and proved 19. Apr. 1654.) among which were 200 livers to the Senate of Aberdene to remain for ever towards the maintenance of two Scholars, that shall be born in the town of Aberdene, and educated in Grammer there, 50 l. to the town of Southampton, for the better maintenance of the Schoolmaster, 50 l. to the poor household keepers of All-saints parish there, 50 l. to the publick library at Cambridge, 5 l. to that of Oxon, &c. Andrew Henley son of the aforesaid Henley was his Executor, who had his library remaining at Bramsell, wherein, mostly in the books, he found, as I have been credibly informed, about a thousand pound in gold. I shall now proceed to give you a farther account of Sir W. Raleigh's works.

The Sons advice to his Father.

The great Cordial.—Upon which N. le Febvre hath written an English discourse. Lond. 1664. oct. I have seen a book in MS. containing Sir Walt. Raleigh's Speech at the time of his death; and His Ghost, or a conference between Sir Gundamoure his Maj. Embassadour of Spain, the Fryer Confessor, and Father Baldwyn the Jesuit, at Ely House in Holbourne, in 1622. but whether ever printed I know not. However the Reader is to understand that Sir Walter's Ghost before-mentioned is not the same with his Ghost or Apparition to his intimate Friend, willing him to translate into English the learned book of Leonard Lessius, intit. De providentia animæ & animi immortalitate. Lond. 1651. in tw. translated in compliance with Sir Walter's late request, because he had been often foully aspersed for an Atheist. There is also a MS. going about from hand to hand, said to have been written by our author Sir Walter, which is concerning,

The present state of Spain, with a most accurate account of his Cath. Majesty's power and riches, &c.—Whether this, or his Discourse touching a consultation about Peace with Spain.—MS. (sometimes in the Lib. of Arthur Earl of Anglesey,) were ever printed, I know not. He hath also written,

The life and death of Will. the Conquerour.—MS. sometimes in the Library of Sir Ken. Digby, afterwards in that of George Earl of Bristow.

Of Mines and trials of Minerals.—MS. &c. with other things which I have not yet seen. But I say it again, that I verily think that several of those things before-mentioned, which go under his name, were never written by him. At length he was beheaded in the old Pallace-yard in Westminster, on 29. Octob. in sixteen hundred and eighteen, aged 66. Whereupon his body, (which he sometimes designed to be buried in the Cath. Church at Exeter,) was conveyed to St. Margarets Church in the said City of Westminster, and buried in the Chancel there, at the upper end almost, near to the Altar. Over whose grave, tho there was never any Epitaph put, yet this following, among others, was made for him:

Here lieth hidden in this pit,
The wonder of the World for wit.
It to small purpose did him serve,
His wit could not his life preserve.
He living, was belov'd of none,
Yet at his death all did him moan.
Heaven hath his Soul, the World his fame,
The Grave his Corps, Steukley his shame.

Some writers in the long Rebellion under K. Ch. 1. especially such who were not well-wishers to Monarchy, have reported that his death was no less than a downright Murder, having had his blood spilt upon a Scaffold meerly to satisfy some unworthy ends, and the revenge of the Spaniard. Nay, and farther, they have not stuck to say that the Conspiracy of Gowry, seemed rather a Conspiracy of the K. of Scots against Gowry, as many of that Nation have declared. The said Sir Walt. Raleigh left behind him a Son named Carew Raleigh, born in Middlesex, (in the Tower of London, as it seems, while his Father was Prisoner there,) became a Gent. Com. of Wadham coll. in 1620. aged 16. but proved quite different in Spirit from his Father. Afterwards he was Gent. of the Privy Chamber to K. Ch. 1. who honoured him with a kind token at his leaving Hampton Court, when he was jugled into the Isle of Wight, cringed afterwards to the Men in Power, was made Governour of Jersey, by the favour of General George Monk, in the latter end of January 1659. and wrote a book (as 'twas generally reported) intit. Observations upon some particular persons and passages in a book lately made publick, intit. A compleat History of the Lives and Reigns of Mary Q. of Scotland, and of James K. of England, written by Will. Sanderson Esq. Lond. 1656. in 3 sh. in qu. I have seen also some Sonnets of his composition, and certain ingenious discourses, but whether ever printed I know not. I have seen also a Poem of his, which had a Musickal composition of two parts set to it, by the incomparable Hen. Lawes Servant to K. Ch. 1. in his publick and private Musick. Sir Hen. Wotton gives (*) him the Character of a Gentleman of dextrous abilities, as it appeared in the management of a publick concern in Sir Henries time; and so by others he is with honour mentioned; but far, god wot, was he from his Fathers parts, either as to the Sword or Pen. He was buried in his Fathers grave in the month of Decemb. (or thereabouts,) an. 1666. leaving Issue behind him a Daughter.

RICHARD MARTIN, Son of Will. Martin, 157. (by Anne his Wife, Daughter of Rich. Parker of Suffex,) fourth Son of Rich. Martin of the City of Exeter, second Son of Will. Martin of Athelhampton in the Parish of Puddletowne in Dorsetshire, Knight, was born at Otterton in Devonshire, became a Commoner of Broadgates hall (now Pembroke coll.) in Michaelmas Term 1585. aged 15. and not in Trinity coll. as I have formerly by a mistake told (m) you,) where by natural parts, and some industry, he proved in short time a noted disputant. But he leaving the said house before he was honoured with a degree, went to the Middle Temple, where, after he had continued in the state of Inner Barrister for some years, was elected a Burgess to serve in Parliament 1601. was constituted Lent-Reader of the said Temple, 13. Jac. 1. and upon the death of Sir Anth. Benn was made Recorder of the City of London, in Sept. 1618. Which place he enjoying but little more than a month, was succeeded therein by Sir Rob. Heath. There was no person in his time more celebrated for ingenuity than R. Martin, none more admired by Selden, Serjeant Hoskins, Ben. Johnson, &c. than he; the last of which dedicated his Comedy to him called The Poetaster. K. James was much delighted with his facetiousness, and had so great respect for him, that he commended him to the Citizens of London to be their Recorder. He was worthily characterized, by the vertuous and learned Men of his time, to be, Princeps (n) amorum, Principum amor, legum lingua, lexque dicendi, Anglorum alumnus, Præco Virginiae ac Parens, &c. Magna orbis os, orbis minoris corculum. Bono suorum natus, extinctus suo, &c. He was a plausible Linguist, and eminent for several Speeches spoken in Parliaments, for his Poems also and witty discourses. All that I have seen of his are,

Speech and Discourses in one or more Parliaments in the latter end of Q. Elizab.

Speeches delivered to the King, in the name of the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex. Lond. 1603. 1643. qu.

1618. Various Poems.— He died to the great grief of all learned and good men, on the last day of Octob. in sixteen hundred and eighteen, and was buried in the Church belonging to the Temples. Over his grave, was soon after a neat Alabaster Monument erected, with the Effigies of the Defunct kneeling in his Gown, with 4 verses engraven thereon, under him, made by his dear Friend Serjeant Hoskins before-mentioned; a copy of which you may see (a) elsewhere. This Monument was repaired in 1683. when the Choir and Isles adjoining, belonging to the Temple Church, were new-wainscoted and furnished with seats. He gave by Will to the Church of Otterton, where he received his first breath, 5 l. and to the Church of Culliton-Raleigh in Devon, where his House and Seat was 5 l.

460. ROBERT MANDEVILL, a Cumberland Man born, was entred either a Butler or Servitour of Queens coll. in the beginning of the year 1595. aged 17. where remaining a severe Student till he was Bach. of Arts, he retired to St. Edmunds hall, and as a Member of it, proceeded in that Faculty. In July 1607. he was elected Vicar of Abby-Holme, commonly called Holm-Cultram in his own County, by the Chancellour and Scholars of this University. Where being settled, he exercised with great zeal his parts in propagating the Gospel against its Oppugners, not only by Communication and Preaching, but by his exemplary course of Life, and great Piety. He shewed himself also a zealous Enemy against Popery, and the breaking of the Lords day by prophaning it with merchandizing and sports, and endeavoured as much as in him lay, (for he was a zealous Puritan,) to perswade his Parishioners and Neighbours to do those things on Saturday, which they used to do on the Lords day. The truth is, he was, in the opinion of those of his Perswasion, a great Man in his profession, for he solely bent himself to his studies, and discourses for the promotion of Religion and the word of God. He hath written, Timothy's Task; two Sermons Preached in two Synodall Assemblies at Carlile, on 1 Tim. 4. 16. and on Acts 20. 28. Oxon. 1619. qu. published by Tho. Vicars Fellow of Qu. coll.

2618. Theological Discourses.— He died in sixteen hundred and eighteen, and was buried at Holm-Cultram before-mentioned. Here you see I have given you a character of a zealous and religious Puritan. The next in order who is to follow, is one who was a most zealous R. Catholick, but far more learned than the former, and not to be named or compared with him.

461. RICHARD STANYHURST, Son of James Stanyhurst Esq; was born within the City of Dublin in Ireland, (of which City his Father was then Recorder,) educated in Grammar learning under Peter Whyte, mentioned under the year 1590. became a Commoner of University coll. in 1563. where improving those rare natural parts that he was endowed with, wrote Commentaries on Porphyry at two years standing, being then 18 years of age, to the great admiration of learned men and others. After he had taken one degree in Arts, he left the College, retired to London, became first a Student in Furnivals Inn, and afterwards in that of Lincoln, where spending some time in the study of the Common Law, he afterwards went into the Country of his Nativity for a time. But his mind there changing, as to his Religion, he went beyond the Seas, (being then a Married Man,) and in the Low Countries, France, and other Nations, he became famous for his learning, noted to Princes, and more especially to the Archduke of Austria, who made him his Chaplain, (his Wife being then dead,) and allowed him a plentiful Salary. He was accounted by many (especially by those of his Perswasion) an excellent Theologist, Grecian, Philosopher, Historian, and Orator. Camden styles (a) him, Eruditissimus ille Nobilis Rich. Stanyhurstus; and others of his time say, that he was so rare a Poet, that he, and Gabr. Harvey, were the best for Iambicks in their age. He hath written and transmitted to Posterity, Harmonia, sive catena Dialectica in Porphyrianas constitutiones. Lond. 1570. fol. Which book being communicated to Edm. Campian of St. Johns coll. before it went to the Press, he gave this character (b) of the author, Mirificè latatus sum, esse adolescentem in Acad. nostra, tali familia, eruditione, probitate; cujus extrema pueritia cum multis laudabili maturitate viris certare possit.

De rebus in Hibernia gestis. lib. 4. Antw. 1584. qu. Dedicated to his Brother P. Plunket Baron of Dunsany.

Descriptio Hibernie. Translated into English, and put into the first vol. of Raphael Holinsheds books of Chronicles. Lond. 1586. fol.

De vita S. Patricii Hybernia Apostoli. lib. 2. Antw. 1587.

Hebdomada Mariana, ex Orthodoxis Catholica Rom. Ecclesia Patribus collecta; in memoriam 7. festorum Beatiss. Virginis Mariæ, &c. Antw. 1609. oct. In the front of which book our author writes himself, Serenissimorum Principum Sacellanus, meaning Duke Albert and Isabell his Princesses.

Hebdomada Eucharistica.— Duac. 1614. oct.

Brevis præmunio pro futura concertatione cum Jacobo Usserio Hiberno Dubliensi. Duac. 1615. in about 3 sheets in oct. You must note that Dr. James Usher's Mother, Margaret Stanyhurst, was Sister to our author Ric. Stanyhurst; who being a zealous Romanist, and Usher (afterwards Primate of Ireland) a zealous Protestant, passed several learned Letters between them concerning Religion, Stanyhurst endeavouring to his utmost to gain him to his Opinion; but 'tis thought, and verily believed by some, that Usher was too hard for his Uncle in controversial points relating to Divinity.

The Principles of Cath. Religion.— This I have not yet seen and therefore I cannot tell you when, or where, it was printed. He also translated into English heroical verse, The first four books of Virgils Æneis. Lond. 1583. oct. Dedicated to Plunket before-mentioned, the learned Baron of Dunsany, at which time the translator was then living at Leyden in Holland. This translation being accounted well performed for that age, yet because the verses do not rhyme, doth cause a noted (c) writer, and a professed Buffoon of his time, to say, that Mr. Stanyhurst (who otherwise learned) trod a soul lumbring boisterous wallowing measures in his translation of Virgil.— He had never been praised by Gabriel Harvey for his labour, if therein he had not been so famously absurd. Our author Stanyhurst also translated into English, Certain Psalms of David (the four first) according to the observation of the Latin verses; that is without rhyme; printed at the end of the translation of Virgils Æneis before-mentioned. And at the end of the aforesaid Psalms are of his composition, Poetical Conceits. Lond. 1583. in Latin and English, as also Certain Epitaphs, framed as well in Lat. as English.— The first of which (in Latin) is on James Earl of Ormond and Ossory, who did at Ely house in Holbourn 18. Oct. about 1546. and was buried in the Church of St. Thomas Acres. Another on the authors Father James Stanyhurst Esq; who died at Dublin 27. Dec. 1573. aged 51. &c. But as for the Epitaph of our author (which he should have made while living) none doth appear there, neither at Bruxells, (as I can yet learn,) where he died in sixteen hundred and eighteen. I find one Will. Stanyhurst, who was born in the said City of Bruxells, an. 1601. and entred into the Society of Jesus, in 1617. whom I suppose to be Son to our author R. Stanyhurst. He was a comely person, endowed with rare parts, and a writer and publisher of several things, as Nat. Southwell tells you in his (*) supplement to Bib. Soc. Jesu, who adds that the said Stranyhurst died in January 1665.

452. EDWARD GEE, was a Lancashire man born, entered a Servitor of Merton coll. in Lent-Term 1582. aged 17, elected fellow of Brasenose coll. when he was about two years standing in the degree of Bach of Arts, and after some standing in that of Master, was unanimously elected Proctor of the University 1598. Two years after he was admitted Bach. of Divinity, and in 1603. he resigned his fellowship, being about that time Rector of Tedbourne S. Maria in Devonshire. In 1616. he proceeded in Divinity, having been before that time made one of the Society of Chelsey coll. founded by Dr. Marth. Sutcliffe, and Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majesty. He was a person well known for his sincerity in conversation, generality of learning, gravity of judgment and soundness of doctrine. He hath written,

Steps of ascension to God: Or a ladder to heaven, containing prayers and meditations for every day in the week, and for all other times and occasions—Printed at least 27 times, mostly in a manual, or in a vol. called Twenty fours: The 27th edit. came out in 1677.

The curse and crime of Meroz, Sermon at an Assise holden in Exeter, on Judg. 5. 23. Lond. 1620. qu.

Sermon of patience; preached at S. Maries in Oxon. on James 5. 7. Lond. 1620. qu. Both which Sermons were published by his brethren John and George Gee Ministers, who had his notes of his death; which hapning 1618. in winter time, in sixteen hundred and eighteen, was buried, as I conceive, in his Church at Tedbourne before mention'd. He left behind him a widdow named Marie, and a son, I think, of both his names. See more in Joh. Gee under the year 1625.

463. JOHN DAVIES, who writes himself of Hereford because he was born in that City, was, from the Grammar School there, sent to this University, but to what house of learning therein, I know not. After he had remained with us for some years, without the taking of a degree, he retired for a time to his native Country, having then, among Scholars, the character of a good Poet, as by those Poems, which he then made, and were shortly after published, was manifested. Sir Joh. Davies, whom I shall mention under the year 1626. was more a Scholar, than a Lawyer; but this Joh. Davies was more a Poet than a Scholar, and somewhat enclined towards the Law; which hath made some unwary readers take the writings of one for the other. But our author, finding not a subsistence by Poetry, he set up for a writing-master, first in his own Country, and afterwards in London, where at length he was esteemed the greatest Master of his Pen that England in his age (d) beheld, first for fast-writing, (2) fair writing, which looked as if it had been printed, (3) close writing, (4) various writing, as Secretary, Roman, Court and Text hand. In all which he was exceeded after his death, by one Gething his Countryman and Scholar. Sometimes he made pretty excursions into Poetry and could flourish matter with his fancy, as well as letters with his pen, the titles of which do follow.

Mirum in modum. A glimpse of God's glory and the Soules shape. Lond. 1602. and 1616. oct. a Poem.

Microcosmus. The discovery of the little world, with the government thereof. Oxon 1603. qu. a Poem. Ushered into the world by the verses of Jo. Sanford of Madg. coll. Charles Fitz-Geffry of Broadgates and Rob. Burhill of C.C. coll. Which last wonders why Davies our author, who was lively (as he saith) Oxonia vates, should write himself of Hereford, as if Oxon was a disgrace to him.

The holy roode of Christs Cross, containing Christ crucified, described in speaking picture. Lond. 1609. qu.

Sonnets—printed with the former Poem, and both contained in 10 sheets.

S. Peters complaint, newly augmented with other Poems. Lond. in qu. But when printed it appears not. With this is commonly bound up S. Mary Madg. Blush, and therefore I suppose 'twas written by the same hand.

(*) Edit. Rom. 1675. fol. (d) Tho. Fuller in his Worthies, in Herefordshire.

Humours heaven on earth, with the civil Wars of death and fortune, &c. London 1609. A Poem in (oct.)

The triumph of death, or the picture of the plague according to the life, as it was in an. 1603.—Printed with Humours heaven and earth, &c.

Wits pilgrimage (by poetical essayes) through a world of amorous Sonnets, soul-passions and other passages, divine, philosophical, and poetical. Lond. in a pretty thick qu. but not expressed when printed. 'Tis dedicated to Philp Earl of Montgomery.

Elegies on the death of Sir Tho. Overbury. Printed with the former book 1616. oct.

Speculum Proditori.

Several copies of verses of his, are also published in other books, as a large copy before Ph. Hollands translation of Camdens Britannia, another in the Odombian banquet, &c. He died about the year sixteen hundred and eighteen and was buried, as one (e) tells us, within the precincts of S. Giles ch. in the Feilds, near Lond. I find one Joh. Davies Gent. to have lived in the parish of S. Martin in the Feilds, who dying in the beginning of July (or thereabouts) in 1618. was buried near to the body of Mary, his sometimes wife, in the church of St. Dunstan in the West. Whether the same with the Poet I cannot justly tell, because may author here quoted (Tho. Fuller) saith, but upon what authority I know not, that he was buried at S. Giles in the Feilds. One John Dunbar a Latine Poet of Scotland, hath an (f) Epigram on J. Davies the Poet, which may serve for an Epitaph, wherein he tells us that he was another Mari-all, and that he out-stript in Poetry Sam. Daniel, Josh. Silvester the Merchant adventurer &c.

THOMAS THOMPSON, a very noted preacher in the time he lived, was born in the County of Cumberland, wedded to the Muses in Queens coll. in Mich. Term 1589. aged 15, made a poor serving child of that house in the year following, afterwards Tabarder, and in 99. Fellow, being then Master of Arts. About that time addicting his mind severely to the studies of the superiour faculty, became a noted Disputant, Schoolman and very familiar with the Fathers. At length leaving the coll. about the time he was admitted Bach. of Div. (which was 1609.) he became one of the publick preachers in the City of Bristow, and Minister of S. Thomas Church there, where he was much followed and admired for his edifying and orthodox doctrine. Afterwards leaving that City, in 1612. (upon what account I know not) he became Minister in the town and liberties of Montgomery in Wales; where, if I mistake not, he continued till the time of his death. He hath written and published, Concio ad clerum de clavibus regni celorum, habita pro forma Oxon. intemplo B. Maria 16. Feb. an. 1609. in Matth. 16. ver. 19. Lond. 1612. oct.

De votis monasticis. Theses disputata sub presidio Tho. Holland Reg. prof. Printed with the former Lxx. Sermon.

Besides these two things, he hath.

Several Sermons in English, as (1) A diet for a Drunkard, in two Sermons in the Church of S. Nich. in Bristow, on Ester 18. Lond. 1612. qu. (2) Friendly farewell to a faithful flock, taken in a Sermon preached in S. Thomas Church in Bristow, on Easter Tuesday, 6. Apr. 1612. on 2 Cor. 13. ver. 14. Lond.

(e) Ibid. in Th. Fuller. (f) In Epigrammat ib. edit. Lond. 1616. in oct. cent. 3. nu. 20.

Lond. 1618. qu. dedicated to Richard Bishop of St. Asaph, his Patron. These are all that I have seen going under his name, and all that I yet know of the author.

455. SAMUEL DANIEL, the most noted Poet and Historian of his time, was born of a wealthy Family in Somersetshire, and at 17 years of age, in 1579. became a Commoner of Magd. hall, where he continued about three years, and improved himself much in Academical learning by the benefit of an excellent Tutor. But his Genie being more prone to easier and smoother studies, than in pecking and hewing at Logick, he left the University without the honour of a degree, and exercised it much in English History and Poetry, of which he then gave several ingenious Specimens. After his departure, I find nothing memorable of him for several years, only that at about 23 years of age he translated into English the worthy tract of Paulus Jovius, containing a Discourse of rare inventions both military and amorous called Imprese. Lond. 1585. oct. To which he hath put an ingenious Preface of his own writing. He was afterwards, for his merits, made Gentleman Extraordinary, and afterwards one of the Grooms, of the Privy Chamber to Anne the Queen Consort of King James I. who being for the most part a favourer and encourager of his Muse, (as she was of Jo. Florio, who married Sam. Daniel's Sister,) and many times delighted with his conversation, not only in private, but in publick, was, partly for those reasons, held in esteem, by the men of that age, for his excellencies in Poetry and History, and partly in this respect, that in (a) writing the History of English affairs, whether in Prose or Poetry, he had the happiness to reconcile brevity with clearness, qualities of great distance in other authors. This is the opinion of a late author; but one (b) who lived in Samuel Daniel's time tells us, that his works contain somewhat a flat, but yet withal a very pure and copious English, and words as warrantable as any mans, and fitter perhaps for Prose than Measure. Our author Daniel had also a good faculty in setting out a Mask or a Play, and was wanting in nothing that might render him acceptable to the great and ingenious men of his time, as to Sir Joh. Harrington the Poet, Camden the learned, Sir Rob. Cotton, Sir H. Spelman, Edm. Spencer, Ben. Jonson, John Stradling, little Owen the Epigrammatist, &c. He hath written,

Various Sonnets to Delia.— Wherein, as Parthenius Nicens did excellently sing the praises of Arete, so our author in this piece, hath divinely sonneted the matchless beauty of his Delia.

Tragedy of Cleopatra. Lond. 1594. 98. qu.

Of the Civil Wars between the Houses of Lancaster and York. Lond. 1604. 09. oct. and 1623. qu. Written in eight books in verse, with his picture before them.

The Vision of the twelve Goddeses, presented in a Mask, &c. Lond. 1604. oct. and 1623. qu. Some copies have it, The wisdom of the 12 Goddeses in a Mask at Hampton-Court 8. Jan.

Panegyrick congratulatory delivered to K. James at Burleigh-Harrington in Rutlandshire. Lond. 1604. and 23. qu.

Epistles to various great Personages in verse. Lond. 1601. and 23. qu.

Musophilus, containing a general defence of learning.— Printed with the former.

Tragedy of Philotas. Lond. 1611. &c. oct.

Hymens Triumph. A pastoral Trag.-Com. presented at the Queens Court in the Strand, at her Maj. magnificent entertainment of the Kings Maj. being at the Nuptials of the Lord Roxborough. Lond. 1623. qu. second edit.

(a) Fuller in his Worthies in Somersetsh. (b) The nameless author of Hypercritica: or a rule of judgments for writing or reading our Histories, MS. in my Library. Address. 4. Sect. 3.

Muso, or a defence of Ryme. Lond. 1611. oct.

The Epistle of Octavia to M. Antonius. Lond. 1611. oct.

The first part of the History of England, in 3 books. Lond. 1613. qu. reaching to the end of King Stephen, in Prose. To which afterwards he added a second part, reaching to the end of K. Ed. 3.— Lond. 1618. 21. 23. and 1634. fol. continued to the end of K. Rich. 3. by Joh. Trussel, sometimes a Winchester Scholar, afterwards a Trader and Alderman of that City.— Lond. 1638. fol. &c. Which Trussel did continue in writing a certain old MS. belonging to the Bishops of Winton, containing, as it were, an History of the Bishops and Bishoprick, which continuation was made by him to Bishop Curles time. He also wrote, A description of the City of Winchester, with an historical relation of divers memorable occurrences touching the same. fol. Also a Preamble to the same Of the Origin of Cities in general. MS. Sam. Daniel also wrote,

The Queens Arcadia. A pastoral Trag.-Com. presented to her Majesty and her Ladies, by the University of Oxon, in Christ Church, in Aug. an. 1605. Lond. 1623. qu.

Funeral Poem on the death of the Earl of Devon. Lond. 1623. qu. Towards the end of our authors life, he retired to a Country-Farm which he had at Beckington near to Philips-Norton in Somersetshire, (at, or near to, which place he was born,) where, after he had enjoyed the Muses and religious Contemplation for some time with very great delight, surrendered up his Soul to him that gave it, in sixteen hundred and nineteen, and was buried in the Church of Beckington before-mentioned. On the wall over his grave was this inscription afterwards put. Here lies expecting the second coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the dead body of Samuel Daniel Esq; that excellent Poet and Historian, who was Tutor to the Lady Anne Clifford in her youth, she that was Daughter and Heir to George Clifford Earl of Cumberland, who in gratitude to him, erected this monument in his memory, a long time after, when she was Countess Dowager of Pembroke, Dorset, and Montgomery. He died in Octob. an. 1619. By the way it must be noted that this Anne Countess of Pembroke was the same person who lived like a Princess, for many years after, in Westmorland, was a great lover and encourager of learning and learned men, hospitable, charitable to the poor, and of a most generous and publick temper. She died 22. Mar. 1675. aged 86. or thereabouts, and was buried under a splendid monument, which she in her life-time had erected, in the Church of Appleby in Westmorland. It must be also farther noted that there was one Sam. Daniel Master of Arts, who published a book intit. Archiepiscopal Priority instituted by Christ. Printed an. 1642. and another, if I am not mistaken, called, The Birth, Life, and Death of the Jewish Unction. But whether he was of the University of Oxon, I cannot yet find.

JOHN PANKE was a very frequent and noted ^{466.}

Preacher of his time, and well read in Theological authors, but withal a very zealous Enemy in his Writings and Preachments against the Papists, but in what College or Hall educated, I cannot as yet find. After he had left the University he became Minister of Broadhinton, afterwards of Tidworth, in Wilts. and at length, had some Cure in the Church of Salisbury. His works are,

Short Admonition, by way of Dialogue, to all those, who hitherto, upon pretence of their unworthiness, have dangerously, in respect of their Salvation, withdrawn themselves from coming to the Lords Table, &c. Oxon. 1604. oct.

The fall of Babel, by the confusion of tongues, directly proving against the Papists of this, and former ages, that a view of their writings and books being taken, it cannot be discerned by any Man living, what they would say, or how be understood, in the question of the Sacrifice of the Mass, the Real Presence, or Transubstantiation, &c. Oxon. 1608. qu. Dedicated to the Heads of Colleges and Scholars of the University of Oxon.

Collelancea, out of S. Gregory the Great, and S. Bernard the Devout, against the Papists, who adhere to the Doctrine of the present Church of Rome, in the most fundamental points between them and us. Oxon. 1618. oct. With other things, as 'tis probable, but such I have not yet seen, nor do I know any thing else of the author.

467. DERMITIUS MEARA, or de Meara, who was born at Ormond in Ireland, whence being sent to this University, continued there in Philosophical studies several years; but whether in Univ. coll. Glouc. or Hart. hall, (receptacles for Irish men in his time,) I know not. For tho he writes himself in the first of his books which I shall anon mention, lately a Student in the University of Oxon. yet in all my searches I cannot find him matriculated, or that he took a degree. Some years after his retirement to his native Country, he wrote in Latin verse, having been esteemed a good Poet during his conversation among the Oxonians, these things following, Ormonius five illustriss. herois ac domini, D. Thomæ Butler Ormonia & Osoria Comitiss, Vicecom. de Thurles, Baronis de Arcklo, &c. Prosapia laborumque præcipuorum ab eodem pro Patria & Principe susceptorum commemoratio heroico carmine conscripta. Lond. 1615. oct.

Epicedion in obitum Tho. Butler Ormonia & Osoria Comitiss, &c.

Anagrammaton, Acrosticon & Chronologica in eundem Tho. Butler. These two last were printed with Ormonius, and are dedicated to Walt. Butler Earl of Ormond and Offory. Much about the time when these Poetical things were printed, the author practiced Physick in his own Country, and gained great repute for his happy success therein. In that faculty he wrote several books, but all that I have seen is only this.

- De morbis hæreditariis tractatus Spagyrico-dogmaticus.* Clar. 1619. oct. He was Father to Edm. de Meara an Ormonian born, sometimes a Practitioner in Physick in the City of Bristol, being the same person who answered Dr. Tho. Willis's book, intit. Diatribæ duæ Medico-Philosophicæ, &c.

468. SABIN CHAMBERS, a Leicestershire Man born, took the degrees in Arts, as a Member of Broad-gates hall, that of Master being compleated 1583. at which time he had the vogue of a good disputant. But soon after being dissatisfied in many points relating to the Protestant Religion, he entred into the Society of Jesús at Paris, an. 1588. aged about 30. Afterwards he taught Divinity in the University of Doll in Burgundy, and at length was sent into the Mission of England, to labour in the Harvest there. He hath written,

The Garden of the Virgin Mary. St. Om. 1619. oct. Which contains certain Prayers and Meditations. Other matters, as 'tis said, he hath written, but being printed beyond Sea, we have few copies of them come into these parts.

469. LEWIS THOMAS, a frequent Preacher in his time, became a poor Scholar or Exhibitor of Brafnose coll. in 1582. or thereabouts, took one degree in Arts, holy Orders soon after, and at length was beneficed in his native County of Glamorgan, and elsewhere. His works are,

Certain Lectures upon sundry portions of Scripture, &c. Lond. 1600. oct. Dedic. to Sir Tho. Egerton, Lord Keeper of the great Seal, who was one of his first promoters in the Church.

Seaven Sermons, or the exercises of Seaven Sabbaths. The first intit. The Prophet David's Arithmetick, is on Psal. 90. 12. The second called Peter's Repentance, is on Matth. 26. 75. &c. Which Seaven Sermons were printed at London several times in the latter end of Q. Elizabeth, once in the Reign of K. James (1619.) and once in the Reign of K. Ch. 1. (1630.)

A short treatise upon the Commandments, on Rev. 22. 14. Lond. 1600. &c. oct. This is sometimes called A Comment on the Decalogue. I find another Lewis Thomas of Jesús college, who took the degree of Bach. of Arts, as a Member of that house 1597. and that of

- Clar. 1619. Master, as a Member of St. Edm. hall, 1601. But what relation he had to the former, or whether he hath published any thing, I know not.

JOHN NORDEN, was born of a gentile Family, but in what County, unless in Wilt., I cannot tell, became a Commoner of Hart hall in 1564. and took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1573. This person I take to be the same John Norden who was author of these books following, some of which I have perused, but therein I cannot find that he entitles himself a Minister of Gods word, or Master of Arts.

Sinful Mans Solace, most sweet and comfortable for the sick and sorrowful Soul, &c. Lond. 1585. in oct.

Mirrour for the Multitude, or a Glas, wherein may be seen the violence, the error, the weakness, and rash consent of the multitude, &c. Lond. 1586. in oct.

Antithesis, or contrariety between the Wicked and Godly, set forth in form of a pair of Gloves, fit for every man to wear, &c. Lond. 1587.

Pensive Mans Practice, wherein are contained very devout and necessary Prayers for sundry godly purposes, &c. Lond. 1591. in tw.—Printed there again 1629. in tw. which was the fortieth impression.

Poor Mans rest, founded upon motives, meditations, and prayers, &c. Printed several times in oct. and tw. The eighth edit. was printed at Lond. 1620. in tw.

Progress of Piety, whose Jesses lead into the Harbour of heavenly Harts-ease, to recreate the afflicted Souls of all such as, &c. Lond. in tw.

Christian comfort and encouragement unto all English Subjects, not to dismay at the Spanish threats. Lond. 1596.

Mirrour of Honour, wherein every Professor of Arms, from the General, to the inferiour Souldier, may see the necessity of the fear and service of God. Lond. 1597. qu.

Interchangeable variety of things. Lond. 1600. qu.

The Surveyors Dialogue, very profitable for all men to peruse, but especially for Gentlemen, Farmers, and Husbandmen, &c. in 6 books. Lond. 1607. 10. and 18. in qu.

Labyrinth of Mans life: Or Vertues delight, and Envyies happines. Lond. 1614. qu. 'Tis a Poem dedic. to Rob. Carr Earl of Somerset.

Loadstone to a Spiritual life. Lond. 1614. in fixt.

Pensive Souls delight: Or, a devout Mans help, consisting of motives, meditations, and prayers, &c. Lond. 1615. in tw.

An Eye to Heaven in Earth. A necessary Watch for the time of death, consisting in meditations and prayers fit for that purpose. With the Husband's Christian Counsel to his Wife and Children left poor after his death. Lond. 1619. in tw. &c.

Help to true blessedness.

Pathway to patience in all manner of afflictions, &c. Lond. 1626. oct. This John Norden lived at Hendon near Acton in Middlesex in most of the Reign of King James 1. being patronized in his studies by, or as some say was Servant to, Will. Cecil Lord Burleigh, and Rob. Earl of Salisbury his Son. I take him to be the same John Norden Gent. who hath written Speculum Britannia, or, an Historical and Chorographical description of Middlesex. Lond. 1593. in about 7 sh. in qu. And of A Chorographical description of Hertfordshire. Printed much about the same time in 4 sh. in qu.

JOHN BUDDEN, Son of Joh. Budden of Can. 471. ford in Dorsetshire, was born in that County, entred into Merton coll. in Mich. Term, 1582. aged 16. admitted Scholar of Trinity coll. 30. of May following, took the degree of Bach. of Arts, and soon after was translated to Glouc. hall, for the sake, and at the request, of Mr. Tho. Allen, where being mostly taken up with the study of the Civil Law, yet he took the degree of M. of Arts, as a Member thereof. At length he was made Philosophy Reader of Magd. coll. proceeded in the Civil Law 1602. made Principal of New Inn 1609. the Kings Professor of the Civil Law soon after, and Principal of Broad-gates hall. He was a person of great Eloquence, an excellent Rhetorician, Philosopher, and a most noted Civilian. He hath written and published, Gulielmi Patteni cui Wagnsteti agnomen fuit, Wintoniensis Ecclesie Praefectus, & coll. B. Mariae Magd. apud Oxon fundatoris, vita obitusque. Oxon. 1602. qu. Reprinted in a Book intit. Vita selectorum aliquot virorum, &c. Lond. 1681. in a large qu. Published by Dr. Will. Bates a Cambridge Man, a learned and moderate Nonconformist, living then at Hackney near London, an eminent writer, and worthy of much praise.

Reverendiss. Patris ac Domini Johannis Mortoni Cantuariensis olim Archiep. Magni Angliae Cancellarii, trium Regum Consiliarii, vita obitusque. Lond. 1607. in 3 sh. in oct. He also translated from English into Latin, (1) Sir Tho. Bodley's Statutes of the Publick Library, which is remitted into the body of the Statutes of the University. (2) Sir Tho. Smith's book intit. The Commonwealth of England, and the manner and Government thereof, in 3 books. Printed at Lond. in oct. and beyond Sea in tw. Also from French into English, A discourse for Parents Honour and Authority over their Children. Lond. 1614. oct. written by Pet. Frodin a renowned French Civilian. This Dr. Budden died in Broadgates hall, on the eleventh of June in sixteen hundred and twenty. From which place his body being carried to the Divinity School, Rich. Gardiner of Ch. Ch. the Deputy-Orator delivered an eloquent Speech in praise of him, before the Doctors, Masters and Scholars of the University. Which being done, the body was conveyed thence to St. Aldates Church near to the hall of Broadgates, and there in the Chancel was interred on the 14. of the same month. In the Professorship of the Civil Law succeeded Dr. Rich. Zouch, and in the Principality of Broadgates Dr. Tho. Glayton.

472. SAMUEL SMITH, a Gentleman's Son, was born in Lincolnshire, entred a Commoner in Magd. coll. in Michaelmas Term 1604, aged 17. became Fellow of Magd. coll. 1609. Proctor of the University in 1620. being then Bach. of Physick, and accounted the most accurate Disputant, and profound Philosopher in the University. He wrote divers things pertaining to Logick and Philosophy, but none of them were printed only, Aditus ad Logicam, in usum eorum qui primò Academiam salutant. Oxon. 1613. 21. 27. 33. 39. &c. oct. He died much lamented 17. June (according as he himself had foretold it some weeks before he died) in sixteen hundred and twenty, being then newly entred on his Proctorship, and was buried in Magd. coll. Chappel. I find another Sam. Smith equal in time with the former, a frequent Preacher and Writer, who living many years after, is not to have a place among these writers, till the year 1663.

473. GRIFFITH POWELL, a younger Son of Tho. Powell of Llanfawell in Caermarthenshire Esq; was born there, entred a Commoner of Jesus coll. 1581. aged 20. became the first Fellow of the said coll. by election, took the degrees in Arts, and one in the Civil Law, and at length (after some controversies had passed) was settled Principal of his College in 1613. being then accounted by all a most noted Philosopher, or subtile Disputant, and one that acted and drudged much as a Tutor, Moderator, and Adviser in studies among the Juniors. He hath transmitted to Posterity, Analysis Analyticorum posteriorum seu librorum Aristotelis de Demonstratione, cum Scholiis. Oxon 1594. oct.

Analysis libri Aristot. de Sophisticis Elenchis. Ox. 1594. and 1664. oct. Concerning which two books these verses were made,

Griffith Powell, for the Honour of her Nation,

Wrote a Book of Demonstration.

And having little else to doe,

He wrote a Book of Elenchs too.

He also wrote several other matters of Philosophy, which would have been very useful for Novices, but the author being taken up too much with his charge, he could not spare time to put them in order for the Press, much less to publish them. He paid his last debt to nature, 28. June in sixteen hundred and twenty, and was buried in the Church of St. Michael (in Jesus coll. Isle I think) near to the North Gate of the City of Oxon. By his nuncupatory Will he left all his Estate to that Coll. amounting to 648 l. — 17 s. — 2 d. with which, and certain Monies, were Lands purchased for the maintenance of one Fellow of the said Coll.

RICHARD CAREW, the Son of Tho. Carew 474 by Elizab. Edgcombe his Wife, was born of an ancient and gentile Family at East Anthony in the East parts of Cornwall, an. 1555. became a Gent. Com. of Ch. Ch. very young, but had his Chamber in Broadgates hall, much about the time that his Kinsman George Carew (afterwards E. of Totnes) and Will. Camden studied there. At 14 years of age he disputed ex tempore with the matchless Philip Sidney, (while he was a young Man, I suppose.) in the presence of the Earls of Leicester, Warwick, and other Nobility, at what time they were lodged in Ch. Ch. to receive entertainment from the Muses. After he had spent 3 years in Oxon, he retired to the Middle Temple, where he spent 3 years more, and then was sent with his Uncle in his Embassage unto the King of Poland; whom, when he came to Dantz, he found that he had been newly gone from thence into Sweden, whither also he went after him. After his return, and a short stay made in England, he was sent by his Father into France with Sir Hen. Nevill, who was then Embassadour Leiger unto K. Hen. 4. that he might learn the French tongue, which by reading and talking he overcame in three quarters of an year. Some time after his return he married Juliana Arundell of Trerice, an. 1577. was made Justice of the Peace 1581. High-Sheriff of Cornwall 1586. and about that time was the Kings Deputy for the Militia. In 1598. he was elected a Member of the Coll. of Antiquaries, and about that time he made an historical survey of his native County, which was afterwards printed, he being then accounted a religious and ingenious Man, learned, eloquent, liberal, stout, honest, and well skill'd in several Languages, as also among his Neighbours the greatest Husband, and most excellent manager of Bees in Cornwall. He was intimate with the most noted Scholars of his time, particularly with Sir Hen. Spelman, who, in an Epistle (a) to him concerning tithes, doth not a little extol him for his ingenuity, vertue, and learning. Palmam igitur cedo (saith he) & quod Græci olim in Caria sua gente, admirati sunt, nos in Caria nostra gente agnoscimus, ingenium splendidum, bellarumque intentionum facundissimum, &c. Further also for the book he wrote and published, intit.

The Survey of Cornwall, &c. Lond. 1602. qu. the learned Camden is pleased to honour (b) him with this character, — Sed hæc, &c. But more plainly and fully, instructed are we in these points, by Rich. Carew of Anthony, a Gentleman innobled no less in regard of his parentage and descent, than for his vertue and learning; who hath published and perfected the description of this County (Cornwall) more at large, and not in a slight and mean manner, whom I must needs acknowledge to have given me much light herein. Our author Carew hath also written,

The true and ready way to learn the Lat. tongue; in answer to a Quere, whether the ordinary way by teaching Latin by the rules of Grammar, be the best way for youths to learn it? — This is involved in a book published by a Dutch-man called Sam. Hartlib. Esq; intit. The true and ready way to learn the Lat. tongue, &c. Lond. 1654. qu. Our author Carew translated also from Italian into the English tongue, The examination of Mens Wits. In which, by discovering the variety of Natures, is shewed for what profession each one is apt, and how far he shall profit therein. Lond. 1594. and 1604. qu. written by Joh. Huarte. But this translation, as I have been informed by some persons, was mostly, if not all, performed by Tho. Carew his Father; yet Richard's name is set to it. He died on the sixth day of Nov. in sixteen hundred and twenty, and was buried in the Church of East Anthony among his Ancestors. Shortly after he had a splendid Monument set over his grave, with an inscription thereon, written in the Latin tongue; which being too large for this place, I shall now omit, as also the Epigram made on him by his (c) Countryman, and another by a (d) Scot. Which last stiles our author Carew another Livie, another Maro, another Papinian, and highly extolls him for his great skill in History, and knowledge in the Laws. Besides this Rich. Carew, was another, but later in time, author of Excellent helps by a warming-stone. Printed 1652. qu.

(a) In his Apol. of the Treatise De non temerandis Ecclesiis, &c. Lond. 1646. qu. (b) In Britannia, in the latter end of his discourse of Cornwall. (c) Carol. Fitzgeffry Cornub. in Affaniis, lib. 3. (d) Joh. Dunbar Megolo-Britannus in Epigrammatib. suis, edit. in oct. apud Lond. 1616. cent. 6. num. 51.

475. RICHARD KILBYE was born at Radcliff on the River Wreake in Leicestershire, elected Fellow of Lincoln coll. 18. Jan. 1577. being then about three years standing in the University. Afterwards he took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders, and became a noted Preacher in the University. In 1590. he was elected Rector of his College, took the degrees in Divinity, was made Prebendary of the Cath. Ch. at Lincoln, and at length Hebrew Professor of this University. He hath written,

Commentarii in Librum Exodi. Part. 2. MS. in the hands sometimes of Will. Gilbert Fellow of Linc. coll. The chief part of which is excerpted from the Monuments of the Rabbins and Hebrew Interpreters. He also continued Jo. Mercers notes on Genesis, and would have printed them, but was denied; had a hand also in the translation of the Bible, appointed by K. Jam. 1. an. 1604. and did other very laudable matters relating to learning.

Serm. in S. Maries Church Oxon, 26. Mar. 1612. at the Funeral of Tho. Holland the King's Professor of Divinity in this Univ. on 1 Cor. 5. 55, 56, 57. — Oxon. 1613. qu. He, the said Dr. Kilbye, was buried in that Chancel in Allsaints Church in Oxon. which is commonly called The College Chancel, (because it belongs to Linc. coll.) on the 17. Nov. in sixteen hundred and twenty, aged 60. or thereabouts. Whereupon Paul Hood Bac. (afterwards D.) of Divinity succeeded him in his Rectorship, and Edward a Meeterk Bach. of Div. of Ch. Ch. in his Professorship. Besides this Rich. Kilbye was another of both his names, and a writer too, as I have, under the year 1617. told you.

476. JOHN CARPENTER received his first breath in the County of Cornwall, was entred a Bachelor in Exeter coll. about 1570. where going thro the courses of Logic and Philosophy for the space of four years or more, with unwearied industry, left the University without a degree, and at length became Rector of an obscure Town called Northleigh near to Culliton in Devon. He hath written and published,

A sorrowful Song for sinful Souls, composed upon the strange and wonderful shaking of the Earth, 6. Apr. 1586. Lond. in oct.

Remember Lots Wife, two Sermons on Luke 17. 32. Lond. 1588. oct.

Preparative for Contentation. Lond. 1597. qu.

Song of the Beloved concerning his Vineyard; or, two Sermons on Isay 5. 1. Lond. 1599. oct.

Christian Contemplations, or a Catechism. Lond. 1601. oct.

K. Solomon's Solace. Lond. 1606. qu.

1620. Plain Man's Spiritual Plough. Lond. 1607. qu. He gave up the ghost at Northleigh before-mentioned in the latter end of the year, viz. in March, in sixteen hundred and twenty, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, before the 25. of the said month, as it doth partly appear in the Register of that place; leaving then behind him a Son named Nathaniel, whom I shall mention under the year 1628. I find another Job. Carpenter who wrote a book of Keeping Merchants Accounts, by way of Debtor and Creditor. Printed 1632. fol. but him I take not to be an Academician.

477. WILLIAM TOOKER, second Son of Will. Tooker, (by Honora Erescy of Cornwall his Wife,) Son and Heir of Rob. Tooker, was born in the City of Exeter, educated in Wykeham's School near to Winchester, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1577. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated in 1583. in which year he shewd himself a ready Disputant before Albertus Alaskie Prince of Sirad, at his being entertained by the Oxonian Muses in S. Maries Church. In 1585. he left his Fellowship, being about that time promoted to the Archdeanconry of Barnstaple in his own Country. Afterwards he was made Chaplain to Q. Elizabeth and Prebendary of Salisbury, took the degrees in Divinity 1595. became Canon of Exeter, and at length Dean of Lichfield, on the death (as it seems) of Dr. George Boleyn, in the latter end of 1602. He was an excellent Grecian and Latinist, an able Divine, a person of great gravity and piety, and well read in curious and critical authors, as may partly appear by these books following, which he wrote and published.

Charisma, sive donum Sanationis, seu explicatio totius questionis de mirabilium Sanitatum gratia, &c. Lond. 1597. qu. In this book he doth attribute to the Kings and Queens of England a power derived unto them, by Lawful Succession, of healing, &c. Which book is reflected upon by Mart. Anton. Delrinus the Jesuit, who thinks it not true that Kings can cure the Evil. With him agrees most Fanaticks.

Of the Fabrick of the Church and Church mens livings. Lond. 1604. oct.

Singulare certamen cum Martino Becano Jesuita, sutiliter refutante apologiam & monitoriam praefationem ad Imperatorem, Reges, & Principes, & quaedam Orthodoxa dogmata Jacobi Regis Magnae Britanniae. Lond. 1611. oct. This learned author, Dr. Tooker, died at Salisbury on the 19. of March, or thereabouts, and was buried in the Cath. Ch. there 21. of the said month, in sixteen hundred and twenty, leaving behind him a Son named Robert Tooker of East-Grinstead in Surrey. In June following Dr. Walt. Curle of Cambridge succeeded him in the Deanry of Lichfield, and him Dr. Augustin Lindsell another Cantabrigian, an. 1630. 1620.

HENRY SWINBURNE, Son of Thomas 478. Swinburne of the City of York, was born there, spent some years in the quality of a Commoner in Hart hall, whence translating himself to that of Broadgates, took the degree of Bach. of the Civil Law, married Helena Daughter of Barthelm. Lane of Oxon, and at length retiring to his native place, became a Proctor in the Archbishops Court there, Commissary of the Exchequer, and Judge of the Prerogative Court at York. He hath written, Brief Treatise of Testaments and last Wills. In 7 parts. Lond. 1590. 1611, 35. 40. 77. &c. qu.

Treatise of Spoufals, or Matrimonial Contracts, &c.

Lond. 1686. qu. In which two books the author shews himself an able Civilian, and excellently well read in authors of his Faculty. He paid his last debt to nature at York, and was buried in the North Isle of the Cathedral there. Soon after was a comely Monument fastned to the wall near to his grave, with his Effigies in a Civilians Gown kneeling before a deske, with a book thereon, and these verses under. 1620.

Non Vidua caruere viris, non Patre Pupillus,

Dum stetit hic Patria virque paterque suae.

Ast quod Swinburnus viduarum scripsit in usum,

Longius aeterno marmore vivet opus.

Scribere supremas hinc discat quisque tabellas,

Et cupiat qui sic vixit, ut ille mori.

There is no day or year on the Monument to shew when this H. Swinburne died, neither any Register belonging to the Cathedral, and therefore I have put him under the year 1620. wherein he was in great esteem for his learning.

MICHAEL WIGMORE was born (*) of a 479. gentle Family in Somersetshire, entred a Commoner in Magd. hall 1602. aged 14. elected when Bach. of Arts (as a native of the Dioc. of Gloucester) Fellow of Oriel coll. an. 1608. After he had proceeded in his Faculty, he took upon him the Sacred Function, and became a painful and zealous Preacher, and a publisher of, Several Sermons, as, (1) The holy City discovered, besieged, and delivered, on Ecclef. 9. 14, 15. Lond. 1619. qu.

(2) The way of all flesh, on Prov. 4. 1. Lond. 1619. qu. Clar.

(3) The good adventure, on Rev. 4. 2. 3. Lond. 1620. qu. &c. 1620.

one Mich. Wigmore was author of a Serm. intit. The dissection of the brain, on Isa. 9. 15. Printed 1641. which person I take to be the same with the former. When our author Mich. Wigmore of Oriel died, or where he was beneficed, I cannot yet tell. Quere.

ROBERT STAFFORD, a Knight's Son, was 480. born within the City of Dublin in Ireland, entred a Sojourner in Exeter coll. under the tuition of Mr. Job. Prideaux, an. 1604. aged 16. but took no degree as I can yet find. He published,

A Geographical and Anthological description of all the Empires and Kingdoms, both of Continent and Islands in this Terrestrial Globe, &c. Lond. 1618. and 34. qu. Clar. Usher'd into the World by the commendatory verses of 1620. Tho. Rogers, Caspar Thomannus of Zuricke (sometimes an Oxf. Student) Job. Glanvill and Job. Prideaux. Which last was supposed to have had a chief hand in the compiling the said book, as the tradition goes in Exeter coll. The said Rob. Stafford lived afterwards in Devon, (at Dowton, I think) and had a Son of the same coll.

481. GEORGE GYFFARD or Gifford was a Student in Hart hall several years before 1568, (10. Elizab.) at which time did also study there others of his Surname and allies, as Humphrey, Walter, and Rob. Gifford, but whether our author George was originally of this University, or that he took a degree in Arts, Law, Physick, or Divinity therein, it doth not at all (perhaps by the imperfectness of the registers) appear. Several persons in his time and before, did, tho they were beneficed, retire to this University purposely to improve themselves in learning and by conversation, and 'tis supposed that this Gifford did the like. Afterwards he became Minister of Maldon in Essex, a very noted preacher, and one most admirably well vers'd in several sorts of learning, which were rare and much in esteem in his time, but withal a great Enemy to Popery. His works are, -

Country divinity, containing a discourse of certain points of Religion, which are among the common sort of Christians, with a plain confutation thereof. Lond. 1581. oct.

Dialogue between a Papist and a Protestant, applied to the capacity of the unlearned. Lond. 1583. oct.

Against the Priesthood and Sacrifice of the Church of Rome, wherein you may perceive their impiety, in usurping that office and action, which ever appertaineth to Christ only. Lond. 1584. oct.

Catechism, giving a most excellent light to those that seek to enter the path-way to salvation. Lond. 1586. oct.

Discourse of the subtle practices of Devils by Witches and Sorcerers, &c. Lond. 1587. qu.

Short treatise against the Donatists of England, whom we call Brownists; wherein by answer unto their writings, their heresies are noted. Lond. 1590. qu.

Plain declaration that our Brownists be full Donatists, by comparing them together from point to point out of the writing of Augustin. Lond. 1591. qu. Reply to Mr. Joh. Greenwood and Hen. Barrow touching read Prayer, wherein their gross ignorance is detected — These two last are dedicated to Sir Will. Cecil Lord Barleigh Chanc. of Cambridge.

Dialogue concerning Witches and Witchcrafts. In which is laid open how craftily the Devil deceiveth, not only the Witches, but many other, &c. Lond. 1593. and 1603. qu.

Treatise of true fortitude. Ibid. 94. oct.

Comment. or Sermons on the whole book of the Revelations Ibid. 96. qu.

Exposition on the Canticles. Lond. 1612. oct. Besides all these books he hath,

Several Sermons extant, as (1) Sermon on the parable of the Sower on Math. 13. ver. 1. to 9. Lond. 1581. oct. (2) Sermon on 2 Pet. ver. 1. to 11. Lond. 1584. oct. (3) Sermon on Jam. 2. ver. 14. to 26. Ibid. 86. oct. (4) Sermon on the first four chapt. and part of the 5. of Ecclesiastes, &c. Pr. at the same place 1589. oct. (5) Serm. at Paul's cross, on Psal. 133. Lond. 1591. oct. (6) Two Sermons on 1 Pet. 5. 8, 9. wherein is shewed that the Devil is to be resisted only by a stedfast faith, &c. Lond. 1598. oct. (7) Four Sermons upon several parts of Scripture. Lond. 1598. oct. The first Sermon is on 1 Tim. 6, 17, 18, 19. &c. (8) Fifteen Sermons on the Song of Solomon. Lond. 1620. oct. He also translated into English Prelections upon the sacred and holy Revelations. Lond. 1573. qu. Written in latin by Dr. Will. Fulke of Cambridge. This George Gifford hath written, and translated other things, which I have not yet seen, and lived to a good old age, but when he died it appears not.

482. LUDOVISIO PETRUCCI, or à Petrucchioli, or, as he writes himself, Ludovicus Petruccius infelix Eques, Son of Ariodant or Aridante Petrucci, was born at Sienna à Petigliano in Tuscany, educated partly in juvenile learning in his own country, but before he had made proficiency in Academicals, he became a Souldier of fortune, first in Creet for the Venetians where he was Sarjeant-major, in 1602. secondly in the Hungarian wars, where he was Captain of a Foot-company in the regiment first of Count Salma and afterwards in that of Colonel Ferdinand de Colonisch, serving for the Emperour, and at length in the services of the Prince of Brandiburg and Nuburgh. But being unfortunate in all his undertakings, he left the trade of war, and retiring into England, took a journey to Oxon. in 1610. and was entred into the publick Library in the beginning of the year following. About that time he was a Commoner of S. Edmunds hall, as he was afterwards of Ball. coll. wore a gown, spent four years or more in Academical learning, and frequented the Prayers and Sacraments according to the Church of England. But being notwithstanding suspected for a Papist, or at least popishly affected, and to keep intelligence with that party, were several objections made against him for the inconveniency and evil consequence that might happen for his long continuance in the University. Whereupon he was forced, or at least desired, to depart, such were the jealousies of the puritanical party in the University. He hath written, Farrago Poëmatum, diversis locis & temporibus conscriptorum, &c. Oxon. 1613. in Ital. and Lat. in qu.

Oratio ad D. Joh. Bapt. Bernardum Pratorem Patavinum & universam curiam, in Vigiliis Paschatis. Printed with the former book.

Apologia contra calumniatores suos. Lond. 1619. qu.

Emblemata varia, dedicata Regibus, Principibus & Magnatibus.

Epistola ad D. Georg. Abbot Archiep. Cantuar. Domino Franc. Bacon supremo Angl. Canc. & Gulielmo comiti Pembrochia.

Poëmata varia.

Oratio composita quando statuit relinquere Academiam Oxon. Clar. 18. Aug. 1614. Which four last things were printed with his Apologia, &c. 1619. what other books he hath published, I cannot justly tell. However from those before mention'd, it appears that the author was a phantastical and unsettled man, and delighted, as it seems, in rambling.

CHRISTOPHER NEWSTEAD, third son 483 of Tho. Newstead of Somercotes in Lincolnshire, was born in that County, became a Commoner of S. Albans hall in 1615. aged 18 years or thereabouts, continued there till after he was Bachelours standing and wrote,

An Apology for women: or the womans defence. Lond. 1620. oct. Dedicated to the Countess of Bucks. Afterwards he retired into the Country, studied Divinity, had a benefice conferr'd upon, and tho he never took any degree in Arts in this University, yet he took that of Bach. of Div. 1631. which is all I know of him.

JOHN KING, Son of Philip King of Wormenhale, 484 commonly called Wornal, near to Brill in Bucks. (by Elizabeth his wife, Daughter of Edm. Conquest of Houghton Conquest in Bedfordshire) Son of Thom. King, brother to Rob. King the first Bishop of Oxon, was born at Wornal before mention'd, educated in Grammar learning partly in Westminster School, became Student of Ch. Church in 1576. took the degree in Arts, made Chaplain to Q. Eliz. as he was afterwards to K. James, installed Archdeacon of Nottingham 12. Aug. 1590. upon the death of Joh. Lowth, (successor to Will. Day 1565.) at which time he was a Preacher in the City of York. Afterwards he was made Chaplain to Egerton Lord Keeper, proceeded D. of D. 1602. had the Deanary of Ch. Ch. in Oxon conferr'd upon him in 1605. and was afterwards several years together Vicechanc. of this University. In 1611. he had the Bishoprick of London bestowed on him by K. James I. who commonly called him the King of preachers, to which being consecrated 8. Sept. the same year, had (a) restitution of the temporalities belonging to that See. made to him 18 of the same month, at which time he was had in great reverence by all people. He was a solid and profound Divine, of great gravity and piety, and had so excellent a volubility of speech, that Sir Edw. Coke the famous Lawyer would often say of him that he was the best speaker in the Star-Chamber in his time. When he was advanced to the See of London, he endeavoured to let the world (b) know that that place did not cause him to forget his Office in the Pulpit, shewing by his example that a Bishop might govern and preach too. In which office he was so frequent, that unless hindered by want of health, he omitted no Sunday, whereon he did not visit some Pulpit in or near London — Deus bone, quam canora Vox, (saith (c) one) vultus compositus, verba selecta, grandes sententiae. Allicimur omnes lepore verborum, suspendimur gravitate sententiarum, orationis impetu & viribus flellimur, &c. He hath written, Lectures upon Jonas, delivered at York. Lond. 1594. Ox. 99. &c. qu.

(a) Pat. 9. Fac. 1. p. 3. (b) Ch. Hist. by Th. Fuller. lib. 10. an. 1621. (c) Will. Hall D. D. in his Epist. dedic. to Joh. King B. of London before his book, entit. The barbaunt's guest, &c. Lond. 1614. qu.

Several

Several Sermons, viz. (1) Sermon at Hampton-Court, on Cantic. 8. 11. Ox. 1606. qu. (2) At Ox. 5. Nov. 1607. on Psal. 46. from ver. 7. to 11. Ox. 1607. qu. (3) At White-hall 5. Nov. 1608. on Psal. 11. 2, 3, 4. Ox. 1608. qu. (4) At S. Maries in Ox. 24. Mar. being the day of his Maj. inauguration, on 1 Chron. ult. 26. 27, 28. Ox. 1608. qu. (5) Vitis palatina. Sermon appointed to be preached at White-hall upon the Tuesday after the marriage of the Lady Elizab. on Psal. 28. 3. 3. Lond. 1614. qu. (6) Sermon at Pauls cross for the recovery of K. James from his late sickness, preached 11. of Apr. 1619. on on Esay 28. 17. Lond. 1619. qu. (7) At Pauls cross 26. Mar. 1620. on Psal. 102. 13, 14. Lond. 1620. qu. Besides these he published others, as one on 2 Kings 23. 25. printed 1611. Another on Psal. 123. 3. and a third on Psal. 146. 3. 4. &c. printed all in qu. but these three I have not yet seen. He paid his last debt to nature 30. March (d) in sixteen hundred twenty and one, aged 62. having before been much troubled with the Stone in the reins and bladder, and was buried in the Cath. Ch. of S. Paul in London. A copy of his Epitaph you may see in the History of that Cathedral written by Sir Will. Dugdale Knight. Soon after Bishop Kings death, the Rom. Catholicks endeavoured to make the world believe that said Bishop died a member of their Church; and to that end one of them named Gregory Fisher alis Musket did write and publish a book intit. The Bishop of London his Legacy. Or, certain motives of Dr. King, late B. of London, for his change of religion, and dying in the Cath. and Rom. Church, with a conclusion to his brethren the Bishops of England. Printed by permission of the superiours, 1621. But concerning the falsity of that matter, his son Hen. King, not only satisfied the world in a Sermon by him preached at Pauls cross soon after, but also Dr. Godwin Bishop of Hereford in his Appendix to his Commentarius de Presulibus Anglia, printed 1622. and Joh. Gee in his book called The foot out of the Snare, cap. 12. The reader is to know that there was one Joh. King contemporary with the former, who published a Sermon intit. Abels offering, &c. on Gen. 4. ver. 4. printed at Flushing 1621. qu. and other things. But this Joh. King was Pastor of the English Church at Hamburgh, and whether he was of this Univ. of Oxon. I cannot yet tell.

485. JOHN GUILLIM, or Agilliams son of John Williams of Westbury in Gloucestershire, received some Academical education in Oxon. but in what house I am uncertain. I find one of both his names, who was a student in Brasnose coll. in the year 1581. aged 16, and another of Glouc. hall 1598. aged 25. Both which were, according to the Matricula, born in Herefordshire, in which County the author of The worthies of England, places Jo. Guillim the Herald, (of whom we now speak) who afterwards retired to Minsterworth in Gloucestershire, was soon after called thence, and made one of the Society of the coll. of Arms. commonly called the Heralds Office in London by the name of Portsmouth, and on (e) the 26 Feb. 1617. Rouge Croix Purfevant of Arms in Ordinary. He published, The display of Heraldry. Lond. 1610. &c. fol. Written mostly (especially the scholastical part) by John Barcham of C. C. coll. in Oxon. In 1660. came out two editions of it in fol. with many insignificant, superfluous, and needless additions to it, purposely to gain money from those, whose coates of Arms the publishers added, without any consideration had to the spoiling of the method of the book. One of the said editions was put out by Alexander Nowers a Herald-painter, burned in his bed (to which he went drunk) in his house about Loshbury, behind the Exchange, within the City of London, by a fire that occasionally happened in those parts 25. July 1670. The other edition was put out by Rich. Bloome, then a kind of an Arms Painter (but originally a ruler of books and paper) who hath since practiced for divers years propping tricks in employing necessitous persons to write in several arts and to get contributions of Noble men to promote the work. What he hath done as to the Arms, Crests, and supporters of the Nobility is most egregiously erroneous, and false also in the quarterings. In 1679. he set forth the said book again, (which is the 5 edition) with the pictures at large, of several of the Nobility, whereby the book is so much disguised, that I verily believe if the author, or authors of it, were living they could scarce know it. To the said edition is added Analogia honorum: or, a treatise of honour and nobility, &c. in two parts. Said by Bloome to have been written by Capt. John Logan of Idbury in Oxfordshire, but Qu. This person Bloome, is esteemed by the chiefest Heralds a most impudent person, and the late industrious Garter (Sir W. D.) hath told me that he gets a livelihood by bold practices, and that he is the pretended author of a book called Britannia, Or, a Geographical description of the Kingdom of England, Scotland and Ireland, &c. Lond. 1673. fol. Scribled and transcribed from Camdens Britannia and Speeds Mapps, as also the publisher of Cosmography and Geography, in two parts, &c. As for Jo. Guillim the Herald, he died on the 7. of May sixteen hundred twenty one, but where buried unless at Minsterworth, I know not, for 1621. the register belonging to the Church of S. Bennet near to Pauls wharff (in which parish the Heralds Office is situated) doth not mention any thing of his burial there.

THOMAS HARIOT, or Harriot tumbled out of 486. his mothers womb into the lap of the Oxonian Muses, an. 1560. but in what parish I cannot yet tell. All the registers that begin before that time (namely that of S. S. Ebbe, S. Aldate, S. Thomas, which begins that year, S. Michael, All-Saints and S. Peter in the East) I have searched but cannot find his name. That of S. Maries parish, wherein I suppose this our author was born, hath been lost several years, and there is no register remaining, that goes above the year 1599. After he had been instructed in Grammar learning within this City of his birth, became either a Batler or Commoner of S. Maries hall, wherein undergoing the severe discipline then, and there, kept up by Rich. Pygot and Thom. Philipson the Principals thereof, he took the degree of Bac. of Arts in 1579. and in the latter end of that year did compleat it by determination in School-street. Soon after coming to the knowledge of that heroick Knight Sir W. Raleigh, for his admirable skill in the Mathematicks, he entertain'd him in his family, allowed (g) him an yearly pension, and was instructed by him at leisure-hours in that art. In 1584. he went with the said Knight, and first Colony, into Virginia, where being settled, he was employed in the discovery and surveying thereof, and to make what knowledge he could of the commodities it yielded, and concerning the inhabitants and their manners and customs. After his return into England Sir Walter got him into the acquaintance of that noble and generous Count Henry Earl of Northumberland, who finding him to be a gentleman of an affable and peaceable nature, and well read in the obscure parts of learning, he did allow him an yearly pension of 120 l. About the same time Rob. Hues and Walter Warner two other Mathematicians, who were known also to the said Count, did receive from him yearly pensions also, but of less value, as did afterwards Nich. Torperley, whom I shall mention elsewhere. So that when the said Earl was committed prisoner to the Tower of London in 1606. to remain there during life, our author, Hues, and Warner were his constant companions, and were usually called the Earl of Northumberlands three Magi. They had a table at the Earls charge, and the Earl himself did constantly converse with them, either singly or altogether, as Sir Walter then in the Tower, did. Our author Harriot was a great acquaintance with Sir Tho. Aylisbury Kt. a singular lover of learning and of the Mathematick arts. To whom Dr. Rich. Corbet sending (h) a Poem when the blazing Star appeared, dated 9. Dec. 1618, doth by the way mention our author thus.

Now for the peace of God and Men advise,
(Then that hast wherewithal to make us wise)
Thine own rich studies and deep Harriots Mine,
In which there is no dross, but all refine.

But notwithstanding his great skill in Mathematicks, he had strange thoughts of the Scripture, and always undervalued the old story of the creation of the world, and could never believe that trite position Ex nihilo nihil fit. He made a Philosophical Theology, wherein he cast off the Old Testament, so that consequently the New would have no foundation. He was a Deist, and his doctrine he did impart to the said Count, and to Sir Walt. Raleigh when he was in compiling the History of the World, and would controvert the matter with eminent Divines of those times, who therefore having no good opinion of him, did look on the manner of his death (which I shall anon mention) as a judgment upon him for those matters, and for nullifying

When in his middle age, by (k) another homonatus ad artes illustrandas, &c. and when dead by a (l) third of greater note, Mathematicus insignis. His Epitaph which was made, or caused to be made, by his Executors, or those to whom he left his goods, books, and writings, viz. Sir T. Aylesbury before mention'd and Rob. Sidney Viscount Lisle, saith that Omnes scientias calluit, & in omnibus excelluit; Mathematicis, Philosophicis, Theologicis veritatis indagator studiosissimus, Dei Trinitatis cultor piissimus, &c. As for his Writings they are these.

Artis Analytica praxis ad equationes Algebraicas nova expedita & generalis methodo, resolvandas, tractatus posthumus, &c. Lond. 1631. in a thin fol. and dedic. to Henry E. of Northumberland. The sum of this book coming into the hands of Aylesbury before-mention'd, Walt. Warner did undertake to perfect and publish it, conditionally that Algernon eldest Son of the said Henry E. of Northumb. would, after his Fathers death, continue his pension to him during his natural life. Which being granted at the earnest desires and entreaties of Aylesbury made to that Lord, Warner took a great deal of pains in it, and at length published it in that sort as we see it now extant. By the way it must be known that this Walt. Warner was a Leicestershire man born, but whether educated in this University, I cannot as yet find, that he was esteemed as good a Philosopher as Mathematician, that he made and invented a Logarithmical table, i. e. whereas Briggs's table fills his Margin with numbers encreasing by unites, and over against them sets their Logarithms, which, because of incommensurability, must needs either be abundant or deficient, Mr. Warner (like a Dictionary of the Latine before the English) fill'd the Margin with Logarithms encreasing by Unites, and did set to every one of them so many continual meane proportionals between one and 10. and they for the same reason must also have the last figure incomplete. These after the death of Warner came through the hands of one Tovey sometimes Fellow of Christs coll. in Cambridge, (afterwards beneficed in Leicestershire and took to Wife the Niece of Warner) into those of Herbert Thorndyke Prebend of Westminster, sometimes Fellow of Trin. coll. in Cambridge, and from him after his death (which happened in July 1672.) into those of Dr. Rich. Busby Prebend of the said Church. They were in number ten thousand, but when John Pell D. D. sometimes a member of Trin. coll. in Cambridge became acquainted with Warner, they were by him, or his direction, made an hundred thousand, as the difference of hands will shew in the MS. if Dr. Busby will communicate it. He also (I mean Warner) wrote a Treatise of Coynes and Coynage, in relation to Mint-affairs; a copy of which John Collins Accomptant to the Royal Fishery Company had in his possession, but what became of it after his death, I know not. The sixth book of Optiques in Marfennus is generally said to be his, and the seventh is Hobbes's of Malmsbury. He also did make it appear (m) in a MS. of his composition, that the blood in a body did circulate, which he communicating to the immortal Harvey, he took his first hint thence concerning that matter, which he afterwards published as the first inventor. I have been informed by those that knew Warner well, that he had but one hand, and was born so, that as he received a pension from the Earl of Northumberland, so did he, tho smaller, from Sir Tho. Aylesbury, and lastly that he died at the Wolfstable near the waters-side, not far from Northumberland house, (which is near Charing Cross) where he commonly winter'd (but kept his summer with Sir Thomas in Winsore-Park) much about the time when the Long Parliament began, in Nov. 1640. or rather in the latter end of that year, leaving behind him a brother, who was High-

Sheriff of Leicestershire, or at least prick'd for that office, in the beginning of the rebellion that hapned under K. Ch. 1. As for our author Harriot, who for some time lived in Sion coll. near to London, died 2 July in sixteen hundred twenty and one; whereupon his body was conveyed to S. Christophers Church in London, by the brethren of the Mathematical faculty, and by them committed to the earth with solemnity. Over his grave was soon after erected a comely Monument, with a large Inscription thereon, but destroyed with the Church it self, by the dreadful fire that hapned in that City, in the beginning of Sept. in 1666. This person tho he was but little more than 60 years of age, when he died, yet had not an unusual and rare disease seized upon him, he might have attained, as 'tis thought, to the age of 80. The disease was an ulcer in the Lipp, and Dr. Alex. Rhead was his Physician, who, tho he had cured many of worser, and more malignant, diseases; yet he could not save him. In the treatise of ulcers, in the said Rheads (n) works, is this mention of him: Cancerous Ulcers also seize on this part (the Lipp) &c. This grief hastned the end of that famous Mathematician Mr. Harriot, with whom I was acquainted but short time before his death. Whom at one time, together with Mr. Hues, who wrote of Globes, Mr. Warner and Mr. Torp-ley, the Noble Earl of Northumberland the favourer of all good learning, and Mecænas of learned men, maintained whilst he was in the Tower for their worth and various literature.

RICHARD TILLESLEY, Son of Tho. Tillesley of Eccleshall in Staffordshire by Catherine his Wife⁴⁸⁷ Daughter of Rich. Barker of Shropshire, was born in the City of Coventry, entred a Commoner in Ball. coll. in Lent-Term 1597. aged 15, elected Scholar of S. Johns coll. two years after, took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders and became Chaplain to Dr. Buckridge Bishop of Rochester, whose Niece he marrying (viz. Elizabeth Daughter of George Buckridge) was thereby a way made for his preferment. In 1613. he was admitted Bach. of Divinity; about which time being Rector of Kuckstone and Stone in Kent, he resigned his Fellowship. Soon after he proceeded in his faculty and was by the favour of the said Dr. Buckridge made Archdeacon and Prebend (some say Dean but false) of Rochester in the place of Dr. Tho. Sanderson; and higher would he have been promoted had he not unexpectedly been cut off by death. He was a person of great reading and learning, as his writings shew. He was also very devout in the strict observance of all the Church ceremonies, the reasonableness of which, he convinced many that retired to him for satisfaction. He was one of three that undertook to answer Seldens Hist. of Tithes, he and Montague the Law-part and St. Nettles the Rabinical or Judaical. As for that which our author published, it bears this title.

Animadversions on Mr. Seldens History of Tithes, and his review thereof. Lond. 1619. and 21. qu. What else he hath written and published, it appears not, nor any thing besides, only that he dying, to the great reluctancy of all learned men, in the month of Nov. in sixteen hundred twenty and one, was buried in the Choire of the Cath. Church of Rochester, leaving then behind him a Son¹⁶²¹ named John, who was an Infant in 1619. One Elisens Burges whom I shall mention elsewhere, was installed Archdeacon of Rochester in his room, on the 24. of the said month of Nov. in 1621. who continued in that Dignity till the grand rebellion broke out, and after.

FRANCIS MORE, Son of Edw. More Gent. by Elizab. his Wife, Daughter and Heir of one Hall of Tile-⁴⁸⁸berst in Berks, received his first breath at East Hildesley or Hildesley near to Wantage in the said County, where his name yet continues, educated in Grammar learning at Reading, entred a Commoner in S. Johns coll. 1574. or thereabouts, continued there till near Bachelours standing, and then he retired to the Middle Temple; where, after severe encounters had with the crabbed parts of the municipal Laws, he became a Barrester and noted for his great proficiency in his profession and integrity in his dealings. In the latter end of Qu. Elizab. and beginning of K. James he was several times elected a Burges in set in Parliaments, in which he was a frequent Speaker. Afterwards he was Counsellor and under-steward for several years to this University, the members of which confer'd upon him the de-

Cases collected and reported. Lond. 1663. fol. printed from the original in French, that then remained in the hands of Sir Jeff. Palmer Attorney General to K. Ch. 2. which is the same, as I take it, written fairly with the authors own hand in fol. that was lately in the Library of Arth. E. of Anglesey. These cases were abridged by Will. More was a member of that Parliament, as it seems, wherein the Statute concerning charitable uses was made, and was, as 'tis farther added, the Penner thereof. At length paying his last debt to nature on the 20. Nov. in sixteen hundred twenty and one, aged 63. was buried in a Vault under the Church of Great Fawley near to Wantage before-mention'd, in which Vault his posterity (who are Baronets living in that Parish) have been since, and are hitherto interred, as I have been instructed by his Grandson Sir Hen. More Bt. I find another Franc. More to have published certain matters, among which is The sinners guide, or the regiment of a Christian life. Printed 1614. qu. and certain Sermons, but whether this person who was a Divine, was of Oxford University I know not as yet.

FRANCIS MASON, who is worthily stiled Vindex Ecclesie Anglicanae, was born in the County Palatine of Durham and there educated in Gram. learning, began to be conversant with the Oxonians in the beginning of the year 1583. aged 17, and making a hard shift to rub out till he was Bach. of Arts, being the Son of a poor Plebeian, was elected probationer-Fellow of Merton coll. in the latter end of 1586. After he had proceeded in his faculty, he entred into the sacred function, and when full standing, he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences in 1597. About which time he was made Rector of Orford a Market Town near to the Sea-side in Suffolk, Chaplain to K. James 1. (who usually stild him a wise builder in Gods house) and at length upon the death of Rich. Stokes LL. Bach. was installed Archdeacon of Norfolk 18. Decem. 1619. which Dignity the said Stokes had held from the month of Apr. 1587. Our author Mason hath written,

The authority of the Church in making Canons and constitutions concerning things indifferent, &c. Sermon on 1 Cor. 14. 40. Lond. 1607. Ox. 1634. qu. From which, as also from the Epist. dedic. before it, made to his patron Rich. Archb. of Cant. it appears that the author was a zealous conformist to the Ch. of Engl. This Sermon was answered by Anon. in a book entit. The second part of the defence of the Ministers reasons for refusal, &c. See in Tho. Hutton, an. 1639.

Vindication of the Church of England concerning the consecration and ordination of the Bishops, &c. as also of the ordination of Priests and Deacons, in five books. Lond. 1613. fol. Framed in form of a conference between Philodox a Seminary Priest and Orthodox a Minister of the Church of England. From which book it appears that the author was a general-read-Scholar, thorough-pac'd in the councils, and all sorts of Histories, whether divine, civil, or profane. The next year, he, as a greatful Son, sent a copy of it to be reposed in the Library of his tender Parent Mert. coll. with this note at the end of it written with his own hand, —Whereas Mr. (a) Fitzherbert hath lately sent a book from Rome against the most rev. Bishop (b) of Ely, to which he hath annexed an appendix concerning the records and registers by me produced, desiring that some of their discreet Catholics might view and consider whether they be true, or counterfeit: Know therefore that upon the 12. of this present May. an. 1614. his Grace of Canterbury sent for Mr. (c) Colleton the Archpriest, Leake (d) a secular Priest, as also one Jesuit called (e) Lathwait, &c. and shewed unto them the register and other records of his predecessor Matth. Parker, which they perused over and over, and found that the said Parker was (f) consecrated in Lambeth Chappel (and not at the Nags head in Cheapside) by certain Bishops that had been ejected in Qu. Maries reign, &c. This book of the Vindication of the Church of England, coming at length into the hands of Anthony Champney an English man born, a Rom. Cath. Priest and a Doctor of the Sorbon, was by him answered in English and dedicated to George Archb. of Canterbury not without some reproaches and scoffes given to him in the Epistle. But afterwards Champney recollecting himself, thought that he had not sufficiently consulted his own reputation by publishing his answer in English. Wherefore he translated it into Latine, (intit. Traclatus de vocatione Ministrorum. Par. 1618. in oct.) that his pretended victory over Mason, might by this means be spread over all Europe. Soon after our author, to be even with him, translated his own book also, and entitled it Vindicia Ecclesie Anglicanae, &c. and therein interweaves answers to Thom. Fitzherbert Priest, Hen. Fitzsimons Jesuit, Dr. Matth. Kellison, A. Champney, &c. and withal dedicated it to Hen. de Gondy Bishop of Paris, without any aspersions at all thrown upon him. All this he did in the year 1619. or 20. at farthest, but before he could conveniently put it in the Press, he died. Whereupon at the desire of the Archbishop of Cant. Dr. Nath. Brent Warden of Mert. coll. did review it, examine the quotations, compare them with the originals, and at length printed the copy as he had found it under the authors hand, an. 1625. fol. printed again at Lond. 1646. fol. The said author also wrote,

Two Sermons preached at Court concerning Davids adultery and his publick practices, on 2 Sam. 12. ver. 13. Lond. 1621. oct.

The validity of the ordination of the ministers of the reformed Churches beyond the Seas, maintained against the Donatists. Oxon. 1641. qu. Taken, I presume, by the publisher from our authors book intit. A vindication, &c. At length our author Mason surrendring up his pious soul to him that first gave it, (not without the great grief of those who well knew his learning and piety) in the month of Dec. in sixteen hundred twenty and one, was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Orford before-mentioned. Over his grave was soon after a Monument put, with an Inscription thereon, which, for brevity sake, I shall now pass by. In his Archdeaconry of Norf. was installed Tho. Muriel M. A. 30. Dec. 1621. After him was installed Writhington White 19 Oct. 1629. and after him Rob. White Bach. of Div. 23. Sept. 1631. who dying in the times of usurpation, Philip Tenison was installed in his place 24. Aug. 1660. who dying, Edw. Reynolds M. A. and Son to Dr. E. Reynolds B. of Norwich was installed therein 15. Apr. 1661.

HENRY JACOB, was a Kentish man born, entered a Commoner or Butler in S. Maries hall 1579. aged 16, took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders and became beneficed in his own Country, particularly, as I have been informed, at Cheriton, but upon search into that Parish register, wherein are the names of all the Rectors of that Church set down since 1591. H. Jacob. occurs not, as having been perhaps Rector before that time. He was a person most excellently well read in Theological authors, but withal was a most zealous Puritan, or as his Son Henry used to say the first Independent in England. His writings against Francis Johnson a Brownist (exile for Jesus Ch. as he stiles himself) and Tho. Bilson Bishop of Winton. speak him learned. With the former he controverted concerning the Churches and Ministers of England, and with the other concerning Christs sufferings and descension into Hell. Which controversy, though eagerly bandied to and fro between them, yet it was afterwards plyed more hotly in both the Unities, in 1604. and after; where Bilsons doctrine was maintained and held up, yet publicly opposed by many of our Zealots, both at home and abroad. At home by Gabr. Powell a stiff Puritan (mentioned under the year 1607.) and abroad by Hugh Broughton and Rob. Parker, I mean that Robert a Divine, sometimes of Winton in Wilts, who leaving the Nation for conscience sake, died at Denstourgh in Gelderland, in Autumn time or after, an. 1630. leaving behind him a Widdow named Dorothea, and a Son named Thomas, author of De translatione peccatoris. There were two more brethren at least of the separation, who opposed Bilson's doctrine, but their names I cannot now justly tell you. The works of our author Hen. Jacob are these.

Treatise of the sufferings and victory of Christ in the work of our redemption, &c. written against certain errors in these points publicly preached in Lond. 1597. Lond. 1598. oct. The points were (1) That Christ suffered for us the wrath of God, which we may well term the pains of Hell, or hellish sorrows. (2) That Christ after his death on the Cross, went not into Hell in his Soul.

Declaration and opening of certain points, with a sound confirmation of some others, in a treatise entit. The divine beginning, &c. (as before)—Middleburg 1611.

1611. He hath written and published other things, as the Counter poison, &c. which being printed by stealth, or beyond the Seas, are rare to be either seen, or procured. He departed this mortal life, in sixteen hundred twenty and one, or thereabouts, aged 60. years, or more, but where buried, unless in London, where he began to gather a congregation in the year 1616. I cannot tell. He left behind him a Son of both his names, who was afterwards Fellow of Mert. coll. and a prodigy for curious and critical learning, as I shall tell you at large when I come to him.

491. HENRY SAVILE, second Son of Hen. Savile (by Elizab. his Wife Daughter of Rob. Ramsden Gent.) second Son of Joh. Savile of New hall in York sh. Esq; was born at Bradley alias Over-Bradley near to Halifax in the same County, on the last day of Nov. an. 1549. (3. Ed. 6.) made his first entry into this University in the beginning of the year 1561. and then, according to the fashion, had a Tutor to teach him Grammar, and another Dialect, or else one and the same person did both. In the beginning of Lent 1565. he was admitted Bach. of Arts, and forthwith determined to the admiration of his Auditors, who ever after esteemed him a good Philosopher. About that time an election of Bach. Fellows of Merton coll. (then in a very poor condition for good Scholars, as most places in the University were,) being made, he was chosen one of the number, as was Edm. Bunney, afterwards a learned Theologist. In 1570. our author Savile proceeded in his faculty, and read his Ordinaries on the Almagest of Ptolemy. Whereby growing famous for his learning, especially for the Gr. tongue and Mathematicks, (in which last he voluntarily read a Lecture for some time to the Academians;) he was elected Proctor of the University for two years together, with Joh. Underhill of New college, afterwards Rector of that of Lincoln, and Bishop of Oxon. For then, and after, those that executed the Procuratorial office, were elected by the Doctors and Masters of the University for learning, worth, experience, and magnanimous Spirits; but when the Caroline Cicle was made, in 1629. they were elected in their respective Coll. by a few notes. In 1578. he travelled into France and other Countries; and thereupon improving himself in learning, languages, and the knowledge of the World and Men, became a most accomplished person at his return. About that time he was instituted Tutor to Q. Elizab. for the Gr. tongue, who taking a liking to his parts and personage, was not only the sooner made Warden of Merton coll. tho a noted person. (Bunney before-mentioned) was elected with him and presented to the Archb. of Cant. for confirmation; but also, by her favour, was made Provost of Eaton coll. in the year 1596. upon the promotion of Dr. Will. Day to the See of Winton. While he governed the former, which was 36 years, Summâ curâ (as tis (a) said) & diligentiâ fere plusquam humanâ perdis & pernox, he made it his chief endeavours, (tho troubled with the cumbrances of Marriage) to improve it with riches and literature. For the effecting of the last, he always made choice of the best Scholars at the usual elections of Bach. Fellows. In the first that he made after he was Warden, which consisted but of four persons, were Hen. Cusse and Franc. Mason elected, both noted for their learning, tho the first was unfortunate. In the last, about three years before his death, which consisted of six; four of them (whereof two were afterwards Bishops) were esteemed eminent, namely Dr. Reynolds of Norwich, Dr. Earl of Salisbury, John Doughty and Alex. Fisher: the last of which, tho he hath published nothing, yet in some respects he was as able as any of the rest so to do, had not a weak and timorous Spirit stood in his way. Our author Savile also took as much care as he could to place noted men in Eaton college; among whom were Tho. Allen, Joh. Hales, Tho. Savile, and Jonas Mountague, all of Mert. coll. the last of which (whom he made Usher of the School there) helped him, as Allen and Hales did, in the edition of St. Chrysostome, as I shall tell you elsewhere. When K. Jam. 1. came to the Crown he had a great respect for Mr. Savile and his learning, and as I have heard our Ancients say, he would have advanced him to a higher place, either in Church or State, but he refused it, and only accepted of the Honour of Knight-hood from him at Windsore, 21. Sept. 1604. Much about which time Henry his only Son and Heir dying, and no hopes left of propagating his Name, and of settling a Family, he bestowed much of his wealth in publishing books, and in founding two Lectures in this University, which will make his memory honourable not only among the learned, but the righteous for ever, even till the general conflagration shall consume all books and learning. Many are the Encomiums given of him by divers authors, which, if I should enumerate, may make a Manual. In one (b) place he is stiled, Musarum Patronus, Mœcenas literarum, fortunarumque Mertonensium verè Pater, &c. In another (c) he is characterized by a zealous Rom. Cath. who seldom or never speaks well of a Protestant, (or at least by Dr. W. Bishop the publisher of his book,) to be Vir Gracè & Latine perinde doctus, veneranda Antiquitatis (ut videtur) tam exquisitus indagator tam ingenuus & liberalis editor. To pass by the noble and generous characters given of him by Isaac (d) Casaubon, Joh. (e) Boysius, Josiah (f) Mercerus, Marc. (g) Meibomius, Jos. (h) Scaliger and others, (among whom must not be forgotten the learned Rich. Mountague, who stiles (i) him, The Magazine of all Learning;) I shall proceed to make mention of those things that he hath published and written, which are these following.

Learned notes on, and a translation into English of, Corn. Tacitus his (1) End of Nero and beginning of Galba. (2) Four books of Histories. (3) Life of Agricola. Lond. 1581. 98. &c. fol. A rare translation it is, and the work (k) of a very great Master indeed, both in our tongue, and that story. For if we consider the difficulty of the original, and the age wherein the Translator lived, is both for the exactness of the version, and the chastity of the language, one of the most accurate and perfect translations, that ever were made into English. The said notes were put into Latin by Jf. Gruter, and printed at Amsterdam, 1649. in tw.

fooleries. Whereby, tho I wot not, by what hard fortune of this Island, it is come to pass, that your Ancestors (most gracious Queen) most puissant Princes, who embracing a great part of this our World within their Empire, did easily overgo all the Kings of their time in the Glory of great atchievements, now destitute of (as it were) the light of brave Wits, do lie unknown and unregarded, &c. These words being uttered by a Gent. excellently learned, to a Sovereign Queen excellently understanding, and in print, were then understood, and with'd for, by Historians and curious Men, to have this meaning, That the Majesty of handling our History might once equal the Majesty of the argument. This was their opinion, and the publisher (Great Savile) gave hopes to them that he should be the Man that would do it. All the learned of England were erected, and full of expectation, but at length were grieved to find it vain. Somewhat notwithstanding he is said to have attempted in that argument, by making searches in the Tower of London for furniture out of the Records; but, if he did any such thing, whether impatient of the harsh and dusty rudeness of the subject, or despairing that he could deal so truly as the honour and splendour of his name, and as the nature of the work, required; he desisted, converting all his cares to the edition of St. Chrysostome in Greek. Thus was he carried away by speculation of things Divine, as it were in a Chariot of fire, from this other immortal office to his native Country. He also carefully collected the best copies of books, written by St. Chrysostome, from various parts of the World, and employed learned men to transcribe, and make annotations on, them. Which being done, he printed them at his own charge in a most beautiful edition, bearing this title, S. Johannis Chrysostomi opera Græcè, octo voluminibus. Printed in Eaton coll. 1613. fol. On several parts of which he put learned notes, besides what the profound Joh. Boyse, Andr. Downes, Tho. Allen, &c. had done. The whole charge of which edition, and for the payment of certain Scholars employed beyond the Seas for the obtaining of the best Exemplars of that author, cost him more than 8000 l. But the copy as soon as 'twas finish'd, coming into the hands of a learned French Jesuit, named Fronto Duceus of Bordeaux, he mostly translated it into Latin. Which being so done, he printed it in Gr. and Lat. at Paris in 5 volumes, at the charges of the Bishops and Clergy of France, an. 1621. The sixth vol. was put out by him in 1624. and the other volumes (four in number) came out before at different times at Heidelberg, by other hands, as it seems. Sir Hen. Savile also procured six Manuscript copies of Bradwardins book, De causa Dei, to be compared and corrected to his great charge: and afterwards published a true copy thereof under this title, Thoma Bradwardini Archiep. olim Cantuariensis, De causa Dei, contra Pelagium, & de virtute causarum, ad suos Mertonenses. lib. 3. Lond. 1618. fol. Before which Sir Henry put of his own writing, Vita Thoma Bradwardini Archiep. olim Cantuariensis. He also wrote and was author of, Prælectiones tresdecem in principium elementorum Euclidis Oxonia habitæ, an. 1620. Oxon. 1621. qu. Some of which Lectures he read when he was a Junior Master, as I have before mentioned.

MSS. in the Bodleian Lib.

Concerning the last of these, John Thornborough B. of Bristow did write a book about the same time. Our author Savile also did publish Nazianzen's Stelitenticks, Zenophon's Institution of Cyrus, &c. and had many choice Exemplars in his Library, which were by others published as from Bibliotheca Saviliana. He also translated into elegant Lat. K. James the first his Apology for the Oath of Allegiance: Which flying in that dress as far as Rome, was by the Pope and the Conclave sent to Francis Suarez at Salamanca, with a command to answer it. When he had perfected the work, which he calls Defensio fidei Catholica, &c. cum responsione ad Apologiam pro juramento fidelitatis, &c. it was transmitted to Rome for a view of the Inquisitors, who blotted out what they pleased, and added whatsoever might advance the Pope's power. Which matter Joh. Salkeld, his his Assistant when he wrote at Salamanca, did often profess when he came over to the Church of England, and lived for some time in the House of Dr. King Bishop of London, that the good old Man Suarez (whose piety and charity he magnified much) did not only disavow, but detest it. However printed it was, (at Colen, I think, an. 1614.) but so soon as any of the copies came into England, one was burnt in detestation of the fact, by publick command. Sir Hen. Savile also made several notes with his Pen in many of his books in his choice Library, particularly on Eusebius his Ecclesiastical History, made use of by Hen. Valesius in his edition of that History, an. 1659. as he'll tell you more at large, if you'll consult the Preface to that elaborate work. He also made several notes on those books which he gave to the Mathematical Library in the School-Tower, and on others which I have seen. Divers of his Tracts of various subjects in MS. were greedily procured after his death (sometimes also while he lived) by industrious and ingenious Scholars, which do now, or at least did lately, go from hand to hand. At length, after he had lived beyond the age of Man, and had done many noble and generous works for the benefit of learning, he departed this mortal life in Eaton coll. near to Windsore, on the nineteenth day of Febr. in sixteen hundred twenty and one, and was buried in the Chappel there, near to the body of Henry his Son, (who died 1604. aged 8 years,) leaving behind him one only daughter named Elizabeth, (begotten on the body of his Wife Margaret, Daughter of George Dacres of Cheshunt in Hertsfordshire;) who was married to Sir Jo. Sedley of Kent Baronet. Soon after, the News of his death being sent to Oxon, the Vicechancellour and Doctors ordered a Speech to be publickly spoken to the Academians in memory of so worthy a Benefactor and Scholar as Sir Henry was. Which being accordingly done by Tho. Goffe of Ch. Ch. the Speech was shortly after made publick, with many copies of verses made by the best Poets of the University, added to it, with this title, Ultima Linia Savilii. Oxon. 1622. qu. These things being done, was a black Marble stone laid over his grave on the south side of the Communion Table in the said Chappel of Eaton coll. and a most sumptuous honorary monument to his memory, on the south wall, at the upper end of the Chaire of Merton coll. the inscription on which you may see (a) elsewhere. In the Provostship of Eaton coll. succeeded Tho. Murray a Scot, Tutor and Secretary to Prince Charles, (afterwards K. Ch. 1.) who died, as one (b) observes, on the first day of Apr. 1623. being then newly cut for the Stone, and was buried in the Chap. of that Coll. whose Epitaph there saith that he died on the ninth day of the same month, aged 59 years. Afterwards the King designed (c) Sir Will. Beecher to succeed, but by Friends, and many intreaties, Sir Hen. Wotton had that place conferred on him. In the Wardenship of Mert. coll. succeeded Nath. Brent LL. D. afterwards a Knight, who minding wealth and the settling a Family more than generous actions, that College did nothing near so well flourish as under the Government of Sir Henry.

ROGER HACKET, an eminent Theologist in the time he lived, was born in the Parish of St. James within the City of London, educated in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. in 1577. took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders, and soon after was cried up for an eminent Preacher. In 1591. or thereabouts, he was made Rector of North-Crowley in Bucks And four years after proceeded in Divinity. All that I have yet seen of his writing or publication, are only

Several Sermons, viz. (1) Serm. at Pauls Cross, on 1 Sam. 11. 5, 6, 7. Oxon. 1591. oct. dedic. to the Lord Norris. (2) Serm. on 2 Cor. 5. 20, 21. Lond. 1593. oct. (3) A Marriage present, on Gen. 2. 22. Lond. 1607. qu. (4) Sick mans glass, on Isaiah 30. 1, 2, 3. Lond. 1607. qu. (5) Serm. on Psal. 122. 6. &c. He concluded his last day in sixteen hundred twenty and one, or thereabouts, (for in 1622. were several books conveyed into the publick Library at Oxon, by his bequest,) and was buried, as it seems, in his Church of North-Crowley before-mentioned.

HERBERT CROFT, Son of Edw. Croft Esq; descended from an antient and gentile family of his name living at Croft Castle in Herefordshire, was educated in Academicals in Ch. Ch. as his Son Col. Sir Will. Croft use to say, tho his name occurs not in the Matricula, which makes me think that his stay was short there. Afterwards he married, was a Parliament man in the latter end of Qu. Eliz. and in 1603. received the honour of Knighthood from K. Jam. 1. at Theobalds, being then a person of repute in his own country. At length being full weary of the vanities and fooleries of this world, did retire to Doway in Flanders, and there was by letters of confraternity, dated in the beginning of Feb. (1617) received among the Brethren in the coll. of English Benedictines: who appointing him a little cell within the ambits of their house, spent the remainder of his days therein in strict devotion and religious exercise. After his settlement there he wrote, Letters perswasive to his wife and children in England, to take upon them the catholick religion.

Arguments to shew that the Rom. Church is a true Church—written against Dr. R. Field his Four books of the Church.

Reply to the answer (c) of his Daughter M. C. (Mary Croft) which she made to a Paper of his sent to her, concerning the Rom. Church. At the end of it is a little thing entit. The four ministers of Charinton gag'd by four propositions made to the Lord Baron of Espicelliere of the religion pretended: And presented on S. Martins day to du Moulin in his house, and since to DuRand and Mestrezat. All these were published by Sir Herb. Croft at Doway, about 1619. in tw. containing 255. pages. There were but eight copies printed, viz. one for himself, now in the libr. of the English Benedictines at that place, formerly sent to me by a (d) Brother of that order, purposely to be perused for a time, and then to be returned: who for religion sake, and in contempt of the world hath denied the inheritance of an Estate of at least three thousand pounds per. an. Another copy was printed for Sir Herberts wife and the rest for his children, but all without a title, only dedicated to his wife and children, with a short Epistle before them beginning thus. I would have you know that although this ensuing discourse cometh to you in print, &c. The beginning of the book it self is this, When it had pleased almighty God, in his great mercy, even after above 53. years of my mispent life, &c. At length after he had macerated his body with fasting, hardship, and devotion, surrendered up his pious Soul to the Almighty, on the 10 Apr. (according to the account there followed) in sixteen hundred twenty and two, and was buried in the Chappel or Church belonging to the said English Benedictines at Doway. Soon after was a monument put over his grave, with an inscription thereon, (a copy of it you may (e) elsewhere see) in which he is stiled vir prudens, fortis, nobilis, & patria libertatis amantissimus, &c. He left behind him a Son of both his names, sometimes a R. Catholick, but afterwards a zealous Protestant and a Bishop, of whom I shall hereafter make mention in his due place.

JOHN RANDALL, sometimes a frequent and painful preacher in the City of London, was born at Missenden in Bucks sent by his relations to S. Maries hall, in 1581. being then very young, where spending some time in Trivial learning, was afterwards translated to Trinity coll. and, as a member thereof, took the degree of Bach. of Arts, which he completed by determination. In 1587. July 6. he was elected Fellow of Lincoln coll. and two years after proceeded in his faculty. About that time entering into the sacred function, he became one of the most noted preachers in the University. In 1598. he was admitted Bach. of Divinity, and the year after resigning his fellowship, was made about that time Rector of the Church of S. Andrews Hubart in Little Eastcheap in London; where, after some time, he became so great a labourer in Gods vineyard by his frequent and constant work in the ministry, as well in resolving of doubts and cases of conscience as in preaching and lecturing, that he went beyond his brethren in that City to the wonder of all. But greater was the wonder, especially to those of his parish and neighbourhood, that this poor man, who was for the most part strangely afflicted with sickness, should undergo his duty so strictly, and preach so many Sermons as he did for comfort and support in troubles. This indeed did sound highly to his merit, and plainly shewed that his great learning and parts could not be subdued with the pitiful afflictions here below. He was accounted a judicious, orthodox, and holy man, and by some a zealous and innocent puritan, of a harmless life and conversation, and one that was solely fram'd to do good acts. His works are these.

Several Sermons as (1) The necessity of righteousness, on Mat. 5. 20. Lond. 1622. and 1640. qu. (2) Description of fleshly lusts, on 1 Pet. 2. 11, 12. Lond. 1622. and 40. qu. (3) S. Pauls triumph, &c. eleven Sermons on Rom. 8. 38. 39. Lond. 1623. &c. qu. published by Will. Holbrook preacher.

The great mystery of godliness: or, a treatise opening unto us what God is and Christ is. Lond. 1624. qu. there again 1640. third edit.

Treatise concerning the Sacraments. Lond. 1630. qu. &c.

Catechistical Lectures (in number 23.) upon the Sacrament of the Lords Supper. Lond. 1630. qu. &c.

Nine and twenty lectures of the Church, for support of the same in these times, &c. Ibid. 1631. &c. qu. besides other things fit for the press, as one, shewing what a true visible Church is, and another what Predestination is. He concluded his last day in the beginning of June in sixteen hundred twenty and two, being then about 54. years of age, and was buried in the Church of S. Andrew before mentioned. By his last will and testament, he bequeathed a tenement to Linc. coll. called Ship hall, situated on the west side of that Street, antiently called Schediars Street, now commonly called S. Mary hall lane, in Oxon. The picture of this Mr. Randall drawn to the life when he was fellow of Linc. coll. is, or at least was lately, hanging in the Common room of that house.

JOHN OWEN, or Audoenus as some call him, the most noted Epigrammatist in the age he lived, was born⁴⁹⁵ at Armon in Caernarvonshire, educated in Wykeham's School, admitted perpetual Fellow of New coll. after he had served two years of Probation there, in 1584. took the degree of Bach. of Civil Law in 1590. and leaving his fellowship the year after, taught School (as some of his antient country men that remember him, have told me) at Tryleg near to Monmouth, and at Warwick (as the tradition goes there among the Schoolmasters) in the School founded by K. Hen. 8. in the place of one Tho. Hall, about the year 1594. He was a person endowed with several gifts, especially with the faculty of Poetry, which hath made him famous for those books of Epigrams, that he hath published, wherein an ingenious liberty of joking being by him used, was, and is now with some, especially foreigners, not a little pleasing and delightful. But that which I must farther note of him is, that being always troubled with the disease that attends Poets (indigence) he was received into the patronage of his countryman and Kinsman Dr. Jo. Williams B. of Lincoln and L. Keeper of the great Seal, who for several years exhibited to his wants. He hath written, Epigrammatum lib. 3. ad Mariam Nevill comitis Dorcestria filiam dicati. Lond. 1606. oct. printed twice that year.

Epigrammatum lib. singularis; ad doctiss. Heroinam D. Arbellam Stewart.

Epigram. lib. 3. ad Hen. Principem Cambriae duce; ad Carolum Ebor. unius.

Epigram. ad tres Mæcenates libri tres. Ad Car. Noel Eq. & Baronetum, unius. Ad Gul. Sedley Eq. & Bar. alter. Ad Rog. Owen Eq. aur. tertius.

Monastica quædam Ethica & Politica veterum sapientum.

All which coming out as successive additions to the several editions of the three first books of Epigrams, were at length published all in one vol. in oct. and twelves, not only in England but beyond the Seas. In the year 1619. Joh. Vicars Usher of Ch. Church hospital in London and a puritanical Poet having selected many of them from several of the books that were then extant, did translate them into Engl. verse and were that year printed at London in oct. Thomas Pecke also of the Inner Temple Gent. did translate 600. of the said Epigrams in Eng. verse, which were printed with Martial de spectaculis, or of the rarities to be seen in Rome, and with the most select Epigr. of Sir Th. More: To which is annexed a Century of Heroick Epigrams, &c. All published under the general title of Parnassi puerperium, at Lond.

(c) The said Answer, as Sir Herb. Crofts saith, was penned for her by a Protestant Minister. (d) Edw. Sheldon second Son of Will. Sheldon of Boely Esq; (e) In Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Ox. lib. 2. p. 269. b.

1659. in oct. And lastly Tho. Harvey hath Englished most, or all of them; but these I have not yet seen. The first Latin impressions of the author Owen, being greedily bought, and taken into the hands of all ingenious Scholars, and forthwith conveyed beyond the Seas, they came at length into the hands of the Romish Inquisitors after Heretical matters in printed books, who finding dangerous things in them, especially these two verses following, the book was put into the Index expurgatorius.

An Petrus fuerit Roma, sub iudice lis est.

Simonem Roma, nemo fuisse negat.

For which verses, and others of the like nature, Owen's Uncle, who was a Papist, or at least Popishly affected, (from whom he expected Legacies,) dashed his name out from his last Will and Testament; which was the chief reason, that he ever after lived in a poor condition. He died in sixteen hundred twenty and two, and was buried in St. Pauls Cathedral within the City of London, at the charge of the before-mentioned Dr. Williams; who also, soon after, caused a monument to be erected to his memory on a pillar next to the Consistory stairs, with his Effigies (a shoulder-piece in brats) crown'd with Laurel, and six verses to be engraven under it. The two first of which runs thus:

Parva tibi statua est, quia parvaatura, supellex

Parva, volat parvus magna per ora liber.

The rest you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 144. a. where the Reader is to note that by the error of the Printer, 'tis said that Joh. Owen died 1623. and not in 1622. as before 'tis told you. As for the generosity of Dr. Williams done to the memory of this little Poet, Richard Bruch hath an Epigram in his Epigrammatum Hecatomtades dug. Lond. 1627. oct. num. 3. But that which I must note of him farther is, that whereas he had made many Epigrams on several People, so but few were made on, or written to, him. Among which few, one was written by Joh. (a) Stradling, and another by Joh. Dunbar (b) a Scot.

495. CLEMENT EDMONDS, Son of Sir Tho. Edmonds Comptroller of the Kings household, was born in Shropshire, (at Shrawardine, as 'tis said,) became either Clerk or Chorister of Allsouls coll. in 1585. aged 19. took one degree in Arts, and then was chosen Fellow of that house 1590. Four years after he proceeded in that Faculty, and then leaving the coll. was mostly by his Fathers endeavours, made successively Secretary, as 'tis said, for the French tongue to Q. Elizab. about 1601. Remembrancer of the City of London, Master of the Requests, Muster-Master at Brill in Zeland, one of the Clerks of the Council, and in 1617. a Knight. He was a learned person, was generally skill'd in all Arts and Sciences, and famous as well for military, as for politick affairs, and therefore esteemed by all an ornament to his degree and profession. He hath written and published, Observations upon the five first books of Cæsars commentaries, &c. Lond. 1600. fol.

Observat. on the sixth and seventh book of Cæsars com. Lond. 1600. fol.

Observat. on Cæsars com. of the Civil Wars, in 3 books Lond. 1609. fol. On which, or the former observat. Ben. Johnson (c) hath two Epigrams. All, or most of, these observations, are reprinted with an addition of an eighth commentary on the Wars of Gallia, written by A. Hircius Panfa, beginning where Cæsar left, and deducing the History to the time of the Civil Wars; with our authors (Edmonds) short observations upon them. — Printed at the Survey, in the Strand, near to London, 1677. fol. Before which edition is the life of Cæsar (with an account of his Medals) revised, corrected, and enlarged. In 1565. Arthur Golding of London published an English translation of Cæsars commentaries, but whether he made any observations or notes on them, I have now forgot. Our learned author Sir Clem. Edmonds died within the Parish of St. Martin in the Fields near to London, on the twelfth (d) day of Octob. in sixteen hundred twenty and two, and was buried in the little Chappel belonging to his Mannour of Preston near to the ancient Borough of Northampton. Over his grave is a comely mon. erected, having an English and a Lat. epitaph inscribed thereon. The last of which being already (e) printed, you shall therefore have the other, as most proper for this place. Here lyeth Sir Clement Edmonds Knight, one of the Clerks of his Majesties most Honourable Privy Council. His dextrous Pen made him worthily esteemed excellent in his own vocation; and in the art Military, by Cæsars confession, an understanding Souldier. He lived faithfully, industrious in his place, and died religiously constant in the belief of the resurrection, &c. One Sir Tho. Edmonds Knight (a Member of the Privy Council) died in Nov. 1639. and left behind him a Daughter named Muriel, the Wife of Rob. Mildmay Esq. Which Sir Thomas, I take to be the same with Tho. Edmonds, (Brother to Sir Clem.) who being made Treasurer of the Kings household 19. of Jan. 1617. was about that time sent by his Majesty Embassadour to Bruxells, and elsewhere.

NICHOLAS BYFIELD, Son of Rich. Byfield, 499: (who became Minister of Stratford upon Aven, in Jan. 1596.) was born (f) in Warwickshire, became a Butler or a Servitor of Exeter coll. in Lent-Term, an. 1596. aged 17. at least, continued under a severe discipline more than 4 years, but never took a degree. Afterwards entering into the Sacred Function, he left the University, and had intentions to go into Ireland to obtain preferment in the Church, but at Chester, in his way thither, he was, upon the delivery of a noted Sermon at that place, invited to be Pastor of St. Peters Church there: Which invitation being esteemed by him as a great providence, he willingly accepted. So that continuing there several years a constant Preacher, was much followed and admired by the precise party, who esteemed his preaching profitable, and his life pious. He was a strict observer of the Lords day at that place, and preached and wrote for the sincere observance of it, which caused some Pens to be active against him, particularly that of Edm. Breerwood, who being a native of that City, was sometimes his auditor. At length being called thence, he had the Benefice of Istleworth in Middlesex confer'd on him, where he remained to his dying day. He was a person, in the opinion of the Zealots, of profound judgment, strong memory, sharp wit, quick invention, and of unwearied industry. Also that in his Ministry he was powerful, and that unto all turns and upon all occasions, not only at Chester, but at Istleworth, where his preaching and expounding were very frequent, &c. The books that he hath written are these.

The practice of Christianity: or, an Epitome of Mr. Rich. Rogers's seven treatises. — The said Treatises were published by Mr. Rogers 1610. and were epitomized by this Nicholas, (as it seems,) and not by Richard, Byfield, as some think.

Several Sermons. As (1) On Psal. 72. 18, 19. (2) On Joh. 5. 28, 29. &c. 'Tis commonly reported that this person died at Istleworth before-mentioned, in sixteen hundred twenty at two: Which, if true, his writings and works shew him (being not then above 44 years of age) to have been a person of great parts, industry and readiness. He left behind him a Son named Adoniram Byfield, a most zealous and forward Brother for the Cause, of whom I shall make mention in R. Byfield in the 2 vol. of this work.

NICHOLAS FULLER, the most admired Critick of his time, Son of Rob. Ful. a French-man born, (or at least a borderer on France, and by profession a Carver of wood or stone,) by Catherine his Wife, descended from the ancient and worshipful house of the Cressets of Shropshire, was born in the ancient Borough of Sou-thampton, educated in Lat. and Gr. in the Free-School there, first under John Hurloke, then under Dr. Hadrian Saravia. At length being made ripe for the University, he was taken from School into the Family of Dr. Rob. Horne B. of Winchester, where spending some time in study, was by him made his Secretary, and after his death was continued in that office under Dr. Joh. Watson his Successor, at the request of Dr. W. Barlow Brother-in-Law to Horne. But Watson dying also after he had sat three years, our author Fuller, as being weary of civil affairs, retired to his home with a resolution to follow those studies which his Genie did then very much direct him to. But before he was settled, he was invited to instruct in juvenile learning Henry, William, and Oliver, Wallop, the Sons of a Knight of Hampshire. With the two former he afterwards went as a Tutor to this University, and in the beginning of Mich. Term, 1584. they were all matriculated as Members of St. Johns coll. our author Fuller being then 27 years of age. But his Pupils remaining there but a little while, William receded to his home, and our author with Hen. Wallop transited themselves to Hart hall; where, without any neglect of his precious time, he improved his studies to a miracle; took both the degrees in Arts, and then retired to his own Country. At length taking the Sacred Function upon him, he became Rector of a small Village called Aldington alias Allington near to Amesbury in Wils. but so small was his Benefice, that it could not maintain an ingenious person in common necessities. Here he was as a Candle put under a Bushel, so private was his place and employment, yet so dear were his studies to him, that by passing through all difficulties, he attained to so great a proficiency in the Tongues, and was so happy in pitching upon useful difficulties, tending to the understanding of the Scripture, that he surpassed all Criticks of his time. Afterwards he was made Prebendary of Ulfcomb in the Church of Salisbury, and Rector of Bishops-Waltham in Hampshire: Which last he obtained, as 'tis said, by the gift of Dr. Andrews B. of Winton. This most renowned person hath written these things following.

Miscellanea Theologica. lib. 3. Heidelb. 1612. oct. To which he added a fourth book, published with the former three at Oxon. 1616. and at Lond. 1617. qu. But these Miscellanies coming soon after into the hands of Joh. Drusius an old Belgian Critick, (whom I have before mentioned,) he grew angry and jealous, as one (*) tells us, that he should be out-shined in his own sphere. Whereupon he spared not to cast some drops of ink upon him for being his Plagiary, and taking his best notes from him without any acknowledgment. But our author knowing himself guiltless, as having never seen Drusius his works, added a fifth and sixth book to the former, intit.

Miscellanea Sacra, cum Apologia contra V. Cl. Joh. Drusium. Lugd. Bat. 1622. qu. and at Argent. 1650. &c. All which Miscellanies are remitted into the ninth vol. of the Criticks, and scattered and dispersed throughout the whole work of M. Poole's Synopsis. He hath also written, Exposition of Rabbi Mordochie Nathans Hebr. roots, with notes upon it. — MS. in the Archives of Bodley's Library. Which book doth shew his excellent skill in the Hebrew, and in other Philological learning.

Lexicon. — MS. Which, had he lived, he would, with his Exposition, have published. At length breathing out his divine Soul at Allington before-mentioned, about the tenth day of Febr. in sixteen hundred twenty and two, 1623, was buried in the middle of the Chancel of the Church there, on the 13. of the same month, and thereupon his Prebendship of Sarum was conferred on one Tho. Clerk, 28. Apr. 1623. Besides this Nich. Fuller, was another of both his names and time, Son of Nich. Fuller of the City of London Merchant, younger Son of Thom. Fuller of Neats hall in the Isle of Shepy; which Nich. having received education in one of the Universities, (in Cambridge as it seems, where he was a Benefactor to Eman. coll.) went afterwards to Grays Inn, of which he was at length a Counsellour of note, and a Bencher. But being always looked upon as a noted Puritan, and Champion of the Nonconformists, pleaded in behalf of his two Clients Tho. Lad and Rich. Maunsell, (who had been imprisoned by the High Commission,) and endeavoured to prove that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners had no power by virtue of their Commission to imprison, to put to the Oath ex officio, or to fine any of his Majesty's Subjects. Whereupon a legal advantage being given to Archb. Bancroft, Fuller was imprisoned by him, and continued in custody several years. He hath written, An argument in the case of Tho. Lad and Rich. Maunsell his Clients, proving that Ecclesiastical Commissioners have not power by virtue of their Commission to imprison, to put to the Oath ex officio, or to fine any of his Majesty's Subjects. Lond. 1607. and 1641. qu. He died in durance on the 23. of Feb. 1619. aged 76 years, and was buried towards the east end of the south Isle joyning to the Church of Thatcham in Berks, (in which Parish his Seat called Chamber-house is situated,) leaving then behind him two Sons, Nicholas and Daniel, besides Daughters. Nicholas, who had been a Student in Queens coll. in this Univ. of Oxon, was a Knight while his Father lived, but dying 30. of July 1621. was buried near to the grave of his said Father.

JOHN COMBACH (Combachius) was born in 499. Weiteraw a part of Germany, educated in the Academy of Marpurg within the dominion of the Landgrave of Hesse, retired to Oxon to compleat that learning which he had begun in his own Country, about 1608. and the next year I find him a Sojournour of Exeter college, where he was then noted to be a very good Philosophical Disputant, and a great admirer of Holland and Prideaux, especially the last. After he had laid the foundation of one or more books there, he retired to Marpurg, of which, being M. of A. he became Ordinary Professor of Philosophy thereof, and much fam'd for the books that he published in that Faculty. Among which are some of these following.

Antidotum oppositum M. Joh. Hesselbeinio, in quo eprisce Philosophia & Scholasticorum doctrina, 1. Formarum divisio eruitur. 2. Propriorum communicatio destruitur, &c. Marpurg. Catorum 1608. oct.

Antidoti lib. 2. circa doctrinam partium integranium. Marp. Cat. 1608. oct.

Metaphysicorum lib. singularis. Marp. Cat. 1613. 20. oct. &c. Dedicated, by the first Epistle before it, to the Vichancellour, Heads of Colleges and Halls in Oxon, and the rest of his favourers there. The 2 Epist. is written to his honoured Friend Dr. Joh. Prideaux Rector of Exeter coll.

have not yet seen. While he studied in Exeter college (where he contracted friendship with Will. Helme the Subrector, a man of rare piety, and with G. Hakewell R. Vilmaine and others) studied also one of his Countrymen, a quick Disputant, who writes himself Henr. Petreus, afterwards a learned man, Doctor of Philosophy and Physick and Dean of the faculty of Philosophy at Marpurg for a time, about 1613.

500. WILLIAM PEMBLE, the Son of a minister of Gods word was born in Kent, (at Egerton as I have been informed) sent to Magd. coll. in the beginning of the year 1610. aged 18 where continuing a severe student (under the tuition of R. Capell) till after he had compleated the degree of Bach. by determination, which was in Lent 1613. he retired to Magd. hall adjoining, became a noted reader and a tutor there, took the degree of M. of A. entred into sacred Orders, made Div. reader of that house, became a famous preacher, a well studied Artist, a skilful Linguist, a good Orator, an expert Mathematician and an ornament to the Society among whom he lived. All which accomplishments were knit together in a body of about 32 years of age, which had it lived to the age of man, might have proved a prodigy of learning. Adrian Heereboord sometimes professor of Philosophy in the University of Leyden, is very profuse in his commendations of this our author and his works; and good reason he hath for so doing, for in his book entit (g) Maletemata Philosophica (wherein he takes upon him to confute the commonly entertained and old Aristotelian opinion asserting the substantiality of the vegetative and sensitive Souls to be different and distinct from that of matter) he hath taken a great quantity from them, especially in his four disputations De formis, which are mostly composed from our author Pemble's book De formarum origine. The works of the said W. Pemble are these.

Vindicia gratia: A plea for grace, more especially the grace of faith. Ox. 1629. qu. (sec. edit.)

Vindicia fidei: A treatise of justification by faith. Ox. 1625. qu. published by Joh. Gere sometimes M. A. of Magd. hall. Our authors mind did run so much upon this subject, that he said, when he was upon his death bed, that he would dye in it, viz. in his perswasion of justification by righteousness of Christ.

1623. Introduction to Geography. Ox. 1685. qu. At length our author (a zealous Calvinist) retiring to the house of the before-mention'd Rich. Capell minister of Eastington alias Easton near to the City of Gloucester to make some continuance there for the sake of study and health, died of a burning Feaver in sixteen hundred twenty and three, and was buried in the yard under the great Yew-Tree, on the north side of Eastington Church. Over his Grave was a stone soon after laid, with these words engrav'd thereon. Here lyeth the body of William Pemble master of Arts and preacher, who died 14 Apr. an. 1623.

501. JOHN SPRINT, Son of Dr. Joh. Sprint, descended from those of his name living in the City of Bristol, was born, as I conceive, there, or in Glocestershire near to it, elected Student of Ch. Ch. in 1592. took the degrees in Arts, and some time after became Vicar of Thornbury in the said county. Thence he removed to London, was cried up by the Citizens for a godly and frequent preacher and by them much followed, but was cut off in the prime of his years when great matters were expected from him. He was a grave and pious Divine, yet for the most part disaffected to the ceremonies of the Church of England while he continued at Thornbury. At length upon the gentle perswasions of Mr. Sam. Burton Archdeacon of Glouc. he did not only conform, but was a great instrument in perswading others to do the like by a book that he wrote and published call'd Cassander Anglicus, which I shall anon mention. His works are these.

The Christians sword and buckler; or, a letter sent to a man seven years grievously afflicted in conscience and fearfully troubled in mind, &c. Lond. 1638. oct. These are all the pieces I think that he hath written, which are published, and therefore I shall only let the reader know that he was buried within the precincts of the Church of S. Anne situated in the place called the Blackfriars, in London (of which he seems to have been Minister or Lecturer) on the seventh of May in sixteen hundred twenty and three. See more of him in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. 1623. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 309. b. His Father Dr. Sprint, who was Dean of Bristol and a frequent preacher (but a Calvinist) I shall mention more at large in the Fasts, under the year 1574. not as a Writer but as a D. of D. and rich Dignitary.

PHILIP CLIVER, (Cluverius) the Son of a maker or coynor of money, was born at Danzick the chief town of the province of Prussia in Poland, but descended from an ancient and gentile family of his name living in the Dutchie of Bremen in Lower Saxony, instructed in his puerile years at home, in his youthful in the royal Court of Poland, where he learned among the Courtiers the exact speaking of the Polish tongue and their manners. Thence his Father sent him into Germany, where he received a command from him to apply his mind solely to the study of the Civil Law. Whereupon he journeyed to Leyden in Holland and did endeavour to follow it; but his Genie being naturally enclined to Geography, he followed for altogether that study, especially upon the perswasions of Joseph Scaliger, who had perused his Table of Italy, which he had composed while he was a youth in Poland. Thence, partly to see the world, but more for the conversation of Just. Lipsius, he took a journey into Brabant, but missing him, was dispoiled by thieves, who left him in a manner naked. Thence he returned to Leyden, and afterwards went into Bohemia and Hungarie, where coming to the knowledge of one Popel a Baron who had been closely confined by the Emperor for some misdemeanours, did translate his Apologie (written in his own defence) into the Latine tongue. Which coming to the ear of the Emperour, Cluver was thereupon imprisoned. Afterwards, being set at liberty, he travelled into Scotland, England, France, Germany and Italy. In England his chief place of residence was in this University, particularly in Exter coll. of which he became a sojournour for the sake of Holland and Prideaux in 1609. age 29, where being settled he wrote his book De tribus Rhæni alveis, as I shall tell you anon. In Italy he became acquainted with some of the Cardinals, who held him in great esteem for his curious and exact knowledge in Geography, the Greek and Latine tongues, and for his marvellous knowledge in the Dutch, German, French, Italian, Bohemian, Hungarian, Polonian and British Language. Afterwards he returned to Oxon again, being then highly valued by Mr. Prideaux for one or more of his things then published; and had offers of promotion tender'd unto him. But Leyden being the place of his delight, he retired thither, and tho he could get no place of benefit there, yet the curators of that that University gave him an yearly stipend for the encouragement of his studies, as being a person repleated with all humane literature, antient Histories, and Geography. He is stiled by a certain (b) author vir stipendie lectionis & cura, and by (i) another princeps atatis nostra Geographus, and (k) magnum Germania ornamentum. His works are,

Our author Cluverius died (*) of a Consumption, about the month of June, at Leyden in sixteen hundred twenty and three, and in that of his age 43. leaving then behind him a Son named John Sigismund Cluver, who was matriculated as a member of Exeter coll. in 1633. aged 18. a Londoner born, and as Son of Philip Cluverius a Priest. The same year he was admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. in this University, in a Surrey place, and afterwards became a learned man, but is not to be understood to be the same with Joh. Cluver author of Historiarum totius mundi Epitome, &c. Lugd. 1623. SIMON WISDOME, was born in Oxfordshire, being of the same family with whose of his surname, who lived at Burford, was entred a Student of this University about 1566. and took the degree of Master of Arts as a member of Glouc. hall. Afterwards retiring to his Estate at Shipton under wood, near to Burford, lived as a Gentleman there many years, and employed his time (being a zealous and harmless Puritan) in vertuous industry and piety. He hath written several books, as I have been informed by persons of his neighbourhood, but I have not seen any, only 1623. An abridgment of the holy history of the old Testament, from Adam to the incarnation of Christ. Lond. 1594. oct. He died in July or Aug. in sixteen hundred twenty and three, and was buried, as I conceive, at Shipton before-mention'd, where in the Ch. yard at the East end of the Chancel were some of his Surname buried before his time. I find one Sim. Wisdome to have been Alderman of Burford before-mention'd, and to have given constitutions and orders for the government of a Free-School in the said Town, 13 Elizab. Whereupon he was then, as he is now, reputed the Founder of the said School. He died at Burford in 1587. leaving behind him a brother named Tho. Wisdome, a nephew named Ralph, and a grandson called Simon, Son of his Son, called Will. Wisdome. Which Simon, if he be not the same with the writer, may be the same with another Simon of S. Albans hall in the latter end of Qu. Elizab.

1604. THOMAS SUTTON, a most florid preacher in the time he lived, was born in the Parish of Bampton or Banton in Westmoreland, made a poor serving child of Queens coll. in 1602. aged 17, afterwards Tabarder, and when M. of A. perpetual Fellow, an. 1611. About that time being in holy orders, he was made Lecturer of S. Helens Church in Abendon in Berks, and minister of Culham near to that Town. At both which places he was much followed, and beloved of all for his smooth and edifying way of preaching, and for his exemplary life and conversation. After he had taken one degree in Divinity (for he was Doctor of that fac.) he was made Lecturer of S. Mary-Overhee in Southwark, where also he was much followed and admired. At length being desirous to finish a work of charity which he had began, took a journey into his own Country, in 1623. and there at his native place put his last hand to the finishing of a Free-School, which he before had began, as his Son Tho. Sutton sometimes of C. C. coll. Oxon. hath told me, but in his return from Newcastle to London by Sea, was unfortunately drown'd, as I shall tell you anon. He was a person esteemed by all that knew him to have been furnished with many rich endowments, and as a true servant of God, to have employed his talent faithfully and fruitfully. His works are only,

Printed by a certain Bookseller, who, as 'tis said, took it in short-hand from Dr. Suttons mouth.

Lectures upon the eleventh chapt. to the Romans. Lond. 1632. qu. Published by Joh. Downham Bac. of Div. (brother to Dr. George Downham B. of London-Derry in Ireland) who married the widdow of the author Sutton, and promised in his Epistle to the Reader, set before them, that if the said Lectures took with the men of the world, to put forth Lectures on the 12. chapt. to the Romans, and on a great part of the 119. Psalm, which Dr. Sutton had left behind him in MS. He died in the Ocean, (as I have already told you) before he had attained to high noon of perfection, on S. Barthelmews day (24 Aug.) in sixteen hundred twenty and three; at which time, many besides being cast away, some of their bodies were taken up, among which that of Dr. Sutton, was (as is supposed) one, and forthwith buried in the yard belonging to the Church of Aldborough a Sea-port Town in Suffolke. As soon as the news of this great loss came to London one Rob. Drurie who was first a R. Catholick, afterwards a Protestant and at length a Jesuit, did much (a) rejoyce at it, as a great judgment befallen on Dr. Sutton for his forward zeal in preaching against the Papists; but the 26. of Octob. following he the said Drurie was suddenly slain by the fall of the floor at an assembly of R. Catholicks in the place called the Blackfriars in London. 1623.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, surnamed the learned, 505. Son of Sampson Camd. a Native of the City of Lichfield, Citizen and one of the Society of Painter-stainers of London, by his Wife, descended (b) from the ancient family of the Curmens of Wirkington in Cumberland; was born in the Old Baily, situated partly in the Parish of S. Sepulchre and partly in S. Martin near Ludgate in the said City, on the second day of May, 5. Edw. 6. Dom. 1551. When this most eminent person (of whom I shall be more particular than of another author) was a child, he received the first knowledge of letters in Ch. Church hospital in London, then newly founded for Blew-coated children, where being fitted for Grammer learning, he was sent to the Free-school, founded by Dr. Colet near to S. Pauls Cathedral. About which time (1563.) he being infected with the Plague, was sent to Islington, where he remained for some time to the great loss of his learning. In 1566. (8. Elizab.) he was sent to Oxford, and being placed in Madg. coll. in the condition of a Chorister or Servitour, did perfect himself in Grammer learning in the Free-School adjoining, then lately presided by Dr. Tho. Cooper, afterwards Bishop of Linc. But missing, as 'tis said, a Demies place of that coll. tho of great desert, and partly grounded in Logick, he was transplanted to an anti-ent hostile called Broadgates, now Pembr. coll. where he continued two years and an half under the tuition of a great encourager of learning, called Dr. Tho. Thornton canon of Ch. Ch. who finding our author to be a young man of great vertue, and in him tokens of future worth, he took him to Ch. Ch. and gave him entertainment in his Lodgings so long as he continued in the University. About that time he being a candidate for a Fellowship in Alf. coll. lost it for defending the religion then established, as Dr. (afterwards Sir) Dan. Donn at that time Fellow, did several times testifie, and would often relate how our said author Camden was opposed by the Popish party of that house. In the month of June 1570. he supplicated (d) the ven. Congregation of Regents, that whereas he had spent four years in the study of Logick, he might he admitted Bach. of Arts, but what answer was made thereunto, or whether he was then admitted, it appears not. In 1571. he relinquished his conversation with the Muses, to the great reluctancy of those who were well acquainted with the pregnancy of his parts, and whether he was afterwards favoured in his Scholastical endeavours by Dr. Gabr. Goodman Dean of Westminster, whom he acknowledgeth (e) to have been Patron of his studies, I cannot positively affirm. In 1573. he returned to Oxon for a time, and supplicated again in the beginning of March for the said degree; which though, as it seems, granted, and so, I presume, took it, yet he did not compleat it by Determination in Schoolstreet. In 1575. he was made second Master of Westminster School, upon the recommendations of Godfrey, Nephew to Gabriel Goodman before-mentioned, (which Godfrey put him upon the study of Antiquities, and bought, and (f) gave him books) and in 1581. he contracted an entire friendship with Barnab. Briffon, the learned Chief Justice of France, called by some Varro Gallie. While he continued in teaching at Westm. God so blessed his labours that Dr. King Bishop of London, Noble Archb. of York, Parry Bishop of St. Asaph, &c. (to say nothing of persons imployed in those times in eminent place abroad, and many of special note at home of all degrees) did acknowledge themselves to have been his Scholars. Besides also, as a testimony of his sincere love to the Church of England, (which some in his time did doubt,) he brought there to Church divers Gentlemen of Ireland, as the Walshes, Nugents, O-Rayley, Shees, the eldest Son of the Archb. of Casshills, Pet. Lombard a Merchant's Son of Waterford, a Youth of admirable docility, (the same who was afterwards titular Archb. of Armagh, Primate of Ireland, domestick Prelate and Assistant of his Holiness the Pope, and author of a book intit. De regno Hibernie, Sanctorum Insula commentarius. Lov. 1632. qu.) and others bred Popishly, and so affected. In 1582. he took a journey through Suffolk into Yorkshire, and returned through Lancashire in the month of April, in order to the compleating of his Britannia, which he saith he published in the same year, having with great industry, at spare hours, and on festival days, composed it. In 1588. Jun. 3. he, by the name and tit. of Will. Camden Bach. of Arts of Ch. Ch. supplicated the ven. Convocation, that whereas he had spent 16 years, from the time he had taken the degree of Bachelaur, in the study of Philosophy and other liberal Arts, he might be dispensed with for the reading of three solemn Lectures, and so be admitted to proceed in that Faculty: Which supplication was granted conditionally, that he stand in the Aet following, but whether he was admitted, or stood, it doth not appear in the Registers. In the same month and year he took a journey (Oxford being in his way) to Ilfracomb in Devonshire, in order to obtain more knowledge in the Antiquities of that Country, and elsewhere, for the next edition of his Britannia, and on the 6 Feb. following, he was made Preb. of Ilfracomb in the Ch. of Salisb. in the place of one J. Hotman, which Prebendship he kept to the time of his death, and then Fau. Davenant succeeded him. The said journey, and others, that he took for that purpose, the charges of them were (g) defrayed by the aforesaid Dr. Gab. Goodman. In 1590. he journeyed into Wales in the company of Franc. Gadrin of Ch. Ch. afterwards author of the Commentary of the English Bishops, and in 1592. Oct. 26. he was taken with a Quartan Ague, which made him often purge

Blood. In March 1593. he was made chief Master of Westminster School, in the place of Dr. Ed. Grant, and in 1594. in the month of June, he was freed from his Ague. In 1596. he travelled to Salisbury and Wells, for the obtaining of more knowledge in Antiquities, and returned through Oxon, where he visited most, if not all, of the Churches and Chappels, for the copying out of the several Monuments and Arms in them, which were reduced by him into a book written with his own hand, by me seen and perused. In 97. he fell into a most dangerous sickness; whereupon being taken into the house of one Cuthbert Line, he was cured by the care of that persons Wife, and in that year he published his Greek Grammar. On the 22. of Oct. the same year he was, for fashion sake, (after he had refused a Masterhip of the Requests, which was offered to him,) created Herald of Arms, called Richmond, because no person can be King before he is Herald, and the next day he was created Clarenceaux King of Arms, in the place of Rich. Lee Esq; who died on the 23. of Sept. before-going. This was done by the singular favour of Q. Elizabeth, at the incessant supplication of his Patron Sir Foulk Grevill, afterwards Lord Brook; both of them having an especial respect for him, and his great learning, in English and other Antiquities. In 1600. he took a journey in Summer time to Carlisle in the company of the eminent Antiquary Rob. Cotton Esq; (afterwards a Baronet,) for the viewing of some Northern Antiquities to be put into another edit. of his Britannia, and returned not till Dec. following. In 1603. (1 Jan. 1.) when the Plague raged in London, he retired to the house of his Friend Rob. Cotton before-mentioned, at Connington in Huntingdonshire, where he remained till the Nativity of our Saviour. In 1606. he sent his first Letters to Jac. Aug. Thuanus the most noted Historiographer of France, from which time to the death of Thuanus, which was in Apr. 1617. there was a constant commerce of Letters between them. Our author Camden styles him (h) Gallia Lumen & Historicorum nostri saculi princeps, to whom he had communicated many material matters concerning English affairs, which were afterwards remitted into the several books of Histories published by him the said Thuanus. In 1607. Sept. 7. he fell from his Horse, and dangerously hurt his Leg: So that being perfectly lame, he kept up till the 4. of July following; at which time he went to order, set forth, and attend the funeral of Sir Joh. Fortescue Knight. In 1618. he began to put in order and digest his Annals of Q. Elizabeth, and in 1609. being taken with a grievous disease, on his birth-day, he voided blood twice. At which time one being sick of the Plague in the house next to that where he then was, he was conveyed to that of Dr. Will. Heather in Westminster, and was cured of his disease by Dr. Joh. Gifford sometimes Fellow of New coll. in Oxon. Whereupon betaking himself to Chiselmurst in Kent, in the month of August, he remained there till the 28. of Oct. following. In the beginning of the year 1613. at which time he attended the Funeral of Sir Tho. Bodley at Oxon, he had the degree of Master of Arts offered to him, but refused, as it seems, to take it, it being then too late to gain any benefit or honour thereby, and soon after was made the first Historiographer of Chelsey coll. by the Founder thereof. In 1619. Jul. 1. his name being then spread over the learned World, six Noblemen of Germany gave him a visit at his house in Westminster, in whose Albums, (after they had complemented him for his high worth,) he, at their desire, wrote his name and a Latin sentence, as a testimony of respect to them, which they took for a very great honour; and on the 18. of Febr. following he coughed up blood so much, that he was left in a manner dead and deprived of all sense. At that time Dr. Gifford before-mentioned taking from him 7 ounces of blood, cured him. In 1621. May 5. he, by his Deed then bearing date, founded the History Lecture of this University: Which Deed being published in a Convocation of Regents and Non-Regents on the 17. of May 1622. he was in the year following declared a publick Benefactor of this University of Oxon. In 1622. June 7. he fell again into a most dangerous sickness, and on the 16. of Aug. following while he fate musing in his Chair, the office of his hands and feet suddenly failed him: Whereupon falling on the ground, rose again much distempered, and was never afterwards well till death conveyed him to the habitation prepared for old age. He was a very good natured man, was very mild and charitable, and nothing was wanting in him for the compleating a good Christian. He was an exact Critick and Philologist, an excellent Grecian, Latinist, and Historian, and above all a profound Antiquary, as his elaborate works testify. All which accomplishments being compacted in a little body, made him not only admired at home by the chiefest of the Nobility, and the most learned of the Nation, but also beyond the Seas, particularly by Ortelius, Lipsius, Doussa, Scaliger, Touanus, Gruterus, Piereskus, Jf. Casaubon, Jo. If. Pontanus, Fra. Swertius, N. Chytræus, &c. The Epistles of all whom, and of divers others of lesser note, I have seen in the Cottonian Library, and collect thence that he was one of the greatest Scholars of his time (as to the learning he professed) in Christendom. At home, I am sure he was esteemed the Pausanias of the British Isles, and therefore his fame will be permanent so long as this Kingdom is known by the name of Britannia. His works are these.

In both which editions are several of Holland's additions scattered in many places. This Britannia being much admired in France, was also translated into the Language of that Country, and printed with Maps in fol. After the first quarto edition came out, one Ralph Brook, or Brookmonth, Herald of Arms, by the title of York, made answer to it in a book intit. A discovery of certain errors published in print in the much commended Britannia. Printed 1594. in qu. In which book the said Brookmonth endeavours to make the World believe that Camden composed his Britannia mostly from the Collectanea of Joh. Leland without any acknowledgment, and at the end of the said Discovery adds a little thing written by Leland, called, A New-years gift given of him to K. Hen. 8. &c. Whereupon came out soon after, against that busie and envious person, (for so he was by his society accounted,) a Vindication or Reply, written by Camden in Latin, containing about 30 pages in quarto, but not said when or where printed. You may sometimes find it bound with the Discovery before-mentioned, and at other times with the Britannia printed in qu. for by it self I have not yet seen it. A certain credulous (*) Historian is pleased to set down in his Church History a copy of verses, like a two-edged Sword that cuts on both sides, reflecting on Camden for Plagiarism from the said Collectanea. But under favour I think they are unworthily spoken, and unworthily set down. Why is Camden, I pray, blame-worthy for making use of Leland's Collections? Was it because one was originally of Cambridge, and the other an Oxford Man? Verily, I think, if the truth could be known, that was the chief reason of the Historians carping. But let those of his opinion, if any there be, know, that Camden sought not to suppress those collections, as Pol. Virgil did certain authors. The other works of Camden are these following.

Institutio Græcæ Grammatices compendiaria, in usum Regiæ Scholæ Westmonasteriensis. Lond. 1597. &c. oct.

Reges, Regina, Nobiles, & alii in Ecclesiâ collegiati B. Petri Westmonasterii sepulti, usque ad an. 1600. Lond. 1600. and 1606. in about 10 sheets in qu. Involved in a book intit. Monumenta Westmon. or, an historical account of the original, increase, and present State of S. Peter's; or the Abby Ch. of Westminster, &c. Lond. 1682. in oct. Published by Hen. Keep of the Inner Temple Gent. sometimes a Gent. Com. of New Inn in Oxon.

Remains concerning Britain: their Languages, Names, Surnames, Allusions, &c. Lond. 1604. 14. &c. qu. Published at first under the two letters of M. N. which are the two last letters of the authors name. To this book were several additions made by Jo. Philipot, Herald of Arms, under the title of Somerset.—Lond. 1637. &c. qu. afterwards in oct. with Camden's picture before all the editions.

Rerum Anglicarum, & Hibernicarum Annales, regnante Elizabetha, in 4 parts. The first half, (with an Apparatus before it,) reaching from the beginning of the Reign of

Q. Elizab. to the end of the year 1588. was printed at Lond. in fol. 1615. having had several things therein before that time expunged, especially such that related to the story of Mary Q. of Scots. The other half reaching from the beginning of 1589. to the death of Q. Elizab. and an Appendix, were printed at the same place in fol. 1627. Both printed in two tomes at Leyden in oct. and in a thick oct. at Amsterdam, 1639. and all translated into English by B. N. Gent. and several times printed in fol. The last half was translated into English by Thom. Browne of Ch. Ch. (afterwards Canon of Windsore), and by him intit. Tomus alter & idem: or, The History, &c. Lond. 1629. in qu.

His opinion concerning the High Court of Parliament. Lond. 1658. oct. Printed with the opinions on the same subject of Joh. Doderidge, Arth. Agard, and Franc. Tate. I have seen also a discourse of his concerning the High Stewardship of England, but 'tis not, as I conceive, printed.

Epistola varia ad viros doctos. Written mostly in Latin.

Annales Regis Jacobi. These reach from the death of Q. Elizab. 24. of March 1603. to the 18. of Aug. 1623. and no farther, because the author (being then very ill in body (remaining in that condition till his death) he could not well continue them any farther: So that there wants memories more than for a year, to the end of the Reign of K. Jam. 1. These Annals are written with the authors own hand in fol. being only a Skeleton of a History, or bare touches to put the author in mind of greater matters, that he had in his head, had he lived to have digested them, in a full History, as that of Q. Elizabeth. The original came, after his death, into the hands of Mr. Joh. Hacket, afterwards D. D. and at length Bishop of Lichfield; who, as I have been divers times informed, did privately convey it out of the Library of the author, Hacket being then a Master of Arts of some years standing. This original being communicated by the said Dr. Hacket, while he was living at Lichfield, to Mr. (afterwards Sir) Will. Dugdale, then Norroy King of Arms, he, contrary to the Doctors knowledge, took a copy of it, which I have seen and perused at Sir Williams house called Blish hall in Warwickshire, but therein I found many mistakes, as it afterwards more evidently appeared to me when that Transcript was put into the Ashmolean Museum. Another copy I have seen in the hands of Sir Hen. St. George, Clarenceaux King of Arms, which having been transcribed by one that understood not Latin, are innumerable faults therein, and therefore not at all to be relied upon. After Dr. Hacket's death the original was put into the Library of Trin. coll. in Cambridge, where it now remains. Our author Camden did also put into Latin, Actio in Henricum Garnet Societatis Jesu in Anglia Superiorem, &c. adjectum est supplicium de Hen. Garnet Londini sumptum, &c. Lond. 1607. qu. And also viewed, corrected, and published certain old writers, to whom he gave this title, Anglica, Normanica, Hibernica, & Cambrica, per varios autores, &c. Francof. 1603. 04. fol. The first of which writers is Affer Menevensis his book, De vita & rebus gestis Regis Ælfredi. At length our author Camden paying his last debt to nature, in his house at Chiselhurst in Kent, on Sunday the ninth of Nov. (about 4 or 5 of the clock in the morn.) in sixteen hundred twenty and three, 1623. his body afterwards was conveyed to Westminster, to the house there, where he used to dwell; where laying in State for some time, 'twas on the 19. day of the same month carried to St. Peters, commonly called the Abby-Church within that City, accompanied by several of the Heralds in their formalities, many of the Nobility, Clergy, Gentry, and others. All which being placed, Dr. Christop. Sutton, a Prebendary of that Church, stepped up into the Pulpit, and made a true, grave, and modest commemoration of his life: Adding, that as he was not factious in Religion, so neither was he wavering or inconstant, of which he gave good testimonies at his end, professing in the Exordium of his last Will, that he died, as had lived, in the Faith, Communion, and Fellowship of the Church of England. Sermon being ended, the body was carried into the S. Cross Isle, where it was buried in the west side or part of it. As soon as the news of his death was certified to the Sages or Governours of the University, they, in gratitude of so worthy a Benefactor as he had been, caused his memory to be celebrated in an Oration, publicly delivered by the mouth of Zouch Townley M. of A. and Student of Ch. Ch. who was then the Deputy Orator. To which Speech many of the Academians adding verses on the Benefactors death, they were, with the Speech, printed under the title of Camden insignia. Oxon. 1624. qu. After these things were done, was a Monument erected on the west Wall of the said S. cross isle with the bust of the Defunct resting his hand on a book with Britannia insculpt'd on the Leaves thereof. This Monument, which was composed of black and white Marble was somewhat defaced in 1646. when the Hearse and Effigies of Robert Earl of Essex the Parliamentarian General were cut in pieces and defaced. The Inscription however being left intire, I caused it to be printed (t) elsewhere. In the last Will and Testam. of this great Scholar, which I have more than once perused, I find besides his publick benefactions, his Legacies of 16 l. 10 s. and 5 l. to all his learned acquaintance then in being, as to J. a. Gruter Library Keeper to the Prince Pal. Elector of Heidelberg 5 l. To Mr. Tho. Allen of Glouc. hall in Oxon. 16 l. To Jo. Selden of the Inner Temple 5 l. &c. besides a piece of plate to Sir Foulk Greyll Lord Brook Chancellour of the Exchequer, who prefer'd him gratis to his Office, and another of 16 l. price to the Company of Painter-Stainers of London, and this to be engraven thereon, Gul. Camden Clarenceaux filius Sampsonis Camden pictoris Londinensis.

106. THOMAS WHITE, Son of Job. White was born in the City of Bristow (in Temple Parish) but descended from the Whites of Bedfordshire, entred a Student in Madg. hall in the year 1566. or thereabouts, took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders, and became a noted and frequent preacher of Gods word. Afterwards retiring to London he was made Minister of St. Gregories Church near to St. Paul's Cathedral, and at length Rector of St. Dunstons in Fleetstreet, where he was held in great esteem for his godly and practical way of preaching. In 1584. he was licensed to proceed in Divinity, and in Nov. in the year following he had a Canonry in the Cath. Ch. of S. Paul, and a Prebendship there called Wenlocks barn conferr'd upon him by John Bishop of London, upon the nat. death of Rob. Towers Bac. of Div. In Apr. 1590. he was made Treasurer of Salisbury in the place of Dr. Job. Sprint deceased, in 91. Canon of Ch. Ch. in Oxon, and in 93. of S. Georges Church at Windfore. All that he hath published are only,

Sermons, as (1) Two Serms. at S. Paul's in the time of the Plague: the first on Zeph. 3. 1, 2, 3. the other on Jer. 23. 5, 6. Lond. 1577. oct. (2) Fun. Sermon on Sir Hen. Sidney, on 1 Joh. 3. 2, 3. Lond. 1586. oct. (3) Sermon at Pauls Cross, on the Queens day, 1589. on Luke 3. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Lond. 1589. oct. and others which I have not yet seen. This worthy Doctor who was esteemed by all that knew him an honest and generous minded man and a great encourager of learning, gave up the Ghost on St. Davids day (1 Mar.) in sixteen hundred twenty and three, and in few days after was solemnly inter'd in the Chancel of his Church of S. Dunstan in the West, before mentioned. Soon after, his death being certified to the Heads of the University, they in honour to his memory caused an Oration to be publickly delivered by the mouth of Will. Price the first reader of the Moral Philos. Lecture, lately founded by the said Dr. White. To which speech, certain Academians adding verses on the benefactors death, were with the speech printed under the title of Schola moralis philosophia Oxon. in funere Whiti pullata. Oxon. 1624. in 2. th. in qu. In 1613. he founded an Alms house in Temple parish within the City of Bristow, endowing it with 92 l. per an. in 1621. he founded a moral philosophy lecture in the University of Oxon, and the same year he fetled an exhibition for five Students in Madg. hall. See more in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 43. and 370. a. and b. As for his benefaction to Sion coll. in London and to other places, (expending most if not all his estate, which he got from the Church, on publick uses) let others tell you, while I proceed to the next writer, to be mention'd according to time.

JOHN FAVOUR, born in the Borough of Southampton in Hampshire, was educated for a time in Grammatical learning there: Afterwards being compleated for the University in Wykeham's School, he was elected Probationer of New coll. in 1576. and two years after was made complete fellow. In 1592. he proceeded Doctor of the civil Law, and in the year following, he became Vicar of Halsfax in Yorks. in the place of Dr. Henry Ledham sometimes Fellow of Merit. college resigning. At which place he being settled, he preached every Lords day, lectur'd every day in the week, exercised justice in the Commonwealth, (being Justice of Peace as Vicar of that place) practiced for Gods sake and meely out of Charity, Physick and Chirurgery on those that were not able to entertain a professed Doctor or Practitioner. On the 23. March 1616. he was collated to the Prebendship of Driffeld in, and to the Chantourship of the Ch. of York, on the death of Dr. Joh. Broke or Brook deceased, and in the beginning of March 1618. was made Warden of the Hospital of St. Mary Madg. near Ripon in Yorkshire, on the death of Ralph Tossall. He was esteemed a person of great piety and charity, and one well read in substantial and profound authors, as it appears by those books he hath written, especially in that published, entit.

Antiquity triumphing over novelty, &c. or Antiquity a certain note of the Christian Cath. Church, Lond. 1619. qu. He concluded his last day in this world on the tenth of March in sixteen hundred twenty and three, and was buried in his Church of Halsfax; a copy of whose Epitaph you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 144. a. In his Vicaridge succeeded Rob. Clay D. D. of Merit. coll. and him Hugh Ramsden B. of D. another Mertonian in 1628. and in his Chantourship of York succeeded Hen. Hook D. D. as I shall tell you elsewhere.

JOHN SHAW, a Westmoreland man born, became a Student in Qu. coll. about the beginning of 1579. aged 19. took one degree in Arts, left the coll. and at length became Vicar of Oling or Woking in Surrey, where he was had in esteem by many for his preaching, and by some for his Poetry. His works are these.

The blessedness of Mary mother of Jesus, Sermon on Luke 1. ver. 28. and 45. Lond. 1618. oct.

The comfort of a Christian, by assurance of Gods love to him written in verse.

The complaints of a Sinner: The comfort of our Saviour—in verse also. These two last are printed with the former Sermon.

Bibliorum Summula, seu argumenta singulorum capitum Scripturae Canonicae, utriusque Testamenti, alphabetice distichis comprehensa. Lond. 1621. and 23. &c. in oct. Dedicated to Poyning's More, Son of Sir Rob. More a servant to K. James, Son of Sir George More Son of Sir W. More Kt. These are all the things that I have seen written by this John Shaw, who was living at Oling before mentioned in sixteen hundred twenty and three, before which time he had a Son named Tobias who was Bach. of Arts of Madg. coll. As for other Sermons and books, which go under his name of Job. Shaw, I shall mention hereafter in their proper place, as having been written by others of both those names.

SIMON WASTELL, a Westmoreland man born and descended from those of his name living at Wastell-head, in the same County, was entred a Student also in Queens coll. in 1580. or thereabouts, took one degree in Arts five years after, at which time being accounted a great proficient in classical learning and Poetry, was made Master of the Free-School at Northampton, whence, by his sedulous endeavours, many were sent to the Universities. He hath written,

The true Christians daily delight; being a sum of every Chapter of the Old and New Testament, set down alphabetically in English verse, that the Scriptures we read may more happily be remembered, &c. Lond. 1623. in tw. Published afterwards with amendments and some additions with this title. Microbiblion: or, the Bibles epitome, &c. Lond. 1629. &c. in tw. This person who was well known to John Shaw, was living in Northampton in sixteen hundred twenty and three. (21. J. c. 1.) In his time was one Samuel Wastell a Master of Arts of New Inn, 1628. but him I find not to be a writer or publisher of books.

WILLIAM BISHOP, Son of John Bishop, who died 1601. aged 92. was born of a gentile family at Brayles in Warwickshire, sent to this University in the 17 year of his age, in 1570. or thereabouts, particularly, as I conceive, to Gloucester hall, at which time it was presided by one who was a R. Catholick, or at least sufficiently addicted to the R. persuasion, and that therein, did then, and especially after, study some of his name and allies, or else in Lon. coll. which was then also governed by one, who was in animo Catholicus. After he had continued in Oxon. about 3 or 4 years, he left it, his paternal estate which was considerable, and all his friends and his native Country which was more. So that settling himself in the English coll. at Rheims, he applyed himself partly to the study of Divinity. Soon after he was sent to Rome, where making a fruitful progress in Philosophy and Divinity, he was made Priest and sent into England to convert Souls; but being taken in the haven was kept prisoner several years as (a) one of his perswasion reports. Afterwards being set at liberty (an. 1584.) he went to Paris, where he was honorably received, and worthily numbred among the Sorbon Doctors. At length he took another journey into England and laboured 9 years in the R.C. harvest. Upon the expiration of which, he was sent for to Rome about certain matters depending between the Jesuits and Secular Priests; (of which business a certain (b) author hath a large story) all which being determined, he return'd the third time into England, and after 8 years labouring therein to advance his religion, was taken and committed prisoner to the Gate-house in Westminster, where he was remaining in 1612. Afterwards being released and sent back beyond the Seas again, lived at Paris in the Arras or Atrabalian coll. newly rebuilt for Benedictin Monks, by Philip Caverell, Head or Prefect of the Monastery of S. Vedastus at Arras. About the year 1622. our author being made Bishop of Chalcedon by the Pope, he was sent into England to execute the office of a Bishop among the Catholics; and was by them received with great honour and respect. He hath written,

Reformation of a Catholick deformed by Will Perkins—Print. 1604. in qu. Part 1.

The second part of the reform. of the Cath. &c. Printed 1607. qu.

An answer to Mr. Perkins's advertisement — Pr. with the former.

Disproof of Dr. K. Abbots counter-proof against Dr. Bishops reproof of the defence of Mr. Perkins reform. Cath. Par. 1614. in oct. part 1.

Defence of the Kings honour, and of his title to the Kingdom of England.—He also published and added several things (besides a Preface) to Joh. Pitts his book De illustribus Angliae Scriptoribus, and was one of the principal authors of the Libels written against the Archpriestship in England, mentioned in George Blackwell, an. 1812. I find a book written by the Bp. of Chalcedon, entit. A treatise of the best kind of Confessors, pr. in oct. but whether written by this Bishop, or Dr. Ric. Smith, who was his Successor in that titular See, I know not. At length after this learned person, (who was in his latter time of the order of S. Benedict) had lived 71 years, he paid his last debt to nature near to London, on the thirteenth day of April in sixteen hundred twenty and four, but where buried, unless in S. Pancras Church near to the said City, I know not. One (c) that remembers the man, hath told my friend that he died at Bishops Court in London, but where that place is, unless in the Parish of S. Sepulchre, I am yet to seek. A Latine Manuscript containing the obits and characters of many eminent Benedictines since the reformation, hath this character of Dr. Will. Bishop, that he was carceribus, exilio, & Apostolicis sudoribus inclitus, qui a Sancta sede in patriam ad solamen Catholicorum missus, clericis, Religularibus, ac ipsis laicis ob innatum unionis ac pacis affectum juxta charum exiit, &c. This obit book which I have in my little Library, was written by a Benedictin Monk of Doway named Tho. White alias Woodhop, who having spent several years in the Sheldonian family at Beoly in Worcestershire, (in which County he was born) retired at length in the time of the civil War to Doway, was chosen Prior of the coll. of English Benedictines, and died there of the Plague in 1654. From the said book, (wherein 'tis said that Dr. Bishop died near to London) was another composed in English with additions, and therein is this said of that Doctor—he was sent into England by the holy See for the comfort of Catholics, where he so modestly behaved himself, that he was by all, both Clergy and Seculars, dearly beloved and honoured: And after imprisonments and all sorts of afflictions, patiently endured for the true religion, died in peace near London, &c. This English obit, was pen'd by another Benedictine named Tho. Vincent alias Vinceat Sadler author of The Childes Catechisme, &c. pr. at Paris alias London 1678. in oct. who died, as I remember, much about the time that K. Jam. 2. came to the crown. He was nephew or near of kin to Fath. Vincent Sadler of the same order, who died at London 11. June. 1621. after he had been Superintendent of the Province of Canterbury for some years.

MILES WINDSORE, Son of Thomas, Son of Andrew Lord Windsor, was born in Hampshire, (at Stanwell I think) elected from Balliol coll. Scholar of that of Corp. Ch. in Jan. 1556. aged 15 or thereabouts, made Probationer-Fellow 16 Feb. 1560, took the degrees in Arts, left the coll. soon after because popishly affected, and spent the remaining part of his time within the City of Oxon. in a most retired condition. He was a tolerable Latine Poet, but a better Orator, as was sufficiently witnessed by his speech, intended to have been spoken in C. C. C. when Qu. Elizab. was entertain'd by the Oxonian Muses, 1566. and more especially by that which he most admirably well delivered before her at the Lord Windsores house at Bradenham a little after she left Oxon. Which giving the Queen great content, she, in an high manner did commend it before Dedius Gosemannus de Sylva the Spanish Embassador then present, and looking wistly on Windsore (who then had a beard according to the fashion) said to Goseman, is not this a pretty young man? At riper years he applyed himself to the study of Histories and Antiquities, and had a hand, as 'twas frequently reported, in the Apologia of B. Twyne who (d) styles our author Windsore, Antiqua Historia artifex peritus, &c. But before that Apologia was extant he wrote, Academiarum qua aliquando fuere, & hodie sunt in Europa catalogus. Lond. 1590. qu. contracted by the author, and printed on one large sheet of Paper, to be put into a frame. At the end of the said book he published, Chronographia, sive origo collegiorum Oxoniensis Academiae. This last was mostly written by Tho. Neal of New coll. in Lat. verse, and to it is added a description of the Divinity and publick Schools, and an Epitome of the Halls. Our author Windsore had intentions to write a book of the Antiquity of the Univ. of Oxon. and in order thereunto had made many collections, but Twyne with his forward and natural genie undertaking that work, Windsore forbore to proceed, and imparted to him his collections. At length after he had lived to a fair age, he surrendered up his last breath in his lodgings near S. Michaels Church in Oxon. in sixteen hundred twenty and four, and was buried in the outer Chappel of C. C. coll. under the north wall behind the Vicepresidents seat. At that time he left many, if not all, his collections of Antiquities (containing many dotages and fooleries) to Twyne before mentioned, Legacies to the prisoners in the prison called Bocardo, to the parishioners of S. Michaels Parish and to the Chest in the Tower of C. C. coll. After Twyne's death some of the said collections were put into the Libr. of the said coll. and others were scatter'd about when the great fire hapned in Oxon. soon after Twyne's death. One vol. of which came at length into my hands, wherein I find many vain and credulous matters, (not at all to be relyed upon) committed to writing.

MILES SMITH, a Fletchers Son, received his first breath within the City of Hereford, became a Student first in C. C. coll. about 1568. whence translating himself soon after to Braunose, took the degrees in Arts as a member of that house; wherein by the benefit of a severe discipline that was in his time exercised, and by his indefatigable industry, he proved at length an incomparable Theologist. About that time he was made one of the Chaplains or Petty-Canons of Ch. Ch. and took the degree of Bach. of Div. as a member of that Royal foundation. Afterwards he became Canon Residentiary of the Cathedral Ch. of Hereford, Doctor of Divinity and in 1612. Bishop of Glocester; to which See (which was given him for his great pains in translating the Bible) he received consecration 20. Sept. the same year. From his youth he constantly applyed himself to the reading of antient Classical authors of the best note, in their own Languages; wherewith, as also with Neotericks he was plentifully stored, and lusted after no worldly thing so much as books; of which tho he had great store, yet there were none scarce to be found in his Library, especially of the Ancients, that he had not read over, as hath been observed by those, who have perused them since his death. He ran thro the Greek and Latin Fathers, and judiciously noted them in the margin as he went. The Rab- bins also, as many as he had with their Glosses and Com- mentaries, he read and used in their own idiom of speech. And so conversant he was, and expert in the Chaldaick, Syriack, and Arabick, that he made them as familiar to him, almost, as his own native tongue. Hebrew also he had at his fingers ends, and with all stories of all times: And for his rich and accomplished furniture in that study, he had this Elogy given him by a learned Bishop of this Kingdom, that he was a very walking Library. For this his exactness in those Languages, he was thought worthy by K. Jam. I. to be called to that great work of the last trans- lation of our English Bible, wherein he was esteemed the chief, and a workman that needed not be ashamed. He began with the first and was the last Man in the trans- lation of the work; for after the task of translation was finished by the whole number set a-part, and designed to that business, being some few above 40. it was raised by a dozen selected from them, and at length referred to the final examination of Bilson Bishop of Winton, and this our author, who, with the rest of the twelve, are stiled in the History of the Synod of Dort, vere eximii & ab initio in toto hoc opere versatissimi, as having happily concluded that wor- thy labour. All being ended, this excellent person Dr. Smith was commanded to write a Preface, which being by him done, 'twas made publick, and is the same that is now extant in our Church Bible, the original whereof is, if I am not mistaken, in the Oxonian Vatican. He hath written, besides what is before-mentioned, 1614. Sermons. Lond. 1632. fol. They are 15 in number, and were transcribed out of his original MSS, the first of which is on Jer. 9. 23. 24. He departed this mortal life in the beginning of Nov. in sixteen hundred twenty and four, (having always before been very favourable to the Calvi- nian Party in his Diocess,) and was buried on the 9. of the same month, in our Ladies Chappel, in the Cath. Ch. of Gloucester, leaving behind him two Sons which he had by his first Wife, (Mary Hawkins of Cardiff), named Gervase of the Middle Temple Gent. and Miles Smith, and this cha- racter by the zealous men of the Ch. of England, that tho he was a great Scholar, yet he was a severe Calvinist, and hated the proceedings of Dr. Laud, especially after he was made Dean of Gloucester. Over his grave was afterwards a white stone laid, without any inscription thereon, only his Arms im- paled by those of the See of Glouc.

1613. RICHARD CRAKANTHORPE, was born of a gentle Family at, or near, Strickland in Westmorland, became a Student in Queens coll. in 1583. aged 16. and soon after a poor serving Child, then a Tabarder, and at length in 1598. Fellow of the said coll. About which time, being a noted Preacher, and a profound Disputant in Divinity, (of which Faculty he was a Bachelaur,) was admired by all great men, and had in veneration, espe- cially by the Puritanical Party, he being himself a Zealot among them, as having, with others of the same coll. entertained many of the principles of Dr. Joh. Rainolds while he lived there. After K. Jam. I. came to the Crown, he went in the quality of a Chaplain to the Lord Evers, who in 1603. or thereabouts, was sent Embassador extraordi- nary to the Emperour of Germany. By which oppor- tunity he, as Tho. Morton his Brother Chaplain in that Voyage, (afterwards B. of Durham) did advantage them- selves exceedingly by conversing with learned men of other Perswasions, and by visiting several Universities and Libraries there. After his return he became Chap- lain to Dr. Ravis B. of London, Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majesty, and by the favour of Sir John Levesen, (who had sometimes three Sons of Qu. coll.) Rector of Black- notley near to Brayntrey in Essex, which was the best prefer- ment, I think, he had. He was a person esteemed by most men to have been replenished with all kind of virtue and learning, to have been profound in Philosophical and Theological learning, a great Canonist, and so familiar and exact in the Fathers, Councils, and Schoolmen, that none in his time scarce went beyond him. Also that none have written with greater diligence, (I cannot say with a meeker mind because some have reported that he was as foul-mouthed against the Papists, particularly M. Ant. de Dominis, as Pryn was afterwards against them and the Pre-latists,) or with better truth or faith, than he, as by those things of his extant do appear, the titles of which are these.

Benlowes* the Poet, who in his younger days was a Papist, or at least very Popishly affected, and in his elder years a bitter Enemy to that Party. Whether the said book was ever printed I cannot tell.

I have seen also several of his Epistles, written to Dr. Hen. Airay Provost of Qu. coll. stich'd up with Dr. Joh. Rainolds his Declamations, and other things among the MSS. in the Library of Dr. Thom. Barlow, afterwards B. of Lincoln. What else he hath written I find not, nor any thing more of him, only that he dying at Blacknotley before- mentioned, (for want of a Bishoprick, as K. Jam. I. used to say,) was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, 25. Nov. in sixteen hundred twenty and four: At which time Dr. Joh. Barcham, Dean of Beckington in Essex, did Preach his Funeral Sermon before several Gentlemen and Mi- nisters of the neighbourhood, shewing to them, in the con- clusion, the great piety and learning of him, who then lay as a spectacle of mortality before them. Had that Ser- mon been printed, I might have thence said more of this worthy author, but it being quite lost, I presume, after that Doctors death, we must be content with those things that are already said of him.

PETER BOWNE, or Bonnau, as he is sometimes written, was a Bedfordshire man born, admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. in Apr. 1590. aged 15. of which he was after- wards Fellow, and M. of Arts. This person having a great Genie to the Faculty of Medicine, entred on the Physick line, practiced in these parts, and at length be- came Dr. of his Faculty. Afterwards he wrote, Pseudo-Medicorum Anatomia. Lond. 1624. qu. At which time he practiced Physick in the great City, and was much in esteem for it in the latter end of King Jam. I. and beginning of King Ch. I. What other things he hath published, I know not, nor any thing of his last days.

GEORGE MORE, Son of Sir Will. More, beloved of Q. Elizabeth for his many services done in the Common- wealth, was extracted from the Mores of Devonshire, but whether born there, or in Surrey, in truth I cannot tell. After he had spent some time in Oxon, particularly, as it seems, in Exeter coll. he went to the Inns of Court, but took no degree there or here. In 1597. he had the honour of Knighthood conferred upon him, being about that time a frequent Speaker in several Parliaments, and much in esteem for his excellent parts. In 1604. he being about that time Treasurer to Henry Prince of Wales, did by the name of Sir George More of Surrey give several MSS. to the Publick Library at Oxon, and 40 l. to buy printed books, and in the year following he was actually created Master of Arts. In 1610, he became Chancellour of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and about 1615. Lieutenant of the Tower, in the place of Sir Jervase Elwales, imprisoned for the consenting to the poisoning of Sir Thom. Overbury. He hath written,

A demonstration of God in his Works, against all such that deny either in word or in life, that there is a God. Lond. 1598. 1624. qu.

Parliamentary Speeches, — and other things which I have not yet seen. He was living at Losely, or Lothelsey, near Guildford in Surrey, where he had a fair Estate descended to him from his Father, in sixteen hundred twenty and four, and after, and there died and was buried. He had a Son named Rob. More, who was a Knight, and a Daughter, who was married to the famous Dr. Joh. Donne, afterwards Dean of Pauls. I have made mention of another George More in the Fasti, an. 1573.

316. WILLIAM BROWNE, Son of Tho. Br. of Tavystock in Devonsh. Gent. was born there, spent some time among the Muses in Exeter coll. after K. Jam. 1. came to the Crown; whence retiring to the Inner Temple, without any degree conferred upon him, became famed there for his Poetry, especially after he had published, Britannia's Pastorals. — Esteemed then, by judicious persons, to be written in a sublime strain, and for subject amorous and very pleasing. The first part of it was printed at Lond. 1613. fol. and then usher'd into the World with several copies of verses made by his learned acquaintance, as by Joh. Selden, Mich. Drayton, Christoph. Brook, &c. The second part, or book, was printed at Lond. 1616. fol. and then commended to the World by various copies made by John Glanvill, (whom I shall mention elsewhere, for his sufficiencies in the Common Law,) Joh. Davies of Hereford, George Wither of Linc. Inn, Ben. Johnson, Thom. Wenman of the Inner Temple, &c. which last I take to be the same, that had been Fellow of Ball. coll. and Publick Orator of this University. These two books, or parts, in fol. were also printed in two vol. in oct. (1625.) which I have not yet seen. Our author Browne hath also written a Poem intit.

The Shepard's Pipe; in 7 Eglogues. Lond. 1614. oct. The fourth Eglogue is dedicated to Mr. Tho. Manwood, (who died about that time,) Son of Sir Pet. Manwood, and the fifth to his ingenious Friend Mr. Christop. Brook, mentioned elsewhere in this work.

Elegy on the never enough bewailed, &c. Prince Henry. Lond. 1613. qu. and other Poems, as 'tis probable; but such I have not yet seen. However the Reader is to know, that as he had honoured his Country with his elegant and sweet Pastorals, so was he expected, and also intreated a little farther, to grace it, by drawing out the line of his Poetick Ancestors, beginning in Josephus Iscanius, and ending in himself; but whether ever published, having been all or mostly written, as 'twas said, I know not. In the beginning of the year 1624. he retired to Exeter coll. again, being then about 34 years of age, and was Tutor or Gov. to Rob. Dormer of that house, the same who was afterwards Earl of Caernarvon, and killed in Newbury fight, 20. Sept. 1643. In the same year he was actually created Master of Arts, as I shall tell you elsewhere in the Fasti, and after he had left the Coll. with his Pupil, he became a retainer to the Pembrochian Family, was beloved by that generous Count, William E. of Pembroke, and got wealth and purchased an estate, which is all I know of him hitherto, only that as he had a little body, so a great mind. In my searches I find that one Will. Browne of Otterie S. Mary in Devon, died in the Winter time 1645. whether the same with the Poet, I am hitherto ignorant. After the time of the said Poet, appeared another person of both his names, author of two Common Law-books, written in English, intit. Formula bene placitandi, and of Modus intrandi placita generalia, and of other things pertaining to that Faculty.

117. JOHN DAVIES, an excellent Mathematician, as the learned Camden (a) styles him, was the Son of John

Davies of London, in which City he was born, at about six of the clock in the evening of the eighth of Feb. in 1582. and educated in Gramaticals there. In 1574. he made his first entry into this University, and settling in Gloucester hall under the tuition of one that was much enclined to the Rom. Perswasion, made great proficiency in his studies; and Mr. Tho. Allen of that house finding that his Genie was much addicted to the Mathematicks, instructed him therein, and gave him all the encouragement imaginable to proceed in that noble Science. In 1581. he proceeded M. of A. as a Member of Glouc. hall, continued there for some time after, and then retiring to the great City was instructed in Astrological matters by one Dr. Sim. Forman, a very able Astrologer and Physician, as it appears by the MS. books (b) he left behind him when he died, tho a certain (*) author tells us he was a very silly fellow. In Feb. 1587. he was first of all introduced into the Royal Court, where he was made known to, and received with great courtesie by, that popular Count, Robert Earl of Essex. In 1589. he travelled into France, and made a voyage into Portugal, whereby he advanced his knowledge, as to men, and the Languages of those Countries very much. In 1596. after he had been married 3 years, he went under the conduct of the said Count towards Spain, where doing most admirable service at the taking and sacking of Cadix, he received (c) the honour of Knighthood and of Baneret. In 1597. he travelled to the Islands of Terceres, where he performed that employment he went about, to the great honour of himself; and in 1598. Jan. 31. he was made Surveyor of the Ordnance by the endeavours of his singular good Lord, the E. of Essex, under whom, in the year following, he went as a prime Officer into Ireland, where his service was much remarkable against the Rebels. In 1600. he was deeply engaged in that Earls Treasons, for which he was taken and committed to custody, on the 8. Feb. the same year. About the eleventh of the same month, the Archbishop of Canterbury issued out a Direction for the Ministers and Preachers in his Province, to the end that they give the People a right understanding what the Earl of Essex intended by his treasonable conspiracy; in which Direction I find these matters of Sir Joh. Davies. viz. that he was brought up in Oxford, and was by profession a seller of figures, and on whom that hateful Earl, both to God and man, did repose great affiance, inasmuch that he made him chief Officer about the Ordnance in the Tower, and thought him one of the faithfullst Servants he had to make his Keeper, &c. This Davies was one, that favoured nothing less than the Gospel; for being in hold, the chiefest motion that he made to the Gentleman that had the custody of him for that time, was, that if it were possible, he might have a Priest to confess him, &c. In March following he was tried among other Conspirators for his life, and being in a manner convicted by his own Conscience and confession, held his peace; and then being taunted by the way that he was a Papist, he denied not, but that in Oxon he was instructed in the Romish Religion by his Tutor, and confirmed in the same by Sir Christop. Blount one of the Conspirators, while he was in the Irish Wars. At which words, when he perceived Blount was moved, he straight appeased him, affirming that he was confirmed in that Religion, not by Blounts perswasion, but by the example of his Christian and Religious life. Afterwards being condemned to be hang'd, drawn, and quartered, he requested, that altho he was no Nobleman, yet he might suffer as they did, that is, by beheading; if not, not to be quarter'd in pieces, but to be buried Christianly. After sentence, he was remanded to his prison, but by the intercession of Friends, the Queen signed his Pardon, 5. Feb. 1601. which was allowed by the Judges in Westminster hall, on the 12. of the same month. So that being free, he purchased an Estate in the Parish of Pangborne in Berks, where he spent the remainder of his days in a retired and studious condition. This person, who is styled in literis Mathematicis apprime eruditus, hath written many things of Mathematicks and Astrology, but hath nothing, as I can yet find, that is extant. There went from hand to hand a volume of Letters which were written by this Sir Joh. Davies, Dr. Joh. Dee, and Dr. Mat. Gwinne, concerning Chymical and Magical secrets; which, as some say, (tho I cannot yet be satisfied in it) was given by Dr. T. B. to Cosmo Prince of Tuscany when he was received and entertained by the Univ. of Oxon 1669. But let this report remain with the author, while I tell you that this Sir John Davies giving way to fate in his House called Bereconri, in the parish of Pangbourne in Berks, 14. May in sixteen hundred twenty and five, was buried in the North side of the Chancel of the Church at Pangbourne. Over his Grave was a very fair Mon. erected, whereon his Statue in Armour lies between the Statues of his two Wives. He left behind him a Son of both his Names, who was a Gent. Com. of Glouc. hall, 1626. and afterwards a Knight, but neither he, nor his Father, was author of the History of the Caribby Islands printed 1666. fol. but another John Davies.

118. WILLIAM BARLOWE, Son of Will. Barlowe, sometimes B. of Chichester (mentioned among these writers under the year 1568) was born, as it seems, in Pembrokeshire, while his Father was Bishop of S. David, became a Com. of Ball. coll. about 1560, and four years after, took a degree in Arts: which being completed by Determination, he left the University before he proceeded in that faculty, and afterwards travelling, became very well skill'd in the Art of Navigation. About the year 1573. he entred into the Sacred Function, was afterwards Prebendary of Winchester, Rector of Easton near to that City, Chaplain to Prince Henry, and at length Archdeacon of Salisbury: To which last he was collated, on the death of Dr. Ralph Pickover, on the 12. of March 1614. This was the person who had knowledge in the Magnet 20 years before Dr. Will. Gilbert published his book of that subject, and therefore by those that knew him, he was accounted superiour, or at least equal to that Doctor for an industrious and happy searcher and finder out of many rare and magnetical secrets. He was the first that made the inclinatory instrument transparent, and to be used pendant, with a glass on both sides, and a ring on the top, whereas Dr. Gilberts hath but of one side, and to be set on a foot. And moreover, he hang'd him in a Compass-box, where with two ounces weight it was made fit for use at Sea. Secondly, he was the first that found out and shewed the difference between Iron and Steel, and their tempers for Magnetical uses, which hath given life and quickning, universally to all Magnetical Instruments whatsoever. Thirdly, he was the first that shewed the right way of touching Magnetical Needles. Fourthly, he was the first that found out and shewed the piecing and cementing of Loadstones. And lastly, the first that shewed the reasons why a Loadstone being double capped, must take up so great weight. The books which he hath published for use are these.

The Navigators supply: containing many things of principal importance belonging to Navigation, with the description and use of divers instruments framed chiefly for that purpose, &c. Lond. 1597. qu. Dedic. to Rob. Earl of Essex.

Magnetical advertisements: or divers pertinent observations and approved experiments concerning the nature and properties of the Loadstone, &c. Lond. 1616. qu. Ded. to Sir Dudley Digges Knight, because of his rare learning, joyned with piety, and accompanied with a pleasing carriage toward every man; which were the chief reasons that caused all good men to love him. Upon the publication of this book, a certain Cantabrigian named Mark Ridley, Doctor of Physick and Philosophy, sometimes Physician to the English Marchants trading in Russia, afterwards chief Physician to the Emperour of that Country (as he entitles himself) and at length one of the eight Principals or Elects of the coll. of Physicians at London, made Animadversions upon it; whereupon our author came out in vindication of himself with this book.

A brief discovery of the idle animadversions of Mark Ridley Doct. in Physick, upon a treatise entit. Magnetical Advertisements—Lond. 1618. qu. What other things he hath written I know not as yet, nor any thing else of the said books, only that seven years before the Magnetical Advertisements were published, he sent a copy of them in MS. to the learned Sir Tho. Chaloner, which he mislaying or embesling, he sent him, upon his desire, another copy, and that being imparted to others, the author afterwards, before its publication, met with many portraictures of his Magnetical implements, and divers of his propositions published in print in another mans name, and yet some of them not rightly understood by the party usurping them.

He concluded his last day in sixteen hundred twenty and five, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Easton before mentioned. To his Archdeaconry of Salisbury was collated Tho. Marler on the 27. of June the same year, but who to his Prebendship of Winchester, I know not as yet. Soon after was an Epitaph put over Mr. Barlows Grave running thus. Depositum Gulielmi Barlowe Archideaconi Sarisburiensis, Prebendarii Ecclesie Cath. Winton, & Rectoris Ecclesie de Easton; qui cum sedulam per annos 52. adificationi corporis christi navasset Operam, ad meliorem Vitam migravit Maii 25. An. Dom. 1625.

EDWARD CHALONER, second Son of Sir Tho. Chaloner of Steeple Claydon in Bucks Knight (whom I have before mentioned) was born in the County of Middlesex, particularly, as it seems, at Chesswick, where his Father and Mother lived, and both were buried; applied his muse to Academical studies in the condition of a Commoner in the coll. of S. Mary Magd. 1604. aged 14. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being completed 1610. and the next year was chosen Fellow of Allsouls coll. Afterwards entering into the sacred function, he became Chaplain in Ordinary to K. James, Doctor of Div. Principal of St. Albans hall, and Chapl. in Ord. to K. Ch. 1. He was reputed, considering his age, a very learned man, able for the Pulpit, and well read in polemical Divinity, as some of his lucubrations shew. There was nothing of his composition so mean, which the greatest person did not value: and those Sermons of his making, which were published after his death, were looked upon as several choice pieces, or at least such, as would prove serviceable to the Church and Common-wealth. His works are.

At length, after he had lived 34. years, he was, to the great grief of many, untimely snatched away by the Plague that was then in Oxon. 25. July in sixteen hundred twenty and five, and was privately buried, late at night, in the south yard belonging to S. Maries Church within this University, leaving then behind him a disconsolate Widdow named Elizabeth, Daughter of Dr. Rob. Hovenden sometimes Warden of Alls. coll. besides children. Over his grave was soon after an altar-monument erected, with an Epitaph engraven thereon; a copy of which you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 181. b.

RAPHAEL THORIUS, commonly called Thoris, a French man born, was in his younger days conversant among the Oxonians in the condition of a Sojourner, and made a considerable progress in the faculty of medicine, but took no degree therein, only numbred among those of the Physick line. Afterwards he settled in London, practiced that faculty with good success and was in his time accounted (c) Coryphæus Medici gregis; and as a Physician famous, so no vulgar Poet. The works that he hath written are many, but none were published till after his death; the titles of some of which follow.

Epistolæ duæ de Isaaci Casauboni morbi mortisque causa. written in 1614. Put at the end of Isaac Casaubon's epistles, published by Joh. Freder. Gronovius, 1638. qu. In the first of Car. 1. when the plague raged in London, he acted more for the publick (by exposing his person too much) than his most dear concern. Wherefore being deeply infected with that disease, died of it in his house in the parish of S. Bennet Finck, in Jul. or Aug. in sixteen hundred twenty and five, but where he was buried, I know not, unless in the Church or Ch. yard of that parish. He left behind him a Son named John, whom I shall elsewhere mention, and a most dear friend who lamented his death in a Lat. Poem (not to be contem'd) entit. Lessus in funere Raphaelis Thorii Medici & Poeta præstantissimi, &c. In which, if it can be seen, (which I think not, for I never saw but one) you may read many things justly said of him.

JOHN FLORIO the Resolute, as he used to write himself, was born in London, in the latter end of the reign of K. H. 8. a little before which time, his Father (descended from the Florii of Sienna in Tuscany) and Mother, who were Waldenses, had fled from the Valtoline into England for religion sake. But when K. Ed. 6. died and the protestant religion silenc'd, by the succession of Qu. Mary, they left England, and went to another Country, where Jo. Florio received his puerile literature. After Protestantism was restored by Q. Elizabeth, they return'd and Florio for a time lived in this University. At length Rich. Barnes Bishop of Durham sending his Son Emanuel to Magd. coll. to obtain Acad. literature in the quality of a Commoner, about 1576. Florio was appointed to attend him as a Tutor in the Italian and French tongues. At which time wearing a Gown, he was matriculated as a member of that house in 1581. aged about 36 years, and as a teacher and instructor of certain Scholars in the University. After K. James came to the Crown he was appointed Tutor to Pr. Henry for those languages, and at length made one of the Privy Chamber, and Clerk of the closet, to Qu. Anne, to whom he was a Tutor also. He was a very useful man in his profession, zealous in the religion he professed, and much devoted to the English nation. His works are,

His first fruits, which yeild familiar speech, merry proverbs witty sentences and golden sayings. Lond. 1578. qu. 91. oct.

His second fruits to be gathered of twelve Trees, of divers but delightful tastes to the tongues of Italian and English men. Lond. 1591. oct.

Dictionary Ital. and English. Lond. 1597. 98. fol. Which Dictionary was by him afterwards augmented, and to the honour of Queen Anne did intitle it, Queen Anna's new world of words. Lond. 1611. fol. which for the variety of words, was far more copious than any extant in the world at that time. But this notwithstanding being also defective, our author did, out of other Dictionaries and Italian authors, which came accidentally into his hands, collect out of them an addition of many thousand words and phrases relating to Arts, Sciences, and Exercises, intending, if he had lived, to come out with a third edition. After his death, his additions being transmitted to Gio. Torriano an Italian and professor of the Italian tongue in London, were by him diligently perused, and in very many places supplied out of the generally approved Dictionaries of the Academici della Crusca, and several others that were set forth since Florio's death. The said Torriano also did much correct the English interpretations, and where there was cause, he reduced them to their genuine sense, as they are now used in these modern times. Which additions and corrections were printed at Lond. 1659. fol. Florio also translated from French into English, The Essays of Michael Lord of Montaigne. Lond. 1603. 13. 32. fol. and others things, as 'tis said, but such I have not yet seen. At length retiring to Fulham in Middlesex to avoid the plague raging in London, was there overtaken by it in his old age, of which he died in Aug. or Sept. in sixteen hundred twenty and five and received, as I suppose, sepulture either in the Ch. or yard there. I have several times sent for his Epitaph, but receiving none, you may take this for one,

—Virtute sua contentus, nobilis arte,

Floret adhuc, & adhuc florebit; floriat ultra
Florius, hæc specie floridus, optat amans.

THOMAS LODGE, was descended from those of his name living in Lincolnshire, but whether born there, I cannot tell, made his first entry into this University about 1573. and was afterwards Servitor or Scholar under the learned and vertuous Mr. Edward Hobze of Trinity coll. where making early advances, his ingenuity began at first to be observed by several of his compositions in Poetry. After he had taken one degree in Arts, and had spent some time in exercising his fancy among the Poets in the great City, he was esteemed, (not Jo. Hall of Emanuel coll. in Cambridge excepted) the best for Satyr among English men. At length his mind growing more serious, he studied Physick, for the improvement of which he travelled beyond the Seas, took the degree of Dr. of that faculty at Avenion, returned and was incorporated in the University in the latter end of Qu. Elizabeth. Afterwards settling in London he practiced it, became much frequented for his success in it, especially by the R. Catholics (of which number he was by many suspected to be one) and was as much cried up to his last for Physick, as he was in his younger days for his poetical fancy. He hath written,

Treatise in defence of Plays.—This I have not yet seen, nor his Pastoral Songs and Madrigals, besides several other things which are as it were lost to the generality of Scholars. He also translated into English (1) Josephus his History or Antiquities of the Jews. Lond. 1602. 99. 20. &c. fol. (2) The works both moral and natural of Luc. An. Seneca. Lond. 1614. 20. fol. &c. This eminent Doctor who practiced his faculty in Warwick Lane in the beginning of K. Jam. 1. and afterwards on Lambert-hill, removed thence a little before his last end into the parish of S. Mary Magd. in Old Fishstreet, London, where he made his last exit (of the Plague I think) in September, in sixteen hundred twenty five, leaving then behind him a Widow called Joan, but where buried, unless in the Church or yard there, I know not. His memory is celebrated by several Poets, whose Encomiums of him being frequent, I shall for brevity sake pass them now by, and proceed to the next who had a name among those of his persuasion for an eminent Theologist.

HENRY HOLLAND, was born at Darenty, commonly called Dantry in Northamptonshire, educated in Grammar learning in Eaton School near to Windsore, elected Scholar of S. Johns coll. in 1565. took one degree in Arts, left that house soon after, his Friends, Country and Religion, and went to Doray in Flanders, where making a considerable progress in the Theological faculty, was made Priest and Bach. of Div. Afterwards he went to Rheims, and in the English coll. there was a most noted preacher for several years, and at length gave his assisting hand to the Translation of the Rheimish Testament. Soon after he was sent into the English Harvest, to gain souls to his religion, but finding that employment dangerous, he retired to Doray again, where being made Licentiate of Divinity, read and interpreted divine Letters for many years.

yet be satisfied in it) was given by Dr. T. B. to Cosmo Prince of Tuscany when he was received and entertained by the Univ. of Oxon 1669. But let this report remain with the author, while I tell you that this Sir John Davies giving way to fate in his House called Bereconri, in the parish of Pangbourne in Berks, 14. May in sixteen hundred twenty and five, was buried in the North side of the Chancel of the Church at Pangbourne. Over his Grave was a very fair Mon. erected, whereon his Statue in Armour lies between the Statues of his two Wives. He left behind him a Son of both his Names, who was a Gent. Com. of Glouc. hall, 1626. and afterwards a Knight, but neither he, nor his Father, was author of the History of the Caribby Islands printed 1666. fol. but another John Davies.

518. WILLIAM BARLOWE, Son of Will. Barlowe, sometimes B. of Chichester (mentioned among these writers under the year 1568) was born, as it seems, in Pembroke-shire, while his Father was Bishop of S. David, became a Com. of Ball. coll. about 1560, and four years after, took a degree in Arts: which being completed by Determination, he left the University before he proceeded in that faculty, and afterwards travelling, became very well skill'd in the Art of Navigation. About the year 1573. he entred into the Sacred Function, was afterwards Prebendary of Winchester, Rector of Easton near to that City, Chaplain to Prince Henry, and at length Archdeacon of Salisbury: To which last he was collated, on the death of Dr. Ralph Pickover, on the 12. of March 1614. This was the person who had knowledge in the Magnet 20 years before Dr. Will. Gilbert published his book of that subject, and therefore by those that knew him, he was accounted superiour, or at least equal to that Doctor for an industrious and happy searcher and finder out of many rare and magnetical secrets. He was the first that made the inclinatory instrument transparent, and to be used pendant, with a glass on both sides, and a ring on the top, whereas Dr. Gilberts hath but of one side, and to be set on a foot. And moreover, he hang'd him in a Compass-box, where with two ounces weight it was made fit for use at Sea. Secondly, he was the first that found out and shewed the difference between Iron and Steel, and their tempers for Magnetical uses, which hath given life and quickning, universally to all Magnetical Instruments whatsoever. Thirdly, he was the first that shewed the right way of touching Magnetical Needles. Fourthly, he was the first that found out and shewed the piecing and cementing of Loadstones. And lastly, the first that shewed the reasons why a Loadstone being double capped, must take up so great weight. The books which he hath published for use are these.

The Navigators supply: containing many things of principal importance belonging to Navigation, with the description and use of divers instruments framed chiefly for that purpose, &c. Lond. 1597. qu. Dedic. to Rob. Earl of Essex.

Magnetical advertisements: or divers pertinent observations and approved experiments concerning the nature and properties of the Loadstone, &c. Lond. 1616. qu. Ded. to Sir Dudley Digges Knight, because of his rare learning, joyned with piety, and accompanied with a pleasing carriage toward every man; which were the chief reasons that caused all good men to love him. Upon the publication of this book, a certain Cantabrigian named Mark Ridley, Doctor of Physick and Philosophy, sometimes Physician to the English Marchants trading in Russia, afterwards chief Physician to the Emperour of that Country (as he entitles himself) and at length one of the eight Principals or Elects of the coll. of Physicians at London, made Animadversions upon it; whereupon our author came out in vindication of himself with this book.

A brief discovery of the idle animadversions of Mark Ridley Doct. in Physick, upon a treatise entit. Magnetical Advertisements—Lond. 1618. qu. What other things he hath written I know not as yet, nor any thing else of the said books, only that seven years before the Magnetical Advertisements were published, he sent a copy of them in MS. to the learned Sir Tho. Chaloner, which he mislaying or embesling, he sent him, upon his desire, another copy, and that being imparted to others, the author afterwards, before its publication, met with many portraictures of his Magnetical implements, and divers of his propositions published in print in another mans name, and yet some of them not rightly understood by the party usurping them.

He concluded his last day in sixteen hundred twenty and five, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Easton before mentioned. To his Archdeaconry of Salisbury was collated Tho. Marler on the 27. of June the same year, but who to his Prebendship of Winchester, I know not as yet. Soon after was an Epitaph put over Mr. Barlows Grave running thus. Deposuitum Gulielmi Barlowe Archideaconi Sarisburiensis, Prebendarii Ecclesie Cath. Winton, & Rectoris Ecclesie de Easton; qui cum sedulam per annos 52. edificationi corporis christi navasset Operam, ad meliorem Vitam migravit Maii 25. An. Dom. 1625.

EDWARD CHALONER, second Son of Sir Tho. Chaloner of Steeple Claydon in Bucks Knight (whom I have before mentioned) was born in the County of Middlesex, particularly, as it seems, at Cheswick, where his Father and Mother lived, and both were buried; applyed his muse to Academical studies in the condition of a Commoner in the coll. of S. Mary Magd. 1604. aged 14. took the degrees in Arts, that of Master being compleated 1610. and the next year was chosen Fellow of Allsouls coll. Afterwards entering into the sacred function, he became Chaplain in Ordinary to K. James, Doctor of Div. Principal of St. Albans hall, and Chapl. in Ord. to K. Ch. 1. He was reputed, considering his age, a very learned man, able for the Pulpit, and well read in polemical Divinity, as some of his lucubrations shew. There was nothing of his composition so mean, which the greatest person did not value: and those Sermons of his making, which were published after his death, were looked upon as several choice pieces, or at least such, as would prove serviceable to the Church and Common-wealth. His works are.

Six Sermons, as (1) Babel, or the confusion of Languages on Gen. 11. 7. (2) Naioth, or the University Charter, on Am. 4. 14. (3) Ephesus Common-Pleas. (4) Judah's prerogative. (5) The Gentiles creed. (6) Paul's peregrination, or the travellers guide, &c. Lond. 1623. oct.

Unde Zizania? The orig. and progress of Heresie, Sermon before K. Jam. at Theobalds, on Mat. 13. 27. Lond. 1624. qu. 1b. 1638. in tw.

Credo Ecclesiam S. Catholicam. I believe the holy Cath. Church, the authority, universality and visibility of the Ch. handled and discussed. Lond. 1625. quarto, and 38. in tw.

Six Sermons, as (1) The Crebians convulsion and reformation, on Tit. 1. 13. (2) The ministers charge and mission, on Mat. 20. 6. (3) Gods bounty and Gentiles ingratitude. (4) Afflictions the Christians portion. (5) Duty and affinity of the faithful. (6) No peace with Rome, &c. Oxon. 1629. qu.

Status questionum inter nos & pontificios—MS. in qu. containing 92. pages in Lat. in the Libr. of Dr. Tho. Barlow. At length, after he had lived 34. years, he was, to the great grief of many, untimely snatched away by the Plague that was then in Oxon. 25. July in sixteen hundred twenty and five, and was privately buried, late at night, in the south yard belonging to S. Maries Church within this University, leaving then behind him a disconsolate Widdow named Elizabeth, Daughter of Dr. Rob. Hoveden sometimes Warden of Allf. coll. besides children. Over his grave was soon after an altar-monument erected, with an Epitaph engraven thereon; a copy of which you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 181. b.

RAPHAEL THORIUS, commonly called 520. Thoris, a French man born, was in his younger days conversant among the Oxonians in the condition of a Sojourner, and made a considerable progress in the faculty of medicine, but took no degree therein, only numbered among those of the Physick line. Afterwards he settled in London, practiced that faculty with good success and was in his time accounted (c) Coryphæus Medici gregis; and as a Physician famous, so no vulgar Poet. The works that he hath written are many, but none were published till after his death; the titles of some of which follow.

Hymnus Tabaci, sive de Pacto libri duo. Which books being procured from the author in Feb. 1624. by Ludov. & Kinschor, were by him published at Lond. (1627.) oct. This elegant Lat. Poem was translated into English verse by Pet. Hansted M. A. of Cambridge, afterwards D. D.—Lond. 1651. oct.

(c) R. A. E. in lib. suo cui tit. est Lessus in funere Rapp. Thorii, &c. Lond. 1625. qu.

Cheimonpegnia.

Cheimonopegnia. A winter song in Lat. verse—published also by the said Kinschot, (1627.) oct. and translated into English, by P. Hausted before mentioned.

Epistolæ duæ de Isaac Casauboni morbi mortisque causâ. written in 1614. Put at the end of Isaac Casaubons epistles, published by Joh. Freder. Grovovius, 1638. qu. In the first of Car. 1. when the plague raged in London, he acted more for the publick (by exposing his person too much) than his most dear concern. Wherefore being deeply infected with that disease, died of it in his house in the parish of S. Bennet Finck, in Jul. or Aug. in sixteen hundred twenty and five, but where he was buried, I know not, unless in the Church or Ch. yard of that parish. He left behind him a Son named John, whom I shall elsewhere mention, and a most dear friend who lamented his death in a Lat. Poem (not to be contemn'd) entit. Lessus in funere Raphaelis Thorii Medici & Poeta præstantissimi, &c. In which, if it can be seen, (which I think not, for I never saw but one) you may read many things justly said of him.

^{1625.} JOHN FLORIO the Resolute, as he used to write himself, was born in London, in the latter end of the reign of K. H. 8. a little before which time, his Father (descended from the Florii of Sienna in Tuscany) and Mother, who were Waldenses, had fled from the Valtoline into England for religion sake. But when K. Ed. 6. died and the protestant religion silenc'd, by the succession of Qu. Mary, they left England, and went to another Country, where Jo. Florio received his puerile literature. After Protestantism was restored by Q. Elizabeth, they return'd and Florio for a time lived in this University. At length Rich. Barnes Bishop of Durham sending his Son Emanuel to Magd. coll. to obtain Acad. literature in the quality of a Commoner, about 1576. Florio was appointed to attend him as a Tutor in the Italian and French tongues. At which time wearing a Gown, he was matriculated as a member of that house in 1581. aged about 36 years, and as a teacher and instructor of certain Scholars in the University. After K. James came to the Crown he was appointed Tutor to Pr. Henry for those languages, and at length made one of the Privy Chamber, and Clerk of the closet, to Qu. Anne, to whom he was a Tutor also. He was a very useful man in his profession, zealous in the religion he professed, and much devoted to the English nation. His works are,

His first fruits, which yeild familiar speech, merry proverbs witty sentences and golden sayings. Lond. 1578. qu. 91. oct.

Perfect introduction to the Italian and English tongues.—Printed with the former, and both dedicated to Rob. Earl of Leicester.

His second fruits to be gathered of twelve Trees, of divers but delightful tastes to the tongues of Italian and English men. Lond. 1591. oct.

Garden of recreation, yeilding six thousand Italian Proverbs—Printed with the former.

Dictionary Ital. and English. Lond. 1597. 98. fol. Which Dictionary was by him afterwards augmented, and to the honour of Queen Anne did intitle it, Queen Anna's new world of words. Lond. 1611. fol. which for the variety of words, was far more copious than any extant in the world at that time. But this notwithstanding being also defective, our author did, out of other Dictionaries and Italian authors, which came accidentally into his hands, collect out of them an addition of many thousand words and phrases relating to Arts, Sciences, and Exercises, intending, if he had lived, to come out with a third edition. After his death, his additions being transmitted to Gio. Torriano an Italian and professor of the Italian tongue in London, were by him diligently perused, and in very many places supplied out of the generally approved Dictionaries of the Academici della crufca, and several others that were set forth since Florio's death. The said Torriano also did much correct the English interpretations, and where there was cause, he reduced them to their genuine sense, as they are now used in these modern times. Which additions and corrections were printed at Lond. 1659. fol. Florio also translated from French into English, The Essayes of Michael Lord of Montaigne. Lond. 1603. 13. 32. fol. and others things, as 'tis said, but such I have not yet seen. At length retiring to Fulham in Middlesex to avoid the plague raging in London, was there overtaken by it in his old age, of which he died in Aug. or Sept. in sixteen hundred twenty and five and received, as I suppose, sepulture either in the Ch. or yard there. I have several times sent for his Epitaph, but receiving none, you may take this for one,

—Virtute sua contentus, nobilis arte,
Italus Ore, Anglus pectore, uterque opere.
Floret adhuc, & adhuc florebit, floriât ultra
Florius, hâc specie floridus, optat amans.

THOMAS LODGE, was descended from those ^{522.} of his name living in Lincolnshire, but whether born there, I cannot tell, made his first entry into this University about 1573. and was afterwards Servitour or Scholar under the learned and vertuous Mr. Edward Hoby of Trinity coll. where making early advances, his ingenuity began at first to be observed by several of his compositions in Poetry. After he had taken one degree in Arts, and had spent some time in exercising his fancy among the Poets in the great City, he was esteemed, (not Jos. Hall of Emanuel coll. in Cambridge excepted) the best for Satyr among English men. At length his mind growing more serious, he studied Physick, for the improvement of which he travelled beyond the Seas, took the degree of Dr. of that faculty at Avenion, returned and was incorporated in the University in the latter end of Qu. Elizabeth. Afterwards settling in London he practised it, became much frequented for his success in it, especially by the R. Catholicks (of which number he was by many suspected to be one) and was as much cried up to his last for Physick, as he was in his younger days for his poetical fancy. He hath written,

Alarum against Usurers, containing tried experiences against worldly abuses. Lond. 1584. qu.

History of Forbonius and Prisæria, with truths complaint over England—Printed with the Alarum.

Euphues Golden Legacy found after his death in his cell at Silexedra, bequeathed to Philautus Sonnes, nursed up with their Father in England. Lond. 1590. &c. qu.

Mary Magd.* in Old Fishstreet, London, where he made his last exit (of the Plague I think) in September, in sixteen hundred twenty five, leaving then behind him a ^{1625.} Widdow called Joan, but where buried, unless in the Church or yard there, I know not. His memory is celebrated by several Poets, whose Encomiums of him being frequent, I shall for brevity sake pass them now by, and proceed to the next who had a name among those of his persuasion for an eminent Theologist.

HENRY HOLLAND, was born at Darenty ^{523.} commonly called Dantry in Northamptonshire, educated in Grammar learning in Eaton School near to Windsore, elected Scholar of S. Johns coll. in 1565. took one degree in Arts, left that house soon after, his Friends, Country and Religion, and went to Doway in Flanders, where making a considerable progress in the Theological faculty, was made Priest and Bach. of Div. years in the Monastery of Anchine near to that place. His works are,

De venerabili Sacramento.

De Sacrificio Misse. Duac. 1609.

Carmina diversa, with other things printed beyond the Seas, which seldom, or never, come into these parts. He gave way to fate in a good old age, within the said Monastery of Anchine, on the 28. day of Sept. in sixteen hundred twenty and five, and was buried in the Cloyster there. Over his grave is an Epitaph beginning thus.

Dantia me genuit, me clara Vigornia fovit,

Astona me docuit, post docet Oxonium.

The rest you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 307. b. In this Hen. Holland's time were one, two, or more writers of both his names, as (1) Hen. Hol. who wrote A treatise against Witchcraft, &c. Camb. 1590. 1qu. and the same, as it seems, who published Spiritual preservations against the Pestilence; and added thereunto, An admonition concerning the use of Physick. Both printed 1603. qu. (2) H. Hol. who published the Hist. of Adam, or the four-fold state of Man, &c. Pr. 1606. qu. and Christian Exercise of Fasting, private and publick, &c. Pr. 1596. qu. Whether this H. Holland be the same with the first, (who was of Cambridge, as it seems,) I cannot tell, unless I see their respective books; neither can I say to the contrary but that he may be the same H. Holland, who published the Posthumia of his Brother Abrah. Holland sometimes of Trin. coll. in Cambridge. — Lond. 1626. Which Abraham (who was author also of a Poem, called, Naumachia; or Hollands Sea-fight. Lond. 1622. qu.) died on the 18. of Febr. 1625. (3) Hen. Holland, Son of Philemon Holland a Physician and Schoolmaster of the City of Coventry, who was born there, travelled with John Lord Harington into the Palatinate, in 1613. and collected and wrote, Monumenta Sepulchralia Ecclesie S. Pauli Lond. Printed in qu. Also Herologia Anglica, five effigies, vita & elogia clarorum & doctorum aliquot Anglorum, ab an. 1500. ad 1620. Lond. 1620. in two tomes. fol. and did engrave and pub. a book, intit. A book of Kings, being a true and lively Effigies of all our English Kings from the Conquest till this present, &c. 1618. But this Hen. Holland was not educated either in Oxon or Cambridge, having been a Member of the Society of the Stationers in London. See in the Fasti, among the incorporations, an. 1572.

HENRY FINCH, second Son of Sir Thom. Finch of Eastwell in Kent, was born in that County, and for a time educated in this University, particularly, as I conceive, in Oriel coll. wherein several of his Surname and Family studied in the time of Q. Elizabeth. From Oxon he was translated to Greys Inn, wherein making great proficiency in the Municipal Laws, became a Councillour of note, Autumn or Summer-Reader of that house, 2 Jac. 1. Serjeant at Law 1614. and one of the Kings Serjeants, and a Knight, two years after, being then in great esteem for his knowledge in his profession. He hath written,

Nomotexnia; cestascavoir, un description del common Leys d'Angleterre solonique les rules del Art, &c. Lond. 1613. fol. in 4 books. Done into English by the same author, under this title, Of Law; or a discourse thereof, in 4 books. Lond. 1627. 36. 61. &c. oct. From the said book is mostly extracted another, intit. A summary of the Common Law of England. Lond. 1654. oct. done by another hand. Our author Finch also wrote,

Of the calling of the Jews. — By which book it appears, that the studies of the author, were not altogether confin'd to the Common Law. But his judgment therein, as to the subject matter, dissenting from the opinions of ingenious persons, yet they cannot otherwise but allow him to have learnedly maintained an Errour. He departed this life on the eleventh day of Octob. in sixteen hundred twenty and five, and was buried, as I conceive, in St. Martins Church near Canterbury, leaving then behind him a Son, begotten on the body of his Wife Ursula, Daughter and Heir of Will. Thways, called John Finch, born the 17. Sept. 1584. educated in the Common Law in Greys Inn, afterwards a Knight, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and Lord Finch of Fordwyche, forced out of England by the severity of the Members of the Long Parliament, an. 1640. had leave afterwards to return, and lived privately at the Mote near Canterbury, and dying the 20. Nov. an. 1660. was buried in the Church of S. Martin before-mentioned. This John Lord Finch (who had a younger Brother called Henry) seems to have had some considerable knowledge in Mathematicks and Astronomy, as it appears by a Manuale Mathematicum, curiously written on Velom with his own hand, preserved to this day as a rarity in Dugdale's Press, among the MSS. in the Aslmolean Museum.

RICHARD FOWNS, a Ministers Son, and a Worcestershire man born, was elected Student of Ch. Ch. 1577. aged 17. took the degrees in Arts, became Chaplain to Prince Henry, Bach. and D. of D. 1605. and about that time Rector of Stoke upon Severn, commonly called Severnstoke, in his own Country. He hath written, Trifagion, or the three Offices of Christ. Lond. 1619. qu. He was buried in the Church of Severnstoke, 25. Nov. in sixteen hundred twenty and five, and soon after was put a Mon. over his grave with an inscription thereon, but so miserably defaced in the Civil War that brake out 17 years after, that 'tis not now (as I have been informed) legible, otherwise I should have given you a copy of it here. A Latin Sermon of one Rich. Fowns, preached on 2 Theff. 2. 34. was published in 1660. but whether preached by our author, or another of both his names, I cannot tell, because I have not yet seen it.

CHRISTOPHER BAGSHAW was originally descended from the Bagshaws, living at Ridge or Abney in Derbyshire, but the name of the place wherein he received his first breath, I cannot yet find. In 1572, he was by the endeavours of Rob. Persons (afterwards a Jesuit) elected Probationer-Fellow of Balliol coll. being then a Bach. of Arts, and a celebrated Logician and Philosopher. Soon after proceeding in his Faculty, he was much noted for his zeal to Protestantism, yet proved troublesome in his publick disputes, and in his behaviour towards Persons. About the year 1579. he was Principal, or at least Deputy, for a time, of Gloucester hall; where also being disliked, he left that place soon after, and his Fellowship in 1582. which was pronounced void the year following. About that time he went beyond the Seas, changed his Religion, and being made a Priest in France, and getting helps and directions from Fa. Persons, he journeyed to Rome, where for some time he lived in the English college. But being troublesome there also, and raising great garboyles among the Scholars of that place, Cardinal Boncompagno, Protector of the English Nation, expelled him thence, as one (a) that had no good will for him saith: Yet our author in his own vindication tells (b) us, that he had a Benedicessit, and departed very orderly. Afterwards he returned to Paris, where, as 'tis said, he was made Doctor of Div. and one of the Sorbon, at which time, and after, the Jesuits used to stile him, Doctor Erraticus, and Doctor per Saltum. Afterwards he was sent into England to gain Souls to his Religion, but taken and committed Prisoner to Wishich Castle in Cambridgeshire, where I find him in 1593. among many other Priests and Gentlemen of the Rom. Cath. Religion, that had some years before been secured in that place. 'Tis said (c) while he continued there, that he carried away the glory and fame of all that was heretofore laudably done in that Castle, before Fa. Edmonds alias Weston a Jesuit began to shew his tricks, and then that Party, and those Lay-persons that favoured them, would condemn Bagshaw as (d) a man of no worth, unruly, disordered, and a disobedient person, not to be favoured or respected by any, &c. Afterwards being freed from that prison, he went beyond Sea again, where he ended his days. He hath written,

An answer to certain points of a Libel, called, An Apology of the Subordination in England. Par. 1603. oct. He had a considerable hand also in writing a book, intit.

Declaratio motuum ac turbationum inter Jesuitas & Sacerdotes Seminariorum in Anglia. Rothomag. 1601. in qu. Set out under the name of one Joh. Mush a Yorkshire man born, and a learned Priest, who engaged himself much in composing the differences that happened among the Priests and Jesuits in Wishich Castle. Dr. Bagshaw had also a hand in,

A true relation of the Faction began at Wishich by Father Edmunds alias Weston a Jesuit, 1595, and continued since by Father Walley alias Garnet, the Provincial of the Jesuits in England, and by Fa. Persons in Rome. — Printed 1601. qu. This Dr. Bagshaw died and was buried at Paris after the year sixteen hundred twenty and five, as I have been informed by Franc. à Sancta Clara, who remembered and knew the Doctor well, but had forgotten the exact time of his death.

JOHN GEE, the Son of a Minister of Devon, but whether of John or George Gee, whom I have before mentioned in Edw. Gee, under the year 1618. I cannot justly say, was entered into Brañose coll. in 1613. aged 16. where making no long stay, he entered himself a Bachelor among his Countrymen of Exeter college, and having holy Orders conferred on him, after he had taken one degree in Arts, became beneficed at Newton near to Winwick in Lancashire, of which last place Mr. Josias Horne being then Parson, Gee had oftentimes several conferences with him concerning matters of Religion; but they favouring much of a mind inclining to Popery, Mr. Horne and the neighbouring Ministers concluded among themselves, that he had changed his Religion before he had left that place. Thence taking his rambles, he retired to London, and became acquainted with the noted persons of the R. Cath. Perswasion that then lived there. But at length being moved to leave them, and his opinions newly embraced, by the urgent letters of his Father, and by the valid reasons concerning the vanity (as he term'd it) of that Religion by Dr. Abbot Archb. of Canterbury, (who sent for him upon notice received that he had been at the doleful Even-song in the Black Friars in London, 26. Oct. 1623.) became a bitter Enemy to the Romanists, and studied to do them what mischief he could by these books following.

The Foot out of the Snare: with a detection of sundry late practices and impostures of the Priests and Jesuits in England, &c. Lond. 1624. qu.

A gentle excuse to Mr. Greg. Musket for stiling him Jesuit.— These two, which go, and are joyned together, were printed four times in the said year 1624. because all the copies, or most of them, were bought up by R. Catholics before they were dispersed, for fear their lodgings, and so consequently themselves, should be found out and discovered, by the catalogues of all such Priests, Jesuits, Popish Physicians, Chyrurgions, &c. with the names of the streets, lanes, &c. in London, where they mostly lived; which were printed at the end of the Gentle Excuse before-mentioned. Our author Gee hath also written and published, Hold fast: Sermon at Pauls Cross on Rev. 3. 11. Lond. 1624. qu.

New shreds of the old Snare; containing the apparitions of two Female Ghosts, the copies of divers letters, &c. especially Indulgences purchased at Rome, &c. Lond. 1624. qu. For the publishing of which books, and for his mutability of mind, he was very much blamed by both parties, especially by those of the Rom. perswasion, as I have been several times informed by a grave Bach. of Div. Mr. Rich. Washbourne Chanter of Ch. Ch. in Oxon, who had been his contemporary in Exeter coll. Which person having known Gee well, and what he was, as to his life and conversation, blamed the writer of this book much, for honouring the memory of such a sorry fellow as he was, in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. He was afterwards beneficed at Tenterden in Kent, where he died and was buried, but when, I cannot yet tell, leaving then behind him a young Brother named Orlando Gee, afterwards a Knight. One Joh. Gee was Minister of Dunsford in Devon, who died about the beginning of 1631. leaving a Relict behind him called Sarah. Which Joh. Gee was perhaps Father to the aforesaid Joh. Gee the writer. Qu.

RICHARD VERSTEGAN, or as some call him Rich. Rowland, a great reviver of our English antiquities, and a most admirable Critick in the Saxon and Gothick languages, ought with all due ceremony to crave a place among these writers, not only because he is little remembered among authors, but also for that he had received part of his education among the Oxonians. His Grandfather who was called Theodore Rowland Verstegan, was born (*) in the Duchy of Gelderland, and there descended of an ancient and worshipful Family. From which Duchy, when it had been much ruined, wasted, and depopulated by the intestine Wars there raised, and continued by Charles Duke thereof, and Philip the Archduke, and Charles the fifth his Son, he the said Verstegan being then a young man, and deprived of his Friends in the said Wars, came into England about the latter end of Hen. 7. and there married, and soon after died, leaving behind him a Son but nine months old, which gave cause of making his fortune meaner, than else it might have been. Afterwards when the said Son grew up to be about 16 years of age, he was bound an Apprentice to a Cooper: Nor is this any discredit, Wolfgangus Musculus his Father being of that Trade. This Cooper was Father to our author Rich. Verstegan, born in the Parish of St. Catherine, (near to the Tower of London,) where his Parent mostly lived, and gained so comfortable a subsistence by his Trade, that he made shift to give his Son ingenious and Grammatical education, which being improved by Academical in this University, where he was mostly known by the name of Rowland, became esteemed for some parts of learning that were not then among the Academians regarded. Afterwards to avoid Oaths, he left the University without a degree, and being by that time a zealous R. Catholick, he left England, went into the Spanish Netherlands, and settled at Antwerp, where he composed,

Theatrum crudelitatum Hereticorum nostri temporis. Antw. 1592. qu. in 12 sh. Whether ever printed before, as some say it was, I cannot tell. This book is full of Cuts, representing the hanging, quartering, and beheading, or butchering of Popish Martyrs, engraven from the delineations made with the Pen of Verstegan, who was observed, while in England, to be much delighted in drawing and painting. The verses under, to explain the meaning of, them, were made by one Joh. Bochius born at Bruxells, and then (1592.) Register, if I mistake not, at Antwerp. Afterwards, the Rebellious League beginning, he conveyed himself and books to Paris, where the English Embassadour complained of him to K. Hen. 3. and desired that he being born a Subject to the Q. of England, and then a Fugitive, and one that had abused her by his representation of Cruelties, he might be delivered into his hands, to be sent to England, there to receive reward. And the Embassadour had reason for his request, if that be true which is reported, (†) that K. Hen. 3. was so much possess'd with those cruel pictures, and did put so much credit in them, that he accused Q. Elizabeth of great cruelty, calling her wicked and cruel woman. Yet at the Embassadors desire Verstegan was imprisoned; at which Jean Bouchier that active fire-brand of the League is not a little (*) troubled, and layeth it as an heretical fault on K. Hen. 3. At length Verstegan is released, quits France and returns to Antwerp, where, as 'tis said, he reprinted his book, exercised the Trade of Printing, and by his rising up only (as one (b) tells us) by Brocade and Spierie for the Hispanish Jesuits, lived then and there (1602.) as if he were an Hidalgo, as who may not be a Gentleman, who lives so far from home, where he is not known, &c. At that time, and before, the Jesuits and Secular Priests falling out in England, each party defended it self by the Pen. In this quarrel Verstegan concerns himself, joyning with the Jesuits, and writing in their behalf, though not one of their number, but rather a Secular, shewing himself as zealous a railer as the best of them: And indeed never was there quarrel composed, of so many hard words, either side considered, yet whether Verstegan hath published any of his railings, or whether they are done in other books, I cannot tell, for I have seen nothing of that nature. Sure I am that about the death of Q. Elizabeth he employed his studies on a more noble subject, which being finished, he published it under this title.

A restitution of decayed intelligence in antiquities concerning the most noble and renowned English Nation. Antw. 1605. qu. Before which, Rich. Whyte of Basingstoke, and Rich. Stanyhurst (whom I have elsewhere mentioned) have commendatory verses. In this book are several cuts engraven from the representations drawn with great curiosity by him, which hath advantaged the sale of it much: And I am verily perswaded had the said book been published two years before, I mean before the first edition of Camdens Remaines, which first saw light in 1604. it would have been more cried up, and consequently would have sold more. But however, so it is, that the book hath been so much valued by learned and curious men in times following, that a second impression of it was made at Lond. 1653. in large oct. and another in 1674. oct. He hath also written,

The sundry successive regal governments of the Realm of England. Antw. 1620. printed in one long sheet, wherein are the pictures of a Britain, Roman, Saxon, Dane and Norman, wrought off from a Copper plate: And was the same person, without doubt, with him, who writes himself R. V. author of Odes in imitation of the seven penitential Psalms, with sundry other Poems and Ditties bending to devotion and piety. Printed beyond the Sea in 1601. with the Jesuits mark in the title; for, as I have been informed, Verstegan had some skill in Poetry as well as in Painting. In the said Poems he toucheth on many matters of antiquity, and antient Saints of England. The same R. V. also hath translated into English A dialogue of dying well. Antw. 1603. oct. written in Ital. by Don Peeter of Luca a Can. regular and D. of D. and by the translator dedicated to the Lady Joan Berkley Abbess of the English Nuns of S. Benedi. in Bruxells. The said Verstegan hath written and translated other things, but few of them coming into England, we seldom or never see them. He was living in good condition among the English at Antwerp who had fled for the sake of Religion, under the notion of a Spanish stipendary (having several years before been married to so thrifty and prudent a woman, that she kept up his credit) in the latter end of K. James, and beginning of K. Ch. 1. as one or more Letters written by him to the great Antiquary Sir Rob. Cotton (which I have seen in his Library) shew. And thus much of Rich. Verstegan alias Rowland, of whom Will. Watson Priest will give (*) you a sharp character, and another, stuff (†) enough (beyond the rules of charity) to run down a Dog.

529. JOHN STRADLING, Son of Franc. Stradling by Elizabeth his Wife, was born near to Bristow in Somersetshire, but descended from an antient and Knightly family of his name, living at S. Donats in Glamorganshire, was educated in puerile learning under a learned and pious man named Edw. Green Prebendary of the Cath. Ch. at Bristow, became a Commoner of Brasnose coll. in 1579. aged 16. years or thereabouts, and in 1583. he took a degree in arts as a member of Magd. hall, being then accounted a miracle for his forwardness in learning and pregnancy of parts. Soon after his great worth being discovered in the Metropolis, while he continued in one of the Inns of Court (but especially after he had return'd from his travels beyond the Seas) was courted and admired by the Learned Camden, Sir Joh. Harrington the Poet, Tho. Leyson mention'd before, under the year 1607. and above all, by that most noted Critick and Physician Dr. Jo. Dav. Rhese. He hath written and published,

De vita & morte contemnenda, lib. 3. Franc. 1597. in oct. written to his Uncle Sir Edw. Stradling of S. Donats, whom I have mention'd under the year 1609.

Epigrammatum libri quatuor. Lond. 1607. in oct. Two years after he became heir to his Uncle before mention'd, settled at S. Donats Castle, and was made a Baronet in 1611. at which time he was esteemed a wife and most learned Gentleman. Afterwards being involved in secular affairs and the services of his Country, was taken off from writing till the latter end of the reign of K. Jam. 1. at which time he published a book intit.

Beati pacifici. Printed 1623. but whether in prose or verse I cannot tell, for I have not yet seen it. Afterwards he published, Clar. 1625. Divine Poems in seven several Classes, written to K. Ch. 1. Lond. 1625. qu. At the end of which is an Epitaph made by him on K. Jam. 1. I have sent several times, to several persons in Wales, to have some account of this person, his last end, and his Epitaph, but no returns are yet made.

ARTHUR LAKE, brother to Sir Tho. Lake Knight 130. principal Secretary of State to K. Jam. 1. Son of Almeric Lake or du Lake of the antient borough of Southampton, was born in S. Michaels parish, and educated for a time in the Free-School, there. Afterwards being transplanted to Wykehams School to perfect his Grammar learning, was thence elected probationer Fellow of New coll. and after two years of Probation he was made perpetual Fellow thereof, an. 1589. Five years after that, he proceeded in Arts, entered into the sacred function, was made Fellow of Wykehams coll. near to Winton, about 1600. and three years after Master of the hospital of S. Cross in the place of Dr. Rob. Bennet promoted to the See of Hereford. In 1605. he took the degrees in Divinity, and the same year he was installed Archdeacon of Surrey. Afterwards he was made Dean of Worcester in Apr. 1608. in the room of Dr. Jam. Monutague promoted to the See of Bath and Wells, and at length Bishop of those Cities; to which he was consecrated at Lambeth 8. Dec. 1616. In all these places of honour and employment, he carried himself the same in mind and person, shewing by his constancy, that his virtues were virtues indeed: in all kind of which, whether natural, moral, Theological, personal, or pastoral, he was eminent, and indeed one of the examples of his time. He always lived a single man, exemplary in his life and conversation, and very hospitable. He was also well read in the Fathers and Schoolmen, and had such a command of the Scripture (which made him one of the best preachers) that few went beyond him in his time. The things that he hath written, were not by him published, but by his Friends, after his death; the titles of which follow.

He dyed in sixteen hundred twenty and six, and was buried in an Isle 1626. on the north side of the Choir of Wells Cathedral. Over his grave was soon after laid a plain stone, neither marble nor free, with this engraven on a brass plate fastned thereunto. Here lyeth Arthur Lake Doctor in Divinity late Bishop of Bathe and Wells, who died on the fourth day of May, an. 1626. His brother Sir Thomas before mentioned, who was of Channons near Edgworth in Middlesex, died at Channons 17. Sept. 1630. and was buried on the 19. of the same month.

JOHN DAVIES, the third person of both his 131. names that I have hitherto mention'd among these writers, was born at Chisgrove in the parish of Tisbury in Wiltshire, being the Son of wealthy Tanner of that place, became a Commoner of Queens coll. about the beginning of Mich. Term in the fifteenth year of his age, an. 1585. wherein, having laid a considerable foundation of Academical literature, partly by his own natural parts (which were excellent) and partly by the help of a good Tutor, he was removed (having taken a degree in Arts, as it seems) to the Middle Temple, wherein applying himself to the study of the Common Law, tho he had no great genie to it, was in fine made a Barrester. But so it was that he being a high spirited young man, did, upon some little provocation or punctilio, bastinado Rich. Martin (afterwards Recorder of London) in the common Hall of the Middle Temple, while he was at Dinner. For which act being forthwith expell'd, he retired for a time in private, lived in Oxon in the condition of a Sojourner, and follow'd his studies, tho he wore a cloak. However among his serious thoughts, making reflections upon his own condition, which sometimes was an affliction to him, he composed that excellent Philosophical and Divine Poem called Nosce teipsum. Afterwards by the favour of Thomas Lord Ellesmore Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, he was again restored to his Chamber, was afterwards a Coun-

Concellour, and a Burgess for that Parliament which was held at Westminster in 1601. Upon the death of Q. Elizabeth, he, with the Lord Hunsdon, went into Scotland to congratulate K. James as her Lawful Successor; and being introduced into his presence, the King enquired the names of those Gentlemen who were in the company of the said Lord, and naming John Davies among, who stood behind, them, the King straightway asked, whether he was Nosce Teipsum? and being answered that he was the same, he graciously embraced him, and thenceforth had so great favour for, that soon after he made him his Attorney-general in Ireland. While he held that place, he was made Serjeant at Law, (having never been Reader,) an. 1606. the Poësie of whose Rings that were then given, being Lex publica lux est. Notwithstanding the said degree, he returned into Ireland by his Majesty's leave and dispensation, kept his office of Attorney, and received the honour of Knighthood from his Majesty at Whitehall, 11. Feb. 1607. Afterwards he came into England for altogether, was made one of his Maj. Serjeants at Law here, in 1612. and sundry times appointed one of the Justices of the Assize in divers Circuits. At length being constituted Lord Ch. Justice of the Kings Bench, had his Robes made in order to be setled in that high office, as his Daughter (a) hath several times reported, but died suddenly before the ceremony of settlement or installation could be performed. He was held in great esteem by the noted Scholars of his time, among whom were Will. Camden, Sir Jo. Harrington the Poet, Ben. Johnson, Jo. Selden, Facete Hoskyns, R. Corbet of Ch. Ch. and others, who esteemed him to be a person of a bold Spirit, of a sharp and ready wit, and compleatly learned, but in truth more a Scholar than a Lawyer. His works are,

Or a Poem expressing the antiquity and excellency of dancing, in a dialogue between Penelope and one of her Woers, containing 131 Stanzaes, unfinished.— This being also printed with Nosce Teipsum, they were all three, especially the first, much extoll'd by Scholars of all sorts. Among them I find one, who hath dealt poetically with him by an ingenious copy of verses, which begins thus, Si tua legisset redivivus, &c.

If Plato liv'd and saw these Heaven bred lines, Where thou the Essence of the Soul confines,

chandizes, &c. asserted, &c. Lond. 1656. 59. &c. oct. I find one Sir J. D. Knight, to have published, Reasons Academy. Or, a new post with Sovereign Salve to cure the worlds madness; expressing himself in several essays and witty discourses. Lond. 1620. oct. Written in prose, and at the end of it is Reasons moan, written in verse in eleven Stanzaes. Whether the said Sir J. D. be the same with Sir Joh. Davies, I cannot justly tell. Besides the before-mentioned things (as also Epigrams, as 'tis said) which were published by, and under the name of, Sir Joh. Davies, are several MSS. of his writing and composing, which go from hand to hand, as, (1) Metaphrase of several of K. Davids Psalms. (2) A large Epistle to Rob. E. of Salisbury of the state of the Counties of Monaghan, Fennanagh, and Downe, and of Justices of the Peace, and other Officers of Ireland. written 1607. (3) Speech when he was Speaker of the H. of Commons in Ireland, before Arthur L. Chichester, Visc. Belfast, L. Lieutenant of Ireland, 21. May 1613. These two last, were in the Library of Sir Jam. Ware of Ireland, and are now, if I mistake not, in that of the Earl of Clarendon. (4) An argument upon the question of impositions, digested and divided in sundry chapters. This was in the Library once of Rich. Smith, Secondary of the Poultry-Compter, and with it was bound up an Answer thereunto.—Fol. But the question is, whether this argument be not part of, or involved in, Sir John's Jus imponendi vectigalia before-mentioned. At length he died suddenly in his house in the Strand near to London, in the 57 year of his age, for being well at night, when he went to rest, he was on Thursday morning, the seventh of December, in sixteen hundred twenty and six, found dead in his bed, by an Apoplexy, as 'twas said. It was then commonly rumour'd that his Prophetical Lady had foretold his death in some manner, on the Sunday going before. For while she sat at Dinner by him, she suddenly burst out with tears: Whereupon he asking her what the matter was, she answered, Husband these are your Funeral tears; to which he made reply, Pray therefore spare your tears now, and I will be content that you shall laugh when I am dead. Her name was Elianor Touchet, youngest Daughter to George Lord Audley Earl of Castlehaven, and what she usually predicted, she folded up for the most part in dark expressions, received from a voice, which she frequently heard, as she used to tell her Daughter Lucy, and the others. By this Elianor, Sir Joh. Davies had Issue a Son, who was a natural Idiot, and dying young, the Father made an Epitaph of 4 verses on him, beginning, Hic in visceribus terra, &c. So that the said Lucy being sole Heiress to her Father, Ferdinando Lord Hastings (afterwards Earl of Huntingdon) became a Suitor to her for Marriage; whereupon the Father made this Epigram:

Lucida vis oculos teneri perstrinxit amantis

Nec tamen erravit, nam via dulcis erat.

After the body of Sir John had laid in state for some time, it was conveyed to the Church of St. Martin in the Fields near to Whitehall, where it was solemnly inter'd in the South Isle. Soon after was a monument fastned to the Pillar near his grave, with a large inscription on it, part of which runs thus, Vir ingenio compto, rara facundia, oratione cum soluta, tum numeris astricta, felicissimus; juridicam severitatem morum elegantia, & amantiore eruditione mitigavit: Patronus fidus, judex incorruptus, ingenua pietatis amore, & anxia superstitionis contemptu, juxta insignis, &c. Obiit 8. Id. Dec. 1626. His Widdow afterwards lived mostly at Parton in Hertfordshire, had her Strange and wonderful Prophecies.—Printed in qu. an. 1649. and dying in St. Brides Parish in London, 5. Jul. 1652. was buried near to the relicks of her Husband, and soon after had a large Epitaph of commendations put over her grave. You may see more of her and her Prophecies in the History of the life and death of Dr. Will. Land Archb. of Cant. Part. 2. lib. 4. an. 1634. See also in the Diary, or Breviat of the life of the said Archb.—Printed 1644. p. 18. One Joh. Davies, a Bencher of the Inner Temple, was buried against the Communion Table, in the Temple Church, 20. Aug. 1631. What relation he had to the former, or whether he collected or published Reports, I know not.

See more of him in Edm. Wingate, whom I shall hereafter mention under the year 1656.

533. THOMAS WORTHINGTON, Son of Rich. Worthington by Dorothy his Wife, Dau. of Tho. Charnock of Charnock in Lanc. was born at Blainscough near to Wygan in that County, and being fitted for the Univ. in those parts, he was sent to Ox. about 1566. but to what house of learning, unless to Brause coll. I cannot tell. After he had been drudging in the studies of Logick and Philosophy for about 4 years, he took a degree in Arts, which being compleated by Determination, he left the University, his Country, and Friends, and crossed the Seas to Doway, where he was received with great humanity into the English college, in Feb. 1573. Soon after he took upon him the Priesthood, and in 1577. he was promoted to the degree of Bach. of Divinity, and the year after being translated to the English college at Rheims, was thence sent into England to gain Profelites, but being taken at Islington near to London, in the house of my Progenitor Rich. à Wood his Friend and Countryman, an. 1584. was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London, where remaining some months, was at length released, set on Shipboard with Dr. Jasp. Heywood, Edw. Rishon, Joh. Colleton, and others, and waisted over the Seas to the coast of Normandy, where they were left to shift for themselves. In 1587. he being about to return into England, he was sent by Cardinal Alan to Sir Will. Stanley a Colonel, to whose Regiment in the Low Countries he was by him made Chaplain. In 1588. he was promoted to the degree of D. of D. in the University of Trier in Germany, and in 89. he was sent for to Doway by the Jesuits (whom he was always afraid to offend) to assist Dr. Rich. Barret President of the English college, in the Government of that place. In 91. he was sent to Bruxells, and remitted to the Camp, to exercise the office of Chaplain again; where, with other Exiles, they acted (*) many things which tended much to the destruction of the Q. of England, and not long after returned to Doway again, and by the command of Cardinal Cajetan, Protector of the English Nation, he was made President of the English coll. there, ann. 1599. At length being grown old and unfit to govern, returned into England, lived sometimes in London and sometimes in Staffordshire. But that which is to be farther noted of him is, that having for the most part of his life lived in the habit of a Secular Priest, did about six months before his death take upon him the order and habit belonging to the Society of Jesus. His works are,

Annotations on the Old Testament. Duac. 1609. in two Tomes in qu.

Catalogus Martyrum pro Religione Catholica in Angliâ eccisorum ab an. 1570. ad an. 1612. Printed 1612. and 14. in oct. Before which book is, Narratio de origine Seminariorum, & de Missione Sacerdotum in Angliâ. This Catalogue and Narration, taken mostly from a collection, intit. Concertatio Eccl. Catholica in Angliâ, &c. could not be sold more than for six pence when it was published, (for it contains but 4 sheets in oct.) yet in 1682. when the choice Library of Mr. Rich. Smith (mentioned before in Sir Joh. Davies) was sold by way of Auction, Dr. Tho. Marshall Dean of Gloucester, and Rector of Linc. coll. gave eleven shillings and six pence, being then great bidding for, before he could get it.

The Anchor of Christian Doctrine, wherein the most principal points of Christian Religion, are proved by the only written word of God, &c. Doway 1622. in two thick quarto's, containing four parts, viz. the first vol. one, the other three. These two quarto's were, as one (†) faith, printed at London, and sold by the author in his lodgings in Turnbull-street for 14 shillings, which might have been afforded for five.

The Mysteries of the Rosary. — This I have not yet seen. He also corrected and translated the Doway Bibles, and translated into Lat. and published, Anti-Heretica motiva, &c. written by Rich. Bristow. — Attrebat. 1608. in two Tomes in qu. before which he hath put a lame account of the author. This person Tho. Worthington who was esteemed very learned among those of his persuasion, and had hazarded his life, and done great service for the Cause, did quietly lay down his head, and submit himself to the stroke of death in the house of one Bidulph Esq; of Bidulph, commonly called Biddles in Staffordshire (near to Congleton in Cheshire.) about sixteen hundred twenty and six, and was buried in the Parochial Church there, (as I have been informed by one of his Society who was well acquainted with him,) having some years before his death been made titular Archdeacon of Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire.

ALEXANDER SPICER, a Minister's Son, 534. and a Somersetshire man born, became a Barter of Exeter coll. in 1590. aged about 15. took one degree in Arts, was made Fellow of that house and proceeded in his Faculty. At length entring into the Sacred Function, was a Preacher for some years in these parts: Afterwards upon an invitation, he went into Ireland, where by the favour of Sir Arthur Chichester Baron of Belfast, and L. Dep. of that Country, he became well beneficed and dignified, and in great estimation for his learning. He hath published, David's Petition, on Psal. 19. 13. Lond. 1616. oct.

The Pope at Babylon. Serm. on the 5. of Nov. at Colerain in the North of Ireland, on Dan. 3. 6. Lond. 1617.

Elegies on the death of Arthur Lord Chichester, &c. — Printed 1625. which Lord dying much about the time that K. Jam. 1. of England died, was buried at Belfast in Ireland, to the great grief of his Country. because it was in such a time that it most required his assistance, courage, and wisdom, which are often at odds, and seldom meet, yet in him shook hands as friends, and challenged an equal share in his perfections. Other things were written and published by the said A. Spicer, as some of the Seniors of his coll. have informed me, but such I have not yet seen, nor do I know any thing besides of the author, only that he left behind him the character of an able Scholar, and solid Divine.

WILLIAM PELHAM, the eldest Son of Sir Will. Pelham of Brocklesby in Lincolnshire, Master of the Ordnance, by Elianor his Wife, Daughter of Hen. Nevill Earl of Westmoreland, was born in London, (near, or in, the Tower.)

became Fellow-Commoner of New coll. in the beginning of 1582. aged 14. continued a sedulous Student there, for at least two years, in a Chamber within one of the turrets of the College wall that encompasses the Garden. Afterwards he travelled and improved his learning in the Universities of Strasburg, Heidelberg, Wittenburg, and Lipswick in Germany, as also in Paris and Geneva, and returning to his native Country, settled again for a time in this University, till Mars distracted him from the studies of Minerva, as he himself used to say. But when that Planet was set, he retired to a Country life at Brocklesby, where after he had received satiety of all worldly blessings, did, in his old age, incline his heart to more supernatural contemplations. Which being by him committed to writing, for the benefit of his Children, (of which he had plenty,) were published under this title, Meditations upon the Gospel of S. John. Lond. 1625. in tw. and other things, as his Son Dr. Herbert Pelham, sometimes Fellow of Magd. coll. hath told me, but whether printed I know not. This Sir Will. Pelham, who was Knighted by K. Jam. 1. at Newmarket, 20. Nov. 1616. lived after the publication of that book, two, three, or more years, but when he died I cannot yet find. Among the Sons that he left behind him was Hen. Pelham one, sometimes a Student in this University, afterwards in one of the Inns of Court, and a Barrester. At length being chosen a Burgess for Grantham in Lincolnshire to serve in that unhappy Parliament which began at Westminster 3. Nov. 1640. sided with the Presbyterians, and was by that party elected Speaker of the House of Commons, when the Independent-party fled with Will. Lenthall their Speaker to the Head Quarter of the Army, then at Windsore, 30. Jul. 1647. In which office he continued but till the 6. of Aug. following, at what time the General of the Army (Fairfax) restored Lenthall to his Chair, but suffered Pelham to keep his Recordership of Lincoln City, which he had conferred upon him by the Presbyterians upon the ejection of Sir Charles Dalison.

536. JOHN TERRY received his first breath at Long-Sutton in Hampshire, was elected Probationer Fellow of New college from Winchester School, in 1574. and two years after he was made compleat Fellow. In 1582. he proceeded in Arts, and about 8 years after had the Parsonage of Stockton (in Wilts) conferred upon him, where he always expressed himself a zealous Enemy against the R. Catholics not only in his Lectures and Sermons, but also in his writings; the titles of which follow.

Theological Logick: Or, the trial of truth containing a discovery of the chiefest points of the doctrine of the great Antichrist, and his Adherents the false Teachers of the times. Oxon. 1600. qu. In 1602. was published the second part of Theol. Logick, and in 1625. the third part, both in qu. and the last dedicated to the B. of Bath and Wells.

Reasonableness of wise and holy truth, and the absurdity of foolish and wicked error, Serm. on Joh. 17. ver. 17. Oxon. 1617. qu.

Clar. 1626. Defence of Protestancy, proving that the Protestants Religion hath the promise of Salvation, &c. Lond. 1635. second edition. Before which time the author was dead.

537. ANTHONY HUNGERFORD, Son of Anth. Hungerford of Downe-Ampney in Gloucestershire, by Bridget his Wife, Daughter of one Shelley a Judge, was educated in this University (with other R. Catholics,) but for a short time, for his Father being much troubled with the incumbrances of his Estate, and therefore could not well look after the Son, the Mother, who was a zealous Papist, caused him to be trained up in her Religion from his Childhood. So that carrying his opinion on till 1584. about which time he had left Oxon, being then 20 years of age, staggered somewhat in his opinion upon the reading of Campians book called Decem rationes, wherein he found some undecent passages, but confirmed in his mind soon after by Mr. Tho. Neale of Cassington near Woodstock in Oxfordshire, and at length totally settled by one Twisford a Priest or Jesuit, who was brought to him by George Etheridge a Physician of Oxon. In this settled course he held on till the beginning of the year 1588. at which time it pleased God (as he said) to make a hand that had given the wound, the means to make good the cure, when it aimed at a further mischief, being occasioned mostly from certain words

unwarily dropt from one Hopton a Priest, and his acquaintance, concerning an invasion then about to be made, for the relief chiefly of Rom. Catholics, who laid under the heavy hand (as they said) of Q. Elizabeth. In 1594. one of both his names was actually created Master of Arts, and 'tis supposed that he was the person, because he had formerly spent some time in this University. In 1607. he received the honour of Knighthood, and about that time, (being then of Blackbourton near Witney in Oxfordshire,) wrote,

The advice of a Son professing the Religion established in the present Church of England to his dear Mother a Rom. Catholick. Oxon. 1639. qu. Which book lying by him till his death, and several years after in his Cabinet, his Son Sir Edw. Hungerford carried it at length (upon a sight, as he thought, of the increase of Popery in England) to one of the Chaplains of Dr. Lawd Archb. of Canterbury to have it licensed, an. 1635. but he refusing so to do, because there (*) were several offensive passages in it against the Papists, he therefore got it to be printed at Oxon, and added to it another thing of his Fathers writing, intit.

The memorial of a Father to his dear Children, containing an acknowledgment of God's great mercy, in bringing him to the profession of the true Religion, at this present established in the Church of England.—Finished and compleated for the Press at Blackbourton, in Apr. 1627. This person who hath written other matters of the like nature, but not printed, gave way to fate about the latter end of June in sixteen hundred twenty and seven, and was buried 1627. in the Church at Blackbourton. He left behind him Issue, by his Wife Lucy, Daughter of Sir Walt. Hungerford of Farley Castle in Somersetshire, Sir Edward Hungerford, who had Issue another Edward, made Knight of the Bath at the Coronation of K. Ch. 2. who most unworthily squander'd away the Estate of his Ancestors.

JOHN DAY, Son of a famous Printer of both his 538. names in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, was born near, or over, Aldersgate in London, entered a Commoner of S. Albans hall in 1582. aged 16. elected Fellow of Oriel coll. in 1588. being then Bach. of Arts, proceeded in that Faculty, entered into holy Orders, and became the most frequent and noted Preacher in the University. In the beginning of the Reign of K. Jam. 1. he, with leave from his Society, travelled for 3 years beyond the Seas, whereby he improved himself much in learning and experience, and, as I was about to say, in Calvinism. After his return he was made Vicar of S. Maries Church in Oxon, in Jan. 1608. where, by his constant and painful Preaching, he obtained great love and respect not only from those of the University but City. But missing the Provostship of his Coll. upon the resignation of Mr. Will. Lewis, in 1621. he left his Fellowship and Vicarage in the year following, and by the favour of Sir Will. Soame Knight became Minister of one of the Thirlows (Great Thirlow I think) in Suffolk; where he continued to his dying day, not without some discontent for the loss of the said Provostship. He was a person of great reading, and was admirably well vers'd in the Fathers, Schoolmen, and Councils. He was also a plain Man, a primitive Christian, and wholly composed, as 'twere, to do good in his Function. His works are these.

Several Sermons, as, (1) Dauids desire to go to Church, in two Sermons on Psal. 27. 4. Ox. 1612. oct. and 1615. qu. (2) Day's Festivals; or, twelve of his Sermons. Ox. 1615. qu. The first of which is of our Saviours Nativity, on Esa. 9. 6. To these twelve Sermons, are added,

Several fragments concerning both the Sacraments in general, and the Sacrament of the Supper in particular.—He hath also written,

Day's Diall, or his twelve hours, that is twelve Lectures by way of Catechism, as they were delivered in Oriel coll. Chappel, an. 1612. and 13. Oxon. 1614. qu.

Conciones ad Clerum, viz. (1) In 2. Reg. 6. ver. 1, 2, 3, 4. Oxon. 1612. and 1615. qu. (2) In Joh. 9. 4. Oxon. 1612. qu.

Commentaries on the first eight Psalms of David. Ox. 1620. qu. He concluded his last day in sixteen hundred 1627.

twenty and seven, and was buried in his Church of Thirlow before mention'd. I find another John Day, who was a flourishing Poet and Comedian of his time, author of (1) The Isle of Gulls, Comedy. Lond. 1606. qu. (2.) Law-tricks; or, who would have thought it, Com. Lond. 1608. qu. (3.) Blind Beggar of Bednal-Green, with the merry humour of Tom Strow & the Norfolk Yeoman. Com. Lond. 1639. qu. (4.) Humour out of breath. Com. (5.) The Parliament of Bees, with their proper characters. Or, a Bee-hive furnish'd with 12. honey-Combes, &c. 'Tis a Poem, and was reprinted in 1641. qu. He was also one of the three (Will. Rowley and George Wilkins being the other two) who wrote The Travels of the three English Brothers Sir Thom. Sir Anth. and Mr. Robert, Shirley. Lond. 1607. qu. 'Tis a Com. or Trag. Com. containing an Epitome of the vol. of their Travels in a compendious Abstract. But the said John Day the Comedian, I take to be the same person, who was sometimes a Member of Caius coll. in Cambridge, which is all I yet know of him. I find a third John Day author of A case of Conscience resolved concerning Ministers meddling with State matters. Printed 1649. qu. And of the same more satisfactorily resolved. Pr. 1650. qu. But whether he was ever an Academician I cannot tell, tho one of both his names was matriculated as member of Ch. Ch. 1631.

539. THOMAS WENTWORTH, an Esquires Son, was born in Oxfordshire, of the family of the Wentworths living in Northamptonshire, entred a Commoner or Gent. Com. of University coll. in 1584. aged about 17. translated thence after 3 years standing to Lincolns Inn, where drudging at the Common Law was made a Barrester. In the month of Sept. 1607. he was elected by the Citizens of Oxon. their Recorder, upon the death of the former, and in 1611. he became Lent-Reader of the said Inn, being then a person of a considerable note among those of his profession. In several Parliaments during the reign of K. James and in the beginning of Ch. 1. he was constantly elected a Burgess to serve in them by the Citizens of Oxon. In one or more of which, shewing himself a troublesome and factious person, was more than once imprison'd. While he was Recorder of the said City, he behaved himself so turbulent, that at length he being notoriously known to be (a) a most malicious and implacable fomenter and author of divers troubles between the University and City, he was by the prime Magistrate of the said University, with the consent of the Convocation, discommoned, 1611. At the same time also, it was decreed that he should be (b) registred to all Posterity per intensissimo & inimicissimo viro Universitati Oxon. After he continued discommoned for two whole years or more, he was upon his earnest desire restored to his former estate. But being of a restless spirit, he returned to his former trade: Whereupon his friends perswading him to leave Oxon for a time, to prevent his utter ruin, he retired to a Market Town called Henly in Oxfordshire, and soon after, viz. 20. Jan. 1. Mr. John Whistler was appointed by the Citizens to be his Deputy in the Recordership. This Mr. Tho. Wentworth hath written,

The office and duty of Executors; or, a treatise of Wills and Executors directed to Testators, in the choice of their Executors, and contrivance of their Wills, with directions for Executors, in the execution of their office, &c. Lond. 1612. oct. &c. Afterwards was added to it an Appendix, wherein are the nature of Testaments, Executors, Legataries general, and divers other material things relating to the same, by T. M. Esq. what other books he hath written I know not, any thing else of him, only that he ended his days, in or near Lincolns Inn, as it seems, in the Month of Sept. in sixteen hundred twenty seven, leaving behind him a Son named Thomas, and others, and a Nephew then called Sir Peter Wentworth. In his Recordership was elected Mr. John Whistler his Deputy before mentioned, on Monday before the feast of S. Matthew the Apostle, 3. Car. 1.

540. MATTHEW GWINNE, Son of Edw. Gwinne an inhabitant of London, but originally of Wales, by Elizabeth Thayer his Wife, was elected Scholar of S. Johns coll. (of which he was afterwards perpetual Fellow) an.

1574. took the degrees in Arts, entred on the Physick line, and practised that faculty for some time in these parts. At length being designed for an employment of considerable trust, he was actually created Doctor thereof, and soon after went in the quality of a Physician to the honourable Sir Hen. Unton Kt. Leaguer Embassador to the K. of France from Qu. Elizabeth. After his return he was designed Physician to the Tower of London, was elected Medicine Professor of Gresham coll. and made one of the college of Physicians. In his younger years he was much admired for his great skill and dexterity in Poetry, in Philosophical disputes, humane and profane learning, but above all for the modern Languages, which he obtained in his Travels into various Countries; and in his elder years for his happy success in the practice of Physick, which made him highly valued in the great City, but more by far among the nobility in the Royal Court. He hath written, Epicedium in obitum illustriss. Herois Henrici Comitis Derbionensis, &c. Oxon. 1593. qu.

Nero, Tragadia. Lond. 1603. commended by Jnst. Lipsius in one of his books.

Orationes dua habita in Aedibus Gresham in Laudem Dei Civ. &c. Lond. 1605. qu.

Vertumnus, sive Annus recurrens Oxonii, an. 1605. &c. Lond. 1607. qu. 'Tis a Latine Comedy, and was acted by the Society of S. Johns with great applause before K. James, Prince Henry, and their Courts, 29. Aug. 1605. See more in Rex platonius, at the end of the Acts of the third day.

Aurum non aurum; sive Adversaria in assertorem chymia, sed vera medicina desertorem Franc. Anthonium. Lond. 1611. qu. This Francis Anthony, who was a great Paracelsian, and Son of a Goldsmith of London, belonging to the Jewel-house of Qu. Elizabeth; was born in that City 16. Ap. 1550. but whether he received any Academical education in this University, it doth not yet appear to me. This person who wrote himself Doctor of Physick, pretended to be the first discoverer, and to make known to the world a medicine called Aurum Potabile, &c. which being animadverted upon by our author Dr. Gwinne, and esteemed by most Physicians but a vain thing, Dr. Anthony wrot and published An Apology and defence of his medicine called Aurum Potabile. Lond. 1616. qu. Whereupon another Doctor of Physick named John Cotta a Cambridge man, came out with The Ant-Apology shewing the Counterfeitness of Dr. Anthony's Aurum Potabile—Which book thofit for the Press in 1616. yet it was not printed till 1623. and then being published at Oxon. in qu. was by the author (tho of another University) dedicated to the Doctors of Physick resident in Oxon. This Dr. Anthony died in S. Barthelmews Close (where he had lived many years) on 26. May 1623. and was buried in the Isle joyning to the north side of the Chancel of St. Barthelmew the Great in London; leaving then behind him two Sons by Elizabeth his second Wife, viz. John Anthony M. D. who succeeded his Father in his practice in London, and Charles a Physician of Bedford, living there 1634. and after. I find another Francis Anthony to have been a writer of the same time with our author Dr. Anthony, but he was by birth a Portuguese, and by profession a Jesuit, and therefore the books of his composition must not be attributed to the other. Our author Dr. Gwinne hath also written a book of Travels, various Letters concerning Chymical and Magical secrets, and also divers copies of Verses in English, Italian and French occasionally set by way of commendation before the books, published by his friends and acquaintance, but none of these have I yet seen, only some of the said verses. He deceased in the month of Octob. or in the beginning of Nov. in sixteen hundred twenty and seven, in his house situate and being in S. Mary Magdalens parish in Old Fishstreet within the City of London, and was, as I suppose, buried in the Church there. He had a Son named John Gwinne, and left behind him a Widdow called Susanna, who had a Commission from the Prerogative Court, dated 12. Nov. 1627. to administer the goods, debts, chattels, &c. of her Husband Dr. Gwinne, then lately deceased.

RICHARD CARPENTER, a Cornubian⁵⁴¹ born, became a Butler of Exeter coll. in the beginning of 1592. and four years after Fellow, being then B. of Arts. Afterwards proceeding in that faculty, he solely dedicated ted his studies to Theology, by the advice and directions of Holland the Rector of his college, and proved in few years after learned and profound in that faculty, and an excellent preacher. In 1611. he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, and about that time was made Rector of Sherwill, and of Loxhore adjoining, near to Barnestaple in Devonshire; both which he kept without any other preferment, (except the Benefice of Ham, near unto Sherwill, which he enjoyed for some years) to the time of his death. Afterwards he proceeded in Divinity and became much esteemed for his learning (c) by Scholars, and by others, for those things that he published, which are.

Various Sermons, as (1) The Souls Sentinel, &c. at the funeral solemnities of Sir Arthur Acland Kt. 9. Jan. 1611. on Job. 14. verse 14. Lond. 1612. oct. (2.) A Pastoral charge; faithfully given and discharged at the Triennial visitation of William B. of Exon. at Barnstaple, 7. Sept. 1616. on Acts 20. 28. Lond. 1616. oct. (3) Christs Larambell of love resounded, &c. on Job. 15. 12. Lond. 1616. oct. (4.) The conscionable christian. &c. Three Assize Sermons at Taunton and Chard in Somersetshire, 1620. on Acts 24. 16. Lond. 1623. qu. Which three Sermons are mostly concerning the keeping of a good conscience. He paid his last debt to nature on the 18. of Decemb. in sixteen hundred twenty and seven aged 52. and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Loxhore before mentioned. Over his grave is a large Epitaph in Prose and Verse, some of which runneth thus. Richardus Carpenter S. Theol. D. ab eruditione multiplici venerandus, pietate vita, integritate, morumque comitate valde clarus. Hujus & Ecclesie Sherwillensis pastor fidus, &c. The reader is now to know that there was another Rich. Carpenter a Divine, both after the former in time, and much inferior as to learning. He was educated in the School at Eaton coll. near Windsor and thence was elected Scholar of Kings coll. in Cambridge 1622. where continuing about two or three years, left it, his friends, and Country, went beyond the Seas and studied in Flanders, Artois, France, Spain, Italy, and at length received holy Orders at Rome from the hands of the Popes substitute. Soon after he was sent into England to gain Profelites, being then, as I have been told, a Benedictine Monk. In which employment continuing an year and upward, return'd to the Protestant Religion, and had by the Archbishop of Canturburies endeavours the Vicaridge of an obscure and small Village called Poling by the Sea side near Arundel Castle in Sussex bestowed on him. But before he was warm in that Seat, he received many abuses and affronts from certain Rom. Priests, and Laymen of their profession living in those parts, particularly by Franc. a S. Clara, who being sometimes in the neighbourhood by the name of Hunt, would be very free with and expose him, to scorn before his parishioners. In the year 1642. and that of his age 33. or rather more, he published a treatise intit. Experience, History and Divinity, in five books. Printed at Lond. in a thick oct. and by the said author dedicated to the Parliament then sitting: In which Treatise p. 32. 37. &c. are many things spoken of himself. This book came out again, or rather had a new title to it of The Downfal of Antichrist, &c. an. 1648. What preferment he had afterwards I cannot tell, yet sure I am, that in the time of the Civil War he left the Nation and retired to Paris, where he became a railer against the Protestants. Afterwards he return'd to his old trade of Independancy in England, and about that time published The perfect Law of God, being a Sermon and no Sermon, preached and yet not preached. Printed 1652. in oct. He lived then, and after, at Aylesbury in Bucks, where he had kindred living, and would preach there very fantastically to the great mirth of some of his Auditors. After his Maj. Restauration, he published a Comedy intit. The Pragmatical Jesuit, with his picture before it, represented in very gentle Lay-habit, whereas his picture before his Experience, History and Divinity, represents him to be a formal Clergy man, with a mortified countenance. He was living at Aylesbury before mention'd in 1670. But before his death (which was elsewhere) he was (as some of his acquaintance hath told me) returned to Popery and caused his pretended Wife, to be of his persuasion, in which Faith he died. Those that knew him, have often told me that he was an impudent fantastical man, that changed his mind with his cloaths, and that for his juggles and tricks in matters of Religion, he was esteemed a Theological Mountebank. I find one or more of both his names, that have been writers, which I shall now pass by, and one Rich. Carpenter who had a publick dispute with one Gibs concerning Infant Baptism, in the times of Usurpation; which probably may be the same with him before mentioned.

ADAM REUTER, who intitles himself in some ⁵⁴³ of his books Cotbussius L. Silesius, did, for his improvement in all kind of Literature, retire to the University of Oxon in the beginning of 1608. being then a Licentiat in both the Laws, wherein continuing many years in the condition of a Commoner (for he wore a Gown) and was entred into the Matricula, as a member, if I mistake not, of Exeter coll. was first exhibited to by the Warden and Fellows of New coll. and afterwards by the Vicechancellor and Heads of colleges and halls. He was very well read in substantial authors, and had a quick command of his Latine Pen, but then withal he was a severe Calvinist, which was not, in his time, displeasing to many of the Sages and Heads of the University. His works are. Quaestiones juris controversi 12. Ex L. ut vim. 3. just. & jure. Oxon. 1609. qu.

Oratio quam, papam esse bestiam, qua non est, & tamen est, apud Johan. Apoc. 17. ver. 18. &c. Lond. 1610. qu. Which Oration was by the author spoken in publick before the members of the University.

MATTHIAS PASOR, Son of George Pasor a learned ⁵⁴³ Professor at Herborn, was partly educated there and partly at Heidelberg, of which last, he at length became Professor of the Mathematicks. Afterwards retiring to Oxon, he was incorporated Master of Arts, as he had stood at Heidelberg before mentioned. read an Arabick Lecture twice in a Week in Term-time in the Divinity School, for some years; for which he had a Pension collected from his Auditors, and was held in great esteem by them and others for his admirable knowledge in that and other Tongues and Learning. He hath published, Oratio pro lingua Arabica professione, publice ad Academicos habita in Schola Theologica Universitatis Oxon. 25. Oct. 1626. Oxon. 1627. qu.

Marsilius Patavinus. Which, with other things, by him ^{Clar.} written and published, I have not yet seen: Nor indeed ¹⁶²⁷ do I know any thing more of him or his end.

NATHANIEL CARPENTER, Son of ⁵⁴⁴ Job. Carp. mentioned under the year 1620. was born at Northleigh near to Culleton in Devonshire 7. Feb. 1588. elected Probationer Fellow of Exeter coll. from S. Edmonds hall, 1607. at which time Michael Jermyn of the said coll. standing against him for that place, had equal Votes with him. So that the matter being referr'd to the Vicechancellor, he adjudged the right of the said Fellowship for Carpenter, and the next year Jermyn was sped into C.C. coll. of whom I shall speak hereafter under the year 1659. As for Carpenter he afterwards took the degrees in Arts and by a vertuous emulation and industry he became a noted Philosopher, Poet, Mathematician and Geographer. About the time that he proceeded in Arts, he entred into the sacred function, took the degree of Bach. of Divinity in few years after, and tho a zealous Calvinist, yet he was by the generallity of Scholars cried up for a very famous Preacher. At length being introduced into the acquaintance of the learned and religious Dr. Usher Primate of Ireland, at what time he was in Oxon and incorporated D. of D. in July 1626. that incomparable person took him then into his service, convey'd him into Ireland, made him one of his Chaplains, Schoolmaster of the Kings Wards in Dublin, in the same year, and soon after, as 'tis said, Dean of a certain Church there, but Quere. He hath written,

These three parts are the effect of three Sermons preached before the Univ. of Oxon. on 2 Sam. 17. 23. and were very much applauded by all the Scholars that heard them, and therefore were by them most eagerly desired to be printed. Soon after they were published with license, and had in them (as a busie (a) body faith) divers passages against Arminianism, averring it to be planted among us by Jesuitical Politicians to undermine our Religion by degrees, and covertly to introduce Popery it self. But so soon as it peep'd abroad, it was forthwith called in, and all the passages against Arminianism were expunged by Bishops Lauds Agents. Which done, it was reprinted at London 1629. in qu. to the great injury both of the truth and author. In 1633. it was printed there again, and at Ox. 1640. in tw.

He died at Dublin in Ireland, about the beginning of the year sixteen hundred twenty and eight, and was buried there, but in what Church or Yard I know not. When he laid upon his death-bed, it did much repent him, that he had formerly so much courted the Maid instead of the Mistress, meaning that he had spent his chief time in Philosophy and Mathematicks, and had neglected Divinity.

145. GEORGE CARLETON, Son of Guy, second Son of Thomas Carleton of Carleton hall in Cumberland, was born (b) at Norham in Northumberland, at what time his Father was Keeper of the Castle there, educated in Grammar learning by the care of the Northern Apostle, called Bern. Gilpin, who also, (when he was fitted for the University,) sent him to S. Edm. hall in the beginning of the year 1576. being then 17 years of age, and exhibited to his studies, and took care that nothing should be wanting to advance his pregnant parts. In the latter end of 1579. he took a degree in Arts, and forthwith compleated it by Determination, his disputes being then noted to exceed any of his Fellows that did their exercise in the same Lent. In 1580. he was elected Probationer-Fellow of Merton coll. wherein he spent almost 5 years before he proceeded in his Faculty. While he remained in that Coll. he was esteemed a good Orator and Poet, but as years come on, a better disputant in Divinity, than he had before been in Philosophy. He was also well vers'd in the Fathers and Schoolmen, and wanted nothing that might make him a compleat Theologist.—I have loved him (saith a learned (c) author) in regard of his singular knowledge in Divinity, which he professeth, and in other more delightful literature, and am loved again by him. What were his preferments successively after he had left that Coll. I cannot tell, because the Register of Acts of that house is altogether silent as to them. Sure I am that after he had continued many years there. and had taken the degrees in Divinity, he was promoted to the See of Landaff, upon the translation of Dr. Godwin to Hereford, in the year 1618. and the same year was one of the learned English Divines that were by his Majesties command sent to the Synod of Dort, where he behaved himself so admirable well, to the credit of our Nation, (as some Ch. Historians will tell you,) that after his return, he was, upon the translation of Dr. Harnet to Norwich. elected to the See of Chichester, confirmed by his Maj. 20. Sept. 1619. He was a person of a solid judgment and of various reading, a bitter Enemy to the Papists, and a severe Calvinist, which may farther appear in some of these books following, of his composition.

He had also a hand in the Dutch Annotations, and in the New Translation of the Bible, which were ordered by the Synod of Dort to be undertaken, yet were not compleated and published till 1637. At length having lived to a good old age, he concluded his last day in the month of May in sixteen hundred twenty and eight, and was buried in the Choir, near to the Altar, of his Cath. Church at Chichester, on the 27. of the same month. By his first Wife named Anne, Daughter of Sir Hen. Killegrewe Knight, and Widdow of Sir Hen. Nevill of Billingbere in Berks, he had Issue a Son named Henry Carleton, living sometimes in the Parish of Furze in Sussex, elected Burgefs for Arundel, to serve in that Parliament which began at Westm. 13. Apr. 1640. and from the unhappy Parliament which began on the 3. Nov. following, he received a Commission from the Members thereof to be a Captain, in which office and command he shew'd himself an Enemy to the Bishops.

JOHN DODERIDGE, or Doddridg, was born at, or near to, Barnstaple in Devonshire, became a Sojournour of Exeter coll. in 1572. took one degree in Arts about 4 years after, and compleated it by Determination. About that time being entred into the Middle Temple, he made great proficiency in the Common Law, became a noted Counsellour, and in 45. Eliz. Lent Reader of that Inn. In 1603. Jan. 20. he was made Serjeant at Law, being about that time Prince Henry's Serjeant, but in the year following following he was discharged of his Serjeantship, and became Solicitor Gen. to King James I. In 1607. Jun. 25. he was constituted one of the Kings Serjeants, and on the 5. July following he received the honour of Knighthood from his Maj. at Whitehal. In 1612. Nov. 25. he was appointed one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, (afterwards of the Kings Bench,) and in Feb. 1613. he was actually created Master of Arts in Serjeants Inn by the Vice-chanc. both the Proctors, and five other Academians. Which degree was conferred upon him in gratitude for his great service he had then lately done for the University, in several Law suits depending between the said University and City of Oxon. While he continued in Exeter coll. he was a severe Student, and by the help of a good Tutor he became a noted Disputant. So that by the foundation of learning which he had laid in that coll. forwarded by good natural parts and continual industry, he became not only eminent in his own profession, but in the Arts, Divinity, and Civil Law, inasmuch that it was difficult with some to judge, in which of all those Faculties he excelled. But being mostly taken up with the Common Law, he could not be at leisure to honour the World with his great knowledge, only with these things following.

Opinion touching the antiquity, power, order, state, manner, persons, and proceedings of the High Court of Parliament in England. Lond. 1658. oct. Published by John Doddridge Esq; a Counsellour of the Middle Temple, and Recorder of Barnstaple; descended from, or at least near of kin to, our author Sir Joh. Doderidge. With the aforesaid Opinion, are published also the opinions of Arth. Agard, Joseph Holland, Francis Tate, and Will. Camden, all eminent Antiquaries and Historians; the two last of which I have before mentioned, and the two first I shall speak of anon.

Treatise of particular Estates. Lond. 1677. in twelv. printed at the end of the fourth edition of Will. Noy's book, called, Grounds and Maxims of the Laws of this Nation.

A true presentation of fore-past Parliaments to the view of the present times and posterity.— This I saw in MS. in a thin fol. in the Library of Dr. Tho. Barlow now B. of Lincoln, but whether it was ever printed I know not. Our author Doderidge also did peruse and enlarge a book intit. The Magazine of Honour; or a treatise of the several degrees of the Nobility of this Kingdom, with their rights and privileges: Also of Knights, Esquires, &c. Lond. 1642. oct. The MS. of which I saw also in the said Library, fairly transcribed and dedicated by T. S. of Wycombe to John Lord Lovelace, an. 1637. This book which is the collection of Will. Bird, I take to be the same, which was afterwards published with a title something different from the former, under our author Doderidge's name, running thus.

The Law of Nobility and Peerage; wherein the antiquities, titles, degrees, and distinctions, concerning the Peers and Nobility of this Nation, are excellently set forth, with the Knights, Esquires, Gent. &c. Lond. 1657. 58. oct. What else he hath written, (besides certain Speeches which are extant in books put out by others,) I know not; and therefore I shall only say of him, that he surrendered up his last breath at Forsters near to Egham in Surrey 13. Sept. in sixteen hundred twenty and eight, and that his body was carried to the City of Exeter, where 'twas reposed with great solemnity in our Ladies Chappel joyning to the Cath. Ch. there, 14. Oct. following; where at this time is visible a very fair monument over his grave, and that of his Wife. Now as for Arthur Agard, whom I have before mentioned, I desire the Reader to know of him these things, that he was the Son of Clem. Agard of Foston in Derbyshire, by his Wife Elianor Daughter of Tho. Middlemore of Edghaston in Warwickshire, that he was bred up to the Law, got to be a Clerk in the Exchequer, and at length to be Deputy-chamberlain thereof; which office he held 45 years, while these persons following were successively Chamberlains, (a place formerly of great honour and worth,) viz. Sir Nich. Throckmorton, Sir Tho. Randolphe Postmaster, Sir Tho. West after Lord La Warr, Mr. George Young a Scot, Sir Will. Killigrew Knight, Sir Walt. Cope Knight; and in his last days, in 1615. to Sir Joh. Poyntz Knight. While he held that place, he learned and received all his knowledge and learning in Antiquities from his faithful and dear friend Sir Rob. Cotton, a singular lover of, and admirably well read in, English Antiquities; to whom when Agard died, he gave all his Leiger books and MSS. (at least 20 in number) to be reposed as choice things in his Library; among which was Agard's book of his own writing, intit. Tractatus de usu & verbis obscurioribus libri de Domesday, which was afterwards put under the Effigies of Vitellius, nu. 9. The learned Camden styles him (*) Antiquarius insignis, as having been well acquainted with him, and his prodigious works collected with his own hand out of his Maj. Records in the Abbey of Westminster, (where the Exchequer-Office was,) and elsewhere. He died 22. Aug. 1615. and was buried in the Cloyster of St. Peters Church in Westminster, near to the Chapter-house door, where he had set up a monument in his life-time for himself and his Wife. At the time of his death, his will and desire was, that eleven Manuscripts of his writing and collection should (for a small reward given to his Executor) be reposed in the Exchequer, because they were necessary both for the Kings service, and readiness for the subject. Also a book of his collection in the Treasury, wherein is first contained what records are in the Kings Maj. four Treasuries, and how the same are placed, and especially how to be preserved: And after, is contained A collection of all leagues and treaties of Peace, entercourses and marriages with Foreign Nations. Which book was three years labour, and was (I think still) very carefully preserved for the Kings service. The writer and collector thereof took order that it should be preserved in his Maj. Court of Receipt, under the charge and custody of the Officers there, and to be delivered to them by Inventory, because it is very necessary for the Kings use, good of the Subject, and readiness and light to the Officers. As for the other person Joseph Holland, whose Opinion concerning the antiquity, power, &c. of Parliament, before-mentioned, which was also published, I can say only this of him, that he was a Devonian born, an excellent Herald, Genealogist, and Antiquary, as several things of his writing, now in being in the Coll. of Arms, commonly called the Heralds Office, shew: Among which is a very long roll of Parchment, containing the Arms of the Nobility and Gentry of Devon before, and to his time, made in 1585. There also goes from hand to hand a folio MS. of his collection, not only containing the Arms of the Nobility and Gentry of Devonshire, but also of Somersetshire and Cornwall.

FULKE GREVIL, descended from an ancient and knightly fam. of his name living at Milcot in Warwickshire, was born in that County, an. 1554. being the same year wherein Sir Philip Sidney received his first breath, did spend some time in the condition of a Gent. Commoner in this University, either before he went to Trin. coll. in Cambridge, or at his return thence, but in what house, unless in Ch. Ch. or Broadgates, I cannot well tell, nor doth it matter much, seeing that he was more properly a Cambridge man (to which University he was a Benefactor) than an Oxonian. After he had left the University he travelled, and at his return, being well accomplished, was introduced into the Court by his Uncle Rob. Grevil a Servant to Q. Elizabeth, where he was esteemed a most ingenious person, and had in favour by all such that were lovers of Arts and Sciences. At length obtaining an honourable Office under the Queen, he became one of her favourites, which he held for no short term, but had the longest lease of any, and the smoothest time without rub. In the beginning of 1588. he, among other persons of honour and quality, was actually created Master of Arts, which, I think, was the highest degree that was conferred upon him in this University. In 1603. he was made Knight of the Bath at the Coronation of K. Jam. I. and soon after obtained the grant of the ruinous Castle of Warwick. In the 12. year of the said Kings reign, he being constituted under Treasurer and Chancellour of the Exchequer, he was made choice of for one of Kings Privy Council. And meriting much for his faithful services in those employments, was, by Letters Patents, bearing date 9. Jan. 18. Jac. 1. advanced (a) to the dignity of a Baron of this Realm, by the title of Lord Brook of Beauchamps court. In Sept. 1621. he was made one of the Gentlemen of the Kings Bedchamber; whereupon (b) giving up his Chancellourship of the Exchequer, Rich. Weston (afterwards Earl of Portland) succeeded him. He was always esteemed a brave Gentleman and honourably descended, as being sprung from the family of Willoughby Lord Brook, was favoured by Qu. Elizabeth, and such that knew he had interest in the Muses. His life was always single, and tho he lived and died a constant Courtier of the Ladies, yet he prosecuted his studies in History and Poetry: In which, consider him as a Gentleman of noble birth and great Estate, he was most excellent in his time, as these things following shew, composed in his youth, and familiar exercise with Sir Ph. Sidney.

Remains, containing Poems of Monarchy and Religion. Lond. 1670. oct. never before printed; with other things, (among which is his Trag. of Marc. Tull. Cicero) which I have not yet seen. At length our author, (who was Counsellour of State to Ch. 1.) neglecting to reward one Haywood, who had spent the greatest and chiefest part of his time in his personal service, for which he expostulated the matter with his Master, but was sharply rebuked for it; the said Haywood thereupon gave him a mortal stab on his Back (they two being then only together) in his Bedchamber in Brook house in Holbourne near London, of which wound he died 30. Sept. in sixteen hundred twenty and eight, aged 74. Which being done, the Assassinate discerning his own condition desperate, went into another room, and there having lock'd the dore, murdered himself with his own Sword. On the 27 of Oct. following he the said Lord Brook was buried in a Vault, situate on the north side of the collegiat Church at Warwick, which formerly had been a chapter house belonging thereunto: wherein he had, in his life time, erected a fair Tomb, with this Epitaph thereon. Fulke Grevil Servant to Queen Elizabeth, Counsellour to King James, and friend to Sir Philip Sidney.

In his honour and dignity, succeeded his kinsman Robert Grevil, being then (1628.) one and twenty years of age, educated in Academical learning, not in this, but in the other University of Cambridge, (as I have been informed) where being well tutor'd, became learned, considering his quality. But being afterwards unhappily attainted with fanatick and antimonarchical principles, by the influence of one of his near relations and some Schismatical preachers, (tho in his own nature a very civil and well humour'd person) was, without much difficulty, drawn in by those fiery spirits of the Long Parliament, which began 1640. By whom being back'd on, he became an active man in the House against the Prerogative, Bishops, and the establish'd discipline of the Church, insomuch that no less than the abolishing of all decent order in the service of God would satisfie him. So that the members of the said Parliament looking upon him as a faithful person for the cause, that they then drove on, appointed him a Commander in their Army, as I shall anon tell you. As for the things which he wrote and published are, (1) The nature of truth, &c. Lond. 1643. oct. Animadverted upon by John Wallis a Minister in London, (afterward Geom. Professor of Oxon) Printed at Lond. 1643. (2) A discourse opening the nature of Episcopacy, which is exercised in England. Lond. 1641. 42. qu. Assisted therein by some puritanical Minister, and printed when the Press was open to receive all books against the Prerogative and Bishops. (3) Two speeches spoken in the Guild-hall in London, concerning his Majesties refusal of a Treaty of peace. Lond. 1642. qu. (4) Answer to the speech of Philip Earl of Pembroke, concerning accommodation. Which answer was spoken in the House of Lords 19 Dec. 1642. Pr. in one sh. in qu. by order of the House. (5) Speech at the election of his Captains and Commanders at Warwick Castle. Lond. 1643. qu. In the beginning of the Civil War, an. 1642. he became Commander in chief of those Forces, which were sent to assault the Church-Close at Lichfield, then defended by a small Garrison, placed there by his Majesty out of a pious intent for the preservation of the stately Cathedral, which the Lord Brooke intended presently to destroy, when taken by his Forces. But so it fell out, that he having planted his great Guns against the South-east-gate of the Close, he was, tho harnessed with plate-armour cap-a-pe, shot from the Church in the Eye by one Diot a Clergy-mans Son (who could neither hear or speak) as he stood in a dore, (whether he came to see the occasion of a sudden shout made by the Soldiers) of which he instantly died. This memorable accident hapned on the second day of March, an. 1642. which is the festival of that sometimes famous Bishop, S. Cedd or Chad, to whose memory Offa King of the Mercians did erect the said Cathedral, and devoutly dedicate it. Archbishop Laud being then a prisoner in the Tower of London, did make this memoire of it in his Diary, under the year 1642. Thursday March. 2. S. Cedd's day, the Lord Brook shot in the left Eye, and killed in the place at Lichfield, going to give onset upon the Close of the Church, he ever having been fierce against Bishops and Cathedrals. His beaver up and armed to the knee, so that a Musket at that distance, could have done him but little harm. Thus was his Eye put out, who about two years since said, he hoped to live to see at S. Pauls not one stone left upon another, &c. This Lord Brook who did often bragg that he should live to see the millinary fools paradise begin in his life time, did give occasion, by words that he uttered, to certain oberving persons to think, that his death was near, viz. that at his going out of Coventry, when he went towards Lichfield, he give order to his Chaplain, that he should preach upon this Text, If I perish, I perish, being the words of Ester in a different, but a far better, cause, Est. 4. 16. Also that in a prayer of above an hour long, which he conceived before his setting on the Close, he was heard to wish that if the cause he was in were not right and just, he might be presently cut off, using the like expressions to his Souldiers also.

JOHN BEAUMONT, Son of Francis Beaumont 548. one of the Justices of the Common-Pleas in the reign of Qu. Elizabeth, was born of, and descended from, an ancient and noble family of his name living at Gracedien in Leicestershire, became a Gent. Com. (with his Brethren Henry and Francis) in Broadgates hall in the beginning of Lent-term, an. 1556. aged 14. Whence, after he had spent about three years, he retired to one of the Inns of Court, and afterwards to his native Country, where taking to Wife one of the family of Fortescue, was at length (in 1626.) made a Baronet. The former part of his life he successfully employed in Poetry, and the latter he as happily bestowed on more serious and beneficial Studies: And had not death untimely cut him off in his middle age, he might have prov'd a Patriot, being accounted at the time of his death a person of great knowledge, gravity, and worth. He hath written,

Bosworth Field: A Poem. Lond. 1629. oct.

A taste of the variety of other Poems—Printed with the former Poem. He hath also made translations into English from Horace, Virgil, Lucan, Persius, Ausonius, Claudian, &c. All which were collected together, after the authors death by his Son, Sir Joh. Beaumont, Br. and were printed with the former former Poems in 1629. being then usher'd into the world by the commendation-Poems of Tho. Nevill, Tho. Hawkins, Benj. Johnson, Mich. Drayton, Philip King, Son of the B. of London, &c. This Sir John Beaumont the Poet departed this mortal life in the Winter time, in sixteen hundred twenty and eight, and was buried in the Church at Gracedieu, leaving behind him a Son named John beforemention'd, who died without issue, another called Francis, afterwards a Jesuit, and a third named Thomas, who succeeded his brother in his estate and honour. As for Francis Beaumont, who with his elder brother Sir John, came to Broadgates hall in 1596. as I have before told you, he must not be understood to be the same with Francis Beaumont the eminent Poet and Comedian, for tho he was of the same family, and most of his name studied in Oxon, yet he was educated in Cambridge, and after he had made himself famous over all England, for the 50. Comedies and Tragedies, which he with Joh. Fletcher Gent. had compos'd, made his last exit in the beginning of March, and was buried on the ninth of the same month in 1615, at the entrance of St. Benedicts Chappel within the Abby Church of St. Peter, within the City of Westminster. As for John Fletcher, Son of Rich. Fletcher B. of London, he was also a Cambridge man, and dying of the Plague, was buried in the Church (or yard) of S. Mary Overey in Southwark, 29 Aug. 1625. aged 49. Sir Aston Cockaine Baronet hath in his Choice Poems of several sorts, &c. Pr. 1658. in oct. an Epitaph on Mr. John Fletcher and Mr. Philip Massinger, who, as he saith, lye buried both in one grave, in St. Mary Overies Church in Southwark, yet the register of that Church saith that Massinger was buried in one of the four yards belonging to that Church, as I shall tell you when I come to him, under the year 1639. Later in time than Sir Jo. Beaumont, hath appeared another of both his names, who hath written and published Observations upon the Apology of Dr. Hen. More. Cambr. 1685. qu. And is at present the Kings prof. of Div. there.

JOHN DENISON, who in his time was cried up for an eminent preacher, became a Student in Balliol coll. at the beginning of the year 1590. and when M. of A. entred into orders, preached frequently in these parts, was made Chaplain to K. James 1. chief moderator of the Free-School in Reading in Berks, and at length Vicar of St. Maries Church there: In which last he was succeeded by Tho. Bunbury of Ball. coll. but thrust out thence by the Presbyterians in the beginning of the civil Wars. Denison was a learned man, well read in Theological authors, and wrote and published these things following.

Several Sermons as (1) The Christian Petitioner, preached on Act Sunday 7 Jul. 1611. on Nehem. 13. 22. Lond. 1611. qu. (2) The sin against the Holy Ghost, at Pauls Cross, on Heb. 10. 26, 27. lb. 1611. qu. (3) Christians care for the Souls safety, on Mark 8. 36. Lond. 1621. oct. (4) Heavenly Banquet: or, the doctrine of the Lords Supper, set forth in seven Sermons, on 1 Cor. 11. from verse 23. to 29. Lond. 1619. oct. (5) Blessedness of Peacemakers, two Sermons on Matth. 5. 9. Lond. 1620. oct. (6) The Sinners acquittance, before the K. at Greenwich on Isa. 53. 4. Lond. 1624. oct. (7) Check to curiosity, and The safest service, two Serms. at Whitehall, on Joh. 21. ver. 22. Lond. 1624. oct. (8) Heavens joy for a sinners repentance, on Luke 15. 7. Ibid. 1623. oct. &c.

Justification of the gesture of kneeling in the act of receiving the Sacrament of the Lords Supper. Lond. 1619. oct.

On the two Sacraments, Baptism and the Lords Supper. Lond. 1621. qu.

De confessionis auricularis vanitate adversus Card. Bellarmini Sophismata. Ox. 1621. qu.

De sigilli confessionis impietate, contra Scholasticorum & Neotericorum quorundam dogmata disputatio. — Printed with the former. He dyed in the latter end of January, and was buried on the first of Feb. in the Church of St. Mary at Reading before mention'd, in sixteen hundred twenty and eight. He had a Brother, or near Kinsman called Stephen Denison, D.D. and many years Minister of St. Catherine Kree Church in London, who hath published several things of Divinity, as the Bodleian or Oxford Catalogue will tell you. He dyed in that parish, (in 1649. as I think) but was not of the University of Oxon.

PETER ALLIBOND, an ingenious man in the opinion of all that knew him, was born at Wardenton neat to Banbury in Oxfordshire, where his name and family had for some generations lived, became a Student of Magd. hall in the beginning of 1578. aged 18. years, or thereabouts, took the degrees in Arts, travelled for some time beyond the Seas, and at his return became Rector of Cheyneys in Bucks. Where continuing many years, did much improve the ignorant with his sound doctrine. What he hath written I know not, nor translations which he hath made, only these two from French into English, viz. (1) Comfort for an afflicted conscience, wherein is contained both consolation and instruction for the sick, &c. Lond. 1591. oct. written by John de L'espine. (2) Confutation of the popish transubstantiation, together with a narration how that the Mass was at sundry times patched and pieced by sundry Popes, &c. Lond. 1592. oct. And a translation from Lat. into English entit. The golden chain of Salvation. Lond. 1604. qu. written by Harman Renecher. This Pet. Allibond died on the sixth day of March, in sixteen hundred twenty and eight, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church of Cheyneys before mention'd; leaving then behind him three Sons, one of which was called John a witty man of Magd. coll. whom I shall mention elsewhere; another named Peter of Linc. coll. Proctor of this University in 1640. and a third Job, who changing his Religion, to which he had been carefully brought up, for that of Rome, (which was the reason, I presume, why his name was omitted in his Fathers Will) did at length get a place in the Post Office, which kept him and his in a comfortable condition. This Job was Father of Rich. Allibond, a Barrister of Grays Inn, who being also a Roman Catholick, was not only Knighted by K. James 2. but also made one of the Justices of the Kings-Bench, to which Office he was sworn by the name of Rich. Allebone, 28. Apr. 1687. He dyed at his house near to the back part of Grays Inn, 22. of Aug. 1688. aged 47 years or thereabouts, and was buried on the fourth of Sept. following at Dagenham in Essex near to the grave of his Mother.

JAMES LEY, a younger Son of Henry Ley of Teffont-Evias in Wilts. Son of Henry Ley of Ley, in the parish of Bere-Ferres in Devonsh. Esq; was born at Teffonts-Evias, became a Commoner of Brafenose coll. in the beginning of 1569. aged 17. or thereabouts, took one degree in Arts, and on the first of May 1577. he was admitted a Student of Lincolns Inn, where making great proficiency in the Municipal Law, which was much advanced by his Academical learning, he became a Councellour of great repute, was call'd to the Bench. 22. Eliz. and in the 44. of that Qu. was Lent reader of that Inn. After which, his profound learning and other great abilities deservedly rais'd him to sundry degrees of honour and eminent employment: For in the 1. of Jac. 1. he was called to the state and degree of Serjeant at Law, and in the year following he was constituted Chief Justice of the Kings-Bench in Ireland, in which place he continued till Mich. term 6. Jac. 1. and then, being a Knight, he was made Attorney of the Court of Wards and Liveries in Eng. land. Shortly after he obtained a Privy Seal from the Kings Maj. dat. 15. May 7. Jac. 1. to take place in the said Court of the Kings Attorney General, which till then was never used, but since hath constantly been observed. By virtue of that Seal, and by appointment of Rob. Earl of Salisbury, then Master of the said Court, he took the place the same day of Sir Hen. Hobart Knight, then Attorney General to his Majesty. During his continuance in that place he was made a Baronet, and in the 18. Jac. he was removed from that Court, having been Attorney 12 years, and upwards, and was made Lord Chief Justice of the Kings-Bench in England. In 22. Jac. he was made Lord High Treasurer of Engl. and a Councellour of State, and on the last day of the same month, he was advanced to the dignity (*) of a Baron, by the title of Lord Ley of Ley before mentioned. In the 1. of Car. 1. he was created Earl of Marlborough in Wilts, and in the fourth of that King, he resign'd his place of Treasurer, and was made Lord President of the Council. He was a person of great gravity, ability and integrity, and of the same mind in all conditions. He hath written, Treatise concerning Wards and Liveries, Lond. 1642. oct. composed by the author, while he was Attorney of the Court of Wards and Liveries.

Reports of divers resolutions in Law, arising upon cases in the Court of Wards, and other Courts at Westminster, in the Reigns of King James and King Charles. Lond. 1659. fol. He also collected, with intentions to publish, some of the historical writers of Ireland: for which end he caused to be transcribed and made fit for the Press, the Annals of John Clynne a Frier Minor of Kilkenny, (who lived in the time of K. Ed. 3.) the Annals of the Priory of St. John the Evangelist of Kilkenny, and the Annals of Multi-fernan, Rosse and Clonmell, &c. But his weighty occasions did afterwards divert his purpose. After his death the copies came into the hands of Henry Earl of Bathe, who also did intend to make them publick, but what diverted him, I cannot tell. Our author, Sir Jam. Ley E. of Marlborough, ended his days in his lodgings in Lincolns Inn on the 14. of March in sixteen hundred twenty and eight, and was buried in an Isle joyning to the Church of Westbury in Wils. in which Parish he had purchased an Estate. Over his grave was soon after a stately monument erected by Hen. Ley his Son, who succeeded him in his honour, begotten on the body of his Father's first Wife, named Mary, Daughter of John Pettie of Stoke-Talmach and Tersworth in Com. Oxon. Esq.

552. THOMAS VICARS, who writes himself Vicarsus and de Vicariis, was born within the City of Carlisle in Cumberland, made his first entry into Queens coll. in the beginning of 1607. aged 16. where, after he had been a poor serving Child, Tabarder, and Chaplain, he was elected Fellow 1616. being then M. of A. Six years after he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences; about which time he being esteemed an able Theologist, Preacher, and well qualified with other learning, was taken into the Family of Dr. Carleton B. of Chichester, and by him prefer'd (after he had married his Daughter Anne) to the Vicarage of Cockfield near Horsham in Sussex, and, as it seems, to a Dignity in the Church of Chichester. His works are,

Manuductio ad artem Rhetoricam, ante paucos annos in privatum quorundam Scholarium usum concinnata, &c. Lond. 1621. oct. there again 1628. in tw. being the third edit. This book is the effect of certain Lectures in Queens coll. publick Refectory, when he bore the office of Rhetorick Reader.

Brief direction how to examine our selves before we go to the Lord's Table, how to behave our selves there, and how to try our selves afterwards. Lond. 1622. or thereabouts, in oct.

Clar. 1628. Confutatio cuiusd. libelli de amplitudine regni celestis sub emendito C. Secundi Curionis nomine in lucem emissi. Ox. 1627. qu. He hath also translated from Lat. into English, A Manuduction to Theology. Lond. 1622. or thereabouts, and 26. in oct. written by Barthelm. Keckerman. Before which translation is a copy of verses made by Mich. Drayton the Poet, an attestation by Ad. Airay B. D. and a dedication to Anne the Wife of Dr. Carleton B. of Chichester. One Tho. Vicary published The Surgeons directory, in 1651. oct. who was, as I suppose, a Chirurgion by profession, and therefore not to be taken to be the same with Tho. Vicars before mentioned.

553. SIXTIN AMAMA, was born in the Province of Westfriesia in Holland, educated for a time in the University in Franaker, where obtaining considerable knowledge in Oriental tongues, took a journey into England, and about 1613. settled in Oxford, taught the Hebrew tongue, and for the sake of Dr. Prideaux Rector of Exeter coll. whose person and doctrine he much admired, became a Sojourner of that house, and a zealous Student in the Sacred Faculty. After he had continued there some years, he retired (without a degree confer'd on him,) to his native Country, where at Franaker he was made Hebrew Professor, and at length D. of D. and held much in esteem for his great learning. He hath written,

Censura vulgate atque à Tridentinis canonizata versionis quinque librorum Moysi, &c. Franak. 1620. qu.

Supplex Paraneis ad Synodos, Episcopos & Super-intendentes Ecclesiam Protestantium, de excitandis SS. linguarum studiis.

Coron. ad Gram. Martino-Buxtorfianum. Ibid.

Anti-Barbarus Biblicus in 3. libros distributus, &c. Amstel. 1628. oct. To which was added a fourth book.—Franak. 1656. qu.

De Decimis. In the first Tome of the Criticks, p. 1326.

Responsio ad censuras D. Marini Marsenni Theologi Paris. Franak. 1628. oct. See in the first Tome of the Criticks, p. lx.

De nomine Tetragrammati dissertatio, cum responsione ad argumenta cl. viri D. Nich. Fulleri Angli, quibus pro vulgata lectionis Jehovah certitudine disputavit. Fran. 1628. oct.

He hath also written the Preface before Joh. Drusius his Commentary on the more difficult places of the Pentateuch, an. 1617. which is remitted into the first Tome of the Criticks, p. 50. and corrected and published with some additions his Commentary on the 12 Minor Prophets, and his Com. de Sectis Judaicis. He hath also written and published certain Dissertations and Orations in Latin, but these I have not yet seen. He was living and in great renown at Franaker in sixteen hundred twenty and eight, having then, as always before, a natural Genie to enlighten the Text of Scripture, and to find the notion of the Sacred Language. When he died, and what other books he hath written, I cannot yet tell.

WILLIAM VAUGHAN, Son of Walt. Vaughan 554. of the Golden Grove in Caermertenshire Esq; and younger Brother to Sir John Vaughan the first Earl of Carbury, was born at the Golden Grove, became a Commoner of Iesus coll. in Mich. Term, an. 1591. aged 14. took the degrees in Arts, and entred on the Law line, but before he took a degree in that Faculty, he went to travel, and performing some exercise in order thereunto at Vienna, did proceed Doctor there, and at his return was incorporated at Oxon in the same Faculty, an. 1605. In which, tho indifferently learned, yet he went beyond most men of his time for Latin especially, and English, Poetry. Afterwards spending much time in rambling to and fro, did take a long journey for the honour and benefit of his Nation, and became the chief undertaker for the Plantation in Cambriol, the southermost part in New-found-land, now called by some Britaniola, where with pen, purse, and person did prove the worthiness of that enterprize. He hath written, ΕΡΩΤΟΠΑΙΓΝΙΟΝ Pium, continens canticum canticorum Solomonis, & Psalmos aliquot selectiores, una cum quibusdam aliis poematis e Sacra Scriptura fontibus petitis. Lond. 1597. oct.

The Golden Grove moralized, in 3 books. A work very necessary for all such, as would know how to govern themselves, their houses, or their country. Lond. 1600. and 1608. oct. This book which is written in prose, was commended to the World by some Poets, or at least pretenders to Poetry, then (1600.) living in the University, as Dr. Joh. Williams Marg. Professor, Will. Osbourne one of the Proctors, Hen. Price Bac. of Div. et S. Johns coll. Griffin Powel of Iesus, Joh. Budden LL. D. Nich. Langford and Tho. Came Masters of Arts, Gabr. Powel B. Cambrensiun Caroleia. Quibus nuptia regales celebrantur, memoria regis pacifici renovatur, & praecepta necessaria ad rempub. nostram feliciter administrandum intextuntur: reportata a Colchide Cambriola ex australissima Nova Terra plaga. Lond. 1625. oct. 'Tis a Latin Poem, and dedicated by our author Vaughan under the name of Orpheus Junior to King Charles I.

The Golden Fleece, divided into three parts; under which are discovered the errors of Religion, the vices and decays of the Kingdom, &c. Lond. 1626. qu. in prose. Transported from Cambrioll Colchos out of the southermost part of the Island commonly called New-found-land by Orpheus jun. alias Will. Vaughan. There is no doubt but this our ingenious author hath other things extant, but such, tho with great scrutiny, I cannot yet discover: nor can I find any thing else relating to the author only that he was living at Cambriol before mentioned in sixteen hundred twenty and eight. I find one Will. Vaughan a Physician,

Clar. 1628.

Physician, who among several things that he hath published is a book intit. Directions for health, natural and artificial, derived from the best Physicians, as well modern as ancient, &c. Printed several times, as in 1617. oct. Lond. 1626. qu. the sixth edit. and there again 1633. &c. Another book also he wrote called The Newlanders cure, with rules against the Scurvey, Coughs, &c. Printed 1630. oct. &c. Whether this Physician was originally of Oxon. I cannot tell, notwithstanding we have had several of both his names and time matriculated as Members of Ball. coll. Jesuit, &c. There is also another Will. Vaughan a Physician, who published Disputatio medica de febre continuata. Printed 1671. qu.

GEORGE CAREW, Son of Mr. George Carew sometimes Dean of Ch. Ch. in Oxon, was born in Devon. but originally descended from the Carews of Carew Castle in Pembroke-shire, became a Gent. Commoner of Broadgates hall in 1572. aged 15. About which time two of his Surname studied in University coll. which hath given occasion, many years after, to some of the Fellows of that house, particularly to Dr. John Browne, to take (a) one of them to be this George Carew whom we are farther to mention. Howsoever it is, or whether he studied in both houses successively, I shall not now dispute it: Sure I am that he was of Broadgates, and that being more delighted in Martial Affairs than in the solitary delights of a study, he left the University without a degree, went into Ireland, and there had a command given him against that noted Rebel the Earl of Desmond. Afterwards his merits being made known to Q. Eliz. she thereupon made him one of her Council, and Master of the Ordnance, there: In which last employment he behav'd himself with great renown in various expeditions, as some years after he did in the Voyage to Cadiz in Spain. In 1589. he was actually created M. of A. with other persons of quality, he being then a Knight. At length when all Ireland was in a manner invaded with a domestick Rebellion, and a Spanish Army, he was made President of Munster for 3 years; where joyning his Forces with those of the Earl of Thomond, he took divers Castles and strong Holds in those parts, and brought the titular Earl of Desmond (one of the most active Rebels there) to his tryal. After K. James came to the Crown he was called home, and in the first year of his Reign he was constituted Governour of the Isle of Guernsey and Castle Cornet. In the third year of that Kings Reign he was (b) advanced to the degree and dignity of a Baron, by the title of the Lord Carew of Clifton, having before married Joyce the Daughter and Coheir of Will. Clifton of Clifton near Stratford upon Avon in Warwicksh. Esq. Afterwards he was made Vicechamberlain and Treasurer to Q. Anne, Master of the Ordnance throughout England, and of the Privy Council to the King. At length when Charles came to the Crown, he was made by him, in the first year of his Reign, Earl of Totness in Devonshire, as being then a faithful Subject, a valiant and prudent Commander, an honest Counsellour, a gentile Scholar, a lover of Antiquities, and a great Patron of learning. He wrote a book intit.

Pacata Hibernia. Or, the History of the late Wars in Ireland. Lond. 1633. fol. with his picture before, and these verses under, it.

Talis erat vultu, sed lingua, mente manumque

Qualis erat, qui vult dicere, scripta legat.

Consulas aut famam, qui lingua, mente manumque

Vincere hunc, fama judice, rarus erat.

Of which History containing three years transactions in Munster, the said Earls actions (G. Carew) are not the least part. It was, while he lived, reserved first for his own private satisfaction; secondly preserved for the furtherance of a general history of the Kingdom of Ireland, when some industrious writer should undertake a compleat description of those Affairs: And lastly out of his own retired modesty, it was by him held back from the stage of publication, lest himself, being a principal Actor in many of the particulars, might be perhaps thought to give vent and utterance to his private merit and services, however justly memorable. After his death it came into the hands of his faithful and trusty Servant, (or rather his natural Son) called Tho. Stafford, by whom, it being first offer'd to the view and censure of divers learned and judicious persons, was at length published. This is that Thom. Stafford who was Master of many choice Originals of Charters of English Nobility, written in the time of Hen. 2. mostly containing conveyances and gifts of Lands to Religious Houses; which I presume he had by the gift of his aforesaid Master the Earl of Totness: But when Stafford died, they came into the hands of Sir Simonds D'ewes Bt. Besides Pacata Hibernia, our author Carew hath in four large volumes collected several Chronologies, Charters, Letters, Muniments and other materials, belonging to Ireland. Which as choice rarities, are at this day reserved in the Bodleian Library. He also made several collections, notes, and extracts for the writing of the History of the Reign of K. Hen. 5. which were (c) remitted into the History of Great Britain, &c. published by John Speed. In which History were also remitted most, if not all, of the Lord Viscount S. Albans Hist. of Hen. 7. the notes and collections of Sir Rob. Cotton concerning the Reign of K. Hen. 8. notes and collections of Sir Hen. Spelman for another King, the life of K. John by Dr. Jo. Barcham, and the notes of Edm. Bolton concerning K. Hen. 2. As for Speeds part in the said History of Gr. Britain, it is such for stile and industry, that for one who (as Martial speaks) had neither a Gracum χαιρ, nor an Ave Latinum, is perhaps without many Fellows in Europe. So much also have I understood of him by sure information, that he had no meaning in that labour to prevent great practick learnedness, but to furnish it for the common service of Englands Glory. As for our author Carew Earl of Totness, he ended his days in the Savoy situated in the Strand near London, 27. Mar. in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, aged 73. and 10 months. Whereupon his body was conveyed to Stratford upon Avon in Warwickshire, and was inter'd at the upper end of an Isle joyning on the North side to the body of the Church there. Over his grave was soon after a stately monument erected, with a large inscription thereon, which for brevity sake I now pass by; and desire the Reader to observe that there was one Tho. Carue who writes himself of Mobernan in the County of Tipperary in Ireland, a Priest and Apostolick Notary, who in the year of his age 70. Dom. 1660. wrote a book intit. Lyra five Anacephalaosis Hibernica in qua de exordio, five origine, nomine, moribus ritibusque gentis Hibernica succinthe tractatur. Sulsbaci 1666. 2d. edit. qu. But this Tho. Carue, who lived at Vienna in Germany in the Court of the reverend Curats and Levites belonging to the Cath. Church of St. Stephen there, to the year 1664. and after, is not to be understood (as some have done) to be the same with Tho. Carue, or any thing of kin to Geor. Carew before mention'd, or that he was beholding to Pacata Hibernia, when he composed his book, or to his MS. collections, as I can yet perceive. Besides the aforesaid George Carew was another of both his names, a native of Cornwall, who having benefited himself much in this University, and afterwards in the Inns of Court and in travelling beyond the Seas, was at his return called to the Barr. Soon after he supplied the place of Secretary to Christop. Lord Hatton L. Chanc. of England, and after his decease performed the like Office to his two Successors, by special recommendation from her Majesty, who also gave him a Prothonotaryship in the Chancery, and in 1597. being then a Knight and one of the Masters of the Chancery, was by the said Queen (d) sent into Prussia to inform the K. and State of Poland, and the prutenic Cities, those things which she answered to Dzialine the last Ambassador in England, &c. In which Country and in other Northern parts, he underwent, through unexpected accidents, extraordinary perils, but being freed from them by Gods great Providence, he performed his duty in acceptable manner. In January 1605. he was sent (e) ordinary Ambassador into France, where he behaved himself to the credit of the English Nation, and after his return the Commonwealth used his service, in the places of trust which he then enjoyed. Whether he was the same Sir George Carew, who was created Master of Arts, with other persons of quality, at Cambridge 30. Aug. 1571. I know not Q.

EDWARD HUTCHINS, a Denbighshire man 156. born, was admitted perpetual Fellow of Brasenose coll. in 1581. being that year Master of Arts. Afterwards en-

Sermons, as (1) Serm. against Recusants, on Cantic. 2. 15. Oxon. 1586. oct. (2) Serm. concerning the true comfort of Gods Church truly Militant, &c. on the Song of Salomon, ch. 4. v. 7. Oxon. 1589. oct. &c. with which last is printed

An Apology for the Church truly Militant.— He hath also published,

Jaw-bone against the spiritual Philistine.— Printed 1601. in tw. and other things which I have not seen. He afterwards (being married) became Prebendary of Chute and Cheesbury in the Church of Salisbury, and beneficed near to that City. He died in the beginning of sixteen hundred twenty and nine, and was succeeded in his Prebendship by one Joh. Thorpe.

357. WILLIAM GIFFORD, Son of John Gifford Esq; by Elizab. his Wife, Daughter of Sir Geo. Throcmorton of Coughton in Warwickshire Knight, was born in Hampshire in 1554. being the second year of Qu. Mary, and in 1569. was by his Mother, then the Wife of one Will. Hodgekin, sent to Linc. coll. at which time it was governed by John Bridgwater, who in his heart was a R. Catholick, and had under his government many of that profession. After he had continued in the University, mostly in the said coll. and partly in the house of Geo. Etheridge a Physitian, for the space of four years, exercising himself in Grammar, Mulick, Logick, and Philosophy, he was sent with his Tutor to Lovaine, where soon after he took the degree of M. of A. Afterwards spending four years in Theological studies, under Father Bellarmino, he took the degree of Bach. in that faculty. But leaving the said University, because of the Civil Wars in that Country, he retired to Paris, where continuing for some time in the study of Theology among the Sorbonists, he was by Dr. Will. Alan sent for to Rheims, where continuing in the Eng. coll. (governed by the said Alan) for some time, was by him sent to the Eng. coll. at Rome, where consummating his divine studies, was recalled by the said Alan and made publick Professor of Theology at Rheims. About which time being created Doctor of that faculty, with great solemnity in the University of Pont-a-Mousson in Lorraine, (in Nov. 1584.) managed with great credit his publick Professorship for about eleven years. But Civil Wars breaking out in France, he journeyed to Rome and became Chaplain to Card. Alan, (as he was afterwards for a time to Card. Charles Borromeus at Millane) at whose request to P. Clem. 8. he was made Dean of the Church of S. Peter at Ressell commonly called L'isle in Flanders; which preferment he keeping for ten years was at length forced (f) to leave it by the violence of the Jesuits, because he took part with the Benedictine Monks when they prevailed so far with the Abbot of Arras, a good man, to build a Cloister for them at Doway, which was much opposed by the said Jesuits. Afterwards Dr. Gifford return'd to Rheims again, and was made Rector of the Academy there, which he governed with great praise and honour. At length being above 50. years of age, he gave a farewell to the World, and its vanities, entred himself into the Order of St. Benedict in June 1608. and became professed on the 14. Dec. in the year following, in the coll. of the English Benedictines at Dienlward in Lorraine. Whereupon according to the manner he changed his name to (g) Gabriel de S. Maria, which he kept to his dying day, became famous for his admirable Sermons preached there, in Flanders, Poitou, at Rheims, and in Britaine, to which place, as 'tis (h) said, he was sent a Delegate by P. Clem. 8. to K. Jam. 1. concerning matters of Religion. Afterwards being noted for his great piety and learning, he was made Prior of the Benedictines at S. Maloes in France, and President of the Congregation of that Order. At length his great worth suffering him not to live in a Cell, he was by Ludovic. de Lorraine commonly called Cardinal Guise, (Archbishop of Rheims) made his Suffragan in that See, under the title of Episcopus Arcidulia, (in Greece) Which place he enjoying till that Cardinals death, the Duke of Guise thereupon (because his second Son was but a Child, and therefore not capable of the Archbishoprick of Rheims, fearing lest any other Nobleman in France should beg it for any of their Sons) did presently, before the death of his Brother the Cardinal was known, go to the French K. and beg'd the same for Dr. Gifford, and procured the Pope to confirm the Kings grant. Whereupon Gifford receiving Consecration in 1622. enjoy'd it about 7 years; not without paying a considerable yearly pension from it (as 'twas thought) to the then Duke of Guise. By vertue of the said Archbishoprick, he became a Duke and the first Peer of France: And having a great yearly value coming in, became hospitable, liberal to all English Exiles and Travellers, and a Founder of two Houses in France, for the reception of the English Monks of the Order of S. Benedict, namely one at Paris, and another at S. Maloe. He hath written and published, Orationum lib. 1. Spoken mostly at the inauguration of Albert and Isabell, in their inauguration at L'isle: Also before Card. Burbon, Vandome, Guise, &c. at Rheims, and the Duke of Guise, d'Aumale and others—Printed at Doway.

Sermones Adventuales. He also took a great deal of pains in perfecting and finishing a book intit. Calvino-Turcismus, &c. written by Will. Rainolds, and printed at Antwerp, 1597. Answered by one who writes himself T. M. S. in a book intit. De Turco-papismo, &c. Lond. 1598. 99. qu. In the Preface to which he falls foul on our author Gifford, whom he stiles Scriptor mendicissimus, & ut omnibus constet, iracundus—Ex Anglis ad Hispanos transfuga, hostium mancipium, hostis patria, turpissimum popularium suorum propudium—compus & calamistratus & apud mulieres Belgicas graciosus, &c. He also wrote a book at the instance of the D. of Guise, which I have not yet seen, and translated from French in Engl. The Inventory of errors, contradictions and false citations of Philip Morney Lord of Plessis: written by Fronto Ducens a Jesuit. Besides which he hath written and translated other matters, but they having been printed beyond the Seas, we seldom or never see them here, and so consequently I cannot give you a Cat. of them in this place. This great Archb. and Duke Dr. Gifford gave way to fate on the eleventh of April, in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, according to the accompt follow'd in France, and was buried with great solemnity in the Church of the Blessed Virgin at Rheims, behind the great Altar, near to the grave of Lewis Card. Guise. In his Archbishoprick succeeded Hen. de Lorraine Son of Charles Duke of Guise, born at Paris 4. Apr. 1614. so that he was but 15 years of age when he was made Archbishop, which was per accessum; but being not consecrated, he renounc'd it in 1641. about which time he succeeded his Father in the Dukedom of Guise, and took to him a Wife.

CHRISTOPHER SUTTON, a Hampshire 558. man born was entred a Butler or Commoner of Hart hall in 1582. aged 17. translated soon after to Linc. coll. and as a Memb. thereof took the degrees in Arts. Afterwards entring into Orders, he became successively Vicar of Roneham in Essex, Parson of Caston in his own Country, Parson of Woodring in Norfolk, Parson of Murley-Bromley in Essex, and at length of Cranworth in Norfolk. Which two last he kept to his dying day, with his Prebendship of Westminster that had been bestowed on him by K. Jam. 1. for his excellent and florid preaching. His works are,

Disce Mori. Learn to die. Lond. 1609. in tw. and several times after. In both which is shewed in what manner every well disposed Christian may learn first, how to live the life of the righteous, and how to die the death of the righteous.

Append. touching the controversie about the holy Eucharist—Printed with the Godly meditation, &c.

Godly meditations concerning the divine presence.—Printed also with the former Meditat. He departed this mortal life in May or June, in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, and was buried, as I have been informed, in the Abby Church of S. Peter at Westminster, before the Vestry dore, where the choir-men keep their Surplices, to whom he gave five pounds. In his Prebendship (given to him much about the time of the death of Dr. Joh. Yong B. of Rochester, who kept that Prebendship in Commendam with his See) succeeded Lambert Osbaldeston M. A. as I shall elsewhere tell you.

ROBERT HEGGE, a prodigy of his time for forward and good natural parts, was born within the City of Durham, an. 1599. admitted Scholar of C.C. coll. 7. Nov. 1614. Prob. Fellow thereof 27. Dec. 1624. being then M. of A. and accounted, considering his age, the best in the University for the Mathematical faculty, History, and Antiquities, (and therefore much beloved by Tho. Allen of Gloucester hall) as afterward he was for his excellent knowledge in the Sacred Scripture, as may be seen in certain books he wrote, the titles of which follow.

Teatise of Dials and dialling. MS. in C. C. coll. Library. In which book is the picture of the Dial in the said college Garden, made by Nich. Kratzer (whom I have mention'd under the year 1550.) with a short discourse upon it. In like manner there is the picture of that fair Cylinder standing on a Pedestal in the middle of the said coll. quadrangle, made by Charles Turnball, 1605. with a short discourse on it, which he intitles Horologium Sciotericum in gratiam speciosissimi Horoscopi in area quadrata. C. C. C. &c.

The Legend of S. Cuthbert with the antiquities of the Church of Durham—written 1626. and left in MS. behind him at his death, so exactly and neatly written, that many have taken it to be printed. Afterwards a Copy of it, under the authors hand, coming into the possession of Thomas Lord Fairfax, was by him reposed as a precious Monument in his Library of MSS. At length one who writes himself R. B. Esq. (sometimes of the retinue of the said Lord, as I have been informed) published it at Lond. 1663. in oct. in a very bad letter and worse Paper, not without some derogation to the memory of the author by concealing his name, and putting the two first letters of his own, with the writing a Prologue, to it. The truest Copy under the authors hand is now in the possession of Dr. Edm. Pocock Can. of Ch. Ch. and the Kings Hebr. Professor of this University, having an Epistle to the Reader before it under the authors own hand, dated 1. Jul. 1626. which the printed hath not. Betwixt this MS. and the printed Copy I find much difference; there being in the latter many omissions, some additions, besides literal mistakes, (especially in names of men and places) and several passages transpos'd.

In aliquot Sacra pagina loca lectiones. Lond. 1647. in 4. sh. or more, in qu. published by John Hall of Greys Inn, (whom I shall anon mention) who in his Preface to the said Lections tells us, that if they took, and were approv'd by Scholars, he had more laying by him to publish; but whether he did so, or not, I cannot tell. Our author Hegge also left behind him 4. or 5. Sermons fit for the Prefs, learned suppositions in C. C. C. Chappel, verses, Cat. of Schol. and Fell. of C. C. coll. &c. All which, or at least some of them, are at this day in the Libr. of the said college. He died suddenly of an apoplexy, to the great reluctancy of those who were acquainted with his admirable parts, on the eleventh of June in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, (having scarce attained to the thirtieth year of his age) and was buried in the Chappel of the said coll. As for John Hall before mentioned, who had a great respect for his memory and his works, and was well acquainted with, if not allied to, his relations, was born also in the said City of Durham of gentle Parents, in Aug. 1627. and being fitted for the University was hindered from going to it by the eruption of the Civil War. Whereupon giving himself solely up to studies at home, especially in the Library at Durham, improved himself to a miracle. After Oxon was reduced by the Parliament forces in the year 1646. at which time the Wars were ceased, he was sent to S. Johns coll. in Cambridge, where he had not been there many months, ere came forth the first issue of his prodigious wit, entit. Horæ vacivæ, or Essayes, with some occasional considerations. Lond. 1646. oct. with his Picture before them, aged 19. The sudden breaking forth of which, amazed not only the University, as I am instructed by one (*) of his Fellow Collegiats, but the more serious part of men in the three Nations, where they were spread. The same year, about New-years time, came out his Poems. Lond. 1646. and with them The second book of divine Poems. Pr. in oct. Both which books were much admired. After he had continued more than an year at Cambridge, in the condition of a Commoner and Gent. Com. he was translated to Greys Inn, where he added to the Structure of a most admirable Romance, intit. Lucenia, which he had began in Cambridge, but by the lending it forth to a friend, it was smother'd. In 1648. his mind being sufficiently known to encline towards a Commonwealth, he sided with the Independent and wrote A Satyr against Presbytery, and in 1649. he published An humble motion to the Parliament of England concerning the advancement of Learning, and Reformation of the Universities. Printed at Lond. in 6. sh. in qu. In which taking occasion to court the then Rulers, got him a present sum of Money, and a Pension of 100 L. per an. from the Council. About the same time he wrote Four Paradoxes, to which he added two more in 1653. Published at Lond. 1653. in tw. under the name of Job. de la Salle, by Job. Davies of Kidwelly. And in 1650. being commanded by the Council of State into Scotland to attend Oliver Cromwell, to make such observations on affairs there, as might conduce to the settling of the interests of the Commonwealth, he wrote a book intit. The grounds and reasons of Monarchy, with an Appendix of An Epitomy of the Scottish affairs: Both printed at Edenburgh in qu. and afterwards at London. About that time he was called to the Barr, and sometimes pleaded, and in 1651. he published A Gag to Loves Advocates, &c. wherein he justified the Parliaments proceedings in the execution of Christop. Love a forward and busie Presbyterian. What other things he either wrote or published, are briefly these. (1) A Preface before, with remarks upon a book intit. A true relation of the unjust, cruell, and barbarous proceedings against the English at Ambona in the E. Indies, by the Netherlandish Government and Council there. Which book, tho it had been published in the latter end of the Reign of K. Jam. I. and the third time at Lond. 1632. in qu. Job. Hall thought it necessary to revive it at that time (1651.) because of the then differences between the Dutch and the English. This book he dedicated to the General O. Cromwell, and was much bought up. Whereupon the Dutch Ambassador residing then in Westminster, made a complaint of that book and demanded punishment on the reviver of it, but the Parliament thinking it a seasonable service done to the publick, took no notice of it. (2) He rendred into English from the Original The height of Eloquence, written by Dionis. Longinus. Lond. 1652. oct. Dedicated to Balstrode Whistock one of the Commissioners of the Great Seal. (3) He wrote A Letter from a Gent. in the Country concerning, &c. an. 1653. (just after the Long Parliament was dissolv'd) tending to settle the humours of the people in that great emergency. (4) Answer to the grand politick Informer. Printed 1653. fol. which Politick Informer being a virulent Pamphlet written upon the Assembly of Barbone's Parliament, and therefore censured and suppressed, it was thought expedient that Hall should answer it, and he was well rewarded for it from the Exchequer. He put out Lusus Serius, in 1654. written in Lat. by Mich. Majerus: Half of which almost was done in one afternoon, over a glass of Wine in a Tavern. (6) He made a translation of Hierocles upon the golden verses of Pythagoras, teaching a vertuous and worthy life. Published after his death, by his friend John Davies of Kidwelly—Lond. 1657. oct. with other things, as Poems, Translations, Treatises, which were never published. At length being overtaken with a disease, which he could not thoroughly shake off, he left London in Jul. 1655. and retiring to Durham, died there on the first of Aug. 1656. having not fully arrived to the 29th. year of his age, and was buried there, near to the grave of his Father, who died about an year before, just after his Sons arrival there. To conclude; had not his debauches and intemperance diverted him from the more serious studies, he had made an extraordinary person; for no man had ever done so great things at his age: So was the opinion of the great Philosopher of Malmesbury. Besides this John Hall of Durham, were others of both his names and writers, as Job. Hall of Richmond author of Government and Obedience, in four books. Lond. 1654. fol. and of other things, and another John Hall author of The true Cavalier examined by his principles, and found not guilty, either of Schism or Sedition. Lond. 1656. besides other matters. A third also, who was Bach. of Div. now, or lately, living, was author of Jacobs Ladder: or, the devout souls ascension to heaven in Prayers. &c.

WILLIAM HINDE was born at Kendall in Westmorland, became a poor serving Child of Qu. coll. in Mich. Term 1586. aged 17. afterwards Tabarder, M. of A. and perpetual Fellow of the said house; wherein, having been always a close and severe Student, he was much respected and beloved beloved by the famous Jo. Rainolds a Commoner of the said Coll. during his time. Whose doctrine making impressions on the Juniors there, our author Hinde became an admirer of him. At length being full ripe for a removal, he left the Society about 1603. being then much in esteem among them for his excellent Theological Disputations and Preachments, and became Minister of Gods word at Bunbury in Cheshire, where he was much noted among the puritanical party for his piety, and so much followed by them for his frequent preaching, that he was esteemed the Ring-leader of the Nonconformists in that County, during the time that Dr. Tho. Morton late Bishop of Chester, with whom our author had several (a) contests about Conformity. He hath written,

The office and use of the Moral Law of God in the days of the Gospel justified, and explained at large by Scriptures, Fathers, and other Orthodox Divines, &c. Lond. 1623. qu.

Path to Piety; a Catechism.

A faithful remonstrance: or, the holy life and happy death of John Bruen of Bruen-Stapleford in the County of Chester Esq; exhibiting variety of many memorable and exemplary passages of his life, and at his death, &c. Lond. 1641. oct. Published by Sam. Hinde a Minister, Son of William the author. The said John Bruen who was a noted Calvinist, and Brother to that mirrour of Piety Mrs. Cath. Brettergh, was a Com. or Gent. Com. of S. Albans hall an. 1577. aged 18. where he was much noted for an early Zealot. Our author Will. Hinde did also revise, correct, and publish, The discovery of the Man of Sin, &c. Oxon. 1614. qu. written by Jo. Rainolds before-mentioned, and An exposition on the last Chapter of the Proverbs. Lond. 1614. qu. penn'd by Rob. Cleaver the Decalogist, then lately dead. At length after our author had undergone several troubles concerning matters of indifferency, he surrendered up his last breath in his study at Bunbury, in the month of June in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, and was buried in the Chancel of the Church there, as I have been informed by his Grandson Thomas Hinde D. of D. sometimes Fellow of Brasnose college, afterwards Chaplain to James Duke of Ormond, and Dean of Limerick in Ireland, who died in his house at Limerick in Nov. 1689.

561. HUMPHREY LEECH, or Lechius as he is sometimes written, was born at Allerton commonly called Ollerton in Shropshire, was entred a Student in Brasnose coll. before the month of Nov. in 1590. for in that year, and of his age 19. he was as a Member of that house matriculated. But before he took the degree of Bach. of Arts he went to Cambridge, where taking the degree of Master, he returned to Oxon in 1602. and in June the same year, he was incorporated in that degree. About that time he was made Vicar of St. Alkmunds Church in Shrewsbury, where making a short stay, he returned to Oxon, and became one of the Chaplains or Petty-Canons of Ch. Ch. Of whose Preaching and what followed, you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 1. sub. an. 1608. In which year being suspended of his Chaplainship for Preaching publicly some Popish Tenets, (for so they were accounted by the puritanical Doctors of the University in those days,) he left the Church of England, and went to Avrais in Artois, where he wrote these things following.

The triumph of Truth. Or a declaration of the doctrine concerning Evangelical counsayles, in two parts. Doway 1609. oct.

Sermon in defence of Evangelical counsayles, and the Fathers, on Apoc. 20. 12.—Printed with the former book.

Twelve motives which perswaded him to embrace the Catholick Religion.

An honourable Grand-Jury of 24 Fathers, testifying the distinction betwixt legal precepts, and evangelical counsayles, by their uniform Verdict.—Which book, with the Motives, were printed with The triumph of Truth.

Humble considerations presented to King James concerning his premonitory Epistle sent to all Christian Princes. S. Omer 1609. Afterwards our author going to Rome, was admitted into the Society of Iesus, an. 1618. before or after which time, he lived in the English coll.

of Jesuits at Liege, and was most commonly the Porter there. At length being sent into the English Mission, settled in a R. Cath. house in Cheshire, near the River Merse, own'd by one Maffie, where he departed this life in July (about the 18. day) in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, as I have been informed by Will. Lacey of Oxon, one of his Society, whom I shall remember when I come to the year 1673. as having been originally of this University.

THOMAS GOFFE, or Gough, a Ministers Son, 562. made his first entry on the stage of this transient World in the County of Essex, was elected, from Westminster School, a Student of Ch. Ch. in 1609. aged 18. where applying his Muse to polite studies became an excellent Poet and Orator. Afterwards he proceeded in Arts, entred into the Sacred Function, and shortly after became a quaint Preacher, and a person of excellent language and expression. In 1623. he was admitted to the reading of the Sentences, and about that time had the Parsonage of East-Clandon in Surrey conferr'd upon him; where taking to Wife a meer Zantippe, the Widdow of his Predecessor, notwithstanding he had always before professed himself an Enemy to the Female Sex, and esteemed by many another Joseph Swetnam, he was so much overtop'd by her and her children which she had by her former Husband, that his life being much shortned thereby, died at length in a manner heart-broken. But before his Marriage he composed most of these things following, some of which were printed after his death.

The Bastard, Trag. Lond. 1652. qu. Some say it was not written by Goff, but by Cosmo Manuche, and therefore perhaps 'twas only a translation. Qu. He the said Th. Goffe made his last Exit at E. Clandon before-mentioned; and was buried 27. July in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, 1629. in the middle of the Chancel of the Church there; leaving then behind him other things fit for the Press, as I have been informed by one that was acquainted with the author, but what became of them he could not tell.

THOMAS JAMES, or Jameſius as he writes himself, was born in the Isle of Wight, (at Newport as it seems,) 563. educated in Grammaticals in Wykeham School, and in Academicals in New coll. of which he became perpetual Fellow in 1593. where drudging day and night in several sorts of learning, he proceeded in Arts in 1599. About that time he being taken into the favour of Mr. (afterwards Sir) Tho. Bodley for his excellent worth in the knowledge of books, as well printed, as written, and of the ordering of them, he was by him designed the first keeper of the Publick Library at Oxon, then in founding; which office being confirmed to him by the University in 1602. he did much good therein and laid a most admirable foundation for his Successors to build upon. In 1614. he took the degrees in Divinity, and having about that time the Subdeanery of Wells conferr'd upon him freely without seeking by the Bishop of that place, and the Parsonage of Mongeham in Kent with other Spiritualities by the Archb. of Canterbury without asking, he resigned his place of Keeper of the Publick Library, (being about that time also a Justice of Peace,) and betook himself more severe to his studies. He was very well read in the Fathers and Schoolmen, and so much vers'd in several Faculties, that he was esteemed by some a living Library. He was also indefatigable in reading old MSS. and subtle in finding out out the forgeries in them. He and Allen of Glouc. hall were esteemed as most knowing in the ancient Statutes and Customs of this University, and therefore their helps in the several attempts made of framing an intire and compleat body of them, were often desired. He was a Member of the Convocation held with the Parliament at Oxon, 1. Car. 1. wherein he made a motion that some persons might be commissioned to peruse the Manuscript Fathers in all publick and private English Libraries, that thereby the forgeries of Foreign Popish editions might be detected, but what the event of it was I know not. His designs were always for the publick benefit of learning, and English Church; which being well known to his learned friend Will. Camden, he therefore saith (b) thus of him, He is a learned man, and a true lover of books, wholly dedicated to learning, who is now laboriously searching the Libraries of England, and purposeth that for the publick good, which will be to the great benefit of Students. Our author Dr. James saith also of himself thus, in 1624. that (c) if Cambridge will set up and set forward the like (that is to collate and examine ancient MSS. as he hath done and will do) I dare undertake more good to be done for the profit of learning and true Religion, than by building ten Colleges. I have of late given my self to the reading only of MSS. and in them I find so many and so pregnant testimonies, either fully for our Religion, or against the Papists, that it is to be wondred at, that the Religion of Papists, then and now, do not agree, &c. He also farther tells us, that not only the Rabbins, but the Thalmud in six volumes at Rome hath felt the smart of the popish indices: would God we were but half as diligent to restore, as they abolish and put out the truth. I have restored 300 citations and rescued them from corruption in thirty quier of Paper, with sundry other projects of mine, which if they miscarry not for want of maintenance, it would deserve a Princes purse. If I was in Germany, the States would defray all my charges: cannot our estates supply what is wanting? If every Churchman, that hath an 100. l. per an. and upward, will lay down but a shilling for every hundred towards these publick works, I will undertake the reprinting of the Fathers, and setting forth five or six volumes of Orthodox writers, comparing of books printed with printed, or written; collating of popish translations in Greek, and generally whosoever shall concern books, or the purity of them, I will take upon me to be Magister S. Palatii in England, if I should be lawfully thereunto required, &c. As for his works that are printed, they are these.

Ecloga Oxonio-Cantabrigiensis, lib. 2. Lond. 1600. qu. This Ecloga doth contain a Catalogue of all the MSS in each college Library in the University of Oxon, but not of those in the publick, and in each college Library in Cambridge, and in that of the publick there. In the making of which Catalogue he had liberty given to him by each coll. in Oxon. to peruse their MSS. and from that Society which he perceived was careless of them, he borrow'd and took away what he pleased, and put them forthwith into the Publick Library. Several such MSS were taken from Ball. coll. and some from Merton, and do yet bear in their respective fronts the names of the donours of them to those Houses. This Ecloga is very useful for curious Scholars, and is much commended by Joseph Scaliger in an Epistle to Rich. Thompson as I have told (d) you elsewhere.

Enchiridion Theologicum. MS.

Liber de suspicionibus & conjecturis. MS. These 3. MSS. I saw formerly in Lambeth Library, under D. 1. 2. 3. but whether printed I know not: perhaps the Enchiridion is. He also translated from French into English The moral Philosophy of the Stoicks. Lond. 1598. oct. And published Two short Treatises against the orders of the begging Fryers, written by Joh. Wicliffe: Also, as 'tis said, a book intit. Fiscus. Papalis. Sive Catalogus indulgentiarum & reliquiarum septem principalium Ecclesiarum urbis Rome, ex vet. MS. scriptus. Lond. 1617. qu. The Latine out of the MS. is set down in one Colum, and the English in another by the publisher. This, I say, is reported to have been published by our author James, tho others tell us that it was done by Will. Crashaw of Cambridge. Howsoever it is, sure we are, that it hath supplied with matter a certain scribler named Henry Care in his Weekly packets of advice from Rome, when he was deeply engaged by the Fanatical party, after the popish Plot broke out in 1678. to write against the Church of England, and the members thereof, then by him, and his party, supposed to be deeply enclining towards Popery, &c. I say by that Hen. Care whose breeding was in the nature of a petty Fogger, a little despicable wretch, and one that was afterwards much reflected upon in the Observers published by Rog. Lestrange: which Care, after all his scribbles against the Papists, and the men of the Church of England, was, after K. James 2. came to the Crown, drawn over so far by the R. Cath. party, for bread and money-sake and nothing else, to write on their behalf and to vindicate their proceedings, against the men of the Church of England, in his Mercuries, which weekly came out, intit. Publick occurrences, truly stated. The first of which came out 21. Feb. 1687. and were by him continued to the time of his death, which hapning 8. Aug. 1688. aged 42. was buried in the yard belonging to to the Blackfriars Church in London, with this inscription nailed to his Coffin. Here lies the ingenious Mr. Henry Care, who died, &c. This person I can compare to none more than to Marchmont Nedham, whose parts tho he wanted, yet they were Weather-Cocks both alike, as I shall tell you more at large when I shall come to that person, which will be in the 2d. Vol. As for our learned and industrious author Dr. James, he paid his last debt to nature in his house in ^{1629.} Halwell in the north Suburb of Oxon, in the month of Aug. in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, aged about 58. years, and was buried towards the upper end of New college Chappel, leaving behind him this character, that he was the most industrious and indefatigable writer against the Papists, that had been educated in Oxon. since the Reformation of Religion. Which character being made manifest by his writings, it would have been esteemed as generous an act for the Society of that House, to have honoured his reliques with a Mon. and Epitaph, as they did those of Tho. Lydiat the Mathematician. I shall make mention of another Thomas James in my discourse of Hen. Gellibrand, under the year 1637.

^{164.} ROBERT WAKEMAN, Son of Tho. Wakeman of Flisford-Flavel in Worcestershire, Minister of Gods word, was born in that County, became a student of Ball. col. in the beginning of 1590, aged 14. made Chaplain-Fellow thereof, 17. Jul. 1596. being then Bach. of Arts. About that time entering into Orders, was a frequent preacher for some years in these parts. At length being made Rector of Beer-Ferres, and afterwards of Charlton, in Devon. took the degrees in Divinity. He hath published, Several Sermons, as (1) The Christian practice, at S. Maries in Oxon. on Act. Sunday 8. Jul. 1604. on Acts 2. 46. Lond. 1605. in oct. (2) Solomons exaltation, before the King, on 2 Cor. 9. 8. Ox. 1605. oct. (3) The Judges charge, on 2 Cor. 19. 6. — printed 1610. oct. (4) Jonahs Sermon and Ninevehs repentance, at Pauls Cross, on Jonah 3. ver. 4. 5. Ox. 1606. oct. (5) The true Professor opposed against the formal Hypocrites of these times, on Luke 10. 28. Lond. 1620. oct. and others which I have not seen, among which is a Sermon on Ecclesi. 11. 1. — printed 1607. He gave up the ghost in Septemb. in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, and was buried on the South side of the Chancel of the Church at Beer-Ferres, on the nineteenth day of the same month, leaving then behind him several Children, who were all in the beginning of the civil war (as the Tradition goes there) persuaded from their Religion to that of Rome, by one Capt. Rich. (*) Read (as 'twas supposed) who quarter'd in the house where they lived, and married one of the Doctors Daughters. Afterwards they retired into Worcestershire, where they, or at least their issue, now live.

^{165.} JOHN SANFORD, Son of Rich. Sanford of Chard in Somersetshire Gent. (descended from those of his name in Devon) was born in Somersetshire, entered a Commoner of Ball. college, about the time of the Act in 1581. where continuing till he was Bach. of Arts, was then made one of the Chaplains of Magd. coll. At length having contracted a friendship with John Digby Commoner of that House, did travel with him into France, Spain and Italy, whereby he did much advantage himself in the modern languages. Afterwards he went in the quality of a Chaplain to the said Digby, then known by the name of Sir John Digby, at which time he was sent into Spain to treat of a marriage between the Infanta, Sister of the King of that Realm, and Prince Charles of England. After his return Dr. Abbot Archb. of Cant. made him his domestick Chaplain, and at length Prebendary of Canterbury, and Rector of Ivychurch in Kent. He was a person of great learning and experience, and a Solid Divine, well skill'd in several languages, and a tolerable Lat. Poet. His works are,

Gods arrow of Pestilence, serm. on Psalm 38. 2. Oxon. 1604. oct.

Le Guichet Francois. Janicula seu introductio ad linguam Gallicam. Ox. 1604. qu.

A brief extract of the former Lat. Grammar done into English, for the easier instruction of the Learner. Oxon. 1605. qu.

Grammar, or introduction to the Ital. tongue. Oxon. 1605. qu.

^{1629.} An entrance to the Spanish tongue — Lond. 1611. and 1633. qu. and other things, as 'tis probable, which I have not yet seen. He surrendered up his pious Soul to God on the 24. Septemb. in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, aged 60. and more, and was buried in the middle almost of the north Isle, joyning to the nave

(*) Note that one Capt. Rhead a Scot. and a Secular Jesuit perverted a minister of the Church of England, and his family, and married his Daughter. — So in The plot discovered by Andr. ab Habernfield and Sir Will. Boswell to Archb. Laud, about the beginning of the Civ. War.

or body of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury. Over his Grave was soon after laid a white free-stone, with an inscription engraven thereon; a copy of which you may see in Hist. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. lib. 2. p. 199. b. wherein is mention'd his great charity to Widdows, Orphans and the Poor.

EDWIN SANDYS, Second Son of Edwin sometimes Archbishop of York, was born in Worcestershire, particularly, as I suppose, within the City of Worcester, when his father was Bishop of that Diocese, before his translation to York, admitted Scholar of C. C. coll. in Sept. 1577. and in the year of his age 16 or thereabouts, being then Pupil to the famous Mr. Rich. Hooker, who made use of his, and the judgment of George Crammer when he compiled his books of Ecclesiastical Polity. In 1579. Jan. 23. he was admitted Probationer-Fellow of that House, being then Bach. of Arts, and on the 17. March 1581. he was collated to the Prebendship of Wetwang in the Church of York. Afterwards proceeding in his faculty, he left his Fellowship, travelled into several Countries, and at his return grew famous for his learning, prudence, and vertue. In the month of May 1602. he resign'd his Prebendship, on the 11. of May 1603. he had the honour of Knighthood confer'd upon him by K. James 1. and was afterward by him employed in several affairs of great trust and moment. He was very dexterous in any great employment, kept as constant time in all Parliaments, as he that held the Chair did, and was esteemed an excellent Patriot in all transactions, faithful to his Country, without any falseness to his Prince. But this I must say, that being found factious, and too daring in the Parliament held 1621. he was with Selden (a) committed to custody to the Sheriff of London, 16. June in that year, and not delivered thence till the 18. July following. Which matter being ill resented by the House of Commons, they on the eighth of Nov. following did dispute the matter tumultuously, taking it for a great breach of their Privileges, that any one of them should be imprison'd. At length Secretary G. Calvert, protesting before them, that neither he or Selden were imprison'd for any Parliamentary matter, a stop was thereupon put to the dispute. What I find farther of Sir Edwin, is that he was Treasurer to the undertakers for the Western Plantations, which he effectually advanced, that he was a person of great judgment and of a commanding Pen, a solid Statesman, and as my author saith ingenio & gravitate morum insignis. Farther also, that he was as famous for those matters he published, as his Brother George was for his Travels and Poems. This worthy Knight Sir Edwin hath written,

Europa Speculum. Or, a view or survey of the state of Religion, in the Western part of the World. Wherein the Roman Religion, and the pregnant policies of the Church of Rome to support the same, are notably displayed, &c. — Written by the author at Paris, and by him finished 9. Apr. 1599. A copy of which coming into the hands of an unknown person in England, an impression of it full of errors stole into the world without the authors name or consent, an. 1605. besides another the same year, or soon after. Notwithstanding which, the book was esteemed so much by Scholars, and thereupon cried up at home for a brave piece of ingenuity, that it was forthwith translated into French; and printed, I think, at Paris. But as soon as 'twas finish'd, the printer to his great sorrow received information that it would be called in and suppress'd (as it was shortly after) whereupon he dispersed most of the copies into remote parts, before he did disperse any at home, and so was a gainer by his Politicks. At length after the author had taken great care that the English impressions should be called in, and the Printers punished, he caused a true copy thereof to be printed, a little before his death, anno 1629. From which were printed the impressions of 1632. and 37. at London in quarto, and another there in 1673. in oct. One copy under the authors hand, (as 'tis said) I have seen in Bodlies Library, and another in that of Dr. Barlow; which, I suppose, were dispersed to vindicate the author from spurious printed copies that flew abroad. I find one Sir Edwin Sandys, who paraphrastically turned in English verse

(a) Camden in Annal. Reg. Jacobi 1. MS. sub. an. 1621.

Sacred Hymnes consisting of 50 select Psalms of David, &c. set to be sung in 5 parts by Rob. Taylor: Printed at Lond. 1615. in qu. Whether this version was performed by Sir Edwin Sandys before-mentioned, or by another of both his names of Latimers in Bucks, I know not. Our Sir Edwin Sandys, author of Europa Speculum, died about the beginning of Octob. in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, (leaving then 1500 l. to the Univ. of Oxon for the endowment of a Metaphysick Lecture) and was buried in the Ch. of Northourn in Kent, where he had a Seat and a fair Estate joyning to it. Over his grave is a handsome monument erected, but, as I have been informed, there is no inscription upon it. He left behind him at the time of his death at least 5 Sons, namely, Henry, Edwin, Richard, Robert, and Thomas. Who all (one excepted) proved zealous Parliamenters in the beginning of the Rebellion, 1642. The outrages of the Second, then called Colonel Edwin Sandys, which he made against the Church, and the vengeance that followed him for so doing, the common (b) prints that in those times flew abroad do sufficiently testify. He published (or rather one for him) a Pamphlet intit. Col. Sandys's traavailes into Kent, which gives an account of the Sacrileges and outrages he had committed for the sake of the Blessed Parliament then sitting; and another called, His Declaration in vindication of himself from those calumnious aspersions cast upon him by Lucius L. Falkland, and Secretary Nicholas, 11. Oct. 1642. printed at Lond. 17. of the same month: Which was followed with another Pamphlet intit. A vindication of Col. Sandys's Honour and Loyalty, from a Declaration pretended to be set forth by him at Worcester, 11. Oct. 1642. But whether the said Colonel was educated in Oxon, 'tis not worth the enquiry, nor any thing else of him. And therefore I shall only let the Reader know, that he died of his wounds which he had received in the Parliaments Cause near to Worcester, from the hands of a French-man called Arnold de Lisle a Captain of a Troop of Horse in Sir Joh. Byron's Regiment, (for which service he was soon after knighted.) whereupon his body was buried in the Cath. Ch. at Worcester, in the month of Oct. 1642. I find one Edwyn Sandys, an Essex man born, and a Knights Son, to be entred a Gent. Com. of C. C. coll. in 1608. aged 17. But this person must not be taken to be the same with the Colonel, who was then but one or two years of age.

567. WILLIAM PINKE, a Hampshire man born, was entred a Commoner in Magd. hall in Mich. Term 1615. took the degrees in Arts, holy Orders, and soon after became Philosophy Reader of Magd. coll. Which office he performing with great commendation, was elected Fellow of that house in 1628. being then accounted by some a serious person in his studies, devout, and strict in his conversation, and therefore a Puritan by others. He had in him a singular dexterity in the Arts, a depth of judgment, acuteness of wit, and great skill in the Hebrew, Greek, and Arabick languages, which made him noted among, and revered by, the Academians. He wrote,

The trial of a Christian's sincere love to Christ, in four Sermons on 1 Cor. 16. 22. on Ephes. 6. ver. ult. &c. Oxon. 1630. &c. in tw. He died much lamented in sixteen hundred twenty and nine, aged 30. or thereabouts, and was buried in Magd. coll. chappel, leaving then behind him other things fit to be printed, as I have been informed by those that were well acquainted with the man.

568. HENRY YELVERTON, Son of Sir Christop. Yelverton of Eston-Manduit in Northamptonshire, one of the Justices of the Kings-Bench, and a descendant from an ancient and gentle Family of his name living sometimes at Roxham in Norfolk; was born on S. Peters-day in 1566. educated for a time among the Oxonians, and afterwards among the Students of Greys-Inn near London; where, after some time of continuance in the degree of Inner Barrister, he was elected Lent-Reader in 1606. being then accounted a religious Gentleman, and a person well read in the Municipal Laws. In 1613. he was made Solicitor General, and a Knight, by the endeavours of Carr Earl of Somerset, and on the 17. of March 1616. he was constituted Attorney General; yet about that time committed Prisoner to the Tower for denying to appear and plead publicly against his Patron Carr, in the matter of Sir Thomas Overbury's death. In 1621. May 5. he was (†) discharged of his office of Attorney, fined, and committed Prisoner to the Tower again, upon a late sentence in the Star-Chamber, for passing some clauses in the City-Charter of London, when he was Attorney Gen. not agreeable to his Majesty's Warrant. These things being mostly done by the power and aggravation of the D. of Bucks, who hated him because he had been a friend to Somerset, Yelverton continued where he was without any hopes of release or future advance. At length upon some things utter'd in Buckingham's care when he came incognito to speak with, and examine, him concerning certain matters in the Tower, he was afterwards released, taken into favour, and in 1625. was made one of the Justices of the Kings-Bench, and afterwards of the Common-Pleas, (which last he enjoyed to the time of his death,) and had not the Duke been untimely cut off, he would in all probability been made Lord Keeper of the Great Seal. Under his name goes,

Several Speeches spoken in Parliament.—One of which was in answer to matters charged against him by the Commons before the H. of Lords, in 1621. Soon after the Lords declared that for sundry things uttered in the said Speech which touched the Kings honour, he should be (†) fined to the K. ten thousand marks, be imprisoned during the Kings pleasure, and make a submission to his Majesty: And for the scandal committed in some words against Buckingham, he should pay him five thousand marks, and make his submission to him. Several years after his death, was published under his name this book following.

Reports of divers special cases in the Court of Kings Bench, as well in the latter part of the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, as in the first ten years of K. James. Lond. 1661. and 74. fol. It was printed by the original in French, written with the authors own hand, remaining with Sir Tho. Twisden Knight, one of the Justices of the Kings-Bench, and published by Sir Will. Wild Knight and Baronet, then (1661.) Serjeant at Law, the Kings Serjeant and Recorder of the City of London, and since one of the Justices of the Kings-Bench. He died near Westminster 23. Nov. or thereabouts, 1679.
